WE'RE NEARING HOME.

When [illegible] hand is on us laid,
"Where [illegible]"
While passing through this vale of woe,
How oft it cheers the heart to know
We're nearing home.

And while [illegible] around us beat,
And Satan tries to draw our feet
Far from the paths of truth and peace,
We feel the warrior's work will cease,—
We're nearing home;

Nearing the resurrection morn,
When from the earth a nation's born,
Loved ones restored to die no more,
For Satan's power will then be o'er:
We're nearing home.

Nearing the transparent crystal sea,
Where the victorious ones will be;
Nearing the time when golden crowns
We'll have in place of this world's frowns:
We're nearing home.

Nearing the haven of endless rest,
Nearing a seat among the blest;
Nearing the throne of Christ our King,
Soon we the song of the Lamb will sing:
We're nearing home.

ADVENTURES WITH THE SPIRITUALISTS.

BY E D W.

It was by the special providence of God, as we believe, that our steps were directed in October, to the town of D——, where we last spring gave a course of lectures. We had several times been requested by letter to revisit the place, and give some more of the "gospel of the kingdom;" but one thing after another hindered, and we did not see our way clear to go until the time of which we speak.

For several weeks it had been impressed on our mind to go at the time of the W—— Conference, but the week previous, finding that our presence would be needed at home at its close, we concluded to go to W——, and defer our visit to D—— until we could remain for a longer time. On the Monday previous, however, a friend called and told us of the illness of a dear sister at D——, who would not probably live but a short time, and she was very desirous to see us. We told him it had been our intention to go that week, but as we could remain only a few days, we had to give it up. He expressed a good deal of interest for us to go, for this sister's sake. We, however, were firm in our purpose to go to W—— instead.

After he left we felt uneasy; we were not satisfied that we had done right. In the afternoon we sought an interview with his wife, who with her husband had visited this sister the day previous, she being a relative. As the result of this call, we decided to go to D——. We intended to take the cars in the afternoon, when husband left home for W—— in the morning. Soon after his departure, we were strongly impressed to defer till the next day, and prepare a lecture. As this would shorten up our already limited time, we felt averse to it. Our mind was in a state of unrest—the impression disturbed us, and we sought our closet for guidance. We asked of our heavenly Father that if the impression was from him, he would be pleased to teach [illegible] some interposition of providence, and [illegible] occurred, we would go in the afternoon, as we had purposed. In about an hour there came up a severe squall of snow, which continued for considerable length of time, and the weather became so very cold, and the wind blew with such unabated violence, we had no hesitancy about deciding that it would be very unwise to go that day, as we would have to ride in a stage six miles, and it was half a mile from where that left us, to the house of our friend, where we were to stop over night.

We took our writing-desk to prepare the lecture. What shall be the subject? was now the question. We were led to select, "The Son of Man is come to seek and to save that which is lost." The loss in Adam, the restoration in Christ, was our theme. The subject opened very clearly before us. When we came to the second part, to speak of the mission of Christ,—that he came for the purpose of bringing back fallen man from his ruins, elevating humanity, breathing into it anew the inspiration of the Almighty, and restoring his communion with his Maker, we referred to some of the schemes of human redemption which utterly ignore the grace of God as it is manifested in Christ Jesus, the substitution of human capabilities, claiming that man is himself divine, and possesses in himself alone power to reform and elevate his nature, so that he can be a god. That by being brought into affinity and familiar converse with spiritual existance once "in the form," they are thereby attracted onward in the path of progression, and upward to the heavenly plane. The doctrine of human depravity, as set forth so graphically in the 1st chap. of Rom., is utterly repudiated, and the sacrifice and blood of Christ as an atonement for sin, is trodden under foot as a myth, unworthy of any credence. The Holy Scriptures are regarded as unreliable, while the light which they extol above all others, is that which shines amid external darkness, and the knowledge they so ardently seek, and so widely proclaim, comes to them by supernatural rappings, table-talk, and mysterious writings.

We then referred to the fruit brought forth by the advocates of this new gospel, which clearly showed that it was "earthly, sensual, devilish;" for they acknowledge no higher law than that of their own depraved nature, which gave unbounded license to its corrupt desires. We showed the origin of this system of sensuality, its progress, until Satan had at last culminated all the knowledge he has acquired by six thousand years of study and practice, to lead souls down to ruin, in this excelling, diabolical masterpiece of deception, denominated Spiritualism.

This is but an item of what we said on this subject, for, notwithstanding the thought occasionally intruding—"this is not at all adapted to the people at D——," we seemed almost compelled, as it were to dwell largely and strongly on this point. We knew of no one at D—— who had any sympathy with his doctrine, but its use was to be manifested hereafter. We closed our subject with the restitution of the earth, and the dominion to man after the resurrection.

The next day dawned fair, our mind was [illegible], our preparations made, when lo, a silent voice whispers in the mortal ear, "Take Spiritualism Unveiled, for you will need it." We stopped not to reason about it, but at once went to the book room, found the work, and put it in our valise. Why should we go thus equipped to meet a foe who had no foothold where we were going? You shall [illegible]

Soon after being seated by the bright glowing fire, which sparkled and danced in the healthy open fire-place, all ready for an evening's chat with dear sister W——, she suddenly broke out, "Sister W., I want you to go to P. and give a lecture. There has been a Spiritualist woman there for two Sundays, from P., lecturing on Spiritualism, and there are a good many in that neighborhood who believe in it. Now I want you to go there one evening this week and give them a lecture on the truth."

We replied, "We have come all prepared to do that very thing." Then we told her just how we had been led in this matter, and when we had concluded, she said, "It is the hand of the Lord."

Being satisfied of this in our own mind, we did not feel at liberty to fix upon a time to go, without first seeking for Divine direction. It was now Thursday evening. That night we sought counsel of God, and as the result did not obtain any permission to appoint the meeting till Monday eve. The next day we wrote our notice for that eve, and by Sister W.'s suggestion called on Brother M., a good Methodist brother, to obtain directions how the school-house might be procured, and the notice given out. He kindly offered to see to the whole matter, which he did the next day by going himself to the place, three and a half miles, and making all needful arrangements.

As the minister's "turn" was elsewhere the next Sunday, it was decided for us to have meetings at the "Corner," where we gave our lectures last spring. We gave them the subject referred to in the A. M., "The Omniscience of God."—Heb. 4: 13. In the evening we spoke from Matt. 16: 3:—"Can ye not discern the signs of the times?"

Monday, for the first time since our arrival, the clouds dispersed, and the sun shone forth in its brightness. Every other evening had been damp and foggy, wholly unsuitable for a ride of three and a half miles; but now the moon shone in its full-orbed radiance, the air was mild, and in company with several friends we started for the appointed place. The school-house was packed so full that seats had to be brought in for us. Only one lamp illuminated the house, which seemed to us very strange. We expressed our regret, stating that we liked to see our audience. This was afterward explained. Some had obtained the impression that we were a Spiritualist, and as they did not like to have much light, only one lamp was furnished, and that by a Spiritualist. But we are not of that class who "choose darkness rather than light."

When we came to that part of our lecture referring to Spiritualism, we heard a good deal of whispering in a seat near our left, which continued frequent while dwelling on that point. After we had concluded, and a hymn had been sung, we remarked that we had brought a little book with us for the purpose of reading therefrom some of the testimonies of noted and popular Spiritualists, in respect to their doctrines and morals. As it was however half past eight, we gave permission for all to leave who desired so to do. No one left, and we began to read, first from the testimony of Dr. Hatch, the husband of Cora V. Hatch, so widely known. We had scarcely commenced, when the whispering was resumed, and presently a woman started up, and quickly seizing the only lamp from the desk, made rapid exit, affording us merely time to say, "That woman is evidently a Spiritualist."

We were now left in rather more obscurity, the moon's bright beams pouring through the windows being our only light. Voices were heard saying,

"Keep quiet, we will have some light presently."

One man said, "Yes, if we go three miles for it!"

During the few moments of waiting, I told the audience why I had come to them to warn them of the delusion of Spiritualism. I knew that many were ignorant of its true character, hence exposed to its snares. I felt it duty to expose its doctrines and morals, especially for the sake of my own sex, who were being ruined thereby. This kept the audience quiet till the lights were brought in, and we resumed our reading.

In conclusion, we remarked that the darkest shades we had not revealed; it would not be proper to read to them the worst of the testimony as given by Spiritualists themselves.

One woman cried out, as we ceased, "I am a Spiritualist," and made some very insulting remarks, while the audience had no disposition to hear, and so broke off. We learned afterward that she was an illustration of the morals (?) of Spiritualism. Some expressed to us their gratification in hearing the truth, said it was just the truth that was needed there, and would do good. We were invited to give some more lectures, but this we could not do. The woman who took the light is a thorough Spiritualist. She is the second wife of a man who is much esteemed, though a believer. His first wife, not three years ago, was entranced, and during that state called for liquor of some sort, of which she drank so much that it killed her, and a medium speaker was called upon to attend the funeral. There are many believers in that neighborhood, and we have since heard directly from them that they are exceedingly mad against us.

It being the wish of several, not imbued with such a spirit, that we should lecture there again, we felt disposed to venture, when on a brief visit to D—— this winter, but as the agent was now the husband of the woman who took the lamp, it was not deemed advisable by some of my own friends for us to do so under existing circumstances.

Of course we cannot vouch for the truth of what we have said respecting the woman who died, but we had the statement from several reliable persons, and no one has disputed it to our knowledge. What the results of that meeting will be, we know not, but this we do most fully believe, i. e., that the hand of the Lord guided us in this matter, and that it will accomplish that for which it was sent.

SOW BESIDE ALL WATERS.

A christian, traveling in a steam-boat, distributed tracts. While they were taken and read by many, a gentleman took one, and folding it up, cut it with his pen-knife into small pieces; then holding it up in derision, threw it away. One piece adhered to his coat; he picked it off, and looking at it, saw only the word of "God." He turned it over; on the other side, "Eternity." They stood out as living words before him. "God"—"Eternity!" He went to the bar, called for brandy to drink to drive them away; but in vain. Then to the gambling-table, to social intercourse and conversation; but those solemn words haunted him wherever he went, until he was brought a penitent to the feet of Jesus. What an encouragement to the christian traveler to sow seed by the way-side. In preparation for a journey, never forget the package of tracts. Scatter them, that you may thus win souls to your Savior.—Herald of the Morning.

GEO. NEEDHAM TO A. A. PHELPS.

Bro. Grant:—In your reply to the Rev. A. A. Phelps, of the 9th inst., I did not find any specific notice of his quotation of Ps. 85: 6, and Eph. 2: 1. I would like to write a few words on each of those texts.

On the former I reply, there is no evidence that the Psalmist meant anything else than "to make alive." But the presumption is that he looked forward to the same time and event that Ezekiel did in his vision of the valley of dry bones, which is afterward explained to be the re-living of all the men of faith who had died in captivity, in the enemy's land, coupled with a promise of their return to the land of promise, to enjoy the inheritance of which, by that captivity, they had been bereft. So also we find in that wonderful vision of Hab. 3. Let any one carefully read the three portions of the same word of God, and I think they cannot fail to see that they all refer to the same great, sublime, and glorious event. Habakkuk prays, "O Lord, revive thy work" (margin, "preserve alive thy work").

On the latter, I remark that the text in Eph. 2: 1 is a standard text, with all that class of interpreters, to prove what they call "spiritual death" and "spiritual life," i. e., alienation from God, on the one hand, and "a gracious union with him" on the other. I never see or hear this text and its cognate in Eph. 2: 13 (quoted by Mr. Phelps) quoted, that I do not marvel at the want of attention to the consequences of such an interpretation. I wonder Mr. P. did not see it when he quoted Col. 2: 13. "Hath quickened us together with him." With whom? With Christ. What! The adorable Savior brought, by the power of God, from a state of alienation from God, to one of "gracious union with him"?

But such is the startling result of that species of interpretation. There is no possibility of avoiding the conclusion, if we adopt the premise. There is another cognate text in Eph. 2: 5. "Even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened us together with Christ." Now who can fail to see that as Christ was quickened, so are we; and as we are quickened (or to be), so was he. If it was a moral or spiritual quickening in either case, so it was or was to be in the other. But I trust Mr. P. would not knowingly drag our blessed Redeemer down to our sinful level. Yet his application does this fearful thing. I trust he will see it.

But if the texts teach that we, the descendants of an apostate pair, are all "dead through trespasses and sins"; that "death (in its sentence) hath passed upon all men (both Jew and Gentile), for that all have sinned"; that "by nature," i. e., by a descent from a sinful ancestry, "were the children of wrath"—condemnation to death, and thus "reckoned dead by sin"; and that Christ bore that sentence "in his own body, on the tree"; then all is plain, all is harmony. God "quickened" the Savior when, for our sins, he lay under the power of death. "To you hath he given life, together with him." "That life is in his Son." "When He who is [or is the repository of] our life shall appear, then shall we also appear with him in glory." Then will Ezekiel's vision be fulfilled, and David's and Habakkuk's prayers answered. Yours waiting for that day, Geo. Needham.

PRAYERS vs. SERMONS.

A little article, not long ago, with the above heading, was so in accordance with feelings I have so often experienced, that I feel desirous of uttering a responsive word. Often in social religious meetings, there are some things so manifestly unsuitable, that one cannot avoid a consciousness of discomfort in witnessing them, even while we do not question the good intentions of those from whom they come; while other things, that may fall far below a desirable standard, will startle us with their solemnity, and leave an abiding impression.

Whenever my thoughts turn in this direction, two little incidents of the memories of my youth stand out conspicuously. And I mention them before I pass to other criticisms, that the timid and hesitating may know, that however severe I may be upon those who seek display, I have still a vein in my nature, corresponding to that sentiment of my Master that would "not break the bruised reed, nor quench the smoking flax."

A timid, stammering, imbecile young man, half-rising from his seat said, "I love Jesus." That was all,—yet it went to my heart with far more power than many a studied speech.

The other incident sends a tinge of lingering shame over me, whenever I think of it. It was a time of some seriousness, and in the interval of public services a few sisters gathered in a retired room, ostensibly to pray. But who prayed? I did not, nor do I remember who did, save one young girl. She knelt amidst older professing Christians, sitting around, myself at her side (I record it to my shame.) A few broken expressions were all she could accomplish under the embarrassing circumstances, and she arose and again sat by my side. A sort of guilt for her ill success, kept me transfixed, but it burnt another salutary lesson into my dull heart.

But I set out to say some very different things, and among them this—a young brother arose and let off a beautiful apostrophe to faith! It certainly showed his skill at composing (if he himself composed it,) but nevertheless an inclination to laugh, mingled with a sort of pity for the perfomer, made me afraid to look up for some minutes. But that was only a matter of bad taste, and, really, no harm was done. But the prayers (?) sometimes seem such an affront to God, that a shiver will run over me, spite of all my charity for good intentions. Not that it is never proper to rehearse before the Lord. Far otherwise. For some of the most beautiful Scripture prayers are largely rehearsing. Daniel's memorable prayer, recorded in the ninth chapter, is such. But here the true idea is given by himself, thus: "While I was speaking, and praying, and confessing," verse 20. Also David's prayer in 1 Chron. xxix. Yet here it is said, "David blessed the Lord before all the congregation." And in Solomon's prayer, 1 Kings 8, a distinction, is clearly made when in verses 54, 55, it says, "When Solomon had made an end of praying all this prayer and supplication, unto the Lord, he arose from before the altar of the Lord, from kneeling on his knees, with his hands spread up to heaven. And he stood and blessed, etc."

Christ's inimitable prayer, recorded in John 17, partakes largely of rehearsal; but that model prayer, given expressly for our instruction and imitation, has only one assertion: "Hallowed be thy name." And many prefer to regard that a petition also.

Self-seeking is one of the most subtle snares of the human soul, and when one leads off in prayer with the constantly recurring expressions: "Thou knowest, O God, this and this, Thou knowest, O God, thus and thus,"—one cannot help feeling that it is not only a breach of that command, "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain," but also an effort to make the servant conspicuous, rather than the service acceptable. I know that I may sometimes seem uncharitable, and sometimes give way to censorious criticism; but it is not toward the timid and ignorant, but toward the designing, or those who pervert God-given faculties by adopting theories second-hand, and never investigate Bible truth sufficiently to know whether they are blindly following some accredited human authority, or the abiding truth of God's word; whether they are receiving the teachings of God with humility, or telling back to God things contrary to his communications to us; or, what is more reprehensible, telling God, in professed prayer, of the great designs he intends to accomplish through mankind, as if it were not written of Christ, "I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end."—Review.

JOURNAL.

DORCAS MISSION.

July 15. This morning bought a quart of molasses, and three quarters of a pound of lard, which used up our funds. We have cold mush and hominy, which will be warmed for breakfast. We have no other provisions in the house. I pray the Lord for Jesus' sake to supply us with abundant means at this time, that our various pressing needs may be supplied.

(6.10 P. M.) To the praise of the Lord I now write that since the preceding paragraph was penned, $10.20 have been received, which supplied our dinner, purchased soap, soda, and starch for the washing, paid the rent of the cook's room, which was due to-day, and we have now in the treasury 33 cts. My heart is filled with praise to the Lord for his great goodness, love, and mercy. He has not suffered me to be confounded, though I am undeserving of his kind notice. Whilst enjoying these temporal blessings, I pray that the Lord may enable me to deny self continually, so that I may receive rich spiritual blessings. I long for more of the spirit of Christ, that I may be a far better example to believers in purity, faith, and patience. Lord, open the eyes of my understanding; help me to take heed unto thy word, and preserve me blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Aug. 5. Amount in the treasury this morning very small, but the Lord will supply our need. Our breakfast is purchased, and we have 90 cts. left. Breakfast cost $1.43—bread 99 cts. and molasses 44 cts. Praise the Lord that we are thus supplied. We have money enough to buy potatoes for dinner. We shall cook a firkin of trout (nineteen fish) that we have on hand. Bless the Lord for his goodness unto us. Truly "God is love."

After breakfast received $2.50 from New Brunswick. Thus through the Lord we had means to buy bread for the dinner. After dinner received $5.72, and a lot of hats. Was thus enabled to give our cook $2.00, and have means enough to carry us through another day. Towards evening gave the children a lot of parched corn (that was given us), with some sugar on it, as we had dinner an hour and a half earlier than usual. (At this time we were having two meals per day.)

Aug. 6. Whitewashed the entries of the Home, and the brick work in the yard. Our wants have been supplied to-day from means received yesterday. After dinner about fifty cents in the treasury. In the evening received another dollar. Now we have partly money enough to carry us through the morrow.

Aug. 7. After breakfast, not one penny in funds until twelve o'clock, when the Lord sent us $3.00. His name have all the praise. In the afternoon received $2.00 more.

Aug. 8. After dinner our funds were wholly exhausted once more. Towards night received $3.00. The Lord thus supplies our wants in the most wonderful manner. He alone has known our extremities, and he has gladdened our hearts by his blessed deliverances.

Aug. 10. A day of great prosperity. $10.50 received by mail. We also received from Haddonfield, N. J., a basket of tomatoes, a basket of cabbages, a basket of apples, two baskets of potatoes, and some cucumbers. Received a lot of cakes for the children from the same quarter. Gave our cook $2.00. At half-past ten o'clock in the morning I had not a penny in the world. At eleven o'clock the money came in. Truly the Lord "moves in a mysterious way, his wonders to perform."

Aug. 11. Our wants were supplied this day by means furnished yesterday. Also received $2.47 from brethren.

Aug. 15, (7½ A. M.) Since the last date the Lord has not suffered us to lack, for which we praise him. Day before yesterday a basket of peaches was sent to the Home, and yesterday a box full (about three pecks) fresh proofs of God's love for us. Have a desire to attend the Wilbraham campmeeting. Three days ago $5.00 were given me for that purpose by some unknown friend. At this hour I do not know whether I can go or not. The Lord gave the mission $26.00 yesterday. In the evening received $5.00. My way now seems clear for me to attend the great gathering of the saints at W. Thank the Lord.

Aug. 17. Made arrangements for the care of the family during my absence. Started with $6.00 in my pocket, which constituted all my personal funds, and left $20.00 with the family, which was the balance of what was left after provisioning our family up to to-day. The sum left with the family was far from sufficient to supply all their needs during my absence, yet I left with the most perfect assurance that all their wants would be met. It is blessed to trust in the Lord.

Aug. 26. Returned from the campmeeting last night. During my absence, nearly $11.00 were sent to the Home, and it was my privilege to send $27.00 at various times. The Lord blessed me richly, both temporally and spiritually, so that at this time I have been enabled to give the matron $15.00, and have in the funds $[illegible]. All praise to the name of the Lord for such wondrous mercies. Every penny given me was a free-will offering. Not one cent of it was begged but of the Lord.

What a rich feast the Lord gave me to see the faces and shake the hands of his dear servants, many of whom had comforted my heart by their epistles, which were full of words of hope and consolation. When I have been passing through trials, their words have come to me like showers of rain upon the thirsty soil. How my poor heart has been encouraged to hold on to the promises of God, for they are "yea and amen in Christ Jesus." It was blessed to meet those who know by blessed experience that "it is good to trust in the Lord" for temporal as well as spiritual benefits. May grace, mercy, and peace abide with them. Your aff. Bro. in Christ,

F. H. Burbank.

NO DIFFERENCE.

"It does not make any difference what we believe, if we are honest." So said a friend to us recently, after we had deduced a scriptural argument to prove that sin and sinners will have an end. And we demurred. So said a minister some years ago, and we thought he did n't realize what he said.

A rich, old acquaintance of mine, who appeared intelligent upon every subject but religion, committed suicide in 1867. He was an Infidel, and, for aught I know, an honest one. His children had all arrived at a mature age, and were in affluent circumstances,—some of them wealthy. He had just reached that point of pecuniary independence which thousands of young men are seeking for as the acme of human happiness. But the old man was widowed, his children absent, and his body invaded by painful and chronic diseases. He visited a friend of his own years, who owned a pew in the church, and told him he contemplated committing suicide.

"Death is the end of us," said he; "I am unhappy; I've lived long enough, and I want to die." And his friend was of nearly the same opinion as himself as to man's hereafter. Within a week he committed self-murder, while God's law proclaims "no murderer hath eternal life." Who will say his belief made no difference?

Saul of Tarsus was once an honest persecutor of the church of Christ, but God was very particular to have his belief changed before he could use him as a minister of the cross.

An intelligent man cannot act without faith. It is the motive engine of all actions.

It makes some difference to the farmer in the spring about planting, if he believes his labor will be rewarded with a harvest in the autumn. It makes some difference to the speculator whether he believes his investments will realize him profit or loss. And I tell you, kind reader, a truth I believe will stand in the day of God: that it will make an eternal difference to you if you believe Him.

THE TRANSFIGURATION.

"And was transfigured before them, and his face did shine as the sun, and his raiment was white as the light. And behold there appeared unto them Moses and Elias talking with them."—Matt. 17: 2, 3.

This transaction is a vision, and does not necessarily involve the personal presence of Moses and Elijah. But, granting they were there personally, what does it prove? Of Moses it is said that he died, and the Lord buried him. The man Moses died, and the man Moses was buried; and if he personally appeared on the Mount of Transfiguration, he must have been raised from the dead.

Of Elijah it is said he went up to heaven in a chariot of fire. There is no difficulty in his case.

It is said that the "devil disputed about the body of Moses." It is said there is no evidence that Moses was raised from the dead. The very fact of his appearance on the Mount is "proof" to my mind.

It is said that God assumes a body. Where is the proof of this? The bodies of "angels" are not assumed. "They appear as men," because this is their form. Man was made in their image. I therefore regard it the height of folly to deny that Moses was resurrected. If he personally appeared on the Mount, he certainly was raised, and his presence there would be the proof.

It is stated that this transaction was a vision. If we understand the transaction in this light, there is no difficulty, for this does not necessarily involve the personal presence of either Moses or Elijah.

Those friends wishing my views upon this subject, have herein my best light concerning the transfiguration on the Mount.

J. E. Clark.

SECTARIANISM.

I learned long ago that it is not with men we are at war, but with doctrines and sentiments. I do not, therefore, see any reason why we should act like the sons of Ishmael toward each other. A man embraces a false sentiment—what then? Is he therefore a hypocrite, a scoundrel, or a liar? Who of all of us do not hold some sentiments which may be wrong? Shall we therefore all fall on each other with words and acts of cruelty? What little Pope among us will start up and say, "I am right—you are all wrong?" Is not every man entitled to respect, love, kindness and consideration? Will it reform any man to look at him with a countenance fraught with wrath and thunder and call him hard names? But the man is in a fatal error—what then? Will it make him see his error and our truth by appearing toward him unkind, vinegar-faced and cloudy? Will turning him out of doors, by treating him with such cold contempt that he cannot remain in our company, draw him any nearer to the truth and to Christ? This was not the policy of the Galilean. The enemies of Christ said before him, "Behold he receiveth sinners and eateth with them." Hear the reply of the Son of God to all such charges: "They that be whole need not a physician, but they are sick."

One of the primary laws of reformation, both in doctrine and in practice, is association. Jesus came down from heaven that he might associate with men and reform them. It does not make us sinners to talk with, walk with, eat with, worship with sinners, of necessity. It does not make them saints to let them all see us shun them and treat them with contempt. When will men learn that bigotry, sectarianism, coldness, contempt, stiffness and reserve, are not attractive elements? When will men learn that they cannot scold, drive, frighten or repulse human beings into truth? When shall we learn, if men are brought into truth at all, it will be done by association, love, [illegible] and argument?

Select a family of eight or ten members; one of the family embraces a fatal sentiment—fatal to the interests of the whole—what is to be done? When the hour of worship arrives, shall we, with contempt, show him he is unwelcome in the worshiping circle? Will that make him love our truth and our spirit more? Shall we refuse to walk with him to the place of true worship on Sunday because he sometimes goes to a place of false worship? Will that make him love true or false worship more? Shall we treat him with haughty and scornful reserve when he wishes to take part in the worship? Will that incline him to go with us. Shall we not rather help him in all he does attempt right? Shall we not say amen when he does say the truth? And when we do say nay, nay, say it like christians, and not like savages. But I know well the sentiments of community on these points. Here is the creed of the sectarian community: "Go with us, or we go against you." "Help build up my church, or I want nothing to do with you." "Be somebody or nobody." This creed is not universal—there are many honorable exceptions to it. May we not hope the exceptions will multiply?—Edwin Burnham.

PREPARATION FOR CHRIST'S COMING.

If we would grow in grace, and have a more lively hope, we must seek more preparedness for Christ's second coming. I know no doctrine more sanctifying and quickening than the doctrine of Christ's second advent. I know none more calculated to draw us from the world, and make us single-eyed, whole-hearted, and joyful christians. But, alas! how few believers live like men who wait for their Master's return! Who that narrowly observes the ways of many believers would ever think that they loved and longed for their Lord's appearing? Is it not true that there are many hearts among God's children which are not quite ready to receive Jesus? He would find the window barred, the door shut, the fires almost out; it would be a cold and comfortless reception. Oh! believing reader, it ought not so to be. We want more of a pilgrim's spirit; we ought to be ever looking for and hastening to our home. The day of the Lord's advent is the day of rest, the day of complete redemption, the day when the family of God shall at last be all gathered together. It is the day when we shall no longer walk by faith, but by sight: we shall see the land that is far off, we shall behold the King in his beauty. Surely we ought to be saying daily, "Come, Lord Jesus," let thy kingdom come. Oh! let us set Christ's advent continually before our eyes. Let us say to ourselves every morning, "The Lord will soon return," and it will be good for our souls.

Hygiene.

"This is for your health."—Paul.

KEDZIE'S RAIN WATER FILTER.

Last autumn we called the attention of our readers to Kedzie's filter, which we consider the very best in market, and ought to be in every family. There is no water so healthy as well-filtered rain water, and this filter is just the thing to do the work. Hard water is not fit to drink, nor to be used for bathing, nor cooking purposes. Its effects upon the stomach may be seen by examining a tea-kettle in which hard water is used. Hard water is the cause of some common and painful diseases, which may be prevented by the use of soft water. Those who have Kedzie's filter, and some means for securing rain or river water, can always have the best of water. The water may taste a little of the filter at first, but will soon become very fine.

There are five sizes of the filter. No. 1 contains one gallon; No. 2, one and a half gallons; No. 3, two gallons; No. 4, three gallons; and No. 5 four.—Editor.

CURE FOR CANCER.

Bro. Grant:—My heart says praise the Lord for his mercy and love that endureth forever. My companion has been suffering two years with a cancer. It has been drawn out four times, and yet lived. I have got a remedy now, that has taken one of them out, roots and all, and it has never been known to fail. It has been in use a great many years in the old country, and has never failed of a cure. As I am not allowed the privilege of making it known, I would advise any of the dear brethren and sisters who are troubled with cancer tumors, or wens, to call on me, and they shall see the benefits of it. You may think I wish this published for pecuniary purposes; but my heavenly Father has revealed to me that I must not live for myself, but to do others good.

A HINT ON BATHING.

A greater or less degree of shock always attends bathing, especially in cold weather; and this deters many persons, young and old, strong and feeble, from this health-giving practice. Considerable experience has taught me that this may be avoided. In cold weather your room should be as warm as a stove fire may make it. After washing the head, apply the moist hands to those parts which are the least sensitive to the contact with water, and rubbing, move them gradually from one part to another until the whole surface is wet, and so proceed with your bath, applying water and rubbing vigorously. Perhaps, with different ones, the parts least sensitive to water vary, I cannot say. After washing my head, I commence at my wrists and work up my arms. I then put my moist hands on my back, at the lower extremity of the spinal column—the part least sensitive to water in my case—and rubbing, move them around the loins and up the frontal walls of the body to the throat, and having then washed these parts thoroughly, wash the legs, and so finish, without having been chilled in the least, as I should have been if I had dashed on water anywhere without discretion.

A hint upon the enlargement and strengthening of the lungs I give also. Costly breathing tubes and blowing tubes are invented for this purpose. But we are already better supplied. In any active exercise out of doors, whether walking, running, chopping, or mopping, keep the mouth shut firmly and breathe through the nose. This practice, especially in cold weather, will give the lungs sufficient daily exercise. Walking fast, or running, to and from your work, or wherever inclined, with vigor enough to compel deep breathing—which you must do through the nose—is excellent. Children should be taught this.

A caution: let the weak guard against exertion that may cause pain or a sense of exhaustion in the chest. Let exertion commence gently, and so proceed.

QUERIES.

Several correspondents have asked questions relative to using rain water, filtered or unfiltered, hard water, etc., which we answer under one general head:

1. We do not consider rain water caught from roofs of houses, especially in a dry time, when the roofs and atmosphere are impregnated with smoke and other impurities, a healthy article to use, either as drink or for culinary purposes, until filtered.

2. We regard water kept in a good cistern, which any one may have with small expense, when filtered, incomparably more healthy than hard water, and suitable for all purposes of drinking and cooking.

3. Where living springs can be had, free from minerals and surface impurities (which are seldom found), they are among the best of water for all purposes.

4. Hard water, as has been many times stated in health journals, is not wholesome for drink or for cooking food, and every family who desires health should obtain soft water in some way, and as pure as possible. In countries where hard water is used, bilious complaints, torpidity of liver, etc., abound.

J. C. Waukon, Iowa, asks: 1. How long does it take food to digest, that is, from the hardest down to the most simple?

2. Will a meat diet give a person a stronger muscle than a vegetable diet?

1. According to the experiments of scientific observers, it takes from one to five and a half hours. Of course these experiments have been performed on healthy stomachs, and only one article of food introduced at a time. When different articles are introduced at the same time, it prolongs the time of digestion; and again, when we consider that there are but few healthy stomachs, the usual time allotted to a healthy stomach would be much prolonged. All things considered, we think that from five to six hours is none too long to properly digest a meal. If the stomach is hurried from one meal to another, much injury will follow.

2. No. The most remarkable for strength, among men or animals, are found among those confined to a grain and vegetable diet. Look at the horse, buffalo and elephant, as specimens of vegetarians; and read Dr. Beach's history of men who lived exclusively on grains and vegetables, remarkable for their unsurpassed strength of muscle, as given in his "American Practice of Medicine."

Another asks the following: 1. Are raisins good for dyspeptics? 2. Would you advise putting lye-water from ashes into hard water for bathing purposes?

1. They are not. The skins and seeds are generally swallowed, which are indigestible, especially the skins. Much injury has often accrued to children on this account.

2. We think it unnecessary for any one who desires health to be obliged to use hard water. Again, we think the lye would not improve it for general bathing purposes, as it would in our opinion soon affect the natural functions of the skin as much as, if not more than, hard water.

J. O. T. writes: 1. Do you consider corn starch good for food? 2. Is sour-crout suitable for food? 3. Which are the healthier, sweet or sour apples?

1. We do not regard corn starch as being a healthy kind of food. It is only one of the proximate principles of food, and therefore not so good as corn itself. Animals fed on it exclusively, for any length of time, would die. Used with other food it would be less objectionable.

2. Cabbage contains about the least nutriment of all vegetables, and sourcrout in our opinion would be still worse, as it is in a state of partial decomposition.

3. Sweet apples seem to agree with a few stomachs better than any other; but we regard the sub-acid fruits as the most healthy. Very sour fruits are not so good.—Health Reformer.

EFFECTS OF TEA ON THE SKIN.

If you drop a few drops of strong tea upon a piece of iron—a knife blade, for instance, the tannate of iron is formed, which is black. If you mix it with iron filings or pulverized iron, you can make a fair article of ink. If you mix it with fresh human blood, the tannate of iron. Take human skin and let it soak for a time in strong tea, and it will become leather. Now, when we remember that the liquids which enter the stomach are rapidly absorbed by the veins and absorbents of the stomach, and enter into the circulation, and thrown out of the system by the skin, respiration and the kidneys, it is probable that a drink so common as tea, and so abundantly used, will have some effect. Can it be possible that tannin introduced with so much warm liquid, producing perspiration, will have no effect upon the skin? Look at the tea drinkers of Russia, the Chinese, and the old women of America, who have so long continued the habit of drinking strong teas. Are they not dark colored and leather-skinned? When young they were fair complexioned.

Animal Food.—Animal food becomes more putrid in the stomach than vegetable, and it disposes the system to inflammatory and putrid disease because of the large amount of carbon which it contains. Butter, oils and fat are almost all carbon, and consequently indigestible, and clogs to the system.

THE RESURRECTION.*

Two thousand years ago a flower
Bloomed lightly, in a far off land;
Two thousand years ago its seed
Was placed within a dead man's hand.

Before the Savior came to earth,
That man had lived and loved and died,
And e'en in that far off time,
The flower had spread its perfume wide.

Suns rose and set, years came and went,
The dead hand kept its treasure well;
Nations were born and turned to dust,
While life was hidden in that shell.

The shriveled hand is robbed at last,
The seed is buried in the earth;
When, lo! the life long hidden there
Into a glorious flower burst forth.

Just such a plant as that which grew
From such a seed when buried low,
Just such a flower in Egypt bloomed,
And died, two thousand years ago.

And will not He who watched the seed
And kept the life within the shell,
When those He loves are laid to rest,
Watch o'er their buried dust as well?

And will not He from 'neath the sod
Cause something glorious to arise?
Aye! though it sleep two thousand years,
Yet all that buried dust shall rise.

Just such a face as greets you now,
Just such a form as here we bear,
Only more glorious far, will rise
To meet the Savior in the air.

Then will I lay me down in peace
When called to leave this vale of tears,
For "in my flesh shall I see God," E'en though I sleep two thousand years.

Com. by R. E. LADD.

* In the course of his wanderings among the Pyramids of Egypt, Lord Lindsay, the celebrated English traveler, accidentally came across a mummy, the inscription upon which proved to be at least two thousand years old. In examining the mummy after it was carefully unwrapped, he found in one of its enclosed hands a small round root. Wondering how long vegetable life could last, he took the little bulb from that closed hand and planted it in a sunny soil, allowed the dew and rains of heaven to descend upon it, and in course of time, a few weeks, to his astonishment and joy, that root burst forth and bloomed into a beautiful flower.

This interesting incident suggested to Mrs. S. H. Bradford, an American poetess, the above thoughts upon the RESURRECTION.

THE HOPE.—No. 2.

"Wherein God, willing more abundantly to show unto the heirs of promise the immutability of his counsel, confirmed it by an oath; that by two immutable things in which it was impossible for God to lie, we might have a strong consolation, who have fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope set before us."—Heb. 6: 17, 18.

The apostle Peter in his first epistle, 3: 15, says, "But sanctify the Lord God in your hearts, and be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason for the hope that is in you with meekness and fear." To you whose hope and expectation is that when your body dies your soul will soar away on angels' pinions to the fair regions of delight and glory; to you I turn my attention a moment, and demand of you "a reason of your hope." The "hope set before us" is based upon the "promise of God confirmed by his oath"; but where in all the book of God is a promise given, accompanied by the oath of God, upon which such a hope is based? Where is the promise of God without the oath? And if no such promise can be found, why should I be calumniated for rejecting such a hope?

It will never do to entertain such a hope simply because many pious and good men have lived and died in it; by no means. Our forefathers doubtless walked according to the best light they had; but if the "true light" now shines, should we choose to grope our way in darkness simply because our ancestors wandered there before us? Certainly not. Let us, then, regardless of all preconceived opinions, come directly to the word of God, and endeavor to learn what is the true hope set before us in the gospel.

We purpose to approach the subject in an indirect manner, and inquire first of the apostle Paul when he expected to enter upon the fruition of his hope. In Titus 2: 13 he says, "Looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God, and our Savior Jesus Christ." But why speak of that blessed hope in connection with the appearing of Jesus, if he expected to enter upon its fruition at death? Surely there would be no need of Jesus' coming to consummate his hope, if Paul could realize it without his coming. But again: "For the hope and the resurrection of the dead am I called in question."—Acts 23: 6. Why is it that the apostle speaks of the "resurrection of the dead" and the "coming of Jesus" in connection with the consummation of his hope, if he really did expect to enjoy its fruition without a resurrection? The fact is, if Christ never comes the dead never will be raised, and if the dead never rise the hope never will be realized, but all them that are fallen asleep in Christ are perished.

When Paul was brought before king Agrippa, in his defense he says, "And now I stand and am judged for the hope of the promise made of God unto our fathers; unto which promise our twelve tribes, instantly serving God day and night, hope to come; for which hope's sake, king Agrippa, I am accused of the Jews. Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise the dead?"—Acts 26: 6-8. Here the apostle clearly demonstrates the fact that his hope was based upon the promise made of God unto the fathers; and that the hope of those of the twelve tribes of Israel who instantly served God day and night, was based on the same promise also; and that it is to be fulfilled at the resurrection of the dead. Because Paul declares that the promise is to be fulfilled and the hope consummated at the resurrection of the dead, the Jews accuse him of preaching "heresy"; and yet at the same time "allow that there is to be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and the unjust."—Acts 24: 15.

Do not thousands occupy the same position at the present time? Although they allow there is to be a resurrection of the dead, yet they can give no good reason why there should be; for they expect to enter upon the fruition of their hope and receive the fulfillment of the promise without it. Therefore when we take sides with Paul, and say with him that without a resurrection of the dead the hope never can be realized, they take sides with the Jews and cry "heresy"! They, as well as the Jews, are looking for the fulfillment of the promise without a resurrection of the dead; while the Jews expected it would be fulfilled to them in mortal flesh, they are looking for it to be fulfilled to them independent of the flesh. One error is not much greater than the other; both alike are calculated to lead their votaries on to signal disappointment.

It must be obvious to all that the apostle Paul predicated his hope on the promise that God made to the fathers, and expected to realize it at the coming of Christ and the resurrection of the dead. What was his hope? In Titus 1: 2, he says, "In hope of eternal life, that God, who cannot lie, promised before the world began" [or, "before the times of the ages." Macknight]. His hope, then, is the "hope of eternal life," based on the promise that God made to the fathers, before the times of the ages, or Levitical dispensation, which doubtless is referred to. The reason why I accept Macknight's translation in preference to King James' is (1), because the word aion, which is rendered "world," according to critics, always refers to epochs of time, and never to material substance; and (2.) before the material world was formed there was no man to make the promise to; and (3.) before we leave the subject undoubtedly we shall be able to show that the very promise upon which the apostle based his hope of eternal life was made before the cycles, or jubilee ages, of Levitical dispensation commenced.

However, the "hope" is the "hope of eternal life"; and right here let me remark that eternal life is the result of immortality; and hence every being that has immortality must necessarily have eternal life. And "that which a man hath, why doth he yet hope for?" Yet we have eternal life set before us as an object to be sought after, and obtained by fighting the "good fight of faith." I can easily see the propriety of Christ's admonition to the Jews: "Search the Scriptures; for in them ye think ye have [got] eternal life [as a result of inherent immortality]; and they are they that testify of me"; and yet "ye will not come unto me that ye might have [the] life."

The Pharisees thought, like thousands at the present time, that they had eternal life, as the result of an immortal principle within; while God's word plainly teaches that "this is the record, that God hath given us eternal life; and this life is in his Son."—1 John 5: 11.

J. W. TAYLOR.

Chatham Valley, Pa.

A WATCHWORD FOR 1868.

Great and perplexing occurrences are looming!—the horizon is ominous of a change! We see all things moving swiftly onward, and converging on one grand result—the coming of the Son of God. Every thing is proceeding regularly, and step by step, to the destined end. These are no popular explosions from forces beyond control; each revolution,—each burst of passion,—each manifestation of human folly, ambition, avarice, or anger, takes its place, linking in with what went before, and what is to follow after, to prepare events for the coming of the King of kings. And we are permitted, and helped by the Spirit of God, to lift the veil from the mysterious drama, and thus discover its connection with the mighty whole.

Signs are not wanting—they abound in all quarters of the world. The present aspect of the world is eminently fitted to command attention even of men unaccustomed to reflect. What precise turn these events are to exhibit is not a practical question; but the unmistakable tendency of events already passed, or now transpiring, is among the most momentous considerations of the day. It is by no means easy to state with any degree of accuracy, as to order or importance, the particular signs which should command our attention in connection with the great event—the "Glorious appearing of the great God, and our Savior Jesus Christ." Still, many matters which at first appear insignificant, are, nevertheless, to be regarded as precursors of some startling omen. Among the many signs may be enumerated these:—The efforts of apostate christianity to regain ascendency: the fearful increase of infidelity: the preaching of the gospel "for a witness" in every land: the circulation of the Scriptures in all the known languages: the exertions made by christians to call God's people out from Babylon, by means of special missionary effort: the present supine condition of the majority of professing christians of all denominations: the gradual decay of Mahometan power in the East, by which a great impediment to the return of the Jews to the land of their fathers, will be removed: the gigantic preparations for war by the great powers; the great change working, and which of necessity must take place in the present balance of power amongst the nations of Europe, before the confederacy of Ezekiel's prophecy (Ez. 38 and 39) can be fulfilled.

It is, dear reader, "the time of the end;"—these are "the latter days." It may be, "the sign of the Son of man" will be seen before the year 1868 closes. Chronological and prophetical dates converge. The Mussulman sees the years of his Hegira expiring: the Jewish Rabbi is watching the approach of the Messiah, according to Daniel's predictions: the Hindoo is crying for "a better Raj" than his present ruler. "A vernal King is coming," says he, "to make nature bloom again." There is something inexpressibly fearful and sublime in this "noise as of many waters,"—more terrible than the whirlpool of Charybdis. But a distinct and articulate sound from amid sounds is heard, it is this—"BEHOLD THE BRIDEGROOM COMETH!"—Herald of the Morning.

For the World's Crisis.

LOOKING FORWARD.

In another article I said I was tired looking for that in the future which might never come, etc. A person said to me, "You must write the other side of the picture, for we are looking forward with hope." If that hope is for real abiding happiness from what you are striving or expect to gain from this world, it will prove vain and transitory as a name written in sand, all except the inward peace you may enjoy in doing your duty to God and your fellow men. Experience proves that earthly happiness is more in the expectation than the realization of our wishes, for when those wishes are attained, they do not often yield the pleasure we anticipated. There is always an if in the case. Are not all, except those who have lost all hope in this life by the disappointments which they have suffered, looking forward to something in the future which they expect to enjoy more than the present? We are continually setting our stake of happiness further off, and we think when we arrive at that point we shall be all right, and so we might be possibly, if it were not for this or that annoyance or trouble, or something else which is inseparable from the expected bliss, a shadow in every path, no matter which you seek. Death oftentimes comes when persons have nearly reached the goal of their hopes, and are just ready to say, "Soul, take thine ease," and removes the delight of the eye and joy of the heart.

Can any one look forward and say with a certainty, to-morrow, or next month, or next year, or any time in the future, shall be as this day and much more abundant in enjoyment and happiness? The present, therefore, is the only time we can claim; the future is not ours, and perhaps never will be. The uncertain future to which so many look forward may be but a dream. The greatest happiness which any can arrive at in this world seems to proceed not so much from the abundance of the things which we have as from a contented mind, not what we expect to enjoy in the future, but what we have from day to day; for we know not what a day may bring forth.

In Ecclesiastes is found the experience of one wiser than either you or I, who says, "I have seen all the works that are done under the sun, and behold all is vanity and vexation of spirit." Again, I know that there is no good in them, but for a man to rejoice and do good in his life, and also that every man should eat and drink and enjoy the good of all his labor. This, then, is the brightest side this world presents to those who look for permanent happiness from it alone, and even this is unsatisfactory to the soul.

Is there in reality another than a dark picture connected with this state of things? There certainly are some spots brighter than others, yet are not all stained with the curse more or less? Does not St. Paul say the "whole creation groaneth and travaileth together in pain?" There is no peace promised to the wicked in this life. The righteous are told by Christ himself, "in the world ye shall have tribulation, but in me ye shall have peace." Their happiness proceeds from a higher source. St. Paul says in another place, "If in this life only we have hope, we are of all men most miserable." The righteous live continually by faith and hope of a better inheritance, a final rest. Do they not confess themselves pilgrims here, and look for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God; for the mansions in their Father's house, when their work is done? "Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for a new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." St. John says, speaking of the same thing, "God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying; neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away." And in another verse, "There shall in no wise enter into it anything that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination or maketh a lie; but they which are written in the Lamb's book of life; and there shall be no more curse; but the throne of God shall be in it, and his servants shall serve him." Isaiah says, speaking of the same thing, "Rejoice ye, and be glad forever in that which I create; for I will create Jerusalem a rejoicing and her people a joy, and mine elect shall long enjoy the work of their hands." "They shall no more labor in vain, nor bring forth for trouble," etc.

This side of the picture is written by better hands than mine, and inspired ones. The christian alone enjoys a certain hope of happiness, but it belongs not to the present side of the picture; but is the gradual dawning of the light and glory which precedes the rising sun and perfect day, when he shall behold the now invisible end of all his hopes in all its glorious reality. This side of the picture is immutable as God himself; the other an ignis fatuus which continually changes, and which we pursue in spite of reason and experience.

CAST DOWN, BUT NOT DESTROYED.

A tornado swept over the land. Houses were swept from their foundations and scattered in fragments. Trees were torn up by the roots, fences were demolished, and the corn and grain laid prostrate in the dirt. The cloud passed over. The wind and rain and hail ceased, but the ruins, the effects of the storm, remained. The farmer walked over his fields and viewed the devastation, and sadness filled his heart. He was terrified in the storm; he trembled for his own life and the lives of his loved ones, and prayed earnestly that the wind might cease and the storm pass by. That prayer had been answered. Bright shone the sun, and all was calm and serene. But as he looked around he saw that the labor of years had been destroyed in an hour. His dwelling, the home of himself and family, lay in ruins. He looked over his fields, the toil of months was lost. The warm rays of the sun shining so beautiful would ripen no corn or grain for him. It would be of no use to sow again the seed, for the frosts of autumn and chill winter were approaching. If he again built a house, again it might be swept away. The fruit of his orchard lay unripened and worthless upon the ground.

He sat down and wept. How desolate and helpless he felt. How weak and puny was the arm which could perform no work but what the elements of the sky could demolish—which could erect no habitation, but what even the air, invisible to his eye, when set in motion might sweep away. O how he sighed for a dwelling that could not be moved—for a land where no storms might ruin all the labor of his hands. His wife and children gathered around him; not one was missing. And, as he counted them over, gratitude once more sprang up in his heart, and looking upward he thanked God their lives were spared. For their sakes he would again toil and cheerfully bear his burden. He was cast down, but not destroyed.

There are many sad, weary souls in the land who have been under dark clouds, who have suffered by storms of adversity, disappointment, neglect, treachery, faithlessness, loss of friends and blighted hopes, and are carrying a load of heart-sorrow grievous to be borne. They started in life, perhaps, with bright prospects and joyous anticipations. They had high aspirations, and looked forward to a life of usefulness and happiness. They learned to love the cause of God, and were anxious to do some little good in his vineyard. Perhaps they had begun to feel the blest, the joyous assurance that even they were accepted by God as humble laborers, when lo! the storm in its fury burst upon them. Bruised and blinded by the storm, and finding all human shelter vain, they fled for refuge to the "great Rock in a weary land," and cried in anguish to God that the storm might cease.

There was a calm. The storm was over, but its effects remained. They were bruised and torn, their energies were paralyzed, their hands were weak. Their perceptions and sensibilities had been wrought to such a pitch, the reaction was too much. There was a calm, but to them it was a dead calm. They looked forth, they saw their hopes blasted, their usefulness destroyed, and all earthly enjoyment at an end. Why should they live? They turn away their faces from earth, and sigh for a land of rest, a dwelling place where storms can no more come.

Cheer up, poor sad and weary soul, the Master calleth thee. Lift up thy head and listen: "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." His eye hath been upon thee, he hath watched and pitied thee all through the storm. He was the rock which sheltered thee—he heard thy cry and bade the storm be still; and now he reaches out his hand to raise thee up. Take hold of that strong hand. Do you feel weak? He has suffered you to become weak, that you might learn where your strength lies. In him there is strength. Try no more to walk in your own strength; if you do you will certainly fall. Walk in His strength. Venture not forth to labor in your own strength; weak as you are, go in his strength, and let his hand steady yours as you sow beside all waters. What you cannot do, his strength will accomplish. When you are weary, lean on him. When your burden is heavy, he is ready to carry it for you. O trust in him, for he will not fail you. Earthly friends may prove false and pierce thee with thorns, he is faithful, ever true. Forget the past; look not back upon the graves of buried hopes, but grasp the hope of the gospel which is like an anchor cast within the vail. Are you surrounded by painful associations? Forget them; grasp tightly the hand of the Master. If people injure you, it is against him they sin; to him they must give an account. Press onward, let no man take thy crown.

Though cast down, be not destroyed. March on. Look not behind; despair, anguish and death are in the rear; peace, happiness, glory and immortality are ahead. You sigh for a land of rest, and a dwelling place secure from storms. "In my Father's house are many mansions;" in the city which hath foundations is a place prepared for you. Over the other side there is a land of pure delights where saints immortal reign. Over there, sweet fields are dressed in living green. Glory crowns the hills, covers the plains, and fills the vallies. Ripe clusters of grapes hang from the branches of immortal vines. Flowers that never fade bloom all around. On the banks of the crystal river, with water sweet and pure, stands the Tree of Life, laden with fruit of which you may eat and live forever. That land is nearing; the shining shore appears in view. Just yonder, on Zion's heights, rise the jasper walls of the New Jerusalem.

"Poor mourning soul, dry up your tears, lift up thy head and look!" That land is yours. The Savior sold all that he had and purchased it for you. That city, with its pearly gates, was built that you might share its joys and walk its golden streets. That tree, with its life-giving fruit, was planted for you—for you the crystal river flows so cool and clear. Forget thy sorrows and rejoice. You are able to possess the goodly land. Only endure a little longer. "He that endureth to the end the same shall be saved." The Lord hath spoken it. In his name press on, and may I meet you there.

BEAUTIFUL RIVER.

In the earth made new in glory shall shine
A garden fair, in that lovely clime,
Where the rich effusions of glory shall glow,
And a beautiful river of water flow.

CHORUS.—We shall never cease, no, never,
To drink of that beautiful river;
'T is the water of life, oh, the water of life,
We shall drink and live forever.

On the glory-lit banks of that crystal stream
Sweet flowers shall bloom mid the evergreen,
And the fragrant perfume shall gladden and cheer
The hearts of the company gathered there.

O, I want to go to that sinless shore,
And lave in that stream forevermore;
And eat of the tree of life forever,
That grows on the banks of the beautiful river.

'Mid the rapturous joy and chorus of praise,
'Mid the ever blooming paradise,
The ransomed with Jesus remain forever,
And shout on the banks of the beautiful river.

Attica, Wis. GEO. THOMSON.

RUNNING TO AND FRO.

"But thou, O Daniel, shut up the words, and seal the book, even to the time of the end; many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased."

The word translated, run to and fro, is metaphorically used to denote investigation, close, diligent, accurate observation—just as the eyes of the Lord are said to run to and fro. The reference is not to missionary exertions in particular, but to the study of the Scriptures, especially the sealed book of prophecy."—Duffield on Prophecies, p. 373.

Dr. Clarke's note reads as follows: "Many shall run to and fro. Many shall endeavor to search out the sense; and knowledge shall be increased by these means. This seems to be the meaning of this verse, though another has been put upon it, viz., 'Many shall run to and fro, preaching the gospel of Christ, and therefore religious knowledge and true wisdom shall be increased.' This is true in itself; but it is not the meaning of the prophet's words."

The most eminent modern Hebrew scholars all agree with Clarke in giving this sense. Scott's opinion seems to coincide with Clarke's though he gives both meanings in his notes; but manifestly gives the preference to the one which expresses the idea of searching out the meaning of the prophecy.

Matthew Henry comments freely on the passage, and among other things says: "They shall read it over and over, shall meditate upon it; they shall discourse of it, talk it over, sift out the meaning of it, and thus knowledge shall be increased."

The French translation, published by the American Bible Society, renders the passage following "the time of the end," thus: "When many shall run all over it, (or through it) and to them knowledge shall be increased."

The old English Bible, printed by Barker in 1580, has this marginal note: "Many shall run to and fro to search the knowledge of these mysteries."

Dr. Gill says: "Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased; that is, toward the end of the time appointed, many shall be stirred up to inquire into these things delivered in this book, and will spare no pains or cost to get a knowledge of them; will read and study the Scriptures, and meditate on them; compare one passage with another, spiritual things with spiritual, in order to obtain the mind of Christ: will carefully peruse the writings of such who have lived before them, who have attempted any thing of this kind; and will go far and near to converse with persons that have any understanding of such things; and by such means, with the blessing of God upon them, the knowledge of this book of prophecy will be increased, and things will appear plainer and clearer, the nearer the accomplishment of them is; and especially when prophecy and facts can be compared; and not only this kind of knowledge, but knowledge of all spiritual things, of all evangelical truths, and doctrines, will be abundantly enlarged at this time."—Ex.

DARK OMENS.

The following startling announcements are from an article taken from the Cleveland (O.) Daily Leader, Jan. 11th, 1868, sent us by M. Batchelder:

The following article is inserted at the request of a valued Episcopalian correspondent:

Some of our readers will remember that a few months since we published an address to the English Church Union, by Dr. Pusey, entitled "A Plan of the Campaign." The end aimed at was alluded to as a stupendous one, but was explained no further than "to destroy the Goliah of Protestantism." Then he proceeded to unfold a plan of operations, as far as he deemed it judicious to declare it. Of this part of the plan we do not propose now to treat, but to give our views of what this stupendous object is, and how its achievement is to be attempted.

The object, as we believe, is to re-establish one United Papal Church over the whole world, and extinguish Protestantism by the force of steel. We need not say that we believe the Jesuits at Rome are the prime movers in this gigantic scheme.

We purpose now to state some of the facts which lead us to conclude that such a conflict is approaching. In our recent parochial relations, it often came out in the heat of passion between individuals, that there is a wide spread feeling among the Romanists of the lower class even, that a day of vengeance is coming upon Protestants. We were told on good authority that last spring a high dignitary said, "a great religious war is coming in this country, and only those in the Romish Church would be safe." This we believe to be a general feeling among Romanists, that Protestants must yet succumb to them, even in this country.

We think also, we state what there is no need of proving, when we say that Protestants generally believe and feel that Romanism is putting forth its mightiest efforts to gain the mastery of this whole country; and if they can succeed, will exterminate political and religious liberty.

Take a brief view of past efforts. It is easy to see how their ends would have been promoted by the success of the late rebellion. To overcome a part of the country at a time, would have been vastly easier, than the whole at once. Accordingly at the very commencement of the rebellion, the Papal government hastened to acknowledge the independence of the Confederate States. We confess with pride that many American Catholics were patriots, and stood up nobly for their country. But as a mass their sympathies were against us. Let one fact stand as a representative. Abraham Lincoln, our noble, and much loved President, was assassinated. By whom? By Roman Catholics. Not a person was concerned in it who was not a Romanist. One of his murderers escaped the retribution of military rule. Where did he go? To a Romish Priest in Canada, who secreted him three months. Where then? To a Romish Priest in Liverpool. Where then? To a Romish Priest in Dublin. Where then? To Rome, where he was concealed among the Pope's guards. He has been apprehended and brought back for trial. On the Jury were four Romanists, and four of the Jurors were for acquittal. Romanism, therefore, must take the responsibility for the murder of the late President. This shows the attitude of the Romish Church throughout the world, towards the free Protestant government of the United States.

Now the war of the rebellion is over. It is not probable that another political war will ever recur in this country. But all cause of strife is not ended yet. Political parties will remain, and Romanists will sell their votes to the party that will bid highest for them. There is probably no power now that will prevent one of the political parties in this country from joining in, and doing the bidding of the Romish Church. Is it not so? And when their great world-wide war with Protestantism occurs, will such not render aid to those who have voted them into power?

From another source also they have some reason to look for additional strength. Our General Convention of 1862 set apart a season of prayer for our Government in its struggles and for the removal of the great sins that had caused the war. Happily the prayer was answered. Then at the Convention of 1865, as was very becoming, a move was made, to return thanks for the gracious answers to prayer. For two very unsatisfactory reasons, this was voted down. One reason was that it would be offensive to our Southern brethren. Another, that the church should not mingle in politics. But the inference from the one was that we loved our Southern brethren more tenderly than the government they had intended to destroy, and from the other that our fear of politics only related to one side of the question, for at that time he that was not for the government was against it. This instead of keeping us out of politics, as a church, threw us directly into sympathy with a political party, and that the very party to which the Romish Church had attached itself. This is one bond of sympathy between the Protestant Episcopal Church and Rome. Thank God the Church of Ohio, and a large minority, did their duty, and are clear in this matter.

Again, there is evidently, in various quarters, an earnest longing for what is called "the reunion of Christendom," a desire to erase the word "Protestant" from the name of our church; to call ourselves Catholic; to increase our ritual; to symbolize facts and truths; in short to become as much like the Romanists as it is possible. This will draw Rome no nearer to us, but will draw us nearer to Rome. In truth, on the part of many there is no concealment of a disposition to be reabsorbed in the Romish Church. The faint condemnation of Rome in the Pan-Anglican, looks also very much that way.

Then, too, the doctrinal teaching of many in our church tends to the same result. A prominent clergyman, on an important occasion in Wisconsin, this year, said: "We have battled twenty years for baptismal regeneration in our church, and it is now the settled doctrine of the church. We will battle twenty years more for the doctrine of the Real Presence: and believe it will become equally settled as the faith of the church." Now if it be settled in any one's mind, that Christ is present in the emblems of the Lord's Supper, and that an ordained Priest is necessary to create or secure that presence; there is nothing in transubstantiation that need keep him away from Rome. Let the doctrine of the real presence be established, and there is no impassable barrier between us and Rome. In all these ways, and many others, obvious to any one who will look abroad upon this country, or England, is Rome marshalling her forces for one gigantic struggle.

But if we look again, we find the picture not wholly dark. Forces have been marshalling in opposition to the man of sin. During the present century an extensive revival of Evangelical religion has taken place in Germany, and as was proved at the battle of Sadowa last year, Romanism has lost the ascendency in Europe, and unless she can unprotestantize England, she has lost it forever.

But most cheering preparations are being made on this side of the Atlantic to meet this struggle when it shall come. Such efforts for union and reunion have never been witnessed in any age of the world, as are now being put forth in this country. We have lately been informed of efforts to unite several branches of the Methodist Church. And in this very paper we have accounts of a convention in Philadelphia of six different denominations of Presbyterians to effect an organic union. Not only so, being in session at the same time with our Evangelical anniversaries, the most friendly courtesies were exchanged between them. The two bodies prayed for each other; they prayed, sang, repeated Scripture and the Apostles' Creed together. They could not have united more thoroughly, had they communed together at the Lord's table. We accept this as a blessed indication that when the day of battle comes, we shall fight side by side against the man of sin. The sacramental host, the Spiritual Israel of God, are evidently being marshalled for a mighty religious conflict.

If it be asked how this conflict is to be carried on, we can only point to the past by which to judge of the future. The great riots in New York City, during the rebellion, are indications as to how the Romanists will fight, when they strike for the mastery in this country.

For the World's Crisis.

THE APOCALOUPSIS.

The command was, "Write the things which thou hast seen, the things which are, and the things which shall be hereafter." This embraces the present, past, and future. The past and present comprehend those things which Paul, in 2 Cor. 4: 18, said were temporary; and those which "shall be hereafter" constitute the eternal. Heb. 12: 27, 28; 2 Pet. 3: 13, 14. The Apocaloupsis of Jesus Christ is that event referred to by the apostle Peter in 1 epistle 1: 13, and unquestionably stands connected with those events relating to his second personal coming, in which he comes to them that love his appearing, and that look for him, unto salvation, when he shall be for salvation to the ends of the earth; but it also includes the first coming, as constituting a part and parcel of the one grand scheme of human redemption, as a whole; at which advent the object was to offer himself a sacrifice for sin once for all (time); but that sacrificial offering was only the "beginning," i. e., of salvation; and so John and Paul are constantly referring to it as such, constituting the things of the past (1 John 1: 1-5; 1 Pet. 1: 10-18, and 2 Pet. 1: 16-19), which, by the positive command of Christ's angel to John at Patmos, are put in direct connection with the present and glorious future things.

In obedience to the mandate, the letters are first written to the seven churches, beginning with the Ephesian state of the church, in the times of the apostles; for proof of which see Rev. 2: 2; and passing from thence on, down through all the several times and conditions of the church, to Christ's second personal coming, as seen in the letter addressed to Laodicea (Rev. 3: 20, 21), in which he reaches to or arrives at the throne.

Second in order is given that post resurrection scene, subsequent to his coming after his coronation, after taking his seat upon his own throne (Matt. 25: 31; Rev. 3: 21), the throne of his glory,—that throne of David which the Lord God sware to give unto him. (Luke 1: 32; Acts 2: 11; 2 Sam. 7: 12, 16; Ps. 89: 34 to 37; Matt. 19: 28; Amos 9: 11; Acts 15: 16) at the beginning of his reign, when his saints shall in the resurrected state reign with him on the earth. Isa. 32: 1. Ps. 45: 16; Luke 20: 36; Heb. 2: 10-13; Jno. 11: 25; Isa. 24: 23; Jer. 23: 5, 6; Ezek, 21: 25-27; Dan. 7: 27; Zech. 14: 9; Luke 22: 28-30; Jno. 18: 37; 1 Cor. 15: 25; 1 Tim. 6: 13-15; 2 Tim. 2: 11-12; Rev. 4: 9, 10; 11: 15-18; and 20: 4-6; with the Ps. 72, 97, 98, 99, 148, 149, and 150.

There, that is a good long list of proof, and allow me to ask you, reader, to take your Bible and turn to all those texts, and read them in the same order in which they are given. Please do, and if you cannot do it now, then cut them out, carry them with you, and read them as you have opportunit[illegible] ginning with Matt. 25: 31. [illegible] sors now; cut out the refere[illegible] paste them in your Bible, [illegible]

Like the letters, therefore, John begins with the things of which the true apostles were true witnesses (and not liars, like the false apostles, 2: 2); but as the things of and to which they testified had a beginning earlier and prior to the setting the churches in order, so John in this scene is carried farther back than in the letter to the church at Ephesus, even to the crucifixion of Christ, and present as a prelude, as it had been, "the Lamb slain" (5: 6), who takes "the book," that one called by Malachi (3: 16) the "book of remembrance," by Paul (Phil. 4: 3) book of enrollment (see Clarke in loc.); by John (Rev. 20: 12, 15, and 17: 8) the "book of life"; by Daniel (7: 10) "the books"; and opens the seals thereof.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, March 18, 1868.

☞ Take Notice!

All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

☞ Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank-checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ MONEY ORDERS.

Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given.

Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too.

Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us YOUR NAME AND POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

☞ ATTENTION! ATTENTION!!

Our subscribers in Massachusetts, Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Ohio, will find their credit of money received for the Crisis on the strip pasted on their paper, which shows the date to which their subscription pays, instead of the No., as formerly acknowledged. Others will be sent likewise as fast as we get each State so arranged. So you can look at the date on your paper, and see if it is changed after sending us money.

NEW VOLUME.

This number begins a new volume. Before its close we may expect to have startling events to announce. We are anxiously waiting for spring to open, when the time may come for the kings of the earth to commence their summer work. The prospect is now that they may have occasion to do some bloody business during the coming season. To our readers we would say, let us do all in our power to scatter the light on the great truth of the Lord's speedy coming. Will not each subscriber try to obtain at least one new subscriber? So many have been led to rejoice in the blessed hope in consequence of reading "our paper," that we think every one should be encouraged to make greater efforts to take it. Will not our preaching brethren now make a new effort to increase the circulation of the Crisis?

BOSTON CONFERENCE.

We are expecting a glorious time at the conference to be held in Boston, commencing Tuesday evening, March 31st, to hold over the following Sabbath. Those who come may expect to find warm hearts and open doors for their comfort. It is a great privilege to meet so many of the warm friends of Jesus, and hear them sing, pray and exhort. We trust the coming conference will be the best that has ever been held. Let all interested pray much that it may be like the feast of Pentecost to the disciples.

A FAST.

We would propose to those who are interested in our coming conference at Boston, that Friday, March 27th, be observed as a day of fasting and prayer for the special blessing of the Lord upon that important gathering. It will be remembered by those present last year that it was the best conference we have ever had. Let us ask the Lord to make the one this year still better. We shall expect a large gathering of the saints, and a great blessing from our Redeemer. Come and help praise him.

THE SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

"The signs of the times" so clearly indicate that we are near the close of the present dispensation, that we do not see how any observing person, who has carefully studied the prophecies relating to "the last days," can doubt that in a short time from the [illegible] the Lord of glory will come to set up [illegible] kingdom. Morally, socially, [illegible] ecclesiastically, the world pre[illegible] [illegible]me appearance as the prophets [illegible]ld transpire in "the last days." [illegible] for every one, who expects to [illegible] the day of the Lord, to be on [illegible]ers, looking out for the Com[illegible] [illegible] Christs and false prophets [illegible]us parts of the world. [illegible] living over two hun[illegible] [illegible] Christs; others claim [illegible]et. Infidelity and athe[illegible] [illegible] rapidly, as the result of [illegible], and all the powers of darkness [illegible]bined against the church of the Lord. [illegible] Christian needs on the whole armor, in [illegible] to stand against the wiles of the devil.

WESTERLY

Our meetings in Westerly continued to increase in interest till their close. Some requested prayers, were converted, and many became deeply interested in the truth of the Bible. We shall expect to hear glad tidings from there soon. Strong efforts were made to keep the people away from the meetings, but they leaped all barriers and came to listen attentively. After hearing they were astonished at the simplicity of the truth; and, as is done in many places, expressed their surprise that they had been so long kept in ignorance, when the word of the Lord was so plain. Many made great efforts to be present. In all places where we have been lately, there is a goodly number who are tired of the fashionable preaching, and are sighing for the simplicity contained in the gospel of Christ. They have listened to fables till they are tired of them, and are starving for the pure word of the Lord. One venerable christian pilgrim, who had been following the Lord for about a century, whom every one who knew him admitted to be a christian, asked the privilege of making a statement to the audience, which he did before a full house. He said he had become satisfied that the Bible did not teach the doctrine of eternal torment, and he wished to have all know that he had decided to throw his influence with those who preached that "the wages of sin is death." He informed us that his brethren in the church would not allow him to speak on the subject, and he must go where he could be free in Christ. His cup was full of blessings. It appears more and more apparent that the humble saints will be obliged to leave the popular ecclesiastical bodies of these last days, if they would enjoy christian freedom, and be ready to meet the coming of the Son of man. There are many honest, sincere souls, who are kept bound by creeds and clerical bonds, never imposed by Jesus. We believe such will find their way out of their prisons, and yet stand free in the Lord, waiting for his coming.

Some severe reproaches were heaped upon us by those high in authority in the church, but their bitter words made no effect upon our mind, only to confirm us in our "lively hope." We felt pity for them, because they knew not what they were doing. May the Lord open their eyes to see the bright light now shining, and cause them to rejoice with us. It is truly astonishing to see the great darkness that fills the minds of those who are professedly watchmen upon the walls of Zion.

We had meetings three times a day, and received rich blessings from the Lord, causing us to rejoice and sing his praises. Sr. Crumb was with us. Her faithful labors in the ministry have been attended with happy success. Her presence and aid added much to the interest of our meetings. Bro. Clark of Clark's Mills, and Bro. Peckham, are earnest and self-sacrificing to help spread the light on the truth of the Bible.

The last day, March 8th, was one of special interest to the friends of Jesus. We had a good love-feast at 9.30, when many stood up for Jesus. In the evening, we had an interesting communion season, when some seventy or eighty gathered around the table of the Lord. All seemed to feel it was good to be there. Great interest has been awakened, and the people are anxious to hear more. It is a new field, and we trust some of the seed sown will spring up and bear good fruit. Bro. J. T. Dixon remained with us till the close of the meeting, and was ready to do all in his power to help on the work. He is an ardent lover of the way of life, and an earnest laborer in the vineyard of the Lord. We found a good home with Capt. J. S. Crandall and family, whose kind hearts cheerfully administered to our comfort, though they made no profession of religion. We trust they will yet become the followers of our blessed Master, and meet us at the marriage supper of the Lamb.

TENT MEETINGS.

It is time to lay plans for our tent meetings. Our big tent is now stored at Rochester. Where shall it be pitched first, and where afterwards? Let those who would like the tent in their neighborhood drop us a line, expressing their wishes. A grand effort should be made this year to arouse the inhabitants of the earth to prepare for the coming of Christ and the setting up of his kingdom.

IMPORTANT INQUIRIES.

ELD. GRANT:—I wish to ask a few questions relative to what is to be regarded by us as a people, as essential requisites for church admission to membership; and these questions I would like to have discussed, or our several Advent papers give us their views thereupon. I see that you are prepared, in a measure, to consider these questions, since you have been in our northern regions, where it is impossible for us to baptize persons during a certain season of the year.

1. Are not repentance and faith the only absolute requirements from a candidate for church membership?

2. Will not "repentance toward God," and "faith in our Lord Jesus Christ," as revealed in Romans tenth chapter, admit one into the church triumphant at the appearing of our Lord, even though they have not had the privilege, or opportunity, of attending to the ordinances instituted by our Lord in his church, namely, baptism and the Lord's supper? If not, did you not do an incalculable wrong in not administering baptism to those candidates in Quebec who stood ready to obey the Lord in that ordinance? And if repentance and faith be the only absolute essential prerequisites to admission to the church triumphant, is not a young convert worthy of admission into the church militant without baptism? And may not the ordinances be administered as well after as before admission into the church, if circumstances "forbid water" before?

3. Will there not be, most undoubtedly, thousands in the kingdom of God who have never either been baptized or partaken of the Lord's supper, and thus constitute the church triumphant, without ever having attended to these important ordinances? If so, why should we make as absolutely essential, the prerequisite and door into the church (as do the Calvinist Baptist denomination) baptism?

4. Obedience to the ordinances Christ has instituted in his church, I regard most essential and all important. God forbid that I should lessen their value or claims upon every believer; but would we not by excluding from the church unbaptized persons, or by keeping young converts (whom it is impossible to baptize in certain regions of our globe for a period of from three to six months) out of the church, virtually make baptism, instead of faith in the Lord Jesus, the door into the church militant, and an absolute prerequisite to communion at the Lord's table, as do our Baptist brethren, and thus shut the door against those whom the Great Head himself will admit to the marriage supper of the Lamb? And must we therefore, during from three to six or nine months in the year, in the more northern parts of the temperate, and in the frigid zones, organize no churches, nor receive into church communion, or allow at the table of the Lord those worthy, yet whom it is almost impossible to baptize, without extraordinary and hazardous measures? What shall we do in such cases? Shall we not do as the Great Head will do at the last day—admit the believer?

5. Did not St. Paul "plant" the church at Corinth (1 Cor. 3: 6), and preach to them the gospel which they "believed," etc. (1 Cor. 15 ch.)? And did he not deliver the ordinances to them, 1 Cor. 11: 2? But did he not say, "Christ sent me not to baptize," etc.? "I thank God," said he, that I baptized none of you, but Crispus and Gaius"; and assigns as a reason: "Lest any should say that I had baptized in mine own name"; and adds, "I baptized also the household of Stephanas; besides, I know not whether I baptized any other. For Christ sent me not to baptize, but to preach the gospel," etc. 1 Cor. 1: 14-17. Yet while he baptized so few in that church, did he not administer the ordinance of the Lord's supper to the whole church, made up of many unworthy members? 1 Cor. 11: 23-30.

Now what are we to learn from this, if not that St. Paul regarded that circumstances might justify the non-administration of the ordinance of baptism, and that all professed believers constituted the church at Corinth, who were especially required to observe the ordinance of the Lord's supper in a becoming manner, and in faith?

6. Are not these ordinances of baptism and communion for the observance of repentant believers? and do not these constitute Christ's church virtually? May not, then, a believer be formally received into the visible body of Christ before attending to these ordinances, and churches be formed of believers before their administration, providing there be insurmountable difficulties in the way of their observance?

7. Shall unbaptized persons be allowed to become members of our churches, or be admitted to the communion of the Lord's Supper?

I hope you will deem these questions of so much vital importance as to give your answers to them agreeably to your understanding of the teaching of the Scriptures; and call the attention of our churches, ministering brethren, and publications to them, that we may have some uniform faith and action in our new body until the Lord come. Yours truly,

O. R. FASSETT.

In answering the foregoing we would say that Bro. Fassett has expressed our own views of the subject, hence we need say but little.

At the time we organized the church in Montreal, we tried to find a place for baptism, but could not. The ice on the banks of the St. Lawrence was piled up ten or twelve feet high, and if we had attempted to cut a road through it, it would be very uncertain whether the place would be suitable for baptism. Those who had baptistries refused us the use of them. Under these circumstances, we did not hesitate to go forward and organize the church, and invite them to the communion. We reasoned as follows: The Lord never requires impossibilities, nor condemns people for not doing what they have no power to accomplish. We had good evidence to believe he had pardoned their sins, in consequence of their faith and repentance. If he had forgiven them, of course they would be saved if taken away before they could have an opportunity to be baptized; and if saved, they would be at "the marriage supper of the Lamb," with all the rest of the church of Christ. Then it would follow that they have a right to the sacrament of the Lord's Supper in this world; for the type is not greater than the antitype. As the Lord will admit to his fold all who truly love him, and among these are numbers who have had no opportunity to be baptized, it follows that they have a right to show forth their faith in his death and sufferings, at the communion table, and that no man has a right to object. The Savior has no where taught us that one should not go to the communion till after they are baptized.

If one sees the duty and will not obey the command to be baptized, when there is an opportunity, then, of course, such an one would fall into condemnation. So, when he knows that the Bible forbids evil-speaking, backbiting, jesting, covetousness, evil imaginations, etc., and indulges in these crimes, he must be condemned; while the one who wished to be baptized, and could not have the privilege, may be enjoying the constant smiles of his heavenly Father, be a welcome partaker at the table of the Lord, and a true member of the church of Christ.

THE LAW OF MARRIAGE.

When Paul was moved by the Spirit of God to write concerning the "seducing spirits" of demons, who would cause some to "depart from the faith" in "the latter times;" he says they will be noted for "speaking lies in hypocrisy," and "forbidding to marry." Thus we learn they will be opposed to the marriage laws. We have lived to see the day when this Scripture is about to be fulfilled. It is a well-known fact, that already many of the leading Spiritualists are talking very boldly against the marriage laws, and are urging measures to bring about their repeal. The spirits are very decided in their opposition to the law of marriage.

In a late work, by Dr. A. B. Child, a noted Spiritualist, when speaking of the changes which are taking place in the public mind, he says:—

"All these changes, and many more, are ominous of a revolution, the coming of which, is now felt in the hearts of thousands. And the death of human law, it may be, aye, it will be, the last, significant change of this vast turning over of a new leaf in human affairs. What is felt in the heart will be wrought out in actions. . . .

However much good may have been claimed for, and experienced by, the old institution of marriage, by law, in the past, it is apparent to clear sight, that for the present development of the races, it is an institution of woe.

The rite of marriage is, already, inwardly virtually abolished by multitudes, and ere long its abolition will be outwardly proclaimed by the whole people."

He then goes on to say, "The people need practical christianity now." He says they are "not dreaming that law is the cause of all the woe they lament and endure." . . . Why may there not be a revolution in the marriage relations? There may be, because the people are ready for it."

He then proceeds to show what he thinks would be the results if the marriage law was destroyed. As Satan's plans are all opposed to Christ, we think what the Dr. has proposed in the following would be very pleasing to the great Deceiver. He says:—

"To banish prostitution from cities and towns, take the men who support and continue it, called virtuous and law abiding, from the bondage of the marriage law. To prevent adultery, take law away from marriage relations. To prevent promiscuous debauch and wild indiscretion, take from sexual desires all the restraints of human law. To prevent uncounted wars, and declare peace between husbands and wives, remove from their necks the yoke of legal marriage. To prevent the causes of divorce, make no state legislation on marriage. To make the tide of sexual love run pure, holy, undefiled, let nature's laws and nature's wisdom rule it—so let human souls go on in nature's courses, in nature's pathways of progression."

FREEZING THE BRAIN.

A remarkable experiment has been made upon the brain of an animal. It consisted in freezing the brain by a freezing mixture, when all sensation was paralyzed; and, of course, all thought suspended. Afterwards the brain was thawed out, and its functions were unimpaired. The following report of the remarkable experiment is given by Dr. Richardson, F. R. S.:

The great discovery that the brain of a living animal could be frozen, and afterwards could recover, was made by Dr. James Arnott, who solidified the brain of a pigeon by exposing it to a freezing mixture. Here research stopped, because with an ordinary freezing mixture it was not possible to act on individual parts of the organ; but the importance of the discovery is not the less on that account. It was a marvelous revealing. Think what it was. Here was a living organ of mind, a centre of power, of all guiding power, of all volition. It took in every motion of the universe to which it was exposed. It took in light and form and color by the eye; it took in sound by the ear; sensation and substance by the touch; odor by the nostril; and taste by the mouth; it gave out, in return or response, animal motion, expression—all else that demonstrates a living animal, without it the animal was turned into a mere vegetable. And this organ, the very centre and soul of the organism, was, by mere physical experiment, for a time made dead—all its powers ice-bound. And this organ, again set free, received its functions back again, and as we know now by further observation, its functions unimpaired. Surely, this was the discovery of a new world.

A REVIEW OF FREE MASONRY.

We have received a pamphlet of forty-eight pages, entitled "A Review of Free Masonry and Christianity," "by a Christian." He endeavors to show that the system of Free Masonry is of Pagan origin. The author says: "The fact is indisputable that it is of Pagan origin, having Pagan rites and ceremonies; such rites and ceremonies as characterized the worship of Ceres, Minerva, Bacchus, Isis and Osiris."

The author goes on to say, Free Masonry of this age is a system of deism. . . . There is no Christ in the institution;" and then quotes Masonic evidence to sustain the foregoing statement. He says, "All the prayers are offered directly to God, and not in the name of Jesus Christ at all." "Jews as well as Gentiles, who regard our Lord as as imposter, are freely admitted to the Lodge, and become members of this 'ancient and honorable Fraternity.'" "No one is required to believe in Jesus Christ in order to become a Mason." "The system has all the elements necessary to constitute it A RELIGION, but not the religion of our Lord Jesus Christ. It is a compound of Paganism, Judaism, and what is called 'Natural Religion.'"

After making these points, the author proceeds to give good reasons why no christian should be connected with Free Masonry.

The work may be obtained by addressing Dr. John T. Walsh, New Berne, N. C. Price 50 cts., post paid.

"HERALD OF THE MORNING."

The above heading is the title of a new monthly, published by W. Kellaway, at 26 Thomas Street, Weymouth, Eng. We have received the first two numbers, and are much pleased with the character of the paper. It is outspoken in favor of the speedy coming of the Lord. If any would like to take it, we will act as agent, and furnish them at 60 cents a year. The following is the editorial salutatory in the first number:—

"CHRIST FIRST, CHRIST LAST, CHRIST ALL!"

We have in view in this paper, not the principles and dogmas that constitute any particular sect or party; but are led into this enterprise by purely unselfish and disinterested motives, with a desire to promote the moral and spiritual welfare of our fellow creatures. It is our heart's desire and prayer to God that souls may be saved; and we trust The Herald of the Morning may be the means, in God's hand, of promoting that end. This is the great wish of our hearts toward all its readers. We are willing to lose sight of all earthly gain; give of our substance, endure toil, and make sacrifices for your sakes, in love to your souls. Your salvation brings no earthly gain to us—your salvation by God, in Jesus, will bring great and eternal gain to yourselves.

The guilt and stain of sin are upon you; and no human power can purge you of that stain or free you from guilt. It is not of yourselves, nor of any other creature, to save you from sin and death.

And oh! how dreadful is "the wrath to come!" How fearful it will be to be a lost soul! What will all the world profit you if at the last you be lost? We come to you then in truth and love, to set before you, from the free word of God, the way of pardon, peace, and salvation; and that way we fearlessly tell you is Christ. This—a full Christ, and your eternal interests,—will be, God helping us, our aim. We shall proclaim Christ to you,—Christ only—Christ entirely, as the way of reconciliation, and Christ as our all in all. This we trust to do, "not in the wisdom of words; but in demonstration of the Spirit, and of power."

We know there are none, who may take up this paper, who can say, "I have no need of Christ." There are none—"no, not one,"—who are not guilty before God: and we believe there are none, who feel the guilt and burden of sin, beyond the reach of God's infinite mercy, in Jesus. In pleading with you,—and in pleading for you,—and in pleading the atonement as the foundation of the sinner's acceptance,—we shall not mistrust its efficacy even for "the chief of sinners." We shall, therefore, write of Christ crucified, who offered Himself once for all to take away sin; and who is now "exalted to give repentance and remission of sins" (Acts 5: 31.) through faith in his name. And what do we now say to you? We say with Peter, "There is salvation in no other." (Acts 4: 12.) We say with Paul, "in Christ all fulness dwells:" Col: 19, and that the love of Christ "passeth knowledge." (Eph. 3: 19.) We say on the authority of Christ himself, no one who comes to him for salvation shall on any account be "cast out:" (John 6: 37.) and that "whosoever believeth [or trusteth] in him shall not perish; but have everlasting life." (John 3: 14-16v.)

It is our desire that Christ bring you into a saving connection with himself. We know him to be "The Life;" and are persuaded of this one thing, that "when he who is our life doth appear, then, shall we also appear with him in glory." We are assured, I say, that "by grace, through faith," we are in him," who is "The Life Eternal;" and consequent upon this we have life; for "he that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life." (I John 5: 12.) We pray you then, beloved readers, to mark our motto: "Christ First—Christ Last—CHRIST ALL!" We have no wish to be occupied with anything but him, and the things that belong to him. We shall proclaim "Christ Jesus our Lord; and ourselves your servants, through him."

RATHER SPICY.

We give the following to our readers as we received it. It is the most spicy letter we have ever had in relation to "our paper." May the Lord bless the writer, and help him to be ready for the coming of Jesus. Brethren, pray for him.

"Mr. Grant

Sir I have notifyed you to stop that paper of yourn that you ar sending to my Mothers adress and now I say for the last time to stop it for it is not fit to read for it is all braging about some great thing that the advents have done and it is all a lie now as as you ar so very hungry to argue the point conserning the soul of the siner just come out hear and any school boy can make short worke with you on that point you ar like the Pharisees making a great blow about your piety and there aint religion enough in all the advents in the world to save one sole from Death but on the other hand it is real infadelity in its teachings and sso you can Just stop it for I shant Pay for it for it aint fit to cary to the P r i v y for it is Polusion in its very touch so Stop that Paper"

MEEKNESS.—We commend to our readers the article on meekness, found in another column. It is worthy of a careful examination.

The Young Pilgrim for March 1st.

The Pilgrim for March 1st is out, with the following attractive and profitable reading:—

Conclusion of the interesting story of Paul and Ruth, the two pilgrims who enlisted in "The King's Army"; "Is your Father a Hypocrite?" a dialogue between two boys about Theatre-going; The Dying Confession of a Murderer, showing that "Strong Drink and Bad Company" were the cause of his ruin; "Lanterns," or how Children may give Light; "Too Busy to Freeze," showing that if we would be living christians, we must keep busy in the Lord's work; "Guard against Sin"; "Blue Sky Inside"; "God's Child." "The Young Pilgrims' Love-Feast," with ten little testimonies for Jesus. "The Wee Ones' Column,"—the little girl who was "so happy" in Jesus;—"The Little Boy's Faith;"—The Kind Little Girl;—the two cousins who "Tried to do their best;"—the little girl that the angel spoke to, etc., etc.

OVER 840 NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

Over 840 new subscribers to The Young Pilgrim have been received since the 1st of January, and many encouraging letters of approval. This more than makes good the loss from stoppages, and gives us a fair start for 1868.

And now, as the warm season approaches, when many new Sunday Schools will be started, and many old ones, which have been frozen up during the winter, will get thawed out, and wake up from their long winter nap, shall we not look for a still larger increase, in addition to those already received?

Have you subscribed for your children, or your young friends? Have you raised a club in your Sunday School? If you have not yet, will you? For terms, see last page. Specimen copies sent to any address, without charge.

For the World's Crisis.

A VALUABLE BOOK.

"THE FIRST DAY SABBATH," by T. M. Preble. I have carefully examined the above work, and can pronounce it the best of anything I ever read upon the subject. Although compelled to dissent from some positions taken by the author, yet, upon the whole, I consider it a very valuable book.

Let none who are interested in the subject fail to procure a copy. Brethren, none of your libraries will be complete without it.

STAR OF HOPE MISSION.

BRO. GRANT:—I would like to say a word through the Crisis for the encouragement of those who are trusting in God and leaning on his precious promises for support. I want to encourage some doubting heart by relating one or two cases, out of hundreds, of the great goodness of God toward us.

When we took this house, we had but little to put in it; and as far as the comforts of life were concerned, we had none. We came here to labor for the poor; no other thought entered our minds. All with one accord agreed to work for God. All we received was given to the poor. We worked hard all day, and when night came we lay down to rest the best we could, without complaining. But the Lord was watching us, and with all our trials we loved the work. Sister Boide has said many times,

"I do not want to get sick, and die here. I do not wish to be buried out of this house, nor out of this street. Now, sister, will you promise to take me to some respectable place to have my funeral?"

I told her yes, and that was settled. I was taken sick, and very sick, so that all in the house were much worried about me, for my comfort. But we had no room fit for the doctor to come and see me, so we did not send for any. But the Lord knew our needs. The weather was very cold, and no carpet on any of our floors. We would almost perish while dressing, and then go down and make a fire; do all our own work, cooking, washing, ironing, house cleaning, etc.; then visit, and labor in meetings.

But the good Lord saw we were working and had no comforts, and he began to move on the hearts of his people hundreds of miles away. Some sent food, some preserves, jellies, cakes, apples, nuts, berries, with little notions for the sick, with the request in almost every letter, Take all you need of them for yourself and your co-laborers. Praise the Lord! He knew also that we needed something beside food, and I understand that one day, as our dear Sister Holden of Worcester, Mass., was sitting at her sewing, she felt that she wanted to do something more for the Lord, and she said,

"What wilt Thou have me to do, to honor and glorify Thee?"

The answer was, Go to New York and see Sr. Anna, and see how things are there. See if she needs anything.

She was obedient to the voice of God. She came to see us. The Lord blessed her. The first night she found what the Lord would have her do, and set herself about it, and in every step she took was blessed. She had our best bed-room painted, bought a carpet, made and put it down with her own hands; next went out and bought furniture, and furnished the room complete. So we now have a room, and if we are taken sick can see the doctor, or friends. When that was done, she furnished another small room adjoining it, for the prophets, as they pass through and wish to tarry for the night. Thus the Lord can do all, without my telling the people what we need the most.

Our revival has broken out again. We have meetings every night; from four to eight come forward at every meeting, and we are having blessed times. Sinners are coming to Christ.

For the World's Crisis.

TO THE REV. APOLLOS HALE.

SIR,—On reaching home this evening, your "Review" was placed in my hands, in which you claim to have proved the "Sealed Book of Daniel Opened" to be "unreliable." But finding that it does not give satisfaction to those who are more anxious to know the truth, than to hear what may be said about Thurman; I propose, for the benefit of all real lovers of truth, to give you a little opportunity to give us the light, by meeting me in a public discussion of the subject.

The place, time, and rules of the discussion, I leave open for you to arrange. And since truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, is the object to be gained, I would request that a committee of not less than seven of the most learned and prudent men that can be found in Massachusetts, be chosen to decide in relation to this solemn and important subject. Respectfully yours,

WILLIAM C. THURMAN.

For the World's Crisis.

"FACTS, DUTIES, AND REWARDS."

Under these words in Crisis of Feb. 5th, we read—"Doubtless many of our brethren and sisters, and families of the household of faith (if facts were made known) would be found in circumstances of trial, suffering, and want, who are too reserved, or timid, or retiring, to let their wants be known," etc.

These are facts assuredly, and the resulting duties are equally certain, while the rewards are close at hand. In the primitive churches these duties were regularly attended to. 1 Cor. 16,—"Now concerning the collection for the saints, . . . upon the first day of the week, let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him," etc.

The above stated subject is strictly in point, truly belonging and appealing to us. "Scattered abroad," we can meet in the Crisis, and freely make known our wants to our spiritual kindred, and does not this stand as duties? We speak for others, why not for ourselves? we are to love others as ourselves. In 2 Cor. 8, we read of "the ministering to the saints," "that now at this time your abundance may be a supply for their want." Indeed, most of the 8th and 9th chapters are taken up with the "contribution for the saints." Rom. 15: 26. In James 2: 15, 16, the matter is presented peculiarly and forcibly. "If a brother or sister," etc.

But this attention to each other's needs was spontaneous with early believers, as recorded in Acts 2: 44, 45. That this ministration is a prominence of that love which is the fulfilling of the law, needs not argument or scripture, and is to be found among such as "come behind in no gift, waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ."—1 Cor. 1: 7. Such are among our people; and if our brethren and sisters who are in want would make known their cases (as in some instances has been done) there would be suitable responses. There are many precious ones among the "poor in this world, rich in faith," and "they are worthy." Yes, there are such among us—

"little and unknown, Loved and prized by God alone."

Yet if these loving ones we knew, we should love and prize them too; and we've many a heart to give and bless, as means allow, with cheerfulness.

FEAR AND PERPLEXITY.

BRO. GRANT:—As you often publish what sharp-sighted politicians say upon this subject, I would present the following from the Boston Traveller, Feb. 12th, 1868, as an item of interest to many.

HIRAM MUNGER.

Meanwhile, the alarm felt by all classes in France concerning what is called in philosophy the immediate future, is at its highest. Strange rumors are afloat concerning the sudden and unaccountable spasms of terror with which the Emperor has been seized of late. An officer of his Majesty's stables has circulated the report that ever since the Emperor's return from St. Cloud a carriage with four horses, all ready to start at a moment's notice, is always kept night and day standing in the coach-yard of the palace. So urgent are the Emperor's commands on this point that the coachman is always seated on the box, and the postilion standing in readiness while two lacqueys on duty are stationed behind the vehicle ready to jump into the rumble as soon as the signal should be given. Perhaps the story is exaggerated that the pockets of the carriage contained four revolvers, always kept loaded, and that the Emperor is wont to visit the coach-yard at the most unseemly hours, and to scare by his unexpected presence the servants on their irksome duty, sometimes even during the small hours of the night. No service is so much dreaded as this cornee d' ecurie, as it is denominated in the porter's lodge at the Tuileries, and the poor harassed grooms and lacqueys are literally worn out with the anxiety more than from the fatigue of the position. The Empress, whose duty it has come to soothe the irritation of nerves of which this over anxiety is but a symptom, is greatly pitied amongst the household.

The origin of this singular mania of the ready harnessed horses, is attributed to a trifling circumstance; but philosophy and physiology are at work; and although credulous as the weakest are in the belief of the facts, they know well enough that the troubled, anxious mind is caused by the calculation of the increasing minority in the chamber. Six years ago but five weak voices were raised against the measures adopted by the Government. To-day we have one in every five refusing to the Emperor the fulfilment of the dearest wish of his heart—by Bismarck [illegible] rankles [illegible] of envy may have risen to his brain—by the disappearance of a king and the birth of another Emperor in Europe, for the King of Prussia will of necessity be proclaimed Emperor at Frankfort ere long—by the dread of the revelations contained in M. de Keratry's book upon Maximilian and Mexico, [illegible] perial letters, [illegible] duped [illegible] length. Of all this, [illegible]

Correspondence.

From Bro. H. Pratt.

Bro. Grant:—I returned to this place on Saturday evening last, and met with a warm reception on the Sabbath by the church. They have had no preaching for two Sabbaths, but without any apparent diminution of numbers or interest. This has caused much wonder among the people. The clergy of the city have not been idle altogether in our absence, but have visited among the flock, and finding them well satisfied with their pasture have left them for a season. We had an interesting time yesterday. Several rose for prayers in the morning service. We had the communion in the evening, and the scene was one of deep interest and profit. Several presented themselves for baptism at the close of the service, others to join the church. This is a very fruitful vine, whose branches run over the wall, one of which has reached Warsaw, forty miles away, and a cluster like that of Eschol will soon be ready for exhibition. I shall endeavor to water it next week.

I am about making arrangements for supplying here in future, either with my own service, or by that of others, as the way may open. The Lord is raising up men from among the students here, and others, who will soon lift up their voice like a trumpet in the cause of truth. One who has cut loose from the institution said in our meeting on the Sabbath,

"I dreamed of seeing a company robed in white, waiting for Jesus. I was not among them. I wanted to join them. I was told I must get my ticket. I have made up my mind to go with you."

Four came to me Sabbath to advise with me about preaching. I tell them to go to work as they would to save men from drowning; use what tools they have; save men by exhortation, by praying, by entreating, or preaching, as the Spirit giveth utterance. Men should not always want to get into the desk to preach. "As ye go, preach": in the cars; from house to house; in the sick-room; everywhere. Get that unadulterated love of God in the heart that wants to save men; then draw your theology fresh and sparkling from God's reservoir—the Bible, and your success is certain. Study to show yourself a workman approved unto God. God will always approve our labor when it is from the heart, and give us just such places for labor as we are qualified to fill. O God, guide the youth, the middle-aged, and the old man, into that kind of labor to which thou shalt call him, and may he abide in his calling.

Rochester, March 2nd. H. Pratt.

From Bro. J. F. Catts.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—You who have the blessed privilege of meeting from week to week in the house of God, and have the gospel preached to you in all its primitive purity, and mingle your voices together in songs of praise, and bow in prayer with and for one another, and sit together around the Master's table and partake of the emblems of the body and blood of our dear Redeemer, who was dead but is alive forevermore; you are blessed with inestimable blessings, of which many of your brothers and sisters are deprived, being scattered up and down this vast wilderness of sin without a shepherd to lead them to the fountain of the water of life, to preach to them the unsearchable riches of Christ, or to break to them the bread of life, but are left to buffet the mighty waves of sin and temptation alone, and yet not alone, for, thanks be to God, he has said, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee," and does verify his promise to those who put their trust in him.

But I do so long to hear some of those soul-cheering sermons that are poured forth from the sacred desk, by those men of God who have learned to take him at his word when he says, "The soul that sinneth, it shall die"; and I thank God that he has raised up men in these last days who are not afraid to take their cross and go out as sheep among wolves, declaring the whole counsel of God. There are many out preaching a part of the gospel, but who shun to declare it all; some, because it is not popular to do so; some for one thing, and some for another; but my prayer to God is that their eyes may be opened to see the truth, and that with honest hearts they may be led to embrace it ere it be forever too late.

Dear brethren and sisters scattered abroad, whose eyes may chance to see these lines, I implore an interest in all your prayers, that your unworthy brother, who is, despite his many and sore trials, striving by the assisting grace of God to gain an entrance into the kingdom, may be found worthy at last. In the hope of the gospel, Jas. F. Catts.

Big Patch, Feb. 2nd.

From Bro. L. Boutell.

Bro. Grant:—We have good things to say of Salem. The Lord by his converting power is indeed with us. There is much interest in religion, and it is increasing. Bro. J. W. White has been here two weeks laboring very successfully with the Advent church; meetings every evening in the chapel. I think nearly twenty have been converted, and more are inquiring the way of life.

The angels have been made to rejoice over repenting sinners; and, thank God, we are rejoicing with them, and praying God for greater things. This is the way to prepare men for the speedy coming of Jesus. O that the good work might go on with increasing power! Thine in hope of glory,

March 7th, 1868. L. Boutell.

From Sr. L. B. Weaver.

Dear ones in Jesus:—God bless you all for your words of cheer to me in this hour of deep affliction. To all who have helped me in my sore and deep distress, I would say, not a day passes but what you are all remembered before God in my prayers, though feeble they may be. Be assured you have cheered this weary and ofttimes fainting heart by your letters of love, of hope, and consolation; and by your timely aid that you have rendered a poor, weary sufferer. Many, many are the tears that I shed while reading your cheering letters. May God bless you. Many are the prayers that go up for rich blessings upon all the dear ones, and especially for those who have helped us in our needy situation. When the great reckoning day comes, which is just upon us, you will have your reward; and dear Bro. and Sr. Streeter, who have so faithfully braved the storms of this life, and have practised so much self-denial in order to take care of me, a poor, homeless orphan, will have their reward.

God bless you all who have written to me; and believe me that your words of comfort are like healing balm to my weary soul. As I am not able to answer all your letters promptly, do not think that they are not appreciated, for they are deeply so by us all. I have been much worse for the past few weeks, and have expected that almost every day would be my last, for my heart disease is so much worse than ever before, that I suffer dreadfully from it. Pray for me, dear ones, and if we never meet here may we meet in Eden's fair land.

It will be a year the first of February since I have been taken off from the bed. To be moved at all causes me severe pain; but my hope is bright while passing through the furnace. The dross must be consumed, and the gold refined. The Lord is precious to me. If any of the dear saints should chance to come this way, I hope they will give us a call.

No. Dana, Mass. L. B. Weaver.

From Bro. J. S. Brooks.

Bro. Grant:—God has been graciously reviving his work in Portland recently, under the labors of Sr. Anna E. Smith. She came to this place Feb. 15th, and remained until the 19th, holding meetings Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday. The hall on Sunday was densely crowded with interested listeners, who seemed deeply impressed with the truths so clearly and forcibly delineated. On Tuesday evening thirteen came forward, asking the prayers of God's people, some of whom have found peace and are on their way rejoicing. To God be all the glory. In behalf of the brethren,

Jas. A. Brooks.

From Bro. E. Cotton.

Bro. Grant:—The Lord has been reviving his work in Woodhull, Steuben Co., N. Y. Brn. Stevens and Miles went there the last of December a few days. A number arose for prayers; but they felt it duty to leave, to fulfill other engagements. Bro. Stevens requested me to go and labor in that place. I did so, and in vicinity, nearly eight weeks. Some thirty arose for prayers, and quite a goodly number of them found peace in believing.

Obituaries.

Crumb. Fell asleep in Jesus, at Peace Dale, R. I., Feb. 13th, 1868, Bro. L. L. Crumb, aged thirty-five years, seven months, and five days.

Just three months from the time he gave up work, our worthy brother breathed out his life in the arms of "Him who giveth His beloved sleep." Suffering with heart disease (causing great difficulty at times in breathing), he showed the friends who waited upon him a constant example of christian patience and fortitude. The last time he was privileged to meet in social worship with God's people, his testimony was given to the power of that religion that sustains in trying hours, expressing the thought that it might be the last time he would have an opportunity of beseeching the poor sinner to seek the Savior, he urged upon them the importance of doing so at once ere mercy should close. May this exhortation be remembered by those who were privileged to hear it, and not only remembered but heeded. He left a widow with three children, who call for the prayers of those who believe in a prayer-hearing and a prayer-answering God. May He who fed the prophet at the brook, tenderly care for the widow and the fatherless, and see that their wants are supplied in such a way as he shall deem best.

Our brother was cared for by kind christian friends during his illness, who anticipated every want, and they are held in grateful remembrance by her whose earthly stay and support has been thus taken away. May God "temper the wind to the shorn lamb," and may the same peace and resignation which marked the last days of the departed, be vouchsafed to the lonely one, enabling her to patiently submit to life's vicissitudes; may light shine in on the dark pathway, and may the blessed hope of a reunion in a land where sorrow will be unknown, heal the wound now fresh and painful, causing her to bear up, and hope on till

"Hope be changed to glad fruition."

Words of comfort to the mourning friends at the funeral occasion were spoken by Bro. A. Durfee, from Job 14:14. C. F. Dixon.

Davis. Fell asleep in Jesus, at North Somers, Conn., Jan. 10th, 1868, Eber Davis, aged seventy one years.

Bro. Davis did not make open profession of religion until a short time before his death; but had indulged secret hope for some twenty years. For the last year of his life he had taken more than usual interest in the promulgation of the doctrine of the Bible, and was ready to support and defend the same. Some weeks before his death, he obtained a good evidence of his acceptance with God, through Christ, and was perfectly resigned. He was a great sufferer for some time previous to his death, yet he manifested much patience to the last.

He longed for rest in the grave. His dear companion, who survives, and who has indulged the blessed hope of the gospel for many years, has everlasting consolation, and a good hope of a happy meeting with her husband in the resurrection morn, to part no more. May the fatherless prepare for the same great event, and the family be unbroken in the kingdom, is my prayer. I. B. Potter.

Kendall. Died in Northampton, Feb. 16th, at the residence of G. F. Boyington, Emma A. Kendall, of Orange, widow of the late S. W. Kendall, and daughter of S. W. and A. E. Slate, of Orange, aged twenty-eight years, ten months and ten days.

Death came sudden and unexpected upon Emma. While conversing with some friends, she threw up her hands with a screech, and fell to rise no more until the resurrection of the just. The physician pronounced it heart disease. Thus we are admonished of the necessity of having our work done for the judgment, that however sudden death may lay its cold hand upon us, it may not find us unprepared. Emma sleeps in Jesus we trust; and while the hearts of friends are made sad by her sudden death, they are comforted with the hope of soon meeting her in that world where death cannot come. J. Hemenway.

McIntire. Died in Tuftonboro, N. H., Feb. 23, 1868, of lung fever, Samuel McIntire, aged eighty-four years, six months and nine days.

He professed the name of Christ about twenty-six years ago, and was baptized, but lived in neglect of duty afterward. While sick, he expressed a desire to be remembered when Christ comes in his kingdom, and seemed to feel reconciled. He leaves an aged companion and five children to mourn his loss. Words of comfort were spoken by Bro. H. M. Bryant, from Isa. 35:8. May the Father of the fatherless, and the Judge of widows give them consolation, and be with them, and bring them to the promised rest where death will never enter. D. W. Coff.

Beal. Little Frankie B. Beal, only daughter of Horace and Frances Beal, died in Lewiston, Maine, Jan. 27th, aged three years five months.

She was an interesting child, full of beauty, life and love, and it seemed very hard to give her up to the great destroyer for his loathsome prison. But the stronger than the strong man cometh soon to gather all the scattered treasures for his own eternal kingdom. Take heart, dear parents, for thus little Frankie will live again. J. T. Libby.

Pinckney. Died in Wolcott, Conn., Feb. 26th, 1868, Willie, youngest son of Bro. and Sr. Pinckney, aged seven years, lacking a few days.

Willie was the pet of the family. It was hard for them to give him up, but they sorrow not as others that have no hope. Bro. and Sr. Pinckney, and one of their daughters, were converted under the labors of Sister E. S. Jenning, last winter, and buried in the likeness of Christ's death by the writer. They have been ornaments to the cause of Christ ever since. Funeral sermon by the writer from 1 Thess. 4:18: "Wherefore comfort one another with these words." M. R. Miles.

Moses. Died at Haverhill, Mass., Feb. 5th, Sr. Margaret Moses, aged eighty-four years.

Sister Moses was converted when about fourteen years of age, and for seventeen years has lived an earnest and devoted christian. She was taken to Portsmouth (her former residence) for interment, where funeral services were held in the Advent Chapel, and where her voice had so often mingled with the saints in praise and prayer. Truly a mother in Israel has fallen. But, thank God, we mourn not as others who have no hope. She sleeps in Jesus, and awaits the resurrection morn. Sermon by the writer, from Ps. 17:15.

Joseph W. White.

Berry. Died at Portsmouth, N. H., Feb. 29th, Walter H., son of Bro. Edwin Berry, aged five years.

The stroke is a severe one to the young parents, but they are comforted with the assurance that soon their little one will come from the land of the enemy, to bloom immortal in the paradise of God.

Joseph W. White.

Sleeper. Fell asleep in Christ at Bristol, N. H., Jan. 15th, 1868, Samuel T. W. Sleeper, aged seventy-two years. N. T. Chase.

Dand. Died in Richmond, Maine, March 2nd, 1868, of paralysis, Phineas Dand, aged sixty-six years. H. D. Reed.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable Dispatches.

London, March 10. Dispatches from Annesly Bay say King Theodorus has arrived in the immediate neighborhood of Magdala with his troops and war material. The advance of the British expedition was steadily pushing ahead under Gen. Napier, and at last accounts were two days' march beyond the village of Attergal.

The Prince of Wales will soon make a visit to Ireland, where he is to be made a Knight of the Order of St. Patrick.

Berlin, March 11. The treaty just concluded between the North German Confederation and the United States of America, providing for the protection of the rights of naturalized citizens, was to-day unanimously ratified by the Federal Council.

Rome, March 11. One hundred Canadian Zouaves, who volunteered for the Pope's service, have arrived here.

London, March 14. Dispatches received from Rome to-day, announce that Luciene Bonaparte, Gonella, Barilla, Bernardi, Morrno, Borremo and Coptti, have been also appointed for the United States and Canada.

Naples, March 14. The eruption of Mount Vesuvius is increasing in power and grandeur. The volcano is throwing up vast quantities of fire, and but little lava. The detonations are very loud and frequent.

DOMESTIC.

Washington, March 12. An article in the New York Sun, asserting that the equilibrium of President Johnson's brain has been disturbed by continual excitement, has attracted much attention here and is endorsed by many who have had excellent opportunities for forming an opinion.

Impeachment.—Mr. Bingham, chairman of the House managers of impeachment, speaks hopefully in regard to the duration of the trial. In a single week the managers will present their case, and they are confident that the month of April will see its close. No important changes will be made in the Senate Chamber for the impeachment trial. The Senators will retain their seats as usual. The reporters' gallery is to be enlarged to include thirty more correspondents. A number of distinguished journalists have signified their intention to be present during the trial.

Sad News from Buenos Ayres.—From Buenos Ayres we have sad news of the ravages of the cholera. At Villanueva 210 out of 276 laborers on the railroad have died almost at once, and the people were flying in all directions from the scourge. In the city of Buenos Ayres it was raging with great fury, from 150 to 180 victims dying daily. Upwards of thirty thousand persons had fled from the city, and business of every kind was at a stand still.—N. Y. World, Feb. 18.

French Preparations for War.—The Paris Presse states that the Minister of War is establishing in the Hotel des Invalides two magazines to receive all the necessary material for an army of 200,000 men entering on a campaign. The first already contains the field-ovens, machines for making biscuit, boxes of bandages, surgical instruments, ambulances, etc. One of the largest refectories in the institution is transformed into a vast depot for the artillery.

Distress among the Nova Scotia Fishermen.—The suffering among the fishermen of Nova Scotia for want of food is declared to be absolutely appalling. The government and individuals have contributed largely to supply the famishing people with food, but the supply is still largely inadequate. In a recent letter to the Nova Scotia Relief Committee, Rev. Mr. Ambrose, its Treasurer, makes the annexed painful statement:

"A boat-load of starving people came to see me yesterday from Mill Cove, in Lunenburg, on the opposite shore. Four barrels of corn meal had been lately shared out among sixteen families in Mill Cove, and a barrel of molasses had at the same time been divided among others as well as the same sixteen families. An old man, aged about seventy, who was here yesterday, had, for three days tasted no nourishment but molasses and water. The rest of the party were married women, mothers of families—one with an infant aged five weeks at home. Two others had left their babes to be suckled during their absence by a woman who had one of her own to nurse. And not one of all those had a particle of food in the house.

An Escaped Prisoner from Abyssinia.—The French papers contain an article written by M. Adolph Fargeau, who has been given up as dead by his relatives for many years, but who as it appears has been a prisoner of King Thedore. He wandered into the Kingdom, was taken captive and held as a spy. His prison was in a large cavity formed by nature in the top of the mountain, and his keepers consisted of an old man and his daughter. In this cave he was strongly tied, the ropes, however, being sufficiently lengthy to allow him to walk about. He was regularly fed, but no communication was ever made to him by sign or otherwise. His only companions were rats, who attacked him nightly, till his keeper gave him some grease, which, though most offensive, he rubbed upon his body. This drove the rats away and also suggested the idea that led to his escape. When the jailor was absent he induced the daughter to bring him a little grease. This he applied to the ropes, and after many weary nights the rats gnawed the ropes sufficiently to enable him to escape. He was astounded, when only a few hours free, to fall in with the advanced guard of the English expedition.—Journal.

GENERAL CONFERENCE IN BOSTON.

The church of the Lord Jesus Christ worshiping at Lowell Street Chapel, Boston, to those of like precious faith, and who wait for the Son of God from heaven, greeting:

Beloved in the Lord, believing that yet a little while and He that shall come will come, and will not tarry; and that the signs of the times indicate that we are among the predicted perils of the last days; and that we are rapidly approaching those scenes of final trouble such as never was, which shall convulse the world with sorrow and distress; we have thought it good to invite our brethren in Christ, and the preachers of his word who are interested in these momentous themes, without distinction of sect or name, to meet us at our place of worship, at the corner of Lowell and Causeway Streets, Boston, on Tuesday evening, March 31st, 1868, and to continue with us over the coming first day of the week.

To unite with us in worship and thanksgiving to God for his abundant mercies to all men, and to us who have learned his will, and tasted that he is gracious:

To listen to the proclamation of the truth of God for the edification of the church, and the preaching of the glad tidings of the kingdom at hand:

To exhort one another, and so much the more as we see the day approaching:

To invite sinners to Christ, the refuge from approaching wrath, pointing them to the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world:

To encourage each other in the great work, committed to us as a people, of proclaiming life and immortality through Christ alone, the resurrection of the dead, and the speedy coming and kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ.

For these objects we invite our brethren and sisters, and the servants of the Lord, and shall make them welcome to our worship, our homes, and our hospitalities, trusting that we may thus be blessed and comforted together. And we desire the prayers of God's people that our gathering together may be to the praise and glory of our heavenly Father. And when the mighty voice shall be heard, saying, "Alleluia, for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth, let us be glad and rejoice, and give honor to him: for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready"; may we all be found arrayed in that righteousness which alone will insure admission to the marriage supper of the Lamb.

The Mass. Advent Christian Conference is cordially invited to meet with us, and to hold its annual session in connection with the general conference.

Friends coming from Portsmouth and intermediate places, on the Eastern R. R., also Nashua, Lowell, and intermediate places on the Lowell and Nashua R. R., will purchase regular tickets at the various offices, and will receive from the Conference Committee, at the meeting, return passes free.

NOTICE.

The Springfield National Advent Campmeeting Committee.

The above committee, at the request of the Chairman of the Building Committee, are notified to meet at the office of the "World's Crisis," Boston, on Friday, April 2d, at 10 o'clock A. M.

Geo. T. Adams, Secretary.

The Mass. A. C. Conference.

Will hold its annual meeting, in connection with the General Conference called by the Lowell Street Church, Boston, commencing April 1st, at 7½ P. M., and continue over the Sabbath.

We have business of importance to transact, and we hope to see delegates from all the churches, that all may have a voice and influence in the work. Will you attend to this matter, brethren, and see that delegates are appointed? It is time to begin at home. Some of our churches are suffering for want of laborers, and new fields are open and ready for work. Shall we attend to the calls for help at home? Come, come, from all parts of the State, brethren, and tell us what we shall do. Do not stay at home, and then complain that the work is not done right. J. Hemenway.

To the Advent Churches in Mass.

Do not forget to send your delegates to the Conference at Boston. It is our first Annual meeting; all the officers are to be chosen, and other matters of importance which demand our attention. Let there be a general rally. Come in the name of the Lord. Come praying in the Holy Spirit, that good may be done. We need to co-operate together in this great work. Let each preacher remember his duty, to report either by letter or otherwise. Let each church be heard from, and all take hold in earnest. We have but an hour to fight; let us do it manfully. Thy brother in the service, Geo. A. Streeter.

New York Conference.

The Western New York Quarterly Conference will be held at Hemlock Lake, Livingston county, commencing Thursday evening, Apr. 2nd, and holding over the following Sunday. Come, brethren and sisters, in the name of the Lord, having on the whole armor, prepared to work whilst the day lasts; and let this meeting be especially to build up the church of Christ and bring sinners to God. There are but two families in the place that are believers in the same blessed hope; so brethren will come prepared to board at the hotel if required, so that the burden may not rest too heavily upon the few who have so manfully held up the truth and mean to sustain it. Brethren coming on the cars will stop at Livonia, thence by stage to Hemlock Lake, distance four miles.

C. W. Lowe.
P. B. Stevens.
D. Cogswell.

Rhode Island and Connecticut!

Our next quarterly conference will be held at East Gloucester, R. I., where we enjoyed so much one year ago. Will every church send us a delegate or a letter? Do not neglect it, will you? Conference commences Wednesday, April 1st, at 2 P. M. A team will meet the stage from Providence and Putnam at Chepatchet on Wednesday and Thursday only. Come early. Stay late.

H. F. Carpenter, Clerk.

Notice.

Bro. Charles Goodrich wishes to say to those who have written to him to know his whereabouts, that he has not been able to labor much the past winter, but is better now, and will answer calls as soon as possible. His P. O. address is 69 Marion street, East Boston.

A Quarterly Conference.

A quarterly session of the Advent Christian State Conference of New Hampshire will be held in Manchester, N. H., commencing April 9th, and hold over the following Sunday. In the meantime let prayer go up to God for his blessing.

A. W. Sibley, Secretary.

Notice.

Several brethren and sisters having come out from Cooper Institute, New York City, have taken a hall corner of Allen and Grand Sts., where meetings will be held every Sunday A. M. and P. M. Preaching brethren passing through the city, believing in the resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust, are invited to give them a call.

J. K. Bellows.

Conference.

The Maine Westerly Second Advent Conference will be held in Topsham, to commence on Wednesday evening, March 18th, 1868, and continue over the following Sunday. The committee on the Maine Mission tent are requested to meet at the same time for the transaction of business. Per order,

I. C. Wellcome.
C. Goud.

We invite our preaching brethren, and brethren and sisters generally, to come and help us in the name of the Lord.

Notice.

The first annual meeting of the Mass. A. C. Conference will be held in Boston, in connection with the General Conference, called to meet Tuesday, March 31st, 1868. It is hoped the churches will send delegates so far as consistent. Let there be a general rally. For the Conf. Committee,

E. Owen, Clerk.

Appointments.

CASH RECEIPTS FOR THE CRISIS.

To find how your account stands.

The present No. of the Crisis is 647. The No. which follows your name is the No. to which you have paid. If the No. paid to is greater than the present No., the difference shows how many weeks you have paid for in advance. If the No. paid to, is less than the present No., the difference shows for how many weeks you owe. Forevery week of indebtedness, if less than 26 weeks, charge five cents; if more than 26 weeks, six cents. From the product (which will be a fraction over the actual indebtedness) deduct four cents for every dollar, and you have the exact amount due.

THE FRUIT OF THE SPIRIT.—No. 6.

"The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance; against such there is no law."—GAL. 5: 22.

MEEKNESS.

Meekness does not consist simply in dressing plainly, having a gentle disposition, and being non-resistant. It is something deeper than that. A person may dress plainly, never show temper, use all as equals, not say much about himself, and in the eyes of the world seem a pattern of humility; and yet his heart may be full of pride and self-righteousness; while meekness, which is the fruit of the Spirit, is lowliness of heart. All the work of the Spirit is upon the heart. The law was applied outwardly. Commandments were given which, if obeyed, would save the life of him who kept them; but the gospel is applied to the heart of man, and thus is shown the difference between morality and religion.

The law says, "Thou shalt not kill"; and though a man might have his heart filled with all manner of evil passions, if his outward life was good, he was justified by the law. But all of Jesus' teachings were directed at the heart, the motives, intents, purposes; and he says, "Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer." And however moral a man may be, however strictly he may keep the law, if the love is not written in his heart he is in the sight of God no better than the vilest of men; and one work of the Spirit is to write the law on the heart of man. Paul does not say, Keep all the commandments, and thus work out your salvation; but, "Work out your salvation, . . . for it is God that worketh in you both to will and to do of his own good pleasure"; that is, Show by your outward life what God has wrought in your heart.

The meekness which is the fruit of the Spirit is deeply rooted in the heart, and he who has it not only shows no pride but feels none; not only dresses modestly, but has no desire to attract attention and admiration; not only speaks to the beggar in rags, but looks upon him no differently than he looks upon the millionaire; not only shows no anger when insulted, no impatience when opposed, and no vanity when praised; but feels none. He does not take the lowest seat hoping to be asked to take a higher one, and feel slighted if he is not. If he is overtaken in a fault, and speaks hasty and unkind words, he does not say "Forgive me" to keep up appearances, but because he feels contrition.

The word meekness in the Bible means something more than it does when men use it. It means perfect submission to the will of God. Willingness to suffer or do God's will, whatever it may be. Willingness to lie passive in his hands, as clay in the hands of the potter, and say, whatever one may be called to pass through, "Not my will, but thine be done"; and this meekness is the fruit of the Spirit.

Those who live nearest the Lord, and are guided by the Holy Spirit, are the most meek and lowly. We do not read that Moses was the smartest man, or the best educated, or the most moral man among the Israelites; but we read, "Moses was very meek, above all the men that were upon the face of the earth." In those days, as now, the Lord did not choose those to carry out his purposes who wanted to be first and greatest, but the most humble man,—one who was willing to stand still or go forward, just how and when the Lord wished him to, and to give God all the glory. Sometimes it is harder to keep still than it is to work; and the Lord when he has a work to do chooses those for his laborers who have no wills of their own, but will obey the will of their Master. If a man wants a house built, he hires a man who will follow his directions, not one who will go to work and build a house after his own plan, regardless of the wishes of his employer; and so God employs workers who will follow his directions, those who are dead to the world and willing to become fools for Christ's sake.

Paul, in 1 Cor. 4, well describes meekness. Those who will labor working with their hands, will bless those that revile them, and suffer persecution, willing to be made as the filth of the world and the offscouring of all things for the sake of his cause, the Lord will bless and work through; and not until one is willing to give up all things, and be anything or nothing, will God make him his friend and workman.

Many want to work for the Lord, but they want to do some great thing. If they could preach like Sister Mansfield, or labor like Sr. Smith, or write like Bro. Hastings, or build up an institution like Bro. Burbank, they would be delighted, and work with all the energy they possess. They neglect little home duties, and are impatient and discontented, longing for some greater sphere of usefulness. They are not willing to do little errands. They forget that a small duty is as important as a large one, and life is composed of little duties, which if well done are blessed of God, and which if left undone will condemn the slothful servant. He that is unfaithful with one talent would not improve ten. The Lord does not want all his children to preach or be missionaries. There must be carpenters and bakers, and some to do house-work and shop-work; and he certainly would not want a man to preach who cannot control his temper when he finds his hat missing, or a girl to go South and teach who, if her mother crosses her will, becomes impatient and disrespectful.

Many have known they were gifted in certain respects, and thought the best way they could improve their talents would be to preach; and, with their hearts full of pride and self-righteousness, their voices trained, and gestures carefully studied, have gone out preaching [illegible] Burke, possessing the intellect of [illegible] or the eloquence of Cicero, though he have [illegible] his christ[illegible] much influence on the minds of the people, enlarge the church, and even lead some to Christ, if his heart is proud, his motives selfish, and all his thoughts about himself, can do nothing acceptable to God. The Lord may suffer him to work, and use him as he does kings and generals to work out his great plan; but in the great reckoning-day he will say to those who ask it, "I never knew you." "The meek shall inherit the earth," and "all the proud, yea, all that do wickedly shall be stubble, and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch."

But few are humble by nature. Man is generally proud, selfish, and self-reliant, and it takes grace to make any one meek and lowly; but the Holy Spirit is promised to those who ask it; and he who will be led by the Spirit will be just what God would have him be. One fruit the Spirit bears is meekness. Many whom the Lord has called into his vineyard have by their success been lifted up and exalted, thinking they were of considerable consequence, and forgetting Him who saved them; and God in his love has suffered them to fall, thus showing them their weakness and dependence on him. The Lord loves his own, and if they will not humble themselves, that is, if they will not do what they ought because it is humiliating, he sometimes humbles them in a way they least desire.

Meekness both precedes and follows all the work the Spirit directs. When a person sees himself just as he is, and gives up his will, cares nothing for the speech of the world or of the church, and is willing to be or do anything God desires, the Lord will show him his will concerning him, and use him as he is best fitted for use. He may put him in a shop to earn money for the cause of Christ, or send him among the heathen to teach them the way of salvation; but God will send that child where he can best use him for his own glory, and give him the blessed assurance that his ways please his Father.

When an individual is in his own place, or rather in the place God would have him be, if he obeys his Leader and accomplishes something for him, he is not lifted up by it, for he knows that if good has been done the Lord did it, not he, and he is humble, giving God all the glory. If he lends to the Lord of his abundance, or is the means of saving souls, he does not tell everywhere he goes how hard he has labored, and how much he has suffered, and how much good he has done, until everybody is tired of hearing him tell what "I" did. He does not misrepresent facts or let lies go unexposed because if the truth is known it will lessen his popularity. He is not continually fighting for his reputation and putting down those that oppose him. In short, he does not care what men may say of him, if he can have the approval of God. Such an one is not very apt to resent insolent words and actions, or sue a man because he deprives him of his rights. If a brother commits a crime, he does not cast him off, or scold him, or tell the news of his sin throughout the neighborhood; but feeling that only by the grace of God is he kept from the same sin, he goes to him in meekness and tries to restore him again to the fold. If he has more light on the Scriptures than others, he does not call them fools or hypocrites, but endeavors to instruct in meekness those that oppose themselves. When I see a man ridiculing or condemning those whose opinions differ from his, I think he lacks both the spirit of Christ and a solid foundation to stand upon, for those who have good arguments with which to defend themselves seldom resort to ridicule.

When a person follows the Spirit closely, he generally has to go through some hard places; for until he is dead to the world and has no will of his own, he cannot properly be called meek; and the prouder and more selfish and stronger-willed any one is, the greater trials he will have. It does not take much heat to melt lead, but no common fire will melt iron. One reason why the churches of the present day lack the power that existed in the primitive church, is because they are so proud. They are not willing to come out from the world and appear ridiculous and peculiar. They will not give up fashion and form and style and gentility, and be called foolish and fanatical. They follow the Spirit a little way, but when it leads them to heavy crosses which they must take up before they can advance, they stop, and stand still, and gradually slide back, until you can not tell them from the world, and all the experience they have to relate is the story of their conversion.

"By their fruits ye shall know them." Does a woman decked with plumes and ribbons and jewelry look like a follower of the meek and lowly Jesus? Does a man whose heart and time and talents are all taken up with politics appear dead to the world? Does he who is constantly trying to make people think he is of much importance, seem like one who is living with an eye single to God's glory? "Abstain from all appearance of evil." O! how many weary souls, toiling early and late, and wearing themselves out trying to be somebody, might find rest to their souls if they would only give up the world with its honors and glory, with its wearisome burdens and unsatisfying emptiness, and take upon them the yoke of Him who was meek and lowly of heart. For his yoke is easy, and his burden is light.

I once heard a good sister say in a prayer-meeting, "Pray for me, that I may lie low in the valley, dig deep, and build sure." That is the desire of every christian heart. O how blessed is that one so meek and lowly that the Lord is always with him to guide and to bless! one who in every circumstance in life can see a guiding hand; one who is willing at all times to suffer God's will, or do his will; one that the Lord can work through at any time, and in all places, to will and to do his own good pleasure. "He that humbleth himself shall be exalted." S. K. PAINE.

MY PRAYER.

Come, Lord Jesus. Descend, thou Mightiest, from the right hand of glory, and avenge the sufferings of thy saints expectant. Rend the vaulted skies, that the weary ones of earth may behold thy loving countenance, rivaling in brightness the noonday sun; and that they may hail thee as their glorious Deliverer, the Prince of peace.

Speed the day when the mighty heavens shall at thy command be rolled together as a parchment scroll, that thy waiting, praying saints may be caught up by thy omnipotent hand, to dwell with thee for ever at the right hand of bliss. Haste to restore earth to its Edenic beauty, the inheritance whereof shall make glad the hearts of the saints. Sway the sceptre of thy just indignation over thine enemies, till they shall acknowledge thy sovereign power and dominion, whose sole right beside thy Holy Father it is to reign in heaven supreme. Bid the golden gates of the celestial City fold back their massive doors, that at the sound of the redemption trump thy children may enter therein. MARY A. FOWLER.

IS IT A BIBLE DOCTRINE?

WHAT IS THE TEST? A few mornings since the answer to this important question was presented in such simplicity to my mind, that I cannot forbear the desire to give it to the young and inexperienced. A money detector is considered indispensable to business men. And if in temporal things it is so important to distinguish the good from the bad, how much more important is it in eternal things. The incident is as follows:—

One young christian was writing to another whom she dearly loved in the Lord, and near the close of her letter she playfully asked, "Do you still believe in that "saved now" doctrine? If I believed that I would no longer fight against wind and tide as I now do."

The one addressed was not a little annoyed at the question, and deferred a reply for some time. Finally circumstances quickened her, and the reply was written and handed to me to read. It bore a good christian spirit, and to the point in question she wrote:

"I still believe with all my heart in John 10: 27, 28. Rom. 8: 29, 30, and 9: 15, 16."

At this point in the letter this beautiful text came forcibly to my mind: If she as heartily believes the Scriptures which form the guard at the other end of the bridge, she is safe. It matters not from which end we are precipitated, the fall may be equally fatal.

Here is the true test. What saith the Scriptures? Not one scripture, nor two, nor three, but the whole in harmony, without the silencing or the modifying of a single voice. Hence the necessity of a general as well as a sectional reading of the Scriptures. We want to continually bear in mind how the whole sounds in chorus, as well as how each part sounds alone, and view each part as correct only as it makes harmony with the whole.

That theory must be correct which allows from the Inspired Volume the full choir of sacred voices in harmony upon it.

We will now place the Scriptures referred to in the letter, with a few of their counterpoise in juxtaposition; that, like the waters of the Red Sea, they may form a wall on the right hand and on the left, that the strait and narrow way between them may be the more visible to the Canaan-bound pilgrim.

And here we put off our shoes from our feet, for the ground is holy; and with ears to hear say, "Speak, Lord, for thy servant heareth." And thus may it be with all who read.

"My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me: and I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand."—John 10: 27, 28.	"I am the true vine, and my Father is the husbandman. Every branch in me that beareth not fruit he taketh away. . . . If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered; and men gather them, and cast them into the fire, and they are burned." John 15: 1, 2, 6.
"For whom he did foreknow, he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son, that he might be the first born among many brethren. Moreover whom he did predestinate, them he also called: and whom he called, them he also justified: and whom he justified, them he also glorified."—Rom. 8: 29, 30.	"Brethren, if any of you do err from the truth, and one convert him; let him know, that he which converteth the sinner from the error of his way, shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins."—Jas. 5: 19, 20. "Ye, therefore, beloved, seeing ye know these things before, beware lest ye also, being led away with the error of the wicked, fall from your own stedfastness."—2 Pet. 3: 17.
"For he saith to Moses, I will have mercy on whom I will have mercy, and I will have compassion on whom I will have compassion. So then it is not of him that willeth, nor of him that runneth, but of God that showeth mercy."—Rom. 9: 15, 16.	"Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money; come ye, buy, and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk without money and without price. . . . Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near. Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon."—Isa. 55: 1, 6, 7.

With awe and deep humility we here venture a few remarks upon Bible predestination as we understand it. And first, with melting of soul we do praise and extol the Most High God that it was his good pleasure to make the world with the purpose to fill it with intelligent beings, in his own image, to know and enjoy him forever. Had not sin entered, no excess over this number would have lived. But with this calamity, and its threatened numerical excess, came the promise of a Savior; who, by the grace of God, has tasted death for every man; and in whom is now offered eternal life to every one who will, by patient continuance in well doing, seek for glory and honor and immortality, to be awarded at the judgment, when the King shall say, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the founndation of the world."

In this right hand company is, for the first time, made manifest, in the highest sense of the term, the elect of God before an assembled world. It is this company whom he foreknew, whom he predestinated to be conformed to the image of his Son, whom he called, whom he justified, whom he glorified, in purpose, when he foreordained for them a Savior and a kingdom, even "before the foundation of the world." 1 Pet. 1: 20; Matt. 25: 34. Like the wise master-builder who perfects his plan before he strikes a blow, so the heavenly Architect conceived his stupendous plan in perfection before a word of creating power was uttered.

The predestination of the Bible, to our mind, resolves itself in this; God conceived his model in his Son, and then predestinated that all who are saved, without respect of persons, should be conformed to that model. Hence the broad command, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." Mark. 16: 15, 16. God's sovereignty, we humbly premise, will never be exercised but in harmony with his revealed plan of redemption; and to this we bow adoringly. In christian love, your sister,

E. S. W[illegible].

A SINGULAR DREAM.

The following remarkable dream was related by Bro. R. S. Turner in the forenoon of the Lord's day, Feb. 9th, at our conference meeting. He described it with a good deal of feeling, and it was received with deep interest. It is imperfectly given here, but still will be perused by many with interest. I would simply state, Bro. Turner has been a sailor for many years, and has only recently embraced the great truths of the Bible. I give it as near as possible in his own words:

I had a very singular dream or vision about one o'clock in the morning of Feb. 6th. I thought I shipped on board a beautiful little bark propelled by steam and sail, with our Savior, to make a voyage; the object being, the Lord said, "to show me the disappointments and temptations of a pilgrim's life."

All things ready we set sail, and seemed to glide into a beautiful rivulet or stream. The water was clear as crystal, but so shallow I could see plainly the rocks at the bottom. We sailed rapidly, and as we glided along, the stream widened and our speed increased rapidly; and as I could see here and there, in all directions, huge rocks, projecting points of land, bars of sand and stone, I shuddered for fear of safety. Yet everything—bark, stream, and all the surroundings, was extremely beautiful, and with all my fears for safety, I was happy. Now and then, as I would be terrified, fearing we should be dashed to pieces upon some prominent obstruction directly in our way, our Savior would turn smilingly to me and say, "Fear not, brother, I will guide the bark."

Soon we got into deeper water, but I could see rapids directly ahead of us dashing over the rocks, and I thought our bark must certainly be dashed to pieces and be lost; but our Savior said,

"Fear not, for those who enlist in my service and remain faithful, I will safely guide at all times, and in all weather."

We were still sailing at a very rapid rate, and many obstructions appeared in our way, and frequently I trembled for the safety of our bark, fearing she would be dashed into a thousand pieces. At such times our Savior looked at me, smiled, and said,

"Brother, fear not, trust in me, I will guide the bark. Your trials in life are to try your faith. There will be many rocks in your way, before your pilgrimage is ended."

As we sailed on, a small island, then a huge rock, seemed directly before us, and we were dashing and driving right on to them. But our Savior moved the helm, and we turned short and rushed safely past. I felt I had given all up to the Lord, but at such times as these a fear crept over me, and the Savior would say so gently,

"Fear not, I'll guide the bark."

Every time I looked at our Savior he seemed more mild and lovely. Tongue cannot describe the beautiful scenery and places we passed. It was different from any country I ever saw, and I have traveled a great deal over the globe. Soon we found ourselves in the broad ocean, and everything went smooth with me, when suddenly up sprung a gigantic rock ahead of us. I was sure now we must be lost, but Jesus was at the helm and we went safely by.

When we started we had a number of passengers on board, but as the various obstructions came in view, and when all seemed to be lost, they deserted us, one by one, until I was left alone with our Savior, and he was close by my side. We were on the quarter deck, near the helm, but no one had hold of the helm at this time. I cannot express the happiness I felt. Everything seemed so magnificent and grand around me. The Savior then said to me in a kind and gentle manner:

"I want you always to remember this voyage when you are in tribulation, and what I have said to you in regard to trusting in me, and I will guide the bark."

We now entered the mouth of a river and sailed up the stream, but the beauties and grandeur of the surroundings cannot be described. As we advanced the stream grew narrower. Soon we came in sight of a large building, and as we approached it appeared more grand. Soon we entered under a large covering. It was very large indeed, and seemed as though it were the heavens, and this wonderful building was under it. Our bark sailed close to it as we passed. It was very large, and the most splendid structure I ever beheld. It was built of beautiful precious stones, such as we read of in the Scriptures. It was of a blueish cast and transparent. In the centre of the building were large letters of transparent stone, stating its object, but I cannot remember precisely how it read now, but understood it was for the purpose of purification. I could see no one in or about it. I looked upon it as a heavenly place. Our bark passed it and we were in a city as it were. Our bark sailed rapidly through its streets following the stream. Every little while as we would turn a corner I would have my misgivings and fears.

Soon we sailed through a dark place. But oh, how beautifully our Savior would guide the bark. Soon it became light again, and the stream was quite small, and we stopped. The water was very clear, and I could see fish, and I got out of the bark and caught a number in my hand. My Savior gave me a staff like a cane, and told me always to keep it. He said I could go any where with the help of the staff, even through the air like a bird. It appeared to be the staff of Faith. I felt anxious to try my staff. I took it and sailed through the air, and at last found myself in a large swamp. There I thought I was tempted by Satan. I prayed to be delivered from Satan and the swamp. I looked away on the distant hills and saw splendid mansions. I was soon led out of the swamp, and was climbing up one of the hills, when our Savior told me I must tell all whom I met of the voyage I made with him, and its object and beauties, and exhort them to come to Christ.

I started on my mission, and soon came to a shabby house, and went in. I found only an old Indian, who could not speak English, and I could not speak his tongue, but still I managed to make him understand, and describe to him my voyage with the Savior, and what he had said to me. Suddenly my audience increased, and I found myself in the midst of a multitude of people, and commenced to speak louder, so all could hear, when suddenly I awoke.

I had become so carried away in my dream that I could not for some time after I awoke make it appear any thing but a reality, and found myself praising God and exhorting the multitude to come to Jesus. Heaven grant it may be a reality to me. J. R. COOPER.

READING OF THE BIBLE.

It was the custom of the Puritan congregations to dispense with the reading of the Bible in their public services. There was a minister settled near Boston whose sermons were often two hours long, and to whom Governor Hancock addressed a note offering to furnish his congregation with a Bible as a present, if they would consent to their minister's reading from it as part of the regular service on Sunday.

After service the next Sunday the good minister read the Governor's note to the congregation. Whereupon one of the worthy elders rose and said, "Reverend sir, I object; for now the service is too long, so that it is impossible to get home and milk the cows before dark; and if the Scriptures are read beside what is now done it would be hard to tell how late we might be kept."

"The good minister rose, and said that he "would take care that the time required for reading God's word should be taken from the other parts of the service, and that the service should not be lengthened by the proposed reading." The elder declared himself satisfied. The present of the Governor was accepted by vote of the whole congregation, and from that time the Bible was read in that congregation.—Liberal Christian.

WAFT THEM ON.

What heavenly words I seemed to hear,
They sent through me a happy thrill,
They fell so sweetly on my ear,
Methinks that I can hear them still.

"Jesus died for all!" I heard;
O, waft it on with gentle tone;
Let others watch thy faintest word,
And learn to live for Christ alone.

"He rose again": O, waft it near,
Down to a groaning world of strife;
Let dying men rejoice who hear
That Jesus is the way of life.

He's gone above; he left all here,
And sits at God's right hand to-day;
Poor dying mortals need not fear,
For Christ has opened plain the way.

Behold he comes! the sweetest sound—
O, let it linger on the ear;
Let all to earth's remotest bounds
Rejoice that Christ our all is here.

GOD DOES NOT FORGET.

Many years ago, an old man, a devoted christian, commenced a prayer-meeting, which is still continued, having resulted in many and glorious fruits. As a pastor it was my privilege to be with him, particularly during his last illness. In several visits made to his house, I found him on the mount, looking over to the land of promise. Finding nothing seemingly to mar his comfort or interrupt his joy, I determined to satisfy myself whether there was nothing that gave him any trouble of heart. On entering his chamber, I asked him in simple terms:

"How are you this morning?"

"O, sir!" he said, "I am well; why should not I be well?"

I took the opportunity to ask him:

"My dear sir, has there been nothing of late resting upon your heart as an occasion of trouble?"

He spoke not a word, but turned his face toward the wall, and lay so between five and ten minutes; then he rolled his head back upon his pillow, with his face towards me, and I saw the tears stealing down his cheek.

"O yes, sir," said he, "there is one great trouble."

"What is it?" I inquired. "Speak your whole mind to me freely."

"Well," said he, "I have ten children, and I have prayed to God for more than thirty years that I might see some of them converted before I died; but he has denied me. They have all grown up, as you know, but not christians."

"How do you get over that trouble?" I asked.

"Ah!" he replied, "I get over it as I get over all other troubles—by rolling it over upon Christ. I know that God means to answer my prayers, but he means to wait till I am gone. But he will do it—I know he will; my children will be converted."

This man has been in his grave for fifteen years, and I have watched his children ever since his death, and now to-day I am able to say that seven out of ten have been born into the kingdom of God, and that the eighth has also just experienced conversion. This is the answer to his prayer. God did not forget; he only waited. And, in like manner, he will answer the prayers of all parents who pray in faith for the conversion of their children. Let us take courage, and lay hold upon the precious promises of God.

LIVE FOR GOOD.—Thousands of men breathe, move, and live, pass off the stage of life, and are heard of no more. Why? They did not do a particle of good in the world, and none were blessed by them as instruments of their redemption; not a word they spoke could be recalled, and so they perished, their light went out in darkness, and they were not remembered more than the insects of yesterday. Will you thus live and die? Live for something. Do good and leave behind you a monument of virtue that time can never destroy. Write your name in kindness, love, and mercy on the hearts of thousands you come in contact with, year by year, and you will never be forgotten. No: your name, your deeds, will be as legible on the hearts you leave behind, as stars on the brow of the evening. Good deeds will shine as brightly on the earth as the stars of heaven.

BEARDS.—Beards have served as professional distinctions, especially in the cases of the priest, the physician, and the philosopher. Fenelon tells us of a priest of Apollo with a beard down to his girdle, and Aaron and his beard are familiar and inseparable. Æsculapius, the physician, with the golden beard, is universally celebrated. Almost all the old philosophers wore long hair on their chins. The Gynosophists, according to Strabo, were careful to let theirs grow long enough to "captivate" the veneration of beholders; while Socrates was called by a pupil Bearded Master, as a title of respect. Euphrates, a Laconian sage, on being asked why he allowed his snow-white beard to attain such a length, replied, "that, having my white beard continually before my eyes, I may do nothing unworthy of its whiteness."

A WISE RESOLVE.—The Rev. Daniel Lord, pastor of the South Congregational church, Bridgeport, Conn., announced from his pulpit that inasmuch as his occasional use of cigars and drinking wine upon two or three wedding occasions had given offence to some of the members of his church, and caused unpleasant remarks, he would hereafter abstain from the use of tobacco, and never taste of wine except upon the occasion of the sacrament. A wise resolve: for "it is good neither to eat flesh, nor to drink wine, nor anything whereby thy brother stumbleth, or is offended, or is made weak."

EXERCISE FOR HORSES.—Because there is little work for horses during the winter season, they sometimes fail of receiving proper exercise. Do not suffer them to stand the whole week in the stable, but give, at least, one hour's exercise daily. Give sloppy food at least twice a week, and throw a lump of rock salt in the manger.

HOLDING UP MILK.—Mr. L. Morton informs the Rural American, that when his cows trouble him in this way, he reaches his hand up, and places the ends of his fingers on the backbone, forward of the hips, and presses down hard for a minute or so, and they always give their milk very freely.

TO THE YOUNG.

Walk not in the way with fools: go not in the paths of evil men. Avoid the places of amusement and wine, where bad men associate together; shun them, turn and walk with the wise. Enter not in with evil doers, nor associate with fools. Receive instruction of the wise, and let her not depart from thee. Keep instruction as your life, for she will be a father and a mother to you—a present help always. Acknowledge your sinful nature, and confess your iniquities to God. Seek the favor of God with a contrite heart, and hope for mercy and the pardon of sin through Jesus only. Pray for grace and strength to resist evil temptations.

Cling to your Savior as your only hope; as a child to a parent in time of great and present danger. Jesus loved children when he was on earth, and he loves them now just as much as ever. God loves the young with a peculiarly ardent love. God's dealings with Joseph show most beautifully his goodness and care for those who serve him. If you would have the protection of heaven, love God and fear him with a holy fear. If earthly parents pity their children when in distress, how much more does their heavenly Parent.

So live that you can meet Jesus at death in peace, and feel that he has made himself especially your Savior by the forgiveness of all your sins. Think often that you are mortal, and prepare to die; to live while you do live to the glory of God. If you live when your parents are dead, may you be prepared to more than fill their places, especially in the church of God. Seek Jesus if you would have a friend now and forever; then you can sing with the poet—

"Loud may the troubled ocean roar,
In sacred peace our souls abide,
While every nation, every shore,
Trembles and dreads the swelling tide."

Is not the ocean now troubled and throwing on every shore its swelling tide? May you be of that number whose souls "in sacred peace abide." A. L. ADAMS.

LETTER FROM S. P. HOWLAND.

The Bible has been a deep study with me for a long time, and I now rejoice that God has forgiven my many sins. It was a joyful evening when I was converted. I then resolved to follow Christ's ways, and strive to be one of his children as long as my life should last; so when Jesus comes to gather his children home, I may rise from my deadly slumber and reign with him in that shining city where sorrow never can enter. And I hope all my young friends will do the same. Those who do not try to serve him must be destroyed by everlasting fire. Christ says, better enter into life eternal halt or maimed, rather than having two hands or two feet to be cast into everlasting fire. Matt. 8. Those hands or feet are not your limbs, but it means something as dear to you as an arm or a foot would be; such as riches or a friend would be. Suppose you had a friend who was as dear to you as a right hand or a right eye, and was not walking in the light of God, and he was leading you away from God; would you not cast him away, rather than having friends on earth be cast into the unquenchable fire? John 15: 6. "If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch and is withered; and men gather them and cast them into the fire, and they are burned." We are the branches, the wicked are the corrupt branches; and the just are the good ones, and the wicked shall be gathered together and burned as the corrupt branch. But the corrupt branch does not burn forever. The wicked burn like the branch. Christ says, "And if thy hand offend thee, cut it off, and cast it from thee; it is better for thee to enter into life maimed, rather than having two hands to be cast into hell, into the fire that never shall be quenched." Mark 11: 43. It does not say that it shall not cease burning, but it says it shall not be quenched; thus it burneth like fuel, until it burneth up.

Dear young friends, strive to love and praise Him, and you will escape that awful punishment, and reign in endless day in that bright city above, and be forever blest.

Baldwin, Kansas. SANFORD P. HOWLAND.

LETTER FROM NELLIE.

O, what a glorious promise is given to us, if we only love God and strive to do his will; the glory, the honor, the power that is given us in the world hereafter; for soon Jesus will come as the good shepherd, to gather his lambs into the fold. He is the good shepherd, and if we come to him we shall be gathered with that happy band, to sing his praises evermore. The dead shall rise, and the sea give up its dead. Job 14: 10–12. "But man dieth, yea, man giveth up the ghost, and where is he? As the waters fail from the sea, and the flood decayeth and drieth up, so man lieth down and riseth not, till the heavens be no more, they shall not awake nor be raised out of their sleep." If they shall not awake nor be raised out of their sleep, they have no immortality till the judgment. 1 Cor. 15: 51–52. "Behold I show you a mystery; we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed; in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump; for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. O! how I long for that day when Jesus will come, when this corruption will put on incorruption, and this mortal put on immortality; then shall we be happy.

We all must try to be faithful, if we ever wish to gain the kingdom. We must live sober, and pray with upright and honest hearts, believing that we shall receive what we ask. We should pray for each other, and bear the trouble that awaits us without fear, and with that same gentle spirit that Jesus had, and we shall be the children of his love.

NELLIE ADA LAPHAM.

SELLING A BIRTHRIGHT.

"Father," said Charley, one day, "Mr. Reed is going to take the whole school to Union Hill, on the Fourth, and we are to have a dinner and a grand, good time. We are to choose a captain out of the first class, and to-morrow is election day."

"For whom are you going to vote?"

"Morton, the tallest fellow in the school; and the best boy, too, I think. But George has gone over to the opposition."

"How's that, George, my boy? Who is your candidate? Let us hear the other side."

"Chester," said George. "I don't see why he won't make as good a captain as Morton."

"He is not so good a scholar," said Charley; "besides, he swears sometimes, and then he is buying up votes, and I think that is mean."

George flushed up a little, but made no reply.

"George," said his father, "I want you to tell me if Chester has given you any thing to influence your vote?"

George hung his head, and was very slow to reply; but there was no escape from his father's question, and at last he answered, "I broke my new bat yesterday, playing baseball, and he gave me his, if I would promise to vote for him."

"And did you promise?"

"Yes, father."

"You were wrong, my boy. Your vote is your birthright. Not very long ago, when we read how Esau sold his birthright for a mess of pottage, you thought him very little of a man. And now you have sold yours for a second-hand bat! You have sold yourself, your influence, as far as it goes, to elect a boy who, by taking unfair means to secure this honor to himself, shows himself unfit for it, and shows also that he has reason to believe that a majority of the school think some one else more worthy. Now, as you look over the whole affair, do you not think it dishonorable to both of you?"

"Yes," answered George, "I did not think it was so much matter."

"Why, if you can be bought over with a bat when you are a boy, you may be bought over with an office, or with money, when you are a man. I want my sons to be above a bribe, or selling the rights of their manhood."

"What ought I to do, father?"

"Take the bat back to Chester, and tell him how the matter appears to you on further consideration. If he has any honor in him, he will release you from his promise; if he has not, he can hold you to it, and you must keep your word, and I am sorry for you. And take care not to be caught in such a false position again."

George wished the old bat at the bottom of the sea a dozen times as he carried it back with shame to Chester. He was laughed at, reproached, and held to his promise, as he expected to be; and acquired such a contempt for his candidate's selfish want of principle, that he was glad when he found himself on the losing side next day, and joined heartily in the cheers which the winners gave for Morton.—Independent.

GOOD FOR NOTHING.

A gentleman, while addressing some children, took out his watch, and asked them what it was for.

"To keep time," the children answered.

"Well, suppose it won't keep time, and can't be made to keep time, what is it good for?"

"It's good for nothing," they replied.

He then took out a lead pencil, and asked what it was for.

"It is to mark with," was the answer.

"But suppose the lead is out, and it won't mark, what is it good for?"

"It is good for nothing."

He then took out a pocket-knife, and asked what was its use.

"To whittle with," said one. "To cut," said others.

"Suppose that it has no blade, then what is it good for?"

"Good for nothing."

"Then a watch, or pencil, or knife, is good for nothing, unless it can do the thing for which it was made?"

"Yes, sir, it is useless."

"Well, children, what is a boy or girl made for?"

The children hesitated.

"What is the answer to the question, 'What is the chief end of man?'" asked the gentleman.

"To glorify God and enjoy him forever."

"Now, then, if a boy or girl does not do what he or she is made for, and glorify God, what is he or see good for?"

And the children all answered, without seeming to think how it would sound,—"Good for nothing."

Well, if children are made to glorify God, and they don't do it, are they good for any thing? that is, it is so much more important that they glorify God, and become prepared to enjoy him forever, than any thing else, that if they fail to do this, it is as though they failed in every thing. Without love to God, all other things are as nothing.

DID JESUS SING?

At a gathering of children on Christmas day, a gentleman present related a very interesting incident.

A little girl, about three years of age, was very curious to know why Christmas greens were so much used, and what they were intended to signify.

So Mr. L. told her the story of the babe at Bethlehem—of the child whose name was Jesus.

The little questioner was just beginning to give voice to the music that was in her heart; and after Mr. L. had concluded the narrative, she looked up in his face and asked, "Did Jesus sing?"

Who had ever thought of that? If you will look at Matthew, twenty-sixth chapter and thirtieth verse, you will there find almost conclusive proofs that Jesus sang with his disciples.

NOT LOST, NOR IN VAIN.

Shall all the knowledge we have garnered here
Be lost to us in yonder brighter sphere?
All the mind's treasures gathered here by toil,
There be considered but as worthless spoil?

Will it be vain that we have sought the right,
In vain if we have conquered in the fight?
In vain if we have turned from each wrong way,
And from the narrow path sought ne'er to stray?

In vain if storms and clouds have crossed our path,
If we through patience quenched man's rising wrath,
Never cast down by various ills of life,
But battled hopefully in all its strife?

In vain if humble we have tried to bow,
Craving God's mercy for the past and now?
In vain the precious lessons on the Mount,
As rules of life we ever tried to count?

Will it be vain that we so long have known
The golden rule to others ever shown?
The holy book have taken for our guide,
Its promises in memory to abide?

In vain if seeking to the source of light,
Asking of Him to give us songs in night?
In vain striving to say, "Thy will be done,"
Until our latest victory is won?

Oh! not in vain to him who overcomes,
Who loves the right, enticing evil shuns;
The promise stands, it shall not be in vain,
And to the good this promise is most plain.

THE HOPE.—No. 3.

"Wherein God, willing more abundantly to show unto the heirs of promise the immutability of his counsel, confirmed it by an oath; that by two immutable things in which it was impossible for God to lie, we might have a strong consolation, who have fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope set before us."—Heb. 6: 17, 18.

We closed our last by remarking that the Pharisees, like thousands at the present time, thought they had eternal life, as the result of an immortal soul, while God's word plainly declares that this life is "in his Son." Therefore, "he that hath the Son hath everlasting life; and he that hath not the Son of God shall not see [the] life, but the wrath of God abideth on him." There is no eternal life out of Christ. "Our life is hid with Christ in God," and when "He who is our life shall" appear, then shall we receive that incorruptible treasure.

In setting before us the hope of the gospel, John's language differs somewhat from that of Paul; yet the substance is the same. While Paul terms it "the hope of eternal life," John calls it "the hope of being made like Jesus." He says, "Beloved, now are we the sons of God; and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when he doth appear, we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is. And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as He is pure."—1 John 3: 2, 3. Here "the hope" is called the "hope of being made like Jesus," which is, of course, to partake of his divine nature, and that will make us immortal, the result of which will be eternal life. Hence God has promised to every one that seeks for "glory, honor, and immortality,—eternal life" (Rom. 2: 7) as the result. Therefore the hope spoken of by the apostle Paul and John are the same virtually; and there is but one hope after all.

The hope of "being made like Jesus," or "partaking of the divine nature," and the hope of "eternal life," then, is based on "the promise made of God unto the fathers," and confirmed by his oath. Right here, it may not be out of place to add the testimony of Peter on this point, to that already adduced. He says, "Whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises; that by these [promises] we might become partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust."—2 Pet. 1: 4. By laying hold on the promises spoken of by Peter, then, we may become partakers of the divine nature, or be made like Jesus.

And now it must be obvious to the reader that the promises spoken of by Peter and Paul are the same,—the promises made of God unto the fathers, confirmed by his oath. "Eternal life," in so many words, is not recorded as having been promised to the fathers; nor does the language of the apostle imply necessarily that it is. "The hope" is the "hope of eternal life," based upon the promise made of God unto the fathers.

Heb. 9: 15. "And for this cause he [Christ] is the mediator of the new testament, that by means of death, for the redemption of the transgressions that were under the first testament, they that are called might receive the promise of [an] eternal inheritance." Here is a "great and precious promise"; and if we should happen to learn that it is confirmed by the oath of God, we should almost be tempted to think this was the one upon which the apostle based his hope of eternal life; for if God has promised us an "eternal inheritance," depend upon it he will qualify us to inherit it eternally; and how could this be done except by giving us eternal life? What that inheritance is, and to whom it was first made, we shall soon learn. By referring to Gal. 3: 16–18, we learn that it was made to "Abraham and his seed." "Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made; he saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ. And this I say, that the covenant, that was confirmed [by an oath] . . . of God in Christ, the law, which was four hundred and thirty years after, cannot disannul, that it should make the [previous] promise of none effect. For if the inheritance be of the law, it is no more of promise; but God gave it [the inheritance] to Abraham by promise." Then the promise of an eternal inheritance was first made to Abraham and his seed—"Christ." In verse 29, the apostle says, "And if ye are Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." Then if we are Christ's, we are heirs of an eternal inheritance also: and, as I before remarked, if God has promised us an eternal inheritance, he will qualify us to inherit it eternally. This promise being confirmed, and eternal life being in him, by laying hold on this great and precious promise, by faith, we may become partakers of the divine nature, or gain "eternal life."

If God has promised us an inheritance, is it not natural for us, as rational, intelligent beings, to inquire what that inheritance is, and where it is located? If a friend of ours should make us the promise of an inheritance, worth ten thousand dollars, and we did not inquire with regard to what and where it was, would it not prove that we disregarded the promise entirely? that we had no faith in its author? Most assuredly. And now if God has made us the promise of an eternal inheritance, and we are no way concerned about it, does it not prove that we either lack faith in the author, or else are so entangled with the things of this world that we have no time to meddle with the "deep things of God"? And yet how many are the professors of religion who will tell you that it makes no difference where heaven is located, if we only get there. And it is a fact, that if orthodoxy has not "turned the world upside down," they have turned the Bible upside down, and made it void through their tradition. For while God's word teaches that the saints are to dwell in his presence (Rev. 21), and that the wicked are to be destroyed from his presence (2 Thess. 1: 9), they teach that the wicked are to be tormented in his presence, and the saints are going out of his presence. Mark: they say the wicked are to be tormented in hell eternally; and David says, "If I make my bed in hell, Thou art there." But while they claim that God fills "immensity of space," they teach that the saints are going "beyond the bounds of space," hence out of the presence of God. Good Lord, deliver me from such absurd theology.

THE SEVEN-SEALED BOOK.—Rev. 6.

And now, as the Lamb breaks the first seal and opens the first book, containing the history of the lives and acts of the first church, the Ephesian, one of the four living creatures proclaims to that church and to all the churches (2: 23), Come and see! and oh, wonder of wonders! the resurrected Ephesian church looks and beholds, as did John, as will all the other churches, and the prophets and patriarchs, the entire course of the church, planted by the apostle Paul, watered by the faithful in Christ Jesus, and increased of God, living again, as when Paul called the Elders together, and gave them his parting charge, and told them they should see his face no more; and then they see them all again sorely weeping and falling on Paul's neck and kissing him, sorrowing with downcast eyes and saddened looks for words spoken, little dreaming that the entire scene would be reproduced when all the family gather around the Christmas Tree (tree of life) in the kingdom.

Then comes the unsealed book of Smyrna, with their imprisonment and tribulation; and then Pergamos, and Thyatira; and so in consecutive order one after another down through Laodicea to the time of their deliverance, and their being brought to see as they were seen, and know as they were made known, and cry out as they saw and read and understood, what the Spirit had before cried and knew would be true, from that time,—"Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord, . . . that they may rest from their labors [as God did from his on the seventh day], and their works do follow with them."—Clarke. Thus shall we learn and see the lives of our brethren in the churches from the Cross to the Crown; and so by the Church will the manifold wisdom of God be made known unto principalities and powers in the heavenly, according to the eternal purpose which he purposed in Christ Jesus our Lord. Eph. 3: 10, 11.

The Revelator has now been twice carried over the times of the gospel dispensation; (1) from the days of the apostolic planting of churches, to the second advent; and (2), from the Crucifixion to the Coronation; beholding the reproduced scenes of the church militant, in all its trials of faith, as it pressed its way onward through temptations, persecutions, trials, imprisonments, fire, blood, slaughter, and death; ever defeated, yet ever victorious in all its tribulations, until it was brought off more than conqueror over death, hell, and all its foes,—the church triumphant, crowned with glory, honor, immortality and eternal life in the kingdom of our Lord and his Christ, reviewing its own pathway of fire and blood, written with a pen of iron and leaded in the rock, ineffaceable forever; a record of battles fought and victories won; of deeds of valor and heroism in moral courage, that put to the blush and outshine the achievements of military heroes and worldly conquerors, as far as the brightness of the sun in its meridian splendor outshines the smallest star in the firmament; a history now opened throughout the future cycles of incoming ages, for all to come and look upon and read, and wonder and admire, until lost in bewildering amazement at the power that could thus prompt and sustain mortal man thus to do, to dare, to suffer, and to die; but that amazement turned to grateful praise when the same power should, as it ever will, awake the same vibrating response from the beholder's own breast, and that response the echoed and re-echoed sentiment that shall fill each and every heart, and tune every note of praise,—"The love of Jesus Christ constrained me."

Note. The question may arise, If the view herein presented be correct, how can it be said that we in our day are living under the sixth seal, or any one of the six seals? Some minds confound the events under or of the time of any given seal with the record kept of those events at the time of their transaction. Now what I want to get clearly before each and every mind is this: there is a true and complete record kept in heaven of the events in and composing an entire history of the church, from the birth of Christ to his second coming. This record is called a Book, and, we would say, in seven volumes. Each volume (called a seal) is made up of those seven divisions of time into which the entire history of the church is divided. But you nor I have ever seen what we would so much like to see,—the patience of the saints" in the past; nor did they see ours in the future of our day. And so God has them photographed, and when we rise from the dead, or are changed at Christ's coming, he will take this book, or record of events, and open or unseal the finished and closed-up volume, that our lives now hid in Christ may appear, be seen, made manifest, with him in his glory. For, says Paul (1 Thess. 1: 19), "What is our hope, or joy, or crown of rejoicing? are not even ye in the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ at his coming?"

And what an incentive should this truth be to each one of us, that our pure minds might be stirred to action, that we might vie with others in having a good report. When the Laodicean state of the church shall in its turn be unsealed, and our labor of love, and hope, and patient waiting for Christ, amid the scoffs and jeers of a mocking, Godless world, be set forth, shining as the sun, in the kingdom. To the beloved John was given the exclusive privilege of beholding this record of events beforehand, as the Spirit saw and revealed them then in the yet distant future.

THE RESURRECTION.

"But as touching the resurrection of the dead, . . . I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. God is not the God of the dead, but of the living."—Matt. 22: 31, 32.

This is the reply of the Savior to the Sadducees touching the resurrection of the dead. The Sadducees affirmed there was no resurrection (see verse 23), consequently no future life for man; and for the purpose of puzzling the Savior they asked him whose the woman shall be in the resurrection, for the seven had her? They did not ask whose wife she shall be in the intermediate state? but whose wife shall she be in the resurrection? The Lord answered them, "Ye do err, not knowing the scriptures, nor the power of God." "For in the resurrection they neither marry, nor are given in marriage, but are as the angels of God in heaven"; and continues in the language of the text—"God is not the God of the dead [who live no more, as you suppose], but of the living"; that is, of those who shall live again by a resurrection, which you Sadducees deny. This is, I believe, the true idea.

It is said by some that this portion of Scripture proves that Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, are now living in the spirit world; for God says he is not the God of the dead; therefore they, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, cannot be really dead. They are dead, or they are not. The Scriptures certainly express the idea definitely—that they are dead. If they are really dead, how can God be their God, who says, "I am not the God of the dead, but of the living"? Let us look at this.

1. God is not the God of the dead; but Abraham is dead; therefore God is not the God of Abraham. This is not the true position. Let us try another.

2. Living men are not the subjects of a resurrection; but Abraham, Isaac and Jacob are living; therefore they will not be raised from the dead. Are the "conscious" folks willing to admit this? Perhaps not. Let us try again.

3. God is not the God of the dead, who live no more; but he is the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, who are dead. Therefore, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob will live again. This expresses the truth, as all can see.

I do not embrace the doctrine of the Sadducees,—non-resurrection. I believe all men will appear at the judgment-seat of Christ. Let us all contend for true piety in the heart. "Behold the Judge standeth at the door!"

HINTS.

When it is said in Scripture that "they that loved the Lord spake often one to another," think you it was of the faults of their neighbors or brethren, and to misrepresent their words? Are you the the one "that is without sin," that you dare to pick out faults of your fellow men, and cast the stones (of slander) at those whom you have offended? Ought you not rather to say to them, "Go and sin no more," and rejoice in striving to turn them to a better way? Is seeking and telling news "having your conversation in heaven"?

You who profess to follow Christ, where is your example for your past conduct? for my Bible says, "if ye have not the spirit of Christ, ye are none of his." Is being "slanderers and busybodies" having his spirit? is this having the "charity that suffereth long, and is kind," without which you are "as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal"?

I read, If any turn a sinner from the error of his way, he shall save his soul from death and hide a multitude of sins. Do you expect to save your soul and hide your sins, by holding up to God and men, like the Pharisee in the temple, the omissions and commissions of your fellow creatures? They that turn many to righteousness, are to shine forever and ever. How many have been turned by your example, or your slanders; or do you expect to shine by bespattering with foul stains the garments of your brethren? Is this the way in which you mean to earn that blessed reward? Are these the works of righteousness, which will receive the commendation of "well done, good and faithful servant"? Is the course you pursue is an exemplification of the commandment, "love thy neighbor as thyself"? If for every idle word we shall have to give account, what will yours be, whose words are not only idle but injurious to others? Christ came to seek and save the lost. You as his professed follower ought to rejoice in striving to bring sinners into his fold, no matter how deep his transgressions. After you have pulled out the motes from the eyes of others, will it be time enough then to think about the beam in your own? Christ says, "If thou hast aught against thy brother, go and tell him between him and thee." Do you not rather whisper it to every one else, than the first and only one whom you should seek to tell it to? Yea, have you not rather pursued the course of Judas, than followed the command of Christ?

In Romans I find backbiters classed with murderers, adulterers, and those guilty of all kinds of wickedness. In Psalm 15: 3, I read that a dweller in Zion is one who backbiteth not with his tongue, nor doeth evil to his neighbor, nor taketh up a reproach against his neighbor. I have no doubt you have seen the passage which says, "If any seem to be religious and bridleth not his tongue, that man's religion is vain."

If a person can be a slanderer, and "busybody in other men's matters," a seeker and teller of news, and yet be a christian; or if any one is persuaded to turn from the error of his way, and lead a better life by this method of treating them, then have I read my Bible in vain; for I do not so find it written. There are some now-a-days, professedly followers of Christ, who would be quite horrified, like the Pharisees of old, had they seen Christ eat with publicans and sinners. They are so much afraid of soiling their robe of (self) righteousness, by coming in contact with them, that they can hardly sit in the same place of worship with those who do not come up to their standard of holiness; and these poor publicans must stand afar off, or sit in the lowest seat. Judging by the actions of these persons, they would rather have them go to perdition, than be polluted with their presence a short time; in fine, if any of them go to heaven, it will not be by any encouragement which they have received from such as these, or by their raising a finger to fulfill the command, "Bear ye one another's burdens." They have done what they consider their duty to them, in publishing to all around their real and supposed faults and short comings.

PRE-EXISTENCE OF CHRIST.

The statement that the Jews put Christ to death because he taught that he had existence before Abraham, is not warranted by the facts in the case. They themselves believed (except the Sadducees) in the pre-existence of souls, and so could not have put Christ to death for teaching a similar doctrine concerning himself. Josephus says of the Pharisees that they "believe that souls have an immortal vigor in them, and have power to revive again;" which is clearly applicable to their doctrine of the re-appearance of souls after death in human bodies again. So Christ was asked, concerning the blind man, "Who did sin, this man or his parents, that he was born blind?" And when he asked his disciples, "Whom do men say that I the Son of man am? they said, Some say that thou art John the Baptist; some Elias; others Jeremias, or one of the prophets."

This shows that a belief in the pre-existence of souls was prevalent among the Jews, and so they would not have put him to death for teaching the same concerning himself. They said to him on one occasion, "For a good work we stone thee not; but for blasphemy; and because that thou, being a man, makest thyself God." So when he said, "Before Abraham was I am," they must have understood him to have claimed some intimate union with the omniscient mind by which the past was ever present to his inspection. Understood in this way, the Jews would have regarded it as blasphemy, and so account for the past that they attempted to stone him for uttering those words; but not if they had understood him simply to assert his personal existence before Abraham's day.

The law authorized them to stone a person to death for blasphemy against God, but not for any opinion which a person might hold in regard to existence before birth. He had said to them, "Your father Abraham rejoiced to see my day; and he saw it, and was glad. Then said the Jews unto him, Thou art not yet fifty years old, and hast thou seen Abraham?" John 8: 56–57. The answer to this question must have corresponded to the question; and if the answer was in the affirmative, it would be saying in effect, that although he was not fifty years old, yet he had seen Abraham; and in the same manner that Abraham saw his day. Abraham was gifted with divine sight, and saw Christ's day as though actually present; while Christ could view the past as actually present to his inspection, through an intimate union with the omniscient mind. So the answer to the question was, "Verily, verily I say unto you, Before Abraham was I am." "I am" is in the present tense, and so cannot denote a past existence, and must therefore denote a present existence, taking cognizance of the past as though actually present.

This involves an intimate union between Christ and the mind of Omniscience. And on this hypothesis the fact that the Jews took stones to stone him for the utterance of those words, can be accounted for, but on none other. "Prove all things, and hold fast that which is good."

THE SUN-BRIGHT CLIME.

ALTERED BY L. K. LOMBARD.

Have you heard, have you heard, of that sun-bright clime,
Undimmed by tears and unhurt by crime,
Where age hath no power o'er the fadeless frame,
For they live forever, and they know no pain,—
Have you heard of that sun-bright clime?

A river of water gushes there,
'Mid flowers of beauty strangely fair,
And rich-plumed songsters flit through the bowers
Of the tree of life on its golden shores,
Over there in that sun-bright clime.

Soon the saints will roam those fields of light
In garments of beauty pure and white,
And they'll pluck life's fruit in the Eden bowers,
'Mid a thousand hues of fadeless flowers,
Over there in that sun-bright clime.

Not long shall we wait for that sinless clime,
For now are we nearing the end of time;
Soon the Lord will come in his glory bright,
And take us home where there'll be no night.
Will you go to that sun-bright clime?

LITTLE THINGS.

Are we one of Christ's little ones? Are we willing to do little errands for him? We very often hear some say, "If I could preach, or pray, or exhort, as well as this one or that one, I would be more willing to take up the cross; but my gift is so small I cannot do any good. Now this is wrong. If God has appointed us our work, he has given us something to do that no one else can do for us. We all have a place in the vineyard of the Lord, and we must do the work he intends us to do, if we would serve him acceptably. If our gift appears small and insignificant when compared with others, we should not be envious, but willing to do all that is required of us in the name of Jesus; not scorning the slightest word or deed, for none can tell what the result will be until eternity unfolds it unto us.

We must not neglect little things; there are daily duties to be performed, little crosses to be taken up; here a little deed of kindness, there a little word spoken in love; one of God's children suffering for the necessaries of life. A cup of cold water will not lose its reward. The poor widow gave but a very little when she cast her two mites into the treasury; but she did what she could. So we, if we can do but little, let it be done to the honor and glory of God, and it will not be forgotten in the day he makes up his jewels.

We must live humble, not striving to be great; but be good little children, willing to sit at the feet of Jesus, learning of him. "Except ye become as a little child, ye cannot enter the kingdom," says Jesus. I am so glad it is not to great and honored ones of earth that the promise is given, but to the little ones: and for our encouragement it is written "Fear not, little flock, it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." Then faint not, weary not in well doing; for we shall reap in due season, and receive the crown of life which the Lord has promised to them that love him.

"Work and despair not; give thy mite,
Nor care how small it be;
God is with all that serve the right,
The holy, true, and free!"

INQUIRIES.

My dear Bro. W. C. Thurman, although I never saw your face, or had the pleasure of an acquaintance with you, I am deeply interested in you, from a knowledge which I have gained of you, by reading your able work, "Sealed Book of Daniel Opened." For ten years I have believed the coming of Christ to be near, yet I never saw such beauty in the chronological dates and types of the Old Testament, as your work unfolds to my mind; and I am led to most heartily endorse your views in the main. So much so, that I am now giving my whole time to the work of proclaiming the glorious news to them that will hear. I feel like you, my Bro., that there can be no doubt of certainty of this being the year of release. And if I had no other reason for thinking so, the signs of the times clearly indicate that something of a startling character is just before us, and I should feel fully justified in crying aloud, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh." But I have no doubt you have the truth in the matter. I always believed that Bro. Wm. Miller's work was of God, to arouse the world, and to be the leader in America of that class that represent the church as going forth to meet the Bridegroom, in Matt. 25.

Now, Bro. Thurman, I wish you to do me the favor to answer two or three questions:

Question No. 1. On page 208 of your work, you say there are 1239 days in 42 months Jewish time. How do you reckon this to get this result?"

Answer to No. 1. On page 59 of the Book of Daniel Opened, we mentioned that the word month meant moon, and the Jews always reckoned by lunar time, as in 1 Sam. 20: 24, 27; hence, by 42 months we understand 42 moons, and by reference to an almanac it will be seen that 42 lunations are just 1239 days.

Question No. 2. "Where do you find any history showing that the book of Daniel began to be opened as soon as 1823, as under the symbol of the rainbow angel?"

Answer No. 2. In the Midnight Cry of 1843, Bro. Miller said he had for twenty years, both from the pulpit and by the press, been preaching the coming of Christ in 1843. Twenty from 1843 leaves 1823, for the date at which he commenced proclaiming the coming of Christ; and in the same year, 1823, Danby in France, and Irving in England, as I am told, commenced proclaiming the same. Thus, 1823 must date the end of the 1290 days, at which time that light began to shine, a "light shining more and more to the perfect day," and has continued to brighten until the book was open, and the wise understand. But since it is clear that the seal placed on the book was the error in the chronology, the book was not open until a correct chronology was established.

Question No. 3. How do you reconcile the Scripture—"For as a snare shall it come on all that dwell on the face of the whole earth," with the idea of the day and hour of Christ's coming being revealed?

Answer No. 3. Saith the Lord, "I have laid a snare for thee," "O Babylon," "and thou art also taken," for "thou wast not aware." Isa. 50: 24. But Daniel, in the same city, was not taken in this snare, for he "understood by books" (Dan. 9: 2) the time when the city was to be destroyed.

He who said, "I will look for him," escaped that which was "a snare to the inhabitants of Jerusalem." Isa. 8: 17, 14. "The snare is upon thee, O inhabitant of the earth" (Isa. 24: 17); but cannot be a snare to him who said, "Lo this is our God, we have waited for him" (Isa. 25: 9); for "surely he shall deliver thee from the snare" (Ps. 91: 3.) "Watch ye, therefore," the signs of the times, and unfoldings of God's sacred word of truth, "and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape" that snare which cometh upon "the whole earth" (Luke 21: 35, 36. "If, therefore, thou shalt not watch, I will come on thee as a thief, and thou shalt not know what hour I will come upon thee" (Rev. 3: 3.)

Now does not this text teach that if thou shalt watch, I will not come on thee as a thief, and thou shalt know what hour I will come? He to whom his Lord shall come "in an hour that he is not aware of," has his portion with hypocrites (Matt. 24; 50, 51) for rejecting the light which we have (1 Thess. 5: 4).

Question No. 4. What day and month of our time synchronizes with the tenth day of the Jewish seventh month?

Answer to No. 4. The 10th of the seventh month this year falls on Sunday, the 27th of September. On the first day of the week, "God said, let there be light, and there was light." Gen. 1: 3. And Barnabas, the fellow laborer with the apostle Paul, declares that on that same day the light of the new world begins. On the first day of the week, Christ our Lord rose from the dead; and on the first day of the week, we suppose that they who are his will rise, at least Daniel must, for we believe the 1335 days end on that day. But alas for us, the church is asleep, and love to slumber. Those who say, "My Lord delayeth his coming," "begin to smite." Matt. 24: 49. They will not even listen to what Jesus said. His express word can no longer be received, hence, we must conclude with Paul, "that not many wise men after the flesh" will believe. 1 Cor. 1: 26.

GROSS DARKNESS.

Bro. Grant:—While riding in the cars the other day, my attention was called to a conversation between two Presbyterian clergymen. They were contrasting the church in Paul's day with the church in this day. They seemed to think that the brethren, or churches, were not so much in earnest as they once were. I noticed that one of those men had a very nice, gold-headed cane, who soon left the train. I then asked the remaining gentleman if he was acquainted with the former.

"O yes," he says; "he is a Presbyterian clergyman, of ——, and a very fine man. The people think everything of him."

I told him I was sorry to see him carry that gold cane.

"O well," says he, "we think that God's ministers have a right to some of the nice things of this world as well as other people."

I remarked it looked to me a little too much like pride, and that we ought to shun the appearance of evil.

"Yes," says he, "that is so."

I then asked what he thought the prospects were of the world's being converted?

He thought they looked a little dark just now; God would take care of that. But it would all be converted. The earth would be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea, and that we should not say to our neighbor, Know ye the Lord, for all would know him from the least unto the greatest.

I asked if he thought Christ would come personally and literally the second time to this earth?

"O yes, most assuredly."

You think, then, that all this is to take place before he comes?

"O yes, most certainly."

I said I had heard it so preached, and remarked I had been reading the Bible considerably of late, and had found some things that did not seem to agree with what he had said.

"Well, what is it?"

Jesus said, in Matt. 13, that the tares and the wheat should both grow together until the time of harvest, and that the harvest was the end of this age, or world; and that the tares were the wicked, and would be burned; and again in the 24th of Matt. we read that it is to be as it was in the days of Noe—the world very wicked, etc., etc. If they were so very wicked at the flood, and only eight persons saved then, and it is to be like that when Jesus comes, I cannot see how they will all be converted, and yet so very wicked that they must be burned up. Now, if Jesus is coming in flaming fire, taking vengeance on the wicked, how is it possible that they will be converted?

"Well," says he, "my friend, I shall have to answer you in the language of one of old, that 'secret things belong to God.' We cannot comprehend it all."

The whistle blew, and the good old man left the train. O, how sad it is to think that so many are led along in such gross darkness, blind leaders of the blind. Think of it for a moment. Here we are, in all probability very near the judgment, and the world dead asleep. God's truth seems to them as idle tales; that is, to this class led by these blind guides. O, my Lord, help thy children who see the truth to be deeply in earnest.

I have just returned home from Millport, Chemung Co., N. Y. Left Bro. J. K. Bellows there. He is doing a good work, and is not of the kind that will rust out; he keeps bright, and runs easy. Dear brethren, wherever he may come among you, receive him as one of the Lord's choice ones.

THE WINTER BLOSSOMS.

Bro. Grant:—In the Crisis of March 4th, I notice a communication from Sr. B. Mathewson, referring to my communication published in the Crisis of Jan. 8th. In said communication, Sr. Mathewson makes me, and the correspondent in the Essex County Republican, state that said phenomenon appeared while the thermometer ranged from sixteen to ten degrees below zero, etc. Now I would respectfully refer Sr. M. and all others to my communication, and they will see that I do not so state. Those who are careful what they believe, should also be careful how they read. I would say further, that I have received quite a number of notes of inquiry in regard to said phenomenon, and many of those (if I am to judge by what they write) have read my article very thoughtlessly.

I am now looking up and arranging all the facts connected with this strange phenomenon, and when all are collected and arranged, I will send them to the Crisis. Your brother,

J. M. Weston.

P. S.—I would further say that if all who have read my communication view in mental vision said phenomenon in as full splendor as Sr. M. must have done to have written thus: "And plum and apple trees perfected with blossoms," etc., do also read me w[illegible]. I stated that trees put forth blosso[illegible] in full perfection and beauty, meaning that the blossoms were full and perfect. But I will now state that in all cases there were but few in number.

WOMAN IN ADVERSITY.

Women should be more trusted and confided in, as wives, mothers and sisters. They have a quick perception of right and wrong, and without always knowing why, read the present and future,—read characters, designs, and probabilities, where man sees no letter or sign. What else do we mean by the adage—"mother wit,"—save that woman has a quicker perception, and readier invention, than man?

How often, when man abandons the helm in despair, woman seizes it, and carries the ship home through the storm! Man often flies from home and family to avoid impending ruin. Woman seldom, if ever, forsakes home thus. Woman never evades mere temporal calamity by suicide or desertion. The proud banker rather than live to see his poverty gazetted, may blow out his brains, and leave his children to suffering and want. Loving woman would have counselled him to accept poverty, and live to cherish his family, and retrieve his fortune.

Woman should be counselled and confided in. It is the beauty and glory of her nature, that it instinctively grasps at, and brings to the truth and right. Reason, man's greatest faculty, takes time to hesitate before it decides; but woman's instinct never hesitates, and is scarcely ever wrong, where it has an even chance with reason.

Woman feels where man thinks, acts where he deliberates, hopes where he despairs, and triumphs where he falls.—Home Guardian.

LETTER WRITING.

As we journey through this vale of tears, how encouraging it is to hear from our dear brethren and sisters by the way of private correspondence, or letter-writing. Much good is done in this way. Many who are almost discouraged are cheered up by a good faithful letter from a dear christian friend. We who are alone, far from our brethren, so situated that for months we do not have the privilege of seeing the face of one who loves the "blessed hope,"—we appreciate the letters of friends, and prize them very highly.

Do not say that we are strangers. If you believe that we belong to Christ, write to us freely, just as freely as though you had seen us many times. And not to us only, but to others of the household. Let us in this way cultivate each other's acquaintance. We have but a little while longer to wait for the time when we shall see as we are seen and know as we are known; but a little while, and then we shall see Him whom having not seen we love.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, March 25, 1868.

☞ Take Notice!

All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

☞ Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank-checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the Business Agent, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ MONEY ORDERS.

Our correspondents should remember that if they send money-orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given.

Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too.

Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us YOUR NAME AND POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

☞ ATTENTION! ATTENTION!!

Our subscribers in Massachusetts, Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Ohio, will find their credit of money received for the Crisis on the strip pasted on their paper, which shows the date to which their subscription pays, instead of the No., as formerly acknowledged. Others will be sent likewise as fast as we get each State so arranged. So you can look at the date on your paper, and see if it is changed after sending us money.

COMING EVENTS.

We are approaching a period of thrilling interest to the student of prophecy, who loves the coming of Jesus. We must be very near the end of the present dispensation. It is an hour of awful expectation to the world generally. Statesmen, kings and emperors are deeply impressed that some momentous event is at hand. The impression they cannot shake off; but as they do not study the prophetic Scriptures, they are ignorant as to the nature of the event, and are no better prepared than were the antediluvians for the flood. They are so absorbed with passing events, they find no time to attend to the study of the Scriptures, neither do they feel any interest in them; and yet the people wonder why the great men do not see the signs of the times, and look for the coming of Christ, provided he is coming soon. How like the days of Noah and Lot are these in which we live. Wickedness knows no bounds; and yet the spirits say there is no such thing as sin. Had we been told fifty years ago that in 1868 thousands and thousands of intelligent men and women would be found who would teach that there is no such thing as sin in the world, we should have said the individual was insane who advanced such an absurd idea; but we have lived to see it accomplished. The spirits and Spiritualists teach that every living thing is a God; that God is good; therefore all are good.

MECHANIC'S FALLS.

Our meetings at Mechanic's Falls, Me., were of special interest. They were held in the Congregational meeting-house, which was well filled. The Spirit of the Lord was with us, and several decided to be christians. Brn. and Srs. came from Bryant's Pond, N. Norway, Casco, Poland, and other places, to assist in the worship of the God of our fathers. We had good singing, praying, and exhorting, and all christians felt it was good to be there. Brn. T. Jordan, J. Libby, and J. Whitman were with us, and ready to work in the vineyard of the Lord. Sabbath morning we had a blessed love-feast, when over eighty testimonies were given in forty-eight minutes. It was a feast indeed. In the evening about the same number gathered about the table of the Lord to commemorate his death and sufferings. Several from other churches saw the truth, and some confessed it publicly, and decided to take it as their portion, and bear the reproach of those who do not yet see the light. At the close of the last meeting some decided to follow Jesus as their Savior.

DISCUSSION WITH MOSES HULL.

Our discussion at Milford, N. H., with Moses Hall, is progressing finely. This is a strong-hold of Spiritualism. We found but one family to sympathize with our faith. We have now (March 19th) spent two evenings in the discussion, and are to spend two more. We feel most sensibly that the Lord is on our side, and that he is our strength, sun, and shield. Thank his name, his armor provided for his children is a perfect shield. He never leaves those who trust in him to battle alone. In his name we can conquer all our foes.

Mr. Hull is a noted champion for Spiritualism, and is zealously engaged in spreading its doctrines; teaching that every living thing is a God; that there is no such thing as absolute evil, or sin; that Jesus was never raised from the dead, and that he is never coming again personally. While such doctrines are being spread through the world, the professed church of Christ and her ministers seem to be as careless of their danger as a blind man on the brink of a terrible precipice. O what can be done to arouse the people to a sense of the perils of these times? It is no time for dull, careless efforts, but for the most earnest labors for the salvation of the people. Let those who see the dangers cry aloud and spare not.

QUEBEC.

We hear good news from Quebec since we left. Bro. Wm. Lee writes:—

"I am happy to inform you that the church has been highly benefited by your last visit. We have glorious meetings. The Spirit of the Lord is with us, and we are looking for the return of the King."

The enemy of all righteousness had made a terrible effort to ruin the church in Quebec just before our last visit. When referring to it, Bro. Lee says:—"I verily believe we had almost grieved away the Spirit." The deceiver had been working in the form of an angel of light; but the good Lord helped to expose his devices. Satan does not come out now in open attack, as in former years, but in a pleasing manner, or with some portion of scripture perverted, and by this means make an effort to cause a division among the children of the Lord, and thus bring them to ruin; for no church can prosper in the Lord, any longer than they love one another.

There are four Brn. in the church at Quebec, who take turns in talking to the rest on the Lord's day. Thus they keep up their meetings; while in other churches, destitute of preachers, they think they cannot hold a meeting; and yet have just as much talent as those who take the lead in Quebec. We were much pleased with the spirit of labor manifested by these brethren. They seem willing to do what they can for Jesus.

DR. CUMMING.

Some weeks since we saw a statement in a paper concerning Dr. Cumming, of London, who has been preaching for several years that the Lord would come about this time, that he had put off the event for "a million of years." We were fully satisfied there was no truth in the statement. The London Telegraph took occasion to report a portion of one of Dr. Cumming's lectures, and to speak rather lightly of it, which caused the Dr. to address the following letter to the Telegraph, which appeared in its columns Feb. 4th:—

To the Editor of the Daily Telegraph:

SIR,—I have read your observations on a condensed report of a lecture of mine delivered in St Andrew's Scotch Church, Mile-end. Permit me to observe very briefly,—

1. That I never in my life professed or attempted to prophesy. All I have ventured to do is to explain and unfold inspired prophecies in the word of God.

2. You refer to repeated prophecies of mine repeatedly contradicted by facts. I shall feel much obliged if you will specify one.

3. You indicate an opinion that I have recalled or changed my interpretations of prophecy. Will you be kind enough to specify when and where?

It is not to be supposed that you have time to spare for the perusal of works on this subject. But, if you have a few hours at your disposal, you will find that a work which Messrs. Nisbet have just published (of which my lecture was a resume) entitled What will these Things be? or, the Signs of the Last Times, is in perfect harmony with what I uttered twenty years ago, when my first book on prophecy appeared. One-fourth part of the Bible consists of prophecies relating to futurity. If God did not mean them to be read, why are they written? And if meant to be read, is it to be supposed they are unintelligible? It is very easy to make merry at the most solemn themes without intending to be profane. But I must doubt that you have had sufficient spare time for such studies to enable you to pronounce an impartial judgment.

On these objects I have invariably spoken with the utmost reticence and reserve; and now, after twenty years' study and writing on this subject, I find nothing to recall or retract. I believe, as I stated twenty years ago, that 'proximately 1867 winds up the 'times of the Gentiles.' Elliot states 1865; others say 1868—these being inferences from the great chronologies of prophecy. I gather from inspired prophecy that we are plunging into times of unprecedented severity and trouble, and that it is time for every man, while doing his duty to his country, his family, and society at large, to have his loins girt and his lamp burning, 'for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh.' I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

JOHN CUMMING."

LONG PRAYERS.

Long prayers, long exhortations, long sermons and hymns, are well calculated to dry up devotional feelings and cause a church to sink into a cold, sleepy condition, where they lose the joys of their hope, get into darkness, and become stumbling blocks in the way of sinners, rather than lively examples of the christian religion, recommending it to all around. After one gets into the habit of talking or praying long, or preaching long sermons, it seems very difficult to break up the practice.

The following from The Congregationalist illustrates the point:—

"A New England pastor, not long since, made a serious and earnest address on this subject among others, to his church at their annual meeting. He stated that at a social meeting, one brother then present had prayed twenty-five minutes by the clock. After the sermon that brother waited to speak with his minister. The heart of the pastor sank within him. He feared he had greatly offended the good man. 'I am glad you spoke so plainly about long prayers,' said the brother. It seems that he is not offended, thought the minister, but I am afraid he is greatly grieved. 'The fact is,' continued the brother, 'some of the brethren have tried me dreadfully in this matter, and I think it was high time you spoke to them as you did.'"

THE NEW SECRET SOCIETY.

The Spiritualists are forming themselves into a secret society, in order to carry out their plans more successfully. This was commenced at their last national convention in Cleveland, O., last September.

At the semi-annual convention of Spiritualists in Buffalo, N. Y., Mr. A. B. Whitney, an inspirational speaker, of considerable note, thought it would be best to form a secret society similar to the Order of Jesuits, for the purpose of carrying out the plans of the spirit world.

The following resolution was also adopted:

"Resolved, That to meet successfully, and baffle the errors, that have and are now being taught by the adherents of what is denominated the "Orthodox Religion," we should use our best energies to carry the gospel of Spiritualism to the consciences of every community."

But few are aware of the power and influence of Spiritualism in the world at the present time. Their sentiments are spreading in all directions; and wherever they are received christianity is set aside. The two systems are directly opposed to each other. We know whereof we affirm. Spiritualism is the most dangerous of all the delusions of these last days.

Mr. J. G. Fish, formerly a Baptist minister, now a noted defender of Spiritualism, lectured in the Music Hall, Boston, Sabbath, Feb. 23d, when he said, as reported in the Banner of Light, "Man held that he should see God by-and-by. Where? Only in his unfolded self—this was the only God he should ever know. Spiritualism did not come to unfold the mysteries of God to man, but to unfold the mysteries of himself."

POPULAR SINGING.

We think the popular singing in the fashionable churches is very far removed from the spirit of praise and devotion that is pleasing to the Lord. It is surprising that men and women professing godliness can put up with such solemn mockery. Instead of praising the Lord themselves, they hire some unconverted persons to do it for them. Why not go another step, and hire some wicked men to do their praying, because they can use better language than the members of the church. In many churches those who do the singing on the the Sabbath, sing the rest of the week in the opera and indulge in the most abominable wickedness.

The following from one of our exchanges, will give some idea of a fashionable choir.

"The cock-loft, ten feet behind and ten feet above the worshipers; then the fourteen sorts of tune-books; then the balustrade to hide the praisers themselves, who come tripping to their places with exuberant satisfaction and demonstrative delight; and their salutations and greetings, which in any other part of the church would be considered intolerably irreverent (therefore the choir-loft is not recognized as a part of the church, or its inhabitants a part of its worshipers;) then the titter—a disease which is as incurable in choirs as it is inseparable from them; then solemn singing, with a background of merry smiles, hilarious nudging, and characteristic (not to say choiristic) winks; then a grand reconnoitering of tune-books accompanied with appropriate whispers, during the prayer or the reading of the Bible; then a literary entertainment, or an exchange of penciled notes on all the great questions that interest the human mind—except religion; then the transformation of the choir-loft into a sleeping car, of which the chorister is the conductor, who wakes up his passengers when it is time to go to praising again—such is a fashionable choir."

THE BOSTON CONFERENCE.

The friends in New Hampshire, on the line of the Concord R. R., who purpose to attend the meeting next week, will please take notice that, in order to obtain the advantage of the reduction of fare, they will please come on the Nashua and Lowell Road,—not over the Boston and Maine R. R. Those who come on the N. and L. Road can have a free return pass, as far as Nashua. *

THE NEW CHART.

To any who have purchased the new Prophetic Chart, or who may hereafter purchase it, who may not possess the "Sealed Book of Daniel Opened," or Sheldon's work, entitled "Adventism; What is it?" we will furnish them without charge. These works fully explain the Chart, and are important to lecturers and others.

Those who have received the Chart from the Crisis office, Boston, Mass., may call there for these books; and those who have received the Chart at the office of the Voice of the West, may call upon J. V. Himes, Buchanan, Mich.

We wish to give every facility to the church to understand the times and seasons. If the students of prophecy of this age are right in their calculation, then this is the jubilee year. And if it rest on the type of the jubilee, then the tenth day of the seventh month Jewish time, this year, brings redemption.

We have given all the light we have on this subject. We make no pretension to perfection in knowledge. We do not say we have all the light on this subject; but feel it our duty to give all we have, and spread it to the widest extent. We look for deliverance this year. Let all examine and judge for themselves. JOSHUA V. HIMES.

SPRINGFIELD NATIONAL ADVENT CAMP-GROUND.

The Committee have published a lithographed plan of our new camp-ground, which gives a good representation of the shape of the ground, the circle for the seats, the lots for the tents, which are all numbered, the locations of the various avenues, buildings, etc., etc. The plan will be a great convenience for all who attend the campmeeting, and be interesting to those who do not.

Price, postpaid, 20 cents per copy. For sale at this office. *

NEW TRACT.

"THAT MAN OF SIN." By Eld. O. R. Fassett

The above is the title of a new tract just published by the W. A. C. P. Association, to which is added "The Only Hope," and "The True and Only Hope of the Church." An interesting and valuable tract. Price 5 cents single, postage 2 cents; 50 cents per dozen, postage 6 cents. *

200 STORIES FOR CHILDREN.—J. V. Himes says:—"There is no book of the kind that will be of so much value to our children as this. Parents could not make a better present to their sons and daughters; and Sabbath school superintendents and teachers will find it a valuable book for the libraries of their schools." Price—single copies, 80c.; postage, 12 cents.

DEDICATION SERVICE.

Our Advent brethren in Stark, Maine, who have found it a difficult task in days past to be recognized as christians by other sects in their town, have recently secured a more permanent position for usefulness by aiding in the erection of a "Union Meeting-House," with three other sects, Methodists, F. W. Baptists, and Baptists.

Feb. 13th was appointed for the dedicatory services, in which each denomination was to take part. We were present and assisted in the services, which were very harmonious and interesting. They have a beautiful house, which was filled to its utmost capacity on the occasion. We remained, and preached five discourses after the dedication, to good and attentive audiences, composed of all classes. The Advent brethren own one fourth of the house, and intend to have preaching their share of the time. May the Lord bless their efforts for the salvation of men.

THE MEMPHIS MISSION.

Feb. 24th, 1868. The weather yesterday was delightful. Could scarcely have had a better time for the baptism, which came off about 3 P. M. There were many white people among the spectators, both on the shore and in the boats that were in attendance. Conspicuous among the boats was a new, neat little steamer, which came up the river apparently for the sole purpose of witnessing the ceremony. Anchoring at a respectful distance, it remained until after the baptism, when it turned and left the scene as quietly as it came. I think all will unite with me in saying that the wings of the Almighty seemed to overshadow the place, and that his Spirit rested down with power upon many present. On the part of some, there seemed a feeling too deep for utterance. This was more particularly the case with the candidates, who seemed "filled with the Spirit."

In the evening the right hand of fellowship was given to the newly baptized by the elders and deacons, but owing to the crowded state of the house, the private members did not have that privilege; and then Bro. Reed gave us one of his thoroughly practical sermons, illustrative of the subject of faith. The press of people allowed no opportunity to call convicted sinners forward for prayers, but when requested to show their desire for salvation by standing up, it was estimated about forty arose.

In this connection I would say, it is impossible for our friends in the North to realize the importance, the necessity even, of a suitable house for worship and schools. To do this, they need to come with us when our Band of Hope and Sabbath School, consisting of about a hundred and sixty members, some of them fully grown, are packed into two rooms of about twelve or fourteen feet square; or when the same rooms are just as fully packed with a congregation consisting chiefly of women, and where the speaker has scarcely room to stand, much less to kneel. The men, as a general thing, either from an unwillingness to endure the discomfort, or from deference to the female part of the congregation, stay out of doors, or remain at home. In warm weather, when windows can be taken out and doors removed, the case is a little more tolerable; but, as you must see, it is bad enough under the most favorable aspect.

I do believe the Lord is on our side, and that having brought us through many toils and dangers, he will keep us safely to the end. But it would be a great satisfaction to us, in the midst of our trials and perplexities, to know that our dear brothers and sisters, who are doing and praying much for our welfare, appreciate the difficulties under which we labor in disseminating these great truths. But whether others appreciate our work, or not, we know on whom we have believed, and that He will keep that we have committed to his charge. Yours in the love of Christ,

F. C. NORTHRUP.

For the World's Crisis.

NORTH FAIRFIELD, OHIO.

By request of the brethren in the above place, I left home Feb. 1st, to hold meetings over the following Sabbath. We had good meetings. One arose for prayers Tuesday night, and one or more almost every day or evening, until over twenty had left the "city of destruction" for the kingdom of God. Our devoted Bro. Jefferson, of Wakeman, Erie Co., O., assisted in preaching the word, being with me over the first Sabbath, until our good Bro. and Sr. McKinstry came from Norwalk. They could remain only a few days beyond the second Sabbath, but it was cheering to us, and especially to Sr. McKinstry, to learn that Bro. Marshall Treadwell's aged father started for the kingdom only a few days later, and attributed his awakening to Sr. McKinstry's earnest exhortation during one of our many good conference meetings. One whole family were converted to God,—Bro. and Sr. Harvey arising for prayers at the morning meeting, their daughter in the evening, and their two sons the next evening. The work of the Spirit was thorough. Eleven were baptized before the third Sabbath, when twelve united with the church. There seemed to be no disposition to unite with other churches, and members of other denominations took part in our meeting. Though we endeavored to be faithful in proclaiming the truths of the Bible, we did not attempt to force any one to embrace an unpopular truth, but took the position that it was the duty of all christians to manifest a kind spirit, be willing to investigate and live out and up to the light of truth as fast as they see it.

The meetings continued over three Sabbaths, and closed the following Thursday. Sinners continued to arise for prayers till last evening meeting, and one arose at our gathering Thursday morning preparatory to repairing to the water to administer the ordinance of baptism. There was a small stream near [illegible] an appointment for the first Sabbath in each month, when others will go forward in baptism, and at the next meeting a number will unite with the church.

During the meetings several subscribers were obtained for our papers, and Sr. McKinstry sold quite a number of Bro. I. C. Wellcome's "Plan of Redemption." I purchased three copies to lend, and induced all the friends I could to purchase this valuable work. It is well calculated for general circulation, as the great cardinal doctrines of our faith are ably discussed in a kind, christian spirit. O that the brethren would circulate suitable books, and do all they can to lead more to the knowledge of the glorious gospel truths that we love and prize so dearly.

I have so arranged my business that I hope to be in the vineyard of my Lord most of the time until he comes. I go without money or price, as the Lord has thus far supplied me from my business, but I expect brethren where I labor will be liberal in the cause to others, to the poor, and to secure good places in which to have meetings, and have the appointments well circulated; as the success of a meeting depends greatly upon these little things. BRO. LOOMISE TO BRO. THURMAN.

BRO. THURMAN:—I have received of Bro. Hale what he calls a "Review of the Sealed Book Opened." I have answered him, as he directed the work to me. I find very little in his pamphlet worth answering. But one thing I wish you to explain; that is, on page 127 of your book, you make 2362 days 10 hours, 44 minutes, 2 seconds of the time, times and half. Should not the fraction be accounted for? In that case, the six and half times would make 2377 years nearly. I see Bro. Hale makes a great ado about that. Will you be so good as to explain the matter? E. S. LOOMISE.

Perry's Mills, N. Y.

ANSWER.

Dear Bro.,—You ask, "should not the fractions be accounted for"? To which I answer, no; for it is impossible in reckoning by lunar time to make any allowance for a lunation which falls short of a day, though that fraction may be as much as twenty-three hours; for, in reckoning by lunar time, they commence the month with the appearing o the new moon, regardless of fractions. But how you make the fractions amount to fifteen years I cannot see; for I make them but five months, eleven days, and twelve minutes, which gives 2362 years, 5 months, 11 days, and would thus end on the fifth day of the seventh month, 1875. But omitting fractions, the 2362 years end on the 24th day of the first month, 1875, which reaching nine days beyond the end of the 2300 days, must carry us to the end of the wonders seen in the vision; and since the question was as to "How long shall it be to the end of these wonders"? the times and a half must reach at least as far as the end. Therefore, I conclude that it is correct as it stands. But if you prefer counting the fractions, the times and a half will give you the fifth of the seventh month, 1875.

Your Bro. in Christ, wishing to be remembered at a throne of grace, for heavy are the afflictions of the tried ones.

WILLIAM C. THURMAN.

P. S. I mentioned that I could not see how you made the fractions amount to fifteen years; but since answering your inquiries, I have read again the review of Elder Hale, and notice on page 37 he claims to have discovered "a mistake of fourteen years." I conclude that you may have found it there. Though he has made this discrepancy by the grossest misrepresentation of my exposition of the times and a half, we must try and have charity enough not to attribute it to a wilful design; for on page 39 he tries to make that appear false which every man that has a knowledge of lunar time knows to be strictly correct. THE DORCAS MISSION.

Receipts to March 15th: Sr. L. T. Cunningham, $2.00; Annie, 25 cts., and Alice, 10 cts.; M. S. Smith, $3.00; Susie, $1.00, and Charlie 25 cts.; Sr. Dow, 50 cts.; Sr. Anna Smith, $2.00; a brother whom I met at the Star of Hope Mission, $3.00; Bro. B. Young, $5.00; various friends in Bristol, Conn., $8.80; through Eld. Himes $2.00, from Mrs. J. Keyes; C. C. Smith, $2.00; the church in Thomaston, Conn., $10.00; O. N. Brooks, Faulkner's Island Light, $1.00, and a small box of choice "God bless you's," and from his daughter Mannie a gold dollar.

All these kind friends have our warmest gratitude for their kindness unto us. Sickness at the Home has prevented my answering the letters of love and sympathy which have accompanied these donations. Six of our children have the measles, Sr. Helginson is sick, and at present we have no matron. Measles and typhoid fever are quite prevalent in this section. Through the blessing of the Lord my health is good, and my heart is still beating for Zion's King. Have never felt more interest in the salvation of sinners than since this year came in. No year has seemed so solemn to my mind as this. The great day of wrath is impending. Pray for your aff. Bro. in Christ, F. H. BURBANK.

ROUND POND CONFERENCE.

This meeting was one of interest. I think it was the best we have had at Round Pond. A good number were present, and the Spirit of God was with us. Preaching and exhortations from warm hearts, filled with the love of God, made an impression on the hearers that will be lasting. Salvation was the great theme of the meeting. It commenced and closed with a good spirit, and we went to our homes rejoicing.

Ministers present: N. F. Nason, J. Carr, N. G. Reed, J. Somes, and S. K. Partridge. At the business meeting, the June Conference was changed from Jefferson to South Hope, to meet June 11th, and hold over Sunday. A committee of eight was chosen to make arrangements for preaching in destitute places, and to look after the wants of the church, and make arrangement for conference. [illegible]

For the World's Crisis.

WHO WILL HELP SPREAD THE TRUTH?

To the Readers of the Crisis:

We have now in the hands of the printer, waiting further orders, a MS. treating on the Millennium. It consists of a review of the popular doctrine of a spiritual reign of Christ for a thousand years prior to his second coming, with a consideration of the texts quoted in its support. This was given in two No.'s of the "Crisis." We then showed from the several chains of prophetic history, given by Daniel and John, that no period of a thousand years' peace and universal reign of righteousness can be introduced prior to the advent of Jesus Christ. The very clear and convincing exposition of Dr. Newtown on the Millennium, embracing quotations from the Fathers, is given; then that of the illustrious Mede. About fifteen other eminent divines, whose words have shaken the world, are added; among whom are Luther, Bunyan, Gill, the Wesleys, and Fletcher. Those testimonies respecting the reign of Christ on earth, and the proximity of his advent, are very express.

The origin of the modern theory of the Millennium, as given by eminent authors, with a sketch of Dr. Whitby and his "NEW HYPOTHESIS," most clearly exhibit the contrast between the doctrine which comes to us "clothed with the garb of antiquity, and bearing the sanction of sainted names and eminent divines" of the olden time; and that which wears the modern dress, and whose strongest claim upon our respect is that, being "new," it is untarnished by the lapse of ages, and of modern style, is far more attractive than the old-fashioned "garb."

Our object in preparing this work was two-fold: 1st. To place within the reach of the general readers, who cannot avail themselves of the large volumes which treat upon this subject, a compendium of all that is really necessary to know respecting it.

2nd. Our special reason was to have a small work adapted to give light on this subject to those who either have no definite ideas concerning it, or believe (they hardly know why) that the world must be converted by the gospel. We are acquainted with hundreds of this class. We want to put this work in their homes. Who will help us do it? Three Editors have promptly subscribed $5.00 each. We want $25.00 more. Who will help raise it? As we are not able to have the work stereotyped, we wish to have 2000 copies struck off. This we cannot do, unless we obtain sufficient subscriptions to warrant it. The work will be issued in a neatly covered pamphlet, probably containing 70 or more pp. Single copy 15 cts.

To all who will send in orders within a week, we will send four copies to one address for 50 cts.; ten copies for $1.00. This, you see, affords good pay for those who purchase to sell again. One edition will be issued within two weeks. We make this appeal that you may help us publish another thousand; as it is not stereotyped, the type must be thrown into pi as soon as the printing required is done. An extra thousand can be issued at half the cost of the first. Will you not order a copy sent to some minister, or friend, who cherishes the fallacious hope of the world's conversion? Write plainly your name, town, and State. Address M. D. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me.

Correspondence.

From Bro. D. Eastman.

Dear Brn. and Sisters:—My soul says, Praise the Lord for his goodness unto me. Since I started from New Hampshire, I have had some blessed seasons. I have seen souls converted in almost every place where we held meetings. In some places it seemed like Elymas trying to turn away the deputy from the faith, but the Lord worked, and none could hinder. O, how good the Lord is. When his children pray to him, he will hear and answer prayer. When in Peterboro, we met with a peculiar class of people. Bro. Moore and myself were invited into their meeting to speak to them on what we call Saturday, supposing that if there was a test-point, it would be holiness of heart. But alas, one John, who seemed to be contentious about his forms, was rather dissatisfied, and refused to let his voice be heard in the congregation, as usual. My Bro. Moore was intending to preach, but the fog became so thick, we deemed it prudent to hold our peace, and did so. Then he who seemed to be somewhat, whatsoever he were, it maketh no matter to me, for God accepteth no man's person, for they who seemed to be somewhat in conference added nothing to us. We truly felt that we were perfectly shielded from all that man could do. O how John preached to those who do not keep all of the commandments. We opened not our mouth in answer, but let the shot and shell fly thick and fast. The afternoon was occupied by telling Mrs. White's visions, etc., etc. I hope never to fall into such a place again, unless it be the special will of God. Yet there were a few who loved the Lord, and such treated us very kindly.

We then went to West Peterboro, and held meetings. The Lord was with us, and brought some from the snares of Satan, and planted their feet on the rock. I thank the Lord he has planted a little Church in West Peterboro. We left them rejoicing in the blessed hope, and looking for the soon coming of the Son of Man.

We then went to Keene, N. H., and preached several times, and had a very good time. We felt that it was good to be there. We stopped with Bro. Walker, whose whole heart is in the cause. Bro. Darling and others are doing much for the advancement of God's truth in Keene. We left for Vernon, and found the people had been praying for the Lord to send some one to that place. I preached four nights in the week, and found that God was blessing the people. Many, who were discouraged, renewed their covenant with the Lord, and some started anew for the kingdom. Bro. Cook preached Sunday, Feb. 2nd, and we had a blessed season. It did my soul good to see the young converts speak so boldly for Christ. Some thirty or more exhortations were given after preaching, which I trust, will long be remembered by all. I then took my leave of the brethren and rode some seven or eight miles to Northfield, Mass., [illegible] any such thing as being a Christian. It is an entirely new place. I don't expect much here, for there has been too much preaching without the practice. I shall soon go from here, mostly into new fields. I hope to have the prayers of the Lord's children, for my success in the gospel; also that the Lord would remember my two little motherless children, as they are separated from each other, also from me. O, how my heart cries out, come Lord Jesus, and come quickly. Your Bro., striving for the kingdom. D. EASTMAN.

From Sr. Mary E. Streeter.

Dear brethren and sisters in the Lord, and in the blessed hope of soon seeing Jesus, Greeting:—My heart is filled with praise to God as I read the dear Crisis from week to week. It cheers me to hear from those of like precious faith, and I thought perhaps some of you would like to hear from me. My heart is still fixed, trusting in Jesus. We are striving to be just what the Lord would have us to be; willing to become anything or nothing for Him who has done so much for us. The Crisis, and the other papers (religious ones), are nearly all the preaching that we have at home, or in this place. The people here are seemingly bent upon their own ruin. They will not listen to the voice of warning, but are fast hastening to destruction. My heart is grieved to see them care so little for their soul's salvation; but if they will not heed the warning, they must take up with the awful fate that awaits them at the end of the journey, which is just upon us.

I am striving to do all I can to have people saved. I do feel deeply for those out of the ark of safety. The storm is coming, but they heed it not. O ye watchmen upon the walls of Zion, cry aloud and spare not. As my dear companion leaves his home and goes out into a cold world to try to win a bride for our dear Lord, I do not cease to pray for him, that success may attend his labors. It is hard to be separated from those we hold dear as life itself, but we know it is almost morning, when the gathering-time will come, and we will no more be separated. Then farewell tears will be unknown. May God hasten that better day.

While I tarry at home, watching around the sick bed of my dear, suffering sister, will you not, dear ones, pray for us, that we may do those things that are pleasing in the sight of the Lord? Will you not also pray that God may restore me to health, that I may, if it be his will, tarry here in this world to care for my dear sick sister—Luthera B. Weaver,—who suffers far beyond what words can express, yet without a murmur? Yes, do pray God to spare me to her, and to my little family; for now in these last days children need a mother's prayers, and a mother's counsel, and her guidance to lead them in the narrow way that leads to life and endless glory.

O, this world looks cold and desolate to me. I long for the new creation to begin, when the scattered ones will be gathered to part no more. My prayer is, Lord, hasten the time. May the Lord bless you all, and direct your steps. Love to all the saints.

No. Dana, Mass. MARY E. STREETER.

From Sr. S. D. Ackerman.

DEAR CRISIS:—How I love it. And why shouldn't I? It is all the preacher I have, and what is more, it was the instrument in the hands of God, with your tracts, of bringing me out of the mists of tradition, and leading me into the pure light of gospel truth. The Lord bless you, dear brother, in the arduous duties devolving upon you, and give you heavenly wisdom, that in all things God may be glorified, and sinners saved. I do love this pure religion which enables me to feel day by day the witness of the Spirit in my heart, that Jesus is mine, and I am his; and fills my soul with sweet heavenly peace as I anticipate the coming of the Lord, and feel that it is near; even at the door.

For a few months past, death has been snatching away my loved ones. But while I have seen them hid from my sight in the narrow grave, there to rest till Jesus comes, my heart has been comforted with the sure promise in the blessed word that, "them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him." Yes, I know my loved ones shall live again; for Jesus has said it; blessed be his dear name. The Lord help me to watch and pray, that when he comes, I may be ready to meet him with all the dear ones, to rest in that better land, where "we'll meet to part no more." Your sister striving to overcome by the blood of the Lamb, and by the word of her testimony. MRS. S. D. ACKERMAN.

Windham, N. H., March 6, 1868.

From Bro. J. K. Bellows.

BRO. GRANT:—After an absence of four months and a half, in Western New York and Canada, I am once more home. I found my family well and glad to see me. Two of my children have been converted and baptised since I left home. The Lord has given me four of my children to go with me. Praise his holy name.

The cause in Western New York is suffering for want of laborers. I held meetings at ten different places. Some came out and resolved to be christians; others were deeply convicted, and I hope will yield before it is too late. I verily believe probation will close this year, and I am striving to show by the signs and events that we are on the very verge of the judgment.

I preached twice yesterday in our new place, corner of Allen and Grand Sts. They have excellent meetings. Ten or twelve have come out and embraced the truth, and are firm. Brn. Hollister, Campbell, and Gibbs, are very much engaged in the good work, and a number are looking at the truth, and a great interest is manifest. Pray for them.

J. K. BELLOWS.

New York City, Mar. 9th, 1868.

From Bro. J. B. Walker.

BRO. GRANT:—As you wished me to write you and let you know how we prosper in the Lord, I can say that we are prospering as well as we deserve certainly. Since you left here there have been some eight or nine forward for prayers, and we trust that some five or six have been made to yield to God's goodness, and have broken away from their sins, and are now rejoicing in hope of everlasting life. Thank the good Lord. Bro. Carpenter has been with us the last two Sabbaths, and Bro. A. M. Higgins is to be here the next two.

Yours in love, hoping for deliverance when Jesus comes, J. B. WALKER.

Obituaries.

MINOR. Died in Hallowell, Me., March 6th, 1868, of lung fever, after an illness of ten days, Bro. Dwight Minor, aged sixty-four years.

Bro. M. has for many years been a believer in Christ and in the message of his coming soon to judgment. He has endeavored to live a christian life, and hoped for eternal life when Jesus shall come. Many of our brethren will remember his christian charities, and associations. In former days, his house was open for meetings and a home for pilgrims. Many were the social meetings we enjoyed with his former family. He has buried three christian companions, and was living with a fourth wife.

When laid upon a death-bed, and the fever raging violently, he requested a friend to telegraph me to come to him. I did so. He was greatly rejoiced to see me, and requested me to remain until his death. His sufferings were great, but he rejoiced in Christ, and said he should sleep but a little while, before Jesus would come and raise him up to live forever. He wished to talk much with me and to do some business, but was too low to say much at a time. I promised to remain and care for him, but, was not permitted to remain in his room. I obtained two interviews after, for a few moments, and prayed with him, and when he was actually dying, I was permitted free access to see him die. He sleeps in Jesus to awake to immortality when Jesus comes.

Three children, who were not notified of a father's illness until his death, will mourn their loss of an affectionate father. May the Lord lead them to prepare to dwell with Jesus, and their father in the coming kingdom of God. I. C. WELLCOME.

SMITH. Died in Stark, Me., Oct. 3d, 1867, of fever, Bro. Leander G. Smith, aged fifty-two years.

Bro. S. had for several years been a subject of much serious reflection. Some eight months before his death, while the writer, with others, was holding a protracted meeting, he became more deeply interested for his salvation than before, and gave himself to the Lord; took part in our meetings, embracing the gospel hope, and the fact that Jesus is soon coming. From that time he led a life of prayer until cut down by the fell destroyer,—death. He was one of the most prominent men of the town, and was much respected, and consequently much lamented. Sister Smith, one son, and several daughters mourn the loss of a kind and faithful husband and father, and also of an affectionate daughter, and sister, who died of fever, five weeks before her father. The writer attended the funeral and preached a discourse from John 12: 32, to a large assembly of friends. I. C. WELLCOME.

SWEET. Died in Exeter, R. I., Feb. 24th, 1868, Bro. Albert Sweet, Jun., aged twenty-five years, five months, and eleven days.

I had the privilege of baptizing Bro. S. more than five years ago. We trust that he rests in hope, and will come forth in the first resurrection. He leaves a father, mother, and nine brothers and sisters to mourn his loss. Words of consolation spoken by the writer, from Isa. 25: 8.

EDWIN R. WOOD.

LAWTON. Died in East Greenwich, R. I., March 2nd, 1868, Bro. George Lawton, eldest son of Lewis and Mary A. Lawton, aged sixteen years, nine months, and thirteen days.

The subject of this notice was one of the recent converts in Lafayette, R. I., and was expecting to go forward in baptism the next Sunday after his funeral services by the writer, from 1 Thess. 4: 18.

EDWIN R. WOOD.

FOSS. Fell asleep in Jesus, in Dixfield, Maine, March 3d, 1868, Samuel Foss, aged seventy-five years.

Bro. Foss has been a faithful servant, one of the fathers in Israel. He died at his post. He leaves a large circle of friends, who deeply mourn his loss, but they sorrow not as others who have no hope. May the good Lord comfort the hearts of those dear ones. J. C. WHEELER.

Married.

At Castleton, Vt., March 21st, at the Parsonage, by Elder S. G. Mathewson, Mr. JOHN M. SHAW, of Castleton, to Miss CANDACE L. MILLER, of Putnam, N. Y.

At the same place, and by the same, Feb. 25th, Mr. SOLOMON DEWEY, of Poultney, Vt., to Miss LYDIA E. BARBER, of Castleton.

At North Somers, Ct., Tuesday evening, March 17th, 1868, by Eld. L. F. Moore, SYLVESTER D. ROCKWELL, of South Windsor, Ct., and FLAVA PEASE, of Somers, Ct.

In Concord, N. H., Nov. 24th, 1868, by J. C. Wheeler, Mr. JOHN L. PROVONCHER, and Miss KATE A. QUIMBY, both of Concord.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable Dispatches.

CORK, 17th. An attack was made last night upon the house of Esquire Glasglow near this city by a party of men in disguise, but the assailants were driven off.

PARIS, 17th. The Corps Legislatif to day adopted an amendment to the new law on public meetings, which allows political meetings to be held before the election of members of the General Councils.

It is reported that the Papal Government has rejected the advice of the Emperor Napoleon for the pacification of Italy.

LONDON, 17th. A serious political riot occurred in the island of Madeira on the 5th inst. The mob attacked one of the candidates for the Portuguese Cortez. The military were called out and fired upon by the people, but the latter persisted and drove their victim to the sea, where he was compelled to take refuge on board a vessel off shore.

ROME, 17th. The recent ordination of the Bishops of Louisville, Erie and Buffalo is publicly proclaimed by the Pope.

A new French pamphlet, seeking to establish the claims of the Napoleonic dynasty to a popular origin, is announced as shortly to appear. Its authorship is ascribed to the Emperor Napoleon.

PARIS, March 19. The much looked-for Imperial pamphlet made its appearance to-day. The writer, after giving a lengthy history of the early popular votes in France, proves from that the French Constitution is based upon the will of the people only, and is changeable only by a vote of the people. He then passes on to review the course of the Emperor toward the people, and contends that in the decrees of 1866 and 1867, wherein certain liberal reforms were guarantied, the Emperor manifests that he seeks to adapt his covenant to progress and liberty.

VIENNA, March 19. In the Reichrath to-day an announcement was made by the Ministry that the project for the authorization of the right of civil marriage ought to pass in spite of the concordat. While they regretted the ill-will of the Pope, the Ministry considered such an act indispensable to the well being of society, and should press its adoption by the Reichrath.

ROME, March 21. The Pope gave a very gracious reception to Admiral Farragut and suite today. The Admiral will remain in Rome a month.

FLORENCE, March 21. Garibaldi has written a letter to the United States Minister, Hon. George P. Marsh, declining to be an agent of the United States Government.

FLORENCE, March 22. Admiral Farragut will be obliged to remain at Rome four or five weeks, in consequence of a severe abscess which has broken out on his leg.

VIENNA, March 22. The most enthusiastic demonstrations of joy are made over the recent action of the Reichrath on the Civil Marriage bill, which is regarded as practically annulling the Concordat. Yesterday, when it became known that the Upper House had rejected the motion of the clerical party, to defer the passage of the bill, there was great rejoicing among the people, and last night the city was generally illuminated.

BERLIN, March 23. The second session of the Parliament of the North German Confederation commenced here to-day. His Majesty King William of Prussia was present and opened the session in person with a speech from the throne. He promised that his government would introduce several new measures to strengthen the Union at home and abroad. While enumerating various treaties which had been made with foreign powers, he particularly alluded to the important one just concluded with the United States, which, he said, was destined to define and regulate nationality and the consequent national obligations of emigrants from Germany and America.

This treaty would destroy all dissension between the two countries, and knit more closely together nations already allied by the strong bonds of commerce and of race.

DOMESTIC.

MEXICO, March 10. There is considerable anxiety caused by the confirmation of Marquez' escape to Havana, and rumors that he proposes to set on foot an armed expedition against Mexico. Reports of trouble with the United States are also in circulation. These rumors have resulted in the arrest of twenty foreigners and Mexicans. Gen. Zerman, an American, has been ordered to leave Mexico. He demanded the inteference of Mr. Plumb, the American Charge d' Affairs.

The general situation of affairs in Mexico is unsatisfactory, and fears of trouble are general. Incendiary fires, robberies and murders are of frequent occurrence in the Capital, and the streets of the city are unsafe at night.

CHICAGO, 17th. Yesterday afternoon the weather was uncomfortably warm, the thermometer rising to 72 degrees in the shade. During the night a furious rainstorm burst forth, accompanied by the most severe gale that has been known here for months. The damage caused here by the gale was considerable, and several buildings in different portions of the city were thrown down.

PEORIA, Ill., 17th. Twelve or fifteen houses, besides a number of dwellings, barns, etc., were blown down here Monday night. Large quantities of lumber were also carried off by a flood. The damage is estimated from $60,000 to $70,000.

ST. LOUIS, 18th. The storm Monday night damaged the steamers at the levees to the amount of ten or fifteen hundred dollars.

CINCINNATI, 17th. The storm hereabouts was very destructive; several buildings were blown down. A train of cars was blown from the track, severely injuring John Egan, a conductor, and a number of the passengers. At California several houses were unroofed, and at Elizabethtown the Methodist church and a brick mill were destroyed. Persons arriving from all sections report the damage throughout the country as enormous.

NEW YORK, 18th. A Havana special says, that several Spanish officers are implicated in the late conspiracy, and it is believed that Santa Anna and Marquez originated it in order to proclaim Ortega president. A plot to blockade Vera Cruz has been discovered, and it was probable Juarez would call on the Captain General of Cuba to enforce a more rigid neutrality. The Mexican Congress appropriated $55,000 more to redeem the Convention and Internal bonds.

Owing to the Bishop of Havana intefering with a performance by Ristori, a difference has sprung up between the Captain General and the Bishop, which has resulted in the General's ordering the Bishop to leave Havana.

PORTLAND, 18th. The schooner "Gem of the Ocean" reports that she put into Mount Desert and found the people on Long Island and Au Hant suffering for food, having been cut off from the main land by ice for two months. They were obliged to live on muscles, etc., gleaned from the shores. Capt. Craig supplied them with provisions.

The Leavenworth Bulletin says that several hundred emigrants will leave New York for Kansas as soon as practicable, and that from all accounts a large emigration from all the eastern States may be looked for this spring into the broad regions beyond the Missouri.

NEW YORK, 18th. Foreign advices of the 3d inst. state that it was King Louis of Bavaria who died at Nice Feb. 29th, and not his son as stated in a cable despatch.

Washington, March 18.—Gen. Grant has received no additional advices from Tennessee relative to the troubles there. The State authorities evidently feel able to control malcontents.

Cincinnati, March 18. Steamer Magnolia, of Cincinnati, the Marysville regular packet, which left here at noon to-day with about one hundred cabin passengers and a large amount of freight, exploded her boiler twelve miles above this city at half-past one o'clock this afternoon. The greater portion of the cabin was carried away, and the boat afterward took fire. About forty persons were killed, several of them being burned to death.

SAD AFFAIR ON CATSKILL MOUNTAINS.—The Catskill Recorder says that on the night of the 2d inst., one of the coldest and most wintry nights of the season, Wm. Oliver's house, on the bleak mountain road, was entirely consumed by fire, the inmates only having time to escape in their night clothes. Mr. Oliver, with a little boy of six years, and Mrs. O., with an infant of three months in her arms, started for the nearest neighbor's, half a mile distant, leaving four older children to keep warm, if possible, near the burning building. The parents and accompanying children, however, sank down exhausted, not far from the haven they had attempted to reach. Early in the morning, while the neighbor was feeding his cattle, he discovered Mrs. Oliver embedded in a huge drift, badly frozen and insensible, and strange to relate, the infant but little injured. He succeeded in rescuing the family, though in a badly frozen condition. It is feared that the infant is the only member of this unfortunate family that will survive the perils of that terrible night.

SUDDEN ILLNESS OF THE EMPEROR NAPOLEON. The Paris correspondent of the London Daily News, writing on the evening of Feb. 28, says: "On Wednesday evening, at about 5 o'clock, the Emperor was suddenly seized with a violent asthmatic attack. His difficulty of breathing was so great that it was thought desirable to take him to an open window looking on the Tuileries. The crisis passed off, and His Majesty is now in his usual health." Writing on Saturday evening, a Paris correspondent adds: "The Emperor is not yet well enough to go out. He has had frequent attacks of short breathing since the one I have already mentioned. Dr. Corvisart is in attendance, and the members of the 'Medical Cabinet' were ordered yesterday not to be absent a moment."

THE PRAYING BAND.—Among the unique institutions of New York is a religious club, known as the Praying Band. It has been in existence some years. Its operations extend from October to April. It visits different churches and occupies the whole Sunday in praying, singing and exhorting. The members are thirteen in number, Methodists, and business men, most of them wealthy, and many retired from active life. Some are fine singers, others are efficient exhorters. The whole make a strong team, and a revival generally follows their labors. They are engaged beforehand, and wherever it is announced that the Praying Band will hold service, there is a crowd.

RICHEST BOOK IN THE WORLD.—Nothing need be said in praise of the new edition of Webster's Unabridged Dictionary. Its completeness surpasses the thought of any one who has not examined it. Add to this a vast variety of classified Pictorial Illustrations, of almost every physical science embraced in the studies of the age, with various other departments, and the work is the richest book of information in the world. There is probably more real education in it than can be bought for the same amount of money in any language. Every parsonage should have a copy at the expense of the parish. It would improve many pulpits more than a trip to Europe and at a much less cost.—N. Y. Christian Advocate.

MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCES IN NEW YORK.—The number of persons annually lost in the city of New York is very large, and the Metropolitan Police have a bureau especially devoted to the finding of missing people. No less than 239 cases of lost persons have been reported to this bureau within the past four months. Of these eighty-nine were adult males, thirty-five adult females, sixty-three boys and fifty-two girls. The lost men are reported as generally young, and as having been engaged in business; the women were also for the most part young, but more old women than old men were missed. Of the boys the majority are set down as ranging in age from fourteen to nineteen, and the girls from fourteen to eighteen years. The latter, when found, have in almost every instance been discovered in disreputable houses.

Items.

☞ New Orleans, it is claimed, possesses more miles of street railroad than any city of its size in the world. The lines completed and in process of construction probably amount to twenty-five miles. Each car is drawn by a single mule, and in default of a conductor each passenger drops his own fare into a glass box near the driver. This mode diminishes company expenses in the way of conductors' salaries and stealings, but does not conduce to the safety or convenience of the public.

☞ At Fulton, Ill., a few Sundays ago, one of the town clergymen opened services by reading at length a very full and correct local price current, how much flour, butter, meat, lard, eggs, etc., were worth; and the price of shoes, cloth, prints and muslins. He read the report without explanation or comment. But the most obtuse soul in the congregation understood very well what this unusual procedure meant. The congregation took the hint and responded with a liberal donation.

☞ Wrangel's Land, recently discovered, at the extreme limits of the Arctic Ocean, seems to be rich in coal, traces of it having been found on the sea coast near Cape Lisburne. Capt. Lewis of the Corinthian, picked up a quantity of this coal, which had been perhaps for ages drifting about in the sea. It proved, upon trial, to be better than the best anthracite. The same country also possesses a kind of [illegible] American [illegible], and a variety of beautiful flowers, but having no [illegible].

☞ The "Father of the House" of Commons since the death of Col. Lowther, is Lord Hotham, who entered the House for Leominster in 1820—thirteen years after Lord Palmerston—and has represented the East Riding since 1841. The noble lord, although in his seventy-fourth year, is hale, vigorous and erect. He served with the Coldstream Guards in the Peninsula, was wounded at Salamanca, fought at Waterloo, and has attained the rank of general.

☞ The Sultan lately applied to the British Government for ten artisans to serve in his arsenal at Constantinople as instructors in the manufacture of machinery and war material, and Mr. John Anderson of Woolwich Arsenal was instructed by the War Department to make a selection, and has done so accordingly. The men are to receive £20 per month, and £20 each for traveling expenses.

☞ A newspaper printed in Tuscon, Arizona, on the 15th of February, says: "The gardens about town are fast assuming their livery of green, and the grass is springing up. Our winters here, however, are merely nominal, as there has not been a day during the past one but that vegetables fresh from the gardens, such as beets, turnips, radishes, onions and cabbages, could be readily obtained."

☞ Minnesota recently had a snow storm so furious and blinding that it is said that several engineers on the St. Paul and Pacific Railroad ran their trains past stopping stations without seeing them; and in fact, one engine driver had gone five miles beyond before he discovered his error. It was impossible at times to see five feet from the locomotive.

☞ George Francis Train, while at Cork, gave a dinner to the Roman Catholic clergymen, whom he told that he had promised the Pope to build a palace for him on the banks of the Hudson. He also promised each of his reverend guests a return ticket to Washington to attend his own inaugural banquet at the White House.

☞ Whilst there seems to be some danger of a new engulfment of the still partly buried site of Pompeii, another ancient city has come to the surface. Traces of a large ancient town near Castranolla, in Sicily, high up on the plateau of the Cassera Mountains, have been discovered, and excavations are to be set on foot without delay.

☞ Reports from middle Carolina represent the fruit trees as universally backward this season, as up to the 8th of March they were not yet in blossom. Heretofore it has not been an uncommon thing for them to be in full bloom in February. Even the plum shows no signs of flower, and therefore it is generally expected that this will be an abundant fruit year.

☞ A Portland paper says that all along the shores of the bay there, immense numbers of frozen fish were cast ashore, chilled and dead by the almost unprecedented cold weather of the past winter. Such an event has not been known for many years. Thousands and millions of cunners are piled along the frozen beach.

☞ One of the most touchingly simple wills was left recently by the German pastor Holzapfel, of Reifnitz. It consists of this line only: "My soul to earth, and my money to our Deaf and Dumb Hospital." The property of the deceased, who had led a most rigorously abstemious life, amounts to about 70,000 florins.

☞ Gossips say that Secretary Seward, before he left for Auburn, expressed the opinion to his private secretary, that Mr. Wade would be President before June, and that Senator Sumner would be at the head of the State department. Republicans here do not believe Mr. Sumner would leave the Senate for any other place.

☞ Two men were some time since hung by a mob in Johnson county, Ind., for murdering an old woman. One of them stoutly protested his innocence, and begged for time to say his prayers, but was refused. Circumstances have since developed which prove that he was innocent.

☞ Mrs. Elizabeth Darrah has been appointed inspector of tobacco, snuff and cigars in the 5th Indiana District, as successor to her late husband. This is the first instance of the appointment of a woman in the Internal Revenue service outside the bureau.

☞ A belief is prevalent among the Turks that the Empire is to end with the present Sultan. And the China-men have a prophecy in circulation that Tartar rule is to end in the Celestial Empire with the present occupant of the throne.

☞ Fiteen thousand acres are now under sugar cultivation by Europeans in Tahiti, and ten thousand in the Marquesas Islands. The sugar is of fine quality, and in excellent demand in Australia, New Zealand and California.

☞ The Russian Government has given orders to the commanders of Russian ships that they are not to transport any more refugees from Crete. There are already 60,000 in Greece, and they are said to be in danger of starvation.

☞ The paper that has the honor of being the smallest and most expensive in the country is published in Brice City, Idaho. It is not so large as an eating-house napkin, and sells for fifty cents a copy.

☞ A bootblack recently arrested in London, though only eleven years of age, is reported to be well acquainted with the French and Polish languages, and to have been studying German.

☞ Queen Victoria has twelve grandchildren. Her eldest daughter has five children; the Prince of Wales three; Princess Alice of Hesse, three; and Princess Helen of Prussia, one.

☞ One of our city journals says: "Napoleon has within fifteen years, planted out in Paris 150,000 shade trees, horse chestnuts, maples, lindens and other varieties."

☞ The President is making good use of his remaining time. Not a day passes on which he does not send in nominations to the Senate, though nearly all are rejected.

☞ A New York paper says that from twenty to thirty thousand gallons of whisky are manufactured in that city every day, and sold, under the very eyes of the revenue officers, for a dollar per gallon.

☞ It is said by an Indiana paper that upwards of ten thousand persons have become church members in that State as the results of the revivals experienced there.

☞ At Ocola, Florida, there is a spring of pure water which covers more than an acre of ground, and is thirty-seven feet deep.

☞ The ice on Lake Umbagog is three feet thick, and the snow and water on top prevents all travel except on snow-shoes, over its surface.

☞ Thousands of French workingmen are beseeching Napoleon not to renew the treaty with England.

☞ The number of pupils in the colored schools of Tennessee has increased 2000 during the past month.

☞ William Powitt, who is over seventy three years of age, says he has had four doctors—Temperance, Exercise, Good Air and Good Hours.

☞ Henry Derringer, the inventor of the pistol which bears his name, died recently in Philadelphia, aged eighty-one years.

☞ It is said that the Pope's army is to be brought up to the strength of 25,000 men, to effect which about 8000 more volunteers will be required.

☞ Flowers are the alphabet of angels scattered over hills and dales, and speaking what the tongue cannot express.

☞ Iowa has three lady editors, named respectively Money, Read, and Hartshorn—wealthy, literary, pungent.

☞ The ship worm is very destructive in the harbor of San Francisco. Wood exposed to its ravages is not secure for more than five years.

☞ A band of female robbers has just been broken up in Paris. It had a captain, lieutenant and sub-officers, like a military company.

☞ Gen. Menbrea, the Italian Prime Minister, is reported to be the greatest mathematician in Europe.

☞ The fruit growers throughout Indiana report that thus far not one peach bud in a hundred has been injured by the frost.

☞ Quebec is rejoicing over the visitation of a white butterfly which made its appearance at Mount Pleasant on Wednesday.

☞ The members of the New York State Medical Society have never known of a negro having the delirium tremens.

☞ An industrious inquirer has made the discovery that one acre of clover is capable, if well manipulated by bees, to make 330 pounds of honey.

☞ The Empire is Peace, said Napoleon. France now wants 2,668,800 powder boxes.

☞ In North Carolina they are gathering radishes from the gardens.

To prevent Canker Worms from ascending Fruit Trees.—Take cotton batting; cut it about six inches, and long enough to go round the tree; tie it in the middle with a strong twine, very tight, then turn the upper part down, and the work is done.

GENERAL CONFERENCE IN BOSTON.

The church of the Lord Jesus Christ worshiping at Lowell Street Chapel, Boston, to those of like precious faith, and who wait for the Son of God from heaven, greeting:

Beloved in the Lord, believing that yet a little while and He that shall come will come, and will not tarry; and that the signs of the times indicate that we are among the predicted perils of the last days; and that we are rapidly approaching those scenes of final trouble such as never was, which shall convulse the world with sorrow and distress; we have thought it good to invite our brethren in Christ, and the preachers of his word who are interested in these momentous themes, without distinction of sect or name, to meet us at our place of worship, at the CORNER OF LOWELL AND CAUSEWAY STREETS, BOSTON, on Tuesday evening, March 31st, 1868, and to continue with us over the coming first day of the week.

To unite with us in worship and thanksgiving to God for his abundant mercies to all men, and to us who have learned his will, and tasted that he is gracious:

To listen to the proclamation of the truth of God for the edification of the church, and the preaching of the glad tidings of the kingdom at hand:

To exhort one another, and so much the more as we see the day approaching:

To invite sinners to Christ, the refuge from approaching wrath, pointing them to the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world:

To encourage each other in the great work, committed to us as a people, of proclaiming life and immortality through Christ alone, the resurrection of the dead, and the speedy coming and kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ.

For these objects we invite our brethren and sisters, and the servants of the Lord, and shall make them welcome to our worship, our homes, and our hospitalities, trusting that we may thus be blessed and comforted together. And we desire the prayers of God's people that our gathering together may be to the praise and glory of our heavenly Father. And when the mighty voice shall be heard, saying, "Alleluia, for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth, let us be glad and rejoice, and give honor to him: for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready"; may we all be found arrayed in that righteousness which alone will insure admission to the marriage supper of the Lamb.

The Mass. Advent Christian Conference is cordially invited to meet with us, and to hold its annual session in connection with the general conference.

Friends coming from Portsmouth and intermediate places, on the Eastern R. R., also Nashua, Lowell, and intermediate places on the Lowell and Nashua R. R., will purchase regular tickets at the various offices, and will receive from the Conference Committee, at the meeting, return passes free.

In behalf of the church,

NOTICE.
The Springfield National Advent Camp-meeting Committee.

The above committee, at the request of the Chairman of the Building Committee, are notified to meet at the office of the "World's Crisis," Boston, on Friday, April 2d, at 10 o'clock A. M.

GEO. T. ADAMS, Secretary.

The Mass. A. C. Conference.

Will hold its annual meeting, in connection with the General Conference called by the Lowell Street Church, Boston, commencing April 1st., at 7½ P. M., and continue over the Sabbath.

We have business of importance to transact, and we hope to see delegates from all the churches, that all may have a voice and influence in the work. Will you attend to this matter, brethren, and see that delegates are appointed? It is time to begin at home. Some of our churches are suffering for want of laborers, and new fields are open and ready for work. Shall we attend to the calls for help at home? Come, come, from all parts of the State, brethren, and tell us what we shall do. Do not stay at home, and then complain that the work is not done right. J. HEMENWAY.

To the Advent Churches in Mass.

Do not forget to send your delegates to the Conference at Boston. It is our first Annual meeting; all the officers are to be chosen, and other matters of importance which demand our attention. Let there be a general rally. Come in the name of the Lord. Come praying in the Holy Spirit, that good may be done. We need to co-operate together in this great work. Let each preacher remember his duty, to report either by letter or otherwise. Let each church be heard from, and all take hold in earnest. We have but an hour to fight; let us do it manfully. Thy brother in the service, GEO. A. STREETER.

New York Conference.

The Western New York Quarterly Conference will be held at Hemlock Lake, Livingston county, commencing Thursday evening, Apr. 2nd, and holding over the following Sunday. Come, brethren and sisters, in the name of the Lord, having on the whole armor, prepared to work whilst the day lasts; and let this meeting be especially to build up the church of Christ and bring sinners to God. There are but two families in the place that are believers in the same blessed hope; so brethren will come prepared to board at the hotel if required, so that the burden may not rest too heavily upon the few who have so manfully held up the truth and mean to sustain it. Brethren coming on the cars will stop at Livonia, thence by stage to Hemlock Lake, distance four miles.

C. W. LOWE.
P. B. STEVENS.
D. COGSWELL.

Rhode Island and Connecticut!

Our next quarterly conference will be held at East Gloucester, R. I., where we enjoyed so much one year ago. Will every church send us a delegate or a letter? Do not neglect it, will you? Conference commences Wednesday, April 1st, at 2 P. M. A team will meet the stage from Providence and Putnam at Chepatchet on Wednesday and Thursday only. Come early. Stay late.

H. P. CARPENTER, Clerk.

Notice.

The first annual meeting of the Mass. A. C. Conference will be held in Boston, in connection with the General Conference, called to meet Tuesday, March 31st, 1868. It is hoped the churches will send delegates so far as consistent. Let there be a general rally. For the Conf. Committee,

E. OWEN, Clerk.

A Quarterly Conference.

A quarterly session of the Advent Christian State Conference of New Hampshire will be held in Manchester, N. H., commencing April 9th, and hold over the following Sunday. In the meantime let prayer go up to God for his blessing.

A. W. SIBLEY, Secretary.

MEETINGS.

Sunday School 10 o'clock every Sunday.
Love Feast 2 o'clock every Sunday.
Preaching 7 o'clock Sunday evenings.
Meetings every evening during the week.

Notice.

Several brethren and sisters having come out from Cooper Institute, New York City, have taken a hall corner of Allen and Grand Sts., where meetings will be held every Sunday A. M. and P. M. Preaching brethren passing through the city, believing in the resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust, are invited to give them a call.

J. K. BELLOWS.

Maine Second Advent Tract Society.

WM. H. MITCHELL, R. B. YORK, S. K. PARTRIDGE, } Executive Board.

I. C. WELLCOME, Treasurer and Business Agent.

It is desired that all orders for tracts and books to distribution by this Society be addressed to the Agent I. C. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me., who will supply them as fast as the means are furnished.

All our ministers will receive subscriptions for the Tract Fund, and they purpose to raise $300, or more, for free distribution in Maine for 1867.

I. C. WELLCOME, Agent.

Notice.

Elder THOMAS SMITH, No. 7 Fourth Street, Bangor, Maine, keeps for sale English Bibles and Testaments, American Bible Union Testaments, H. P. Hill's "Saint's Inheritance, or World to Come," with the general variety of Tracts issued by the A. C. P. Society, Boston, Mass.

CASH RECEIPTS FOR THE CRISIS.

To find how your account stands.

The present No. of the Crisis is 651. The No. which follows your name is the No. to which you have paid. If the No. paid to is greater than the present No., the difference shows how many weeks you have paid for in advance. If the No. paid to, is less than the present No., the difference shows for how many weeks you owe. For every week of indebtedness, if less than 26 weeks, charge five cents; if more than 26 weeks, six cents. From the product (which will be a fraction over the actual indebtedness) deduct four cents for every dollar, and you have the exact amount due.

LINES.

Dedicated to our deeply afflicted Sister in Christ, L. B. W.

Low art thou laid, to fell disease a prey,
Upon thine earthly hopes sits blank despair;
Thick, dense clouds obscure the light of day,
Hope stands afar and hides her features fair.
Each day, and month, and year of moving time,
Rolling around in circles grand, sublime,
A portion sure of deepest grief to bear
Bringeth to thee; yet from these depths of woe
Upspring these joys of a celestial birth,
Rare hopes, that earth-bound mortals ne'er can know;
That bliss that gives eternity its worth.

Wait, then, with calmest faith His time, who sits
E'en as refiner of most precious gold;
All, all is well! each sorrow he permits
Verily shall bring thee blessedness untold.
E'en now the hour waits, that shall command
Richly thy fullest wish at Christ's right hand.

THE FOUR KINGDOMS OF DANIEL.

THEIR RELATION TO THE YEAR-DAY SYSTEM.

1. We will speak of the fourth. This is claimed to be the Roman. In support of this, we have the ablest and most judicious expositors of every age.

"William Cunningham, Esq., of England, an eminent expositor, in speaking of the four parts of the great image of the dream of Nebuchadnezzar, says that they are respectively applied by Daniel himself to four kingdoms, which have by the unanimous voice of the Jewish and Christian churches, for more than eighteen centuries, been identified with the empires of Babylon, Persia, Greece and Rome. Should this be questioned, the witnesses are abundant. In the Jewish Church, we have the Targum of Jonathan, Ben Uzziel, Josephus, and the whole modern synagogue, including the names of Abarbanal, Kinchi, David, Levi, and others. In the Christian Church, such as Barnabas, Irenæus, Chrysostom, Cyril of Jerusalem in his catechism, Jerome, and, according to him, all ecclesiastical writers, Hyppolitus and Lactantius in the early ages; since the Reformation, Luther, Calvin, Mede, T. H. Horne, Sir Isaac Newton, Bishop Newton, Dr. Hales, Scott, Clarke, Brown, Watson, Bishop Lloyd, D'Aubigne, Brightman, Taber, Nod, Dr. Hopkins, and almost every Biblical expositor of any note in the Protestant Church. Those who make this application of the four parts of the image have no difficulty in making a like application of the four beasts of Daniel seventh. The remarkable similarity of the two visions requires this."

In Daniel 7: 23, 24, 26, the heavenly instructor was sent to make known to Daniel the interpretation of the fourth beast; as Daniel was very solicitous to know the interpretation of the fourth beast and its appendages. 19, 20:—"Thus he said, The fourth beast shall be the fourth kingdom upon the earth, which shall be diverse from all kingdoms, and shall devour the earth, and tread it down, and break it in pieces. And the ten horns out of this kingdom are ten kings that shall arise; and another shall rise after them; and he shall be diverse from the first; and he shall subdue three kings. And he shall speak great words against the Most High, and shall wear out the saints of the Most High, and think to change times and laws; and they shall be given into his hand, until a time and times and the dividing of time. But the judgment shall sit, and they shall take away his dominion, to consume and destroy it unto the end."

The interpretation here given of the fourth beast is a clue to the interpretation of the other three, proven to be three great kingdoms that preceded this fourth. There is no doubt in the mind of any pious and intelligent Bible student, that these four "beasts" symbolize four universal kingdoms, commencing with the Babylonian, and extending to the Roman. The proof is abundant, as is apparent from the Bible and universal history, which give us the facts; which coincide so accurately with the prophecy that there is no room to doubt, by any who believe the Bible to be a revelation from God to man. It is not our purpose to bring out these facts in this article; 1. Because we have not space. 2. Because we take it for granted that the most of the readers of the "Crisis" believe the above application of the prophecy.

It being true, then, that the second and seventh chapters of Daniel's prophecy represent the four great universal kingdoms of the world—Babylon, Persia, Grecia, and Rome, to the establishment of the kingdom of Christ, it is absolutely necessary that the measurements of time connected with the prophecy will indicate the duration of the existence of the kingdoms to which they apply. In the eighth chapter of Daniel, we have a prophetic measurement of twenty-three hundred days; given in answer to the inquiry, "How long shall be the vision?" including the "daily, and the transgression of desolation, to give both the sanctuary and host to be trodden under foot."

The symbols presented in this portion of prophecy are (1), a ram with two horns; (2), a rough goat with a notable horn between his eyes; (3), in the place of the notable horn, "four notable ones toward the four winds of heaven"; (4), "out of one of them a little horn, which waxed exceeding great."

The date of this vision undoubtedly should be from where the first active element is introduced; i. e., the ram pushing, and runs through the allotted time for the continuance of each of the powers noticed, till the last is broken without hands, and the sanctuary cleansed.

As the symbols presented in this chapter are divinely applied to Media, and Persia, and to the kingdom of Grecia, "also a king of fierce countenance," answering to the nondescript beast of Dan. 7: 7; and as each of these powers continued for centuries, it is impossible for twenty-three hundred literal days to be applied to their duration; but taken as symbols of years, all is plain and harmonious.

In the prophecy of Daniel God takes the lesser to represent the greater, i. e., he takes a beast, which is a small and insignificant object of itself, to represent a kingdom, or human governments; therefore he takes a day to represent a year, as it corresponds with the other parts of the prophecy, and is in harmony with the law of symbols. That a day represents a year is more than intimated in the prophecy itself. For example (Dan. 8: 19), "And he said, Behold, I will make thee know what shall be in the last end of the indignation; for at the time appointed the end shall be." "The time appointed" can have reference to no other period than the twenty-three hundred days in the fourteenth verse; and as the last end of the indignation must reach to the end of time, and overthrow all that causes indignation,—as "the host and the sanctuary" were predicted to be "trodden under foot," and have been for nearly twenty-three hundred years from the date of the vision, it follows that those days were to measure the time for the continuance of the powers specified; viz: Persia, Grecia, and Rome; which were to oppress the people of God and usurp the territory that belongs to Christ as the "heir of all things," and to the saints as joint-heirs with him to the inheritance. Therefore, till Christ shall come and overthrow all his enemies, and recover the territory from usurpation, the days cannot end, nor the indignation cease; so we see they must symbolize years.

In Dan. 7: 25, we have a prophetic period given, denominated "a time, and times, and the dividing of time"; through which period the saints were to be given into the hands of a specified power, a power that was to "speak great words against the Most High"; which has been regarded by the almost unanimous voice of the whole Protestant church as the "Papal Antichrist." This period is understood to be twelve hundred and sixty years; which appears to be the only natural and consistent interpretation in harmony with facts of the history of the continuance of that diabolical system. Interpret this period in any other way, and it disjoints the whole prophecy, introduces chaos and confusion, and will unsettle and undermine all our faith in this prophecy, and open the flood-gates for every fanciful and absurd idea possible for the human intellect to invent.

There are three views entertained in reference to the days of prophecy:

1. That they are literal days, and apply to "Antiochus Epiphanes," king of Syria, who lived nearly two hundred years before Christ. According to this application, the prophecy of Daniel was fulfilled over two thousand years in the past.

2. The year-day theory, which we believe to be the only one that will stand examination and is in harmony with the prophecy.

3. We have the "Futurist's" view, that they are literal days, and are to be fulfilled in the future, but no one knows when, nor where; only the fulfillment can determine. I know of no one who professes to believe in the near coming of the Lord who holds to the first view; and I should be relieved of some uncomfortable feelings if I could say the same of the third view.

Those who have endeavored to apply the days in the prophecy to "Antiochus," have never been able to do so legitimately; for they have either fallen too short, or overreached the time historical facts would justify in their applying to the Syrian king. And the same difficulty, I apprehend, would be in the way of any future application. For how could the different periods be adjusted to the Antichrist of the future? If he is to arise in the future and continue twenty-three hundred days, what application can be made of the "twelve hundred and ninety," "and the thirteen hundred and thirty-five days"? And vice versa; if he is to continue twelve hundred and ninety, or thirteen hundred and thirty-five days, what shall we do with the twenty-three hundred? Such an application all must see would be suicidal.

A statement was made by a prominent writer and professed believer in the near coming of Christ, not long since, to this effect; that unless the days in the prophecy of Daniel terminated in 1843–4, then they were literal days, and were to be fulfilled in the rise of "Antichrist" in the future. Now when it can be shown as clearly as any thing need to be seen, that the premises on which the theory for the 1843–4 argument was based was unsound, so far as dates are concerned; it is strange that any one, rather than admit an error in the premises, should be ready to throw the prophecy overboard, or adopt an interpretation (as I think) that is perfectly absurd.

If the confidence of those whom we have supposed to be men of understanding is so shaken in the great Protestant principles of interpretation as to adopt such fanciful and loose notions, well might one say, "Nevertheless, when the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?" Let us all take warning, and be careful that we do not remove the land-marks.

I have great confidence that the "year-day" system will soon be vindicated infinitely better than by my feeble pen, by the coming of Him whose Spirit, once in the prophets, searched the manner of time for the sufferings of Christ and the glory that shall follow. And may both the writer and reader be so happy as to be waiting according to the time given in prophecy and the law, that we may be prepared to welcome our King, and be received by him to the marriage supper.

DISCUSSION AT STOWE.

To the readers of the Crisis:—According to appointment, a public debate commenced at Stowe, Vt., on Tuesday eve, Feb. 25th, and closed on Friday evening, holding five sessions, of two hours each. Question discussed: Resolved, that the phenomena of Spiritualism proceed from Demons. Brother Grant affirmed, and Mr. Simmons denied. The Hon. George Wilkins acted as Chairman. A large Hall was filled every session, and the best attention was manifested.

At the commencement of the discussion, the sympathies of the entire community were against Bro. Grant, and in favor of Mr. Simmons so far as immortality of the soul was concerned at least, but from the moment that Bro. Grant took the floor, and commenced to handle the subject in his able and masterly manner, all could see that the tide of sympathy began to well back upon the other side, and thus continued till the close. Mr. Simmons is a good speaker, but it soon became evident to the mass, that he was on the wrong side of the question.

Spiritualism had a strong hold upon the public mind in Stowe, but it is evident that it has received a terrible check. We think it will be a long time ere it gains what it has lost. From the commencement, the Methodist Elder gave his entire influence on the side of Truth and the Bible, by putting his shoulder to the wheel, and thus helping to well back the mighty tide of spiritualism which is threatening to deluge the world with the most deadly and destructive delusion that ever cursed our world.

As the readers of the Crisis are acquainted with Bro. Grant's positions on this question, I shall have but little more to say about the positions he took, but proceed at once to recapitulate some assertions made by Mr. Simmons.

God is everywhere present.—I believe in a God.—There is one God.—Man is a part of the great I AM.—God created the world.—Divinity is within us.—I believe in a Creator.—God possesses attributes.—I cannot conceive of a Divinity.—God is a being.—Man has a spirit and so has God.—Nature is all that is God.—If we lack wisdom let us ask of God.—There is intercourse between the Father and his children.—Man cannot be lost, else, Deity may tremble on his throne.—Every Spiritualist is responsible only to himself.—Man is good, but imperfect.—Demon implies a spirit out of the form.—Man is accountable.—The ancient philosophers were glorious Moralists.—Jonah was a false prophet.—If Eve fell, she was compelled to.—Man is not growing worse.—Revelations of the present, are superior to any in the past.—The soul is to a man, what the smell of a rose is to a rose.—Everything has a form. Spirits are not Demons.—So-called Bible; ancient opinions; ancient quotations.—The Bible is no better than any other history.—Josephus is as good authority as the Bible.—William Miller was the greatest of false prophets.—All nations have their revelations. Mr. Simmons used the words soul and spirit synonymously, to which Elder Grant replied that they were never thus used in the Bible.

In Mr. Simmons' next speech he said, "My friend Grant confounds the words soul and spirit," and thus time was wasted in falsifying his opponent's positions. When the proof of the soul's immortality was called for, Mr. Simmons replied that it was self-evident, and needed no proof. He said that all life was indestructible; then Phil. 1: 21; and 2 Cor. 5: 6th and 8th vers. were appealed to, to prove it. As these quotations did not seem to satisfy even his own mind, he seemed to lose self-control, and pitched headlong into the vilest vituperations imaginable, twitting and flinging about Miller, the world's burning, etc., etc., etc. Webster was appealed to for the meaning of soul and spirit, as though this settled the matter.

Elder Grant showed that Mr. Webster's business was to give the theological definition. Mr. Simmons' argument on this point, amounted to this,—as theologians believe the soul and spirit to be immortal, therefore, they are immortal. TIMOTHY WHEELER.

HYMN.

Jesus, great Shepherd of the sheep,
To thee for help we fly;
Thy little flock in safety keep,
For oh! the wolf is nigh.

He comes, of hellish malice full,
To scatter, tear, and slay;
He seizes every straggling soul
As his own lawful prey.

Us into thy protection take,
And gather with thy arm;
Unless the fold we first forsake,
The wolf can never harm.

We laugh to scorn his cruel power,
While by our Shepherd's side;
The sheep he never can devour,
Unless he first divide.

O, do not suffer him to part
The souls that here agree;
But make us of one mind and heart,
And keep us one in thee.

REPORT OF THE NORTHERN OHIO CONFERENCE.

Our late conference though not numerously attended, on account of unfavorable weather, was one of interest, as well as a pleasant and happy season to all who participated in our religious exercises. All seemed to realize that the coming judgment is at hand, or rather immediately impending, and felt the importance of a constant preparation for that great event. Brn. A. N. Seymour of Michigan, and H. A. King of Nevada, O., were our preaching brethren, and dispensed the good word of life to the edification of all present. During the meeting Bro. D. C. Jefferson was set apart for the ministry by the laying on of hands.

In our business meeting, among other things, a resolution was passed, recommending Bro. H. A. King as an evangelist the ensuing year, to travel and preach the word throughout this conference. Churches and brethren scattered abroad needing his services will be free to give him a call, as he purposes to travel at his own expense. P. ALLING, Clerk.

INTEMPERANCE.

It is calculated that one-half of the insanity two-thirds of the pauperism, and three-fourths of the crimes of the land, are the consequences of drunkenness. Drinking is the symbol of hospitality, the pledge of friendship, the sign of conviviality, the ratification of bargains. The bottle meets us everywhere. Fifty millions are annually spent by this people in intoxicating liquors, in promoting disease, insanity, pauperism, and crime; in ruining men's bodies and souls.

Watch against a love of wine. It may seem like a truism, which amidst the fearful desolations of intemperance is not without salutary warning; "He that does not drink intoxicating liquors, can never become a drunkard." The young man who has acquired a relish for wine; who always drinks it when he can get it; who drinks as much as is given him, or he can afford to purchase; who avails himself of the dinner or supper party, to go as far as he can without actual intoxication, is already an incipient tippler; and if he does not stop at once, and practice total abstinence, or, at any rate, watch his propensity, and lay down rules of the most rigid temperance, will, in all probability, become a confirmed drunkard. —Friend of Virtue.

STAR OF HOPE MISSION.

BRETHREN AND SISTERS:—The good Lord is still with us, blessing the feeble efforts of his people. He has not forgotten the mission; truly the work is going on in our midst; many souls have been blest, while others are still seeking the Lord. We have meetings every evening through the week, except Saturday, and from six to twelve mourners forward every evening. It seems that the compelling power is getting hold of the people. The Lord will have his house filled. Brethren and sisters, pray for us, that this blessed work may continue, and that many more may be added to the church, such as shall be saved. Time is short. What is done must be done quickly. O that the Lord may inspire us with new courage and heavenly zeal, that we may be efficient laborers in his cause, and be the means in his hands of bringing many to Christ.

THE AMERICAN COLONY OF JAVA.

While waiting for dinner we walked out to the "American Colony," or what is left of it, a half mile north. We passed through a gate, came upon the market outside the walls, feasted our eyes on cartloads of oranges, saw the people eating their dinner of bread in form, color and texture like a blacksmith's leather apron—thin sheets about the thickness of a buckwheat cake, brown, tough, leathery; little bits of broiled mutton strung on a stick and cooked over a charcoal fire, sold at so much a stick; the blackest of coffee in little cups; the largest of oranges—a half dozen for a penny. This market place is the starting point for all travel inland to Jerusalem, and up the coast to Tyre and Sidon. A telegraph line east to Jerusalem and another north to Nablouse, is in strange contrast to the camels, mules and Arabs. It is the quickness of the West against the slowness of the East.

Along a sandy road, between hedges of prickly pear ten feet high, impassable for man or beast, with orange groves as golden as the gardens of Hesperides, and in five minutes we are at the Colony. You see one large house, three stories in height, square, flat roofed, of wood, whitewashed, with green blinds, doors and windows all shut, and no sign of life. There are several smaller houses, all of wood, and whitewashed, with blinds. An Arab boy who calls Mr. Adams his master leads us to the house of the founder of the Colony.

In the yard we notice a New England chaise, top buggy, a horse cart, a Yankee plow, stacks of straw, a small stable. Entering the house we find a large room—two rooms in one by folding doors—the stars and stripes over the doorway—a sofa, rocking and other chairs, lounges, a map of the State of Maine at one end of the room, a chart illustrative of the second Coming of Christ at the other, books on the tables, carpeted floors, and a general air of neatness and comfort. Mrs. Adams receives us—a plump woman in person and features, who uses up the word splendid in five minutes,—splendid weather, a splendid, heavenly country—great emphasis on the heavenly —splendid oranges—splendid vegetables in her garden—splendid sea breeze in summer—enjoys splendid health. Rev. Mr. Adams came in from his chamber, dressed in his best suit of black, with a white cravat—a man of medium stature, brown whiskers and a nose well colored, reminding you of a Baldwin apple. Our interview was brief, for he was to receive a visit from the Pasha at two o'clock. He took us to the roof of the house, pointed out the Mountains of Ephraim in the Northeast; of Judea in the East; showed us near at hand the ground where the second town of the Colony is to be built! He is soon to leave for England on a preaching tour. Two English families have recently joined the Colony. It would not be strange if the country which furnishes nearly all of the recruits for Brigham Young's Colony of Utah, should also have some for Jaffa.

Returning to the hotel, we took a tour past the school house. The door was shut, the windows were closed. In one house near by, two little girls, with the bloom of their native land still on their cheeks, were plucking the feathers from a chicken. It was pleasant to hear the sweet music of their voices. It is evident that the fortunes of the Colony just now are at low ebb, but with a field like that of England, it is possible that President Adams, as his followers call him, may be able to fill up the deserted houses.—"Carleton," Cor. of Boston Journal, under date of Jan. 31st.

A LESSON FOR MOTHERS.

"Mother," said a little girl, "does God ever scold?" She had seen her mother, under circumstances of strong provocation, lose her temper, and give way to the impulse of passion; and pondering thoughtfully for a moment, she asked, "Mother, does God ever scold?"

The question was so abrupt and startling, that it arrested the mother's attention almost with a shock, and she asked, "Why, my child, what makes you ask that question?"

"Because, mother, you have always told me that God is good, and that we should try to be like him; and I should like to know if he ever scolds."

"No my child: of course no."

"Well, I'm glad he don't; for scolding always hurts me, even if I feel I have done wrong, and it don't seem to me that I could love God very much if he scolded."

The mother felt rebuked before her simple child. Never before had she heard so forcible a lecture on the evils of scolding. The words of the child sank deep into her heart, and she turned away from the innocent face of her little one to hide the tears which gathered in her eyes. Children are quick observers; and the child seeing the effect of her words, eagerly inquired, "Why do you cry, mother, was it naughty for me to say what I did?"

"No, my love; it was all right. I was only thinking that I might have spoken more kindly, and not have hurt your feelings by speaking so hastily and in anger as I did."

"O, mother, you are good and kind; only I wish there were not so many bad things to make you fret and talk as you did just now. It makes me feel so far away from you, as if I could not come near to you, as I do when you speak kindly; and, oh, sometimes I fear I shall be put off so far I can never get back again!"

"No, my child, don't say that," said the mother, unable to keep back tears, as she felt how her tones had repelled her little one from her heart; and the child, wondering what so affected her parent, but intuitively feeling it was a case requiring sympathy, reached up, and throwing her arms around her mother's neck, whispered—"Mother, dear mother, do I make you cry? Do you love me?"

"Oh, yes! I love you more than I can tell," said the parent, clasping the little one to her bosom; "and I will try never to scold you again, but if I have to reprove my child, I will try to do it, not in anger, but kindly, deeply as I may be grieved that she has done wrong."

"Oh, I am so glad; I can get so near to you, if you don't scold; and do you know, mother, I want to love you so much, and I will try always to be good."

The lesson was one which sank deep into that mother's heart; and has been a great help to her for many years. It impressed the great principle of reproving in kindness, not in anger, if we would gain the great end of reproof. The great end of winning the child, at the same time, to what is right, and to the parent's heart.

"I hold it to be a fact," says Pascal, "that if all persons knew what they said of each other, there would not be four friends in the world." Rather an uncharitable judgment. But is there not reason to believe that it comes too near being true, to be dismissed without a thought? Am I guilty? I pretend to despise a backbiter; do I condemn another for what I am guilty? Do we forget that "backbiters" are ranked with "haters of God," and shall not abide in the tabernacle of the Lord, nor dwell in his holy hill? It is lamentable that so few can speak of another's good qualities, and with the mantle of charity cover the multitude of imperfections which in us, poor mortals, are found associated with these good qualities.—Mother's Magazine.

Adams; and $50.00 worth of tracts from Bro. H. L. Hastings.

All these dear brethren and sisters have our heartfelt thanks and prayers for their kind remembrance of us in our work of faith and labor of love. May the Lord reward them abundantly according to the riches of his grace. We are constantly proving that the Lord will take care of those who put their trust in him. Of course we have many sharp trials of our faith, but the Lord has never suffered us to be confounded. We can sympathize with God's poor saints who pass through many trials. We know what it is to get up in the morning penniless, and not even a loaf of bread in the house, and a little army of children to feed. We know that "God moves in a mysterious way, his wonders to perform," and we have had our hearts cheered as we have sat down to our meals which the Lord provided for us in his own way. How many hundred times we should have been disappointed had we trusted in the arm of flesh. But, trusting in the Lord, he has always proved our best friend in every time of need.

There are thirty-eight children under our care at this time. One has the hip disease, one is afflicted with diseased lungs, two are paralyzed on one side, two are subject to fits, one to a peculiar kind of spasms, while the others are well. Ten of the whole number are orphans, and twenty-five fatherless; the other three have both parents living. Little Mary has found Christ recently, also Unity and Martha, and Maria has started anew in the service of the Lord. These are the largest girls that we have living in the Home. We took Mary and Maria from Satan's seat over two years ago, and Unity about fifteen months ago. Pray for them that they may be kept faithful unto the end. Truly they were plucked as brands from the burning.

The afternoon meetings for children are still blessed of the Lord. Thus far about seventy-five profess to have found Christ. About twenty more are seeking the Lord. Amongst the converts are some who have been the worst boys and girls in Satan's seat: boot-blacks, chimney-sweeps, pickpockets, swearers, and the like. Of course we do not know how long they may continue in the good way. Some may be hindered by Satan after running awhile, others may fall through temptations; but we will rejoice in the Lord over them so long as they keep in the narrow way, and by his grace instruct them in the ways of righteousness. At this time they appear to be very earnest christians, and the way they shout and jump and pray would frighten dead christians exceedingly. They are busy little missionaries, visiting and praying with the sick and those who are seeking the Lord. If I had the time, I could give many interesting particulars concerning these little christians, but my cares will not allow, but they are a blessed little set of lovers of the literal and speedy coming of Christ. They talk, sing, and pray about it in every meeting. The seed has not been sown among them in vain.

I have another bit of good news to encourage our brethren and sisters. Opposite the Home stands a small hall, which is occupied on Sundays by a company of Independent Colored Methodists. They are quite poor, but have more of the spirit and power of the Lord with them than any of the colored churches around us. At their request I have preached for them a number of times since we have occupied the Home, and have spoken chiefly upon the signs of the times, the coming of Christ, and the saint's inheritance, and the Lord has opened their hearts to understand these things. About the time we commenced the children's meetings, we invited them to hold a protracted effort in the school-room of the Home, as they had no place to meet in between Sundays. So in they came. We worked together and the Lord has blessed in a gracious manner. People came in who had not been to meeting for years. Prostitutes, thieves, adulterers, and others of rather better morals, sought the Lord, and many are rejoicing in Christ,—upwards of seventy-five, I am informed. The coming of Christ near, and the great day of wrath, were prominent above all other truths held up to the people. Their pastor, several of their elders, and quite a number of their flock are fully persuaded of these truths, and they talk them boldly. One of their favorite hymns is;

Jesus is coming.
How do you know?
Read your Bible,
Look in Job.
Look in Daniel.

And thus they go on through all the books of the Bible where the coming of Christ is mentioned. Then they sing about the resurrection, the long white robes, etc., and before through the Home trembles to its foundation from their leaping and shouting. Bro. Hook preached for us once. His subject was the saints' inheritance; his text. "And there were six steps to the throne." I never saw this people drink in the truth so fast before. They were delighted, and there was quite a stir amongst them the next day to find the text, and several came to the Home to get it written down. The following Sunday evening one of their elders preached from it.

Sr. Mary Valle of Newark, N. J., has joined us in the work, and acts in the capacity of school teacher. The health of Sr. Reeves, our matron, is very poor. Pray for her. Sr. Helginson and Sr. Case are still with us, and all are spending and being spent for the Lord. Pray for them. Finally, pray for me, that my faith may be strengthened daily, and that I may by grace keep little and humble, where God can use me to his own honor and glory. I feel more solemn this year than ever before in view of the nearness of Christ's coming and the great day of wrath. Our field of labor is full of toils, difficulties and trials; but the hope of the soon coming of Jesus cheers us on. May the Lord bless all our dear people evermore. F. H. BURBANK.

SIMPLICITY IN PREACHING.

Henry M. Gallagher is one of the brightest lights of the Church in Brooklyn. He is an Irishman, with not a particle of bigotry in his being, a brilliant wit, and a very plain and direct preacher of the truth. He is youthful in appearance, being, we should judge, about thirty years of age, has a sprightly, cheerful manner of address, and possesses more power over the young than any preacher in Brooklyn. There is a simple, genuine pathos running through his address, not sad, but gentle, rippling and cheerful, that pleases a youthful soul. He makes religion appear so attractive. He is so genial, and happy, and honest himself that all his hearers wish to become christians. Not always without bursts of laughter does he fling out his sparkling Irish wit, but never with indirectness or broad impropriety. He believes in wit in the pulpit, and that the whole man must be religious or not at all. The great power, however, of Mr. Gallaher's preaching arises from his simplicity. We do not conceive it possible for a pomp-loving Papist or High Churchman to love his preaching. Even in prayer he talks to God just as if he were right before him, and in sweet childlike utterances of love, without fear or dissimulation. From the beginning to the end of his discourse, and also in all the services proper, not a thing is done for show or effect. No tragic attitudes are struck. No flourishes of gesture. No sable frowns or awful thunderings as of Sinai, but plain, simple, truthful, honest, he keeps you awake in every emotion till he sits down as abrupt as the busiest man you shall meet in trade when his work is done. Take him all and all, he is the type of a ministry for the people much desired. —Church Union.

THE DAY AT HAND.

"The night is far spent, the day is at hand!"

Yes, pilgrim dear, child of God, thy dark and dreary night is almost o'er. The night of sin and sorrow, sighing and death, will soon be gone. Behold! o'er yon horizon shines the morning beams of the coming day. Anon, the "sun of righteousness," with healing in his wings, shall arise and shine, and then, O the amazing change! The drooping "plants of God," beneath that heavenly light, quick to life eternal spring, and, in robes of star-like beauty clad, shall come to Zion with songs and sing Redemption's song; and then, in Edenic verdure drest, the earth shall be the "sweet home" of all the meek and blest forevermore. Amen!

TESTIMONY OF THE PAST.—"Straws in amber" are now outdone, and "sticks in bricks" will be quoted hereafter, in illustration of the care time takes of trifles. Prof. Unger, in a paper communicated to the Imperial Academy of Science at Vienna, gives an account of what he has found in some bricks taken from the pyramid of Dashour, which were made between 2,400 and 2,300 B. C. Inclosed in the Nile mud or slime, sand, and cut-straw of which these bricks are made, he has found remains of vegetables and of manufactured articles in sufficient quantity, and well enough preserved, to enable him to make many inferences as to the natural history of ancient Egypt, and the condition of the people. Besides the various wild and cultivated plants, among which we may mention two species of grain, field-peas, flax, wild radish, and the corn chrysanthemus, he found the remains of fresh water shells, fishes, insects, and several other organic bodies, with bits of burnt tile, pottery, and a sort of twine made of flax and goat's wool. The straw found in the bricks confirms what the Bible and Herodotus say as to the Egyptian mode of manufacturing them. Professor Unger is busy in deciphering more of these "sermons in stones."—*N. Y. WHY DO WE DIE YOUNG?

I take the liberty to answer. It is because we are living for custom and fashion; and whatever is fashionable, no matter what its results are, we participate in them. God made us all to be healthy and happy, from the cradle to the grave, and to live twice as long as we now do; and if we lived as we should live, and obeyed the laws of nature and our Creator, we should not be sick nor die till ripe old age creeps slowly and imperceptibly upon us, but our powers would gradually weaken, till, like the expiring lamp, life went out of itself.

One of our greatest fashionable evils is the use of tobacco, that vilest and filthiest of narcotics. It breaks down the constitution, inducing disease in all its forms, and hurries its victims into an early grave. This cannot be the natural order of things. So noble a being as man was certainly never made merely to eat, drink and smoke, and to follow the fashions of this life. Had God designed this, he certainly would never have endowed him with the higher qualities of morality and intelligence. If man smokes and is sick, he is to be blamed, not pitied. Smoking and drinking are the right and left bower of all other vices. To see beardless boys strutting about smoking a cigar, betokens a dissipated life add an early grave.

Some say, "It was ordered by my physician" to cure asthma, or toothache, or a cough, and various other diseases too numerous to mention, of which it is a sure cure. But if you were to take one grain of strychnine each day you live, you would live longer than you now can, if you still continue smoking. If your self-control is so far gone, your mind so weak, your appetite of so strong a nature as not to allow you to effect its change, go on as you are, but remember you must die the sooner and be respected less; for it is a time-destroying, soul-and-body-killing habit and fashion.

I have spoken but briefly of its effects upon the constitution. I might add page after page, and column after column, and then leave the subject unfinished; to say nothing of the inroads it makes upon the purse. If any young or old man would stop using it and give for charitable purposes the amount that he spends every year for tobacco, he would find his failing health returning, and his death-like countenance regaining its usual bloom; his soul blessed, because his money has been put to some purpose and not worse than thrown away. WOMAN'S DRESS.

It may seem strange to those who have not studied this subject for a quarter of a century, that we should attach so much importance to woman's dress as to rank the prevailing mode with liquor and tobacco in the ruinous effects on society. But as an evil, we regard it as equal in importance to either, if not to both of them. Any person with the least smattering of physiological science ought to know that the prevailing style of woman's dress restrains her breathing, diminish the respirating capacity, displaces some of the vital organs, induces congestion and inflammation in others, and deteriorates all of the vital resources.

In the breath is the life. Very few females who dress in the fashionable mode have the use of more than three-fourths of their lungs; many do thus destroy one-half of their natural breathing capacity, while not a few do even worse than this. The sad result is that their life-powers decline in the same ratio that the respirating function is impeded. The period of life is abridged at the best; but what is worse is, they do not half live while they stay on this planet. They are feeble, irritable, and unhappy, and fitter for the attention of nurses and physicians than for the duties and responsibilities of real life. And worst of all, their offspring are the chief sufferers. No woman who laces the chest, or loads the hips with fashionable clothing, can ever be the mother of a healthy child; it is doomed irrevocably the inheritance of a frail constitution.

Self-preservation is the first law of nature in the vital domain as it is in the social. If the mother does not breathe enough for herself, she certainly cannot supply the requisite oxygen for the healthful development of her offspring. The effect therefore of fashionable dress is quite as deteriorating to the race as is the effect of liquor-drinking or tobacco-using.—The Gospel of Health.

A CAPITAL BATH.

An open window with the direct rays of the sun coming in will be good for the little one. On a hot summer day, to lay it down by the window, quite nude, and then let it lie for some minutes so that the rays of the sun will fall upon its skin, will give it new life. There is a vital relation between sunshine and a vigorous human being. Seclusion from sunshine is one of the greatest misfortunes of civilized life. The same cause which makes potato vines white and sickly when grown in dark cellars, operates to produce the pale, and sickly girls that are reared in our parlors. Expose either to the rays of the sun, and they begin to show color, health and strength.

When in London, some years ago, I visited an establishment which had acquired a wide reputation for the cure of those diseases in which prostration and nervous derangement were prominent symptoms. I soon found the secret of success in the use of sunshine. The slate roof had been removed and a glass one substituted. The upper story was divided into sixteen small rooms, each provided with a lounge, washing apparatus, etc. The patient, on entering his little apartment, removed all his clothing and exposed himself to the direct rays of the sun. Lying on the sofa and turning over from time to time, every part of his body was thus exposed to the life-giving rays of the sun. Several London physicians candidly confessed to me that many cases which seemed only waiting for shrouds, were galvanized into life and health by this process.—Dr. Dio Lewis.

CONSTIPATION.

"Please inform me of the cause, means of relief, and mode of cure, for constipation of the bowels."

It is generally the result of sedentary occupations and lack of exercise, or the use of fine concentrated food, or both. Temporary relief may usually be obtained by the employment of enemas of tepid water. When it is attended with pain or griping, the hot fomentation to the abdomen should also be used. To effect a cure, the dietetic and other habits which produced it must be discontinued. The diet should consist principally of good, ripe fruits, coarse bread, cracked wheat, oat and rye meal mush, etc. No sugar or fine flour. Daily, active exercise in the open air is important. No occupation should be followed in which the body is kept in a bent or cramped position. Kneading, shaking, and percussion of the abdomen will be found very useful and efficient, also any gymnastic exercises in which the body is bent, compressed, or twisted. These exercises should be practiced regularly every day, and with as much vigor as possible without producing pain or soreness.—Herald of Health.

EXPANDING THE LUNGS.—Step out into the purest air you can find; stand perfectly erect, with head and shoulders back, and then, fixing the lips as though you were going to whistle, draw the air through the lips into the lungs. When the chest is about half full, gradually raise the arms, keeping them extended with the palms of the hands down, as you suck in the air, so as to bring them over the head just as the lungs are quite full. Then drop the thumbs inward, and after gently forcing the arms backward and the chest open, reverse the process by which you draw your breath until the lungs are empty. This process should be repeated three or four times immediately after bathing, and also several times through the day. It is impossible to describe to one who has never tried it the glorious sense of vigor which follows this exercise. It is the best expectorant in the world. We know a gentleman the measure of whose chest has been increased by this means some three or four inches during as many months.

HOW TO PURIFY THE BLOOD.

"What is the best mode of purifying the blood and invigorating the system?"

To purify the blood, breathe large quantities of pure air, produce a free perspiration from the entire surface of the body, either by exercise or the vapor or hot-air bath or wet-sheet pack; drink freely of soft water, and live upon a very plain and abstemious diet. To invigorate the system, obey the laws of health in every respect as far as possible.—Herald of Health.

AROUSE YE.

Arouse ye! arouse ye!
Gird on your armor now;
Lo, on the mountain's brow
Heralds proclaim,
"Jesus is coming!" Haste ye to meet him;
With joy all shall greet him,
Who, through the long ages, have loved his dear name.

Arouse ye! arouse ye!
All ye who love him well,
Quick the glad tidings tell,
Jesus is nigh.
Come, dreamers, casting your vain dreams aside,
World, look on Him who died,
Coming a conqueror, no more to die.

Arouse ye! arouse ye!
Let all your rest be o'er,
Till time shall be no more,
Echo the cry,
That over the mountains exultingly swells,
Sweeter than silver bells—
"Jesus is coming! redemption is nigh.

Arouse ye! arouse ye!
How can ye slumber on,
When night is almost gone,
Hast thou no fear?
Hast finished the work thy God gave to thee?
From the world art thou free?
Wilt thou rejoice when the sign shall appear?

BABYLONIANISM.

About one thousand and eight hundred years before the birth of Christ, there lived an Assyrian Queen, whose armies, commanded by her son, subdued nearly the whole of Asia and Egypt. She was called by the Assyrians, Astarte or Athor, and was subsequently known and worshiped in different countries by the names of Asphrodite, Cybele, Semiramis, Isis, and Ashtaroth, by which last name she is frequently mentioned in Holy Scripture. She had a magnificent temple at Zidon, served by three hundred priests. Her son was called Assarac, and was known and worshiped in other lands by the names of Adonis, Horus, Apollo, and Tammuz, which last name is mentioned in Ezekiel 8: 14. Then the Lord was revealing the abominations that existed amongst the people that professed to be his servants; and he says in ver. 13—15: "Turn thee yet again, and thou shalt see greater abominations that they do. Then he brought me to the door of the gate of the Lord's house which was toward the north; and, behold, there sat women weeping for Tammuz. Then he said unto me, Hast thou seen this, O son of man? turn thee yet again, and thou shalt see greater abominations than these." This individual is supposed to be a son of the Nimrod of Scripture. By this Queen Astarte, the Chaldean mysteries were invented for the purpose of forming a distinct class of mankind, drawn from all the races whom she had conquered, who having resigned their individual nationality, might become altogether devoted to herself. This was her primary object. Once admitted into this class or order, they were no longer Babylonians, Assyrians, Egyptians, or Arabians, but members of a mystical brotherhood or priesthood, over whom was placed a pontiff or high-priest. This order was divided into certain classes or ranks, the higher taking the vow of celibacy, the lower being permitted to marry. Elated by the success of her original project, the queen eventually pretended to be an incarnation of the divine Spirit, the bride of the supreme Father, and the Queen of heaven, the being who was destined to bruise the serpent's head. Henceforth, therefore, she became the object of worship in Assyria, as also did her son, whom she proclaimed to be the Son of God, the Deliverer, the Messiah, whose heel the serpent had bruised; he having been killed in one of his wayfaring expeditions. The exact resemblance of the Babylonian goddess, as shown on the cylinders and terra cotta figures found at Babylon, by Sir Robert Kerr Porter, to the images of the Madonna and child, as used by the church of Rome, is truly striking. The ostensible objects of worship in this new system of religion were the supreme Father; the incarnate female, or queen of heaven; and the false Messiah, or deliverer, her son; but the last two, viz., the queen of heaven and her son, were in reality the only objects of worship, as the supreme Father was said not to interfere in mortal affairs. . . . .

No doubt, this system was the commencement of the great ancient apostasy from the knowledge of God, for we must remember that this queen lived soon after the deluge. From Babylon, this apostasy spread unto the ends of the earth, and subsequently divided into three grand schisms, each having its own pontiff or high priest, each pretending to be the true, though all continued fundamentally alike, and all alienated from Jehovah, the Creator of heaven and earth. These schisms were centered in Babylon, Memphis, the capital of Egypt, and in Thibet. From "Reminiscences of Tartary, Thibet, and China, in 1844-45-46," we learn that the system continues to this day in full force, in Thibet, as originally established, and the exact similarity of the whole system in Thibet with the religion of modern Rome is truly striking. The images of the woman and child, the queen of heaven and her son, the monks and nuns, the dresses and the priests, the confessional, the doctrine of purgatory and the merit of men's works, together with the absence of anything like truth on the subject of the atonement, justification, and the salvation of sinners, proclaim aloud the identity of the religion of Thibet with the religion of modern Rome.

But to return to Babylon. In this mystical brotherhood there were distinct classes: to the first, the literal meaning; and to the second, the mystic sense of the religion was communicated. In the one class, the queen of heaven was the chief object of worship as the incarnation of the divine Spirit; but in the other, the initiated were taught that Jehovah, the Creator of the world, was a cruel tyrant, hating human happiness, that the prince of the power of the air, Satan, who was the true god taking compassion on mankind, had sent Assarac, or Tammuz, the son of the queen of heaven, who was in reality Satan's son, to be man's deliverer from the power of Jehovah, that he would free all those who worshiped him and his mother from the bondage of the body in which man's spirit had been imprisoned by Jehovah, the Creator; that Assarac would again become incarnate for final victory, and that his worshipers should dwell with him forever in disembodied felicity. This creed is held in Assyria, now called Koordistan, to this day. The initiatory rite, in this system, was immersion in water, after which, the priest made the person pronounce a formula, renouncing his nationality, and devoting himself entirely to the queen of heaven; after which, he marked his forehead in mystic characters, with a mixture of salt, spittle, and water. The individual was then placed under an instructor, to whom he confessed his every thought, and when pronounced worthy by the teacher, he was admitted to the interior or higher class, and made acquainted with the mysteries of the system. He was then sprinkled with holy water, and presented with a cake called "mola," and it is very remarkable that the same name, "mola," is now applied in Italy to the wafer used in the mass. This cake he ate in honor of the queen of heaven, and swore at the same time to be faithful to her. These cakes are spoken of in Holy Scripture, by Jeremiah 7: 18, "The women knead their dough, to make cakes to the queen of heaven, and to pour out drink offerings unto other gods, that they may provoke me to anger." When warned by the prophet concerning their apostasy from Jehovah, we find the women of Israel replying, though Jerusalem was destroyed, and the land an astonishment and curse at that time, for this very abomination: Jeremiah 44: 16–19, "As for the word that thou hast spoken unto unto us in the name of the Lord, we will not hearken unto thee. But we will certainly do whatsoever thing goeth forth out of our own mouth, to burn incense unto the queen of heaven, and to pour out drink offerings unto her, as we have done, we, and our fathers, our kings, and our princes, in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem: for then had we plenty of victuals, and were well, and saw no evil. But since we left off to burn incense to the queen of heaven, and to pour out drink offerings unto her, we have wanted all things, and have been consumed by the sword and by the famine. And when we burned incense to the queen of heaven, and poured out drink offerings unto her, did we make her cakes to worship her, and pour out drink offerings unto her, without our men?" i. e., without the approval of our husbands. No, all were agreed. Hence we see how firmly rooted was the apostasy in their hearts, and how this Babylonish system had usurped the place of truth in that special nation which God had separated from all other people to witness for himself in the earth; and we learn the true cause of God's righteous indignation against them. The initiated were required to keep three feasts in honor of the goddess; the feast of her birth, corresponding with the 25th of March, Lady-Day; the feast of her assumption into heaven, and re-union with the deity on the 8th of September; and the feast of her son's birth on the 25th of December.

This is a brief outline of the system by which ancient Babylon was distinguished; spiritually considered, that is, in reference to Him who is a Spirit, and requireth men to "worship him in spirit and in truth," who declares of the apostate heathen, by Paul, in the Epistle to the Romans, 1: 19, "That which may be known of God is manifest in them; for God hath shewed it unto them; so that they are without excuse; because that, when they knew God, they glorified him not as God, neither were thankful; but became vain in their imaginations, and their foolish heart was darkened." My object is not only to show that the system of religion by which modern Rome is distinguished in this day is identically the same with the ancient Babylonish apostasy from the revealed will of God, but I hope clearly to prove that an actual union was effected in the fourth century after Christ, between the offices of the Bishop of Rome and the High Priest or Pontiff of the Babylonish mysteries, between apostate Christianity and the religion of Ashtaroth; so that, thenceforth, the Roman Pontiff, instead of being the apostolic successor of St. Peter, as he professes to be, is the high priest of Astarte or Ashtaroth, of Assarac or Tammuz. Then if we thus dispel the halo which exists to so many eyes around Rome and her system, we shall settle the question. Whilst the worship of the queen of heaven spread far and wide in Asia, Egypt, and Arabia, it seems to have made no way amongst the barbarous tribes of the north, who, pouring down upon Assyria in the year 560 B. C. destroyed Nineveh and occupied Babylon. The Chaldeans found their religion at first tolerated and patronized, but subsequently opposed by the conquerors. Various rebellions followed, till at length the city was taken and sacked, and the inhabitants slaughtered by Xerxes in the year 487 B. C. Xerxes removed the capital to Shushan, in Persia, and whilst the soldiers fled to Thibet, the priesthood of the queen of heaven sought refuge in Pergamos, and finally established themselves there, making it the centre of their system, as Col. Chesney shows, in his very able and interesting work. Those who are well acquainted with the Bible will not fail to remember the remark made by the Holy Spirit, upon this city, "I know where thou dwellest, even where Satan's seat is." "He that hath an ear to hear, let him hear what the Spirit says unto the churches." Pergamos was the headquarters of this great apostasy in St. John's day.

We now proceed to trace the actual connection between the Babylonish system and Rome. When the Etrurians emigrated into Italy, from Lydia, they brought with them a religion and rites corresponding with the Chaldee mysteries, as is clearly shown by their celebrated monuments. Their images of the queen of heaven perfectly agree with the early representations of the Romish Madonna, both in figure and in costume, and several of the old Etrurian images are worshiped at this day as Madonnas. This people at a very early period after their arrival, had set up in Etruria a Pontifex Maximus, or supreme pontiff, who with them was above all law, and exercised a veto upon all proposed laws and measures which he considered displeasing to the Deity. He was head of the priesthood, and had the power of life and death over them. From the time of Numa, the Romans (Rome being in Etruria) had accepted the supreme pontiff as their civil chief. Julius Cæsar, the first emperor, was made supreme pontiff on the death of Metellus, having been previously made priest of Jupiter at the age of sixteen, and becoming heir to all the rights, powers, and titles of Attalus the Pontiff, King of Pergamos, who had made Rome his heir by will, the Roman emperor became also the head of the Babylonian priesthood, the supreme pontiff of the queen of heaven.

In the year 218 A. D., the Roman army quartered in Syria, having rebelled against Macrinus for having kept them encamped during the whole winter, unanimously elected Emperor Heliogabalus the high priest of Cybele, at Hierapolis. He was shortly afterwards chosen supreme pontiff by the Romans, and thus did all the western branches of the Babylonian apostasy centre in the Roman Emperor. The first act of the new Emperor Heliogabalus (one of the greatest monsters that ever disgraced humanity,) was to declare himself a fresh incarnation of Assarac, and to proclaim himself, and his mother the queen of heaven, the alone objects of worship. He proceeded to the capital with the image of the goddess, and henceforth the Assyrian Queen or Babylonian harlot Astarte took the position at Rome which had previously been occupied by Jupiter. The Emperor of Rome continued to exercise the office of supreme pontiff till the year 376, when the Emperor Gratian refused to attire himself in pontifical vestments. "He justly observed," says Milner, "that as the whole nature of the office was idolatrous, it became not a christian to assume it," and he not only declined to perform the duties of the office himself, but refused to appoint even a deputy, as his predecessor Valentinian had done.

Religious matters soon became so disorganized that it was found absolutely necessary to elect some one to fill the office from amongst the people. Two individuals were recommended to the Emperor for the office of supreme pontiff; Symmachus, the prince of the senate, who had previously acted as deputy for Valentinian; and St. Damasus, then the so-called christian Bishop of Rome. This Damasus had been put forward in 366 for the Bishopric of Rome, by the Assyrian and Egyptian monks of Mount Carmel, a college of Babylonian worship, originally founded by the priests of Jezebel, long before the birth of Christ, and in actual existence at this day as a religious house in connexion with Rome. His election was distinguished by the slaughter of three hundred faithful christians who opposed the measure. In the year 378 this same Damasus was declared Pontifex Maximus or supreme pontiff, a title which the Pope of Rome retains to this hour. The imperial edict, conferring the pontificate is to be found in the Appendix to the Code of the Emperor Theodosius, in which it is declared that the new high priest of religion should be sole judge of religious matters, and that sacred things shall only be decided by priests. This man, Damasus, now united in himself the office of a christian Bishop, and all the rites, titles, and power of the high priesthood of Astarte, the queen of heaven, the Babylonian harlot. Satan had triumphed, the church which could not be overthrown, had now been successfully corrupted. A grand alliance was now formed. All were amalgamated, and henceforth there need be no disunion. Men had only to worship the queen of heaven under the name of Mary, and to call her child by the name of Jesus. The priests of the goddess had long been preparing the people for this measure, and had loudly proclaimed that the third person in the Holy Trinity, once revealed in Astarte, had again become incarnate in the Virgin Mary, and so widely had these views obtained, that at the Council of Nice, held some years previously, under Constantine, in the year 325, the Melchite portion of the council maintained that the three persons in the Trinity were the Father, the Virgin Mary, and their Son. At this council, the faithful remnant of christian men, anxious to secure the recognition of the Godhead of the Lord Jesus Christ, in opposition to the Arian, refrained from attacking the Melchite section, who held the Virgin to be divine, and their success was only secured by accepting the aid of such fearful allies.

We cannot describe the lamentable results which followed such a confederacy better than by quoting Dr. Newman's own words, in his Essay on Development:—"The Arian question opened a controversy it did not settle. It discovered a new sphere, if we may so speak, to the worlds of light to which the church had not yet assigned its inhabitant. Then there was a wonder in heaven! a throne was seen far above all created powers, mediatorial, intercessory, a title, a crown bright as the morning star—a glory issuing from the eternal throne—robes pure as the heavens, and a sceptre over all. And who was the predestinated heir of this majesty? Who was that wisdom, and what was her name? The mother of love, and fear, and hope, exalted like a palm-tree in Engeddi, and a rose plant in Jericho, created from the beginning before the world, in God's councils, and in Jerusalem was her power! The vision was found in the Apocalypse, a woman clothed with the sun, and with the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars. The votaries of Mary do not exceed the true faith, unless the blasphemers of her Son came up to it. The church of Rome is not idolatrous unless Arianism is orthodoxy." (p. 403.) Truly did the beloved disciple say—"Even now there are many antichrists, whereby we know that it is the last time." Truly did the Apostle Paul write of his day—"The mystery of iniquity doth already work." There was no new scheme, but the old apostasy still at work. . . .

We have referred to the monks of Mount Carmel. There had existed at Mount Carmel, long before the birth of Christ, a college of priests. The Romanists say, they were disciples of Elijah and Elisha, but let us remember those men stood alone in their day and generation, therefore, it is not likely that they should have founded a college. There is little doubt that the college belonged to the idolatrous priests of Baal and Ashtaroth, who ate at Jezebel's table. "The prophets of Baal four hundred and fifty, and the prophets of the groves four hundred." (1 Kings 18. 19.) We also find the names of these two idols coupled together in Holy Scripture, at a very early period in Israel's history; as for instance, (Judges 2. 13.)—"They forsook the Lord, and served Baal and Ashtaroth." These names evidently signify, Baal, the supreme father or lord; and Ashtaroth, the queen of heaven. In the second century after the birth of Christ, a man named Basilides was the high priest of this order at Mount Carmel. He was a man of profound knowledge, and first astrologer of the day. All the Chaldee leaders were magicians, as we learn from the Book of Daniel, for we find that Nebuchadnezzar sent to consult them about his dream. Basilides saw the progress of the gospel; it could not be overturned (he thought,) but it might be corrupted. Hence he proposed, like our Broad Church dreamers of the present day, to bring about an alliance of all sects and parties, who could unite in one common form of worship, without regard to the peculiar views which each might entertain. Basilides and his followers now joined themselves to the Christian church. Thus they secured a share in the election of pastors and bishops, and the worshipers of the queen of heaven could now, by exercising judicious reserve, slowly, but surely, introduce their doctrines. Henceforth no congregation could tell whether the pastors were worshipers of the queen of heaven, or believers in the God of the Bible; and no minister could tell whether or not the deacons of the church, or the most influential persons in his congregation, were worshipers of Astarte or Jesus Christ. The same part was thus played in the second and third centuries which was afterwards played by the Jesuits in the seventeenth century, at the period of the Reformation, who, pretending to be Episcopalians in one place, Presbyterians and Independents in other places, as best suited their purpose, disseminated their own views without suspicion.

Is not this very much the case in our own day? Are not the present enemies of the gospel those who creep in unawares into churches and congregations, insinuate themselves, and finally overturn and upset everything, nothing new but the same old working of the mystery of iniquity? Basilides was joined in his profound scheme by Ammonius Sacchus, a Greek by birth. He had settled at Alexandria, and was the first philosopher and metaphysician of the day, deeply skilled in human nature, by intercourse with mankind and experience. He was benevolent and well meaning; but alas! here was the failure, he was altogether ignorant of divine truth, by divine teaching. At length, this mighty philosopher applied to be admitted into the christian church at Alexandria. He was received, and became the instructor of the christian youths of Alexandria. The chief characteristic of this man's teaching was its defectiveness. He had only got at the husk and knew nothing of the kernel. The most distinguished of his pupils was the celebrated Origin. He had been sent early in life to Chaldea, where he studied and became initiated in the highest mysteries of the Assyrian apostasy. On returning to Alexandria, he became head of the school and finally bishop. During the reign of the Emperor Alexander Severus, himself a member of the Oriental apostasy, the whole weight of Origen's talents and influence was directed to aid the emperor in his design of uniting all creeds in one at Rome, and with a view to this end, he prevailed upon the emperor to add the name of Christ to the number of the gods. Origin then immediately changed his own name, originally Adamantus, adopting that of Origin, which signifies the son or offspring of Horus or Assarac. Suffice it to say that the views of Basilides were successfully advocated and enforced by the then so-called fathers of the church, Clement of Alexandria, Basil, Origen, and both the Gregories. They were entirely successful, yet these are the men of whom many falsely called Protestants boast, and from whose writings they seek to obtain testimony, instead of turning to the unerring word of the living God. We fully believe, that with the exception of Augustine, the whole of the men called Fathers, from the commencement of the fourth century downwards, were corrupt and dangerous writers, and the seeds of all errors are moreover found in all the earlier writers after the apostles themselves.

From the moment that Origin lent himself to the Emperor Alexander Severus, in his attempt to combine all creeds in one, from that very moment the dictinctive doctrines of the gospel ceased to be taught generally. . . . The atonement was no longer spoken of. The second advent of Christ and his future kingdom were denied; the resurrection of the body was explained away, and magic was maintained to be a true and lawful science. The conspiracy triumphed under the pontificate of Damasus, raised to that position by the introduction of such men and teaching as we have just referred to, into the christian church. The worship of the Virgin was everywhere set up in the year 381, moreover Damasus is said to have immediately after enforced it throughout his dominions. Mary was everywhere worshiped as the mother of God, the queen of heaven. Sir Isaac Newton states, that at the close of the fourth century, the worship of the queen of heaven had superseded the worship of Christ throughout the Roman empire. Gibbon considers the system of virgin worship as established throughout the Roman empire in the fourth century. The Romanists themselves admit that the worship of Mary was enacted by the Council of Constantinople 391, and universally sanctioned by the expulsion from church of all who refused it, in the year 431, when the faith of that church was finally established at the council of Ephesus. Under Damasus the heathen temples were restored and beautified, and the rituals re-established. One point alone was insisted upon, namely, that the many-named goddesses should henceforth be called Mary. Thus the queen of heaven occupied the place of the Lord Jesus Christ in the professedly christian church at Rome. The faithful loudly opposed this, they declared their hope and expectation to be that the Lord Jesus Christ would speedily return, take to himself his great power, and reign and set up his everlasting kingdom. Damasus declared that the millenium had already commenced, and expelled from the church as heretics all who looked for Christ's second advent and kingdom. In the East, things for a time wore a better appearance.

According to Dr. Newman the school of Antioch was practically protestant, but at length arose Gregory the Thaumaturgus, and proclaimed that the queen of heaven had appeared to him and miraculously instructed him to go forth and preach her worship. He did so with all signs, lying wonders, and magical performances. He used reserve, he spake mysteriously and eloquently; this plan succeeded, all the world went after him; he proposed to be received into the church at Alexandria, and the church not only received him, but made him bishop, though unbaptized and wholly ignorant of God's word. In one day he was baptized, confirmed, ordained, and consecrated bishop. The emperor alone was alarmed; he appointed Nestorious head of the school at Antioch, in order to check the progress of the apostasy. However ignorant on other points, we know not or care not, certain it is Nestorius has been stigmatized as a heretic, by Rome. (A common device nowadays with the enemy, respecting men whose teaching damages their craft, and is according to truth.) But at all events, he directed men's minds from the virgin to her Son. He declared that she was not the mother of God, that her Son derived only his human nature from her, and that, although blessed above other women she was but a woman still; in other words, he denied that God had become incarnate in the person of the Virgin; he denied the old Chaldean and then Romish doctrine, that the Virgin and not her Son should bruise the serpent's head. The bishops, clergy, and people were excited. The Emperor called a council, which assembled at Ephesus, and in the year 431 Nestorius was expelled from the church, and the worship of the Virgin was established in the Eastern branch of the Roman empire, as it had formerly been in the West. Solemn curses were pronounced upon all who refused to worship the goddess, and the festival of her assumption into heaven was imposed upon the falsely called church of Christ, to be observed throughout the empire on the 8th of September.—The Rainbow.

ODDS, ENDS, AND KINKS.

What will become of those who repudiate a literal resurrection of the dead, which God's word emphatically asserts; and who seek only the salvation of an abstract, immortal soul, for which the plan of redemption does not provide, and of which the Bible says nothing? Suppose God should take them at their wish, and give them what they have prayed for,—the salvation of an immaterial, uncompounded, intangible, immortal soul, without form or parts, without interior or exterior, and indivisible;—how would such a thing compare (if there be enough of it to call it a thing) with an immortal body, redeemed from the power of the grave, and "changed and fashioned like unto Christ's glorious body"?—Phil. 3: 21. What harmony is there in the faith that embraces the earth as the future home of the redeemed, at the same time claiming a conscious, active existence, in happiness or misery, for abstract spirits?

How perfectly absurd the popular view of theology appears to a believer in the utter mortality of man; and yet how mysterious are the developments of the fruit of truth. It has had for its home dens, caves, and rocks of the mountains, hovels, garrets, and tents. Its fare has consisted in hunger, thirst, nakedness, and stripes. Its destruction has been threatened and sought by those who professed godliness. Yet it was truth; yes, the mighty truth of God, which cannot be gainsayed. But why should it have to struggle so, and suffer, and bleed, and be so reproached? Why should it be so much shunned by the mass, while its only mission is to bless mankind? Let the wise answer. To me it is a perfect enigma. The efforts of those whom we regard as the advocates of much error, seem blessed of God. It may be said they preach some truth, and God blesses what little they do preach. This would be satisfactory if we could see tenfold more fruit in other directions, where we consider tenfold more truth is preached. But according to our idea of truth, the more we have of it, the more reluctant people seem to be to embrace it; and it is not only so now, but it has always been so. Why should the masses reject that which it is for their best interest to embrace? Why should God suffer error to rest in halls of wealth, while truth is trailing in the dust, and its advocates turned into the street? Why were hypocritical religionists suffered to wear purple and fine linen, while the true prophets of God were covered with goatskins and sheepskins? Why do the present advocates of truth have to drag their weary bodies in highways and hedges, while the advocates of error ride on silken cushions, and roll in affluence? Why do chiming bells and thundering organs call the devotees of error together, in spacious rooms, amid the rustling of silk and the fragrance of wealth; while the low chapel, in its plain appearance, constitutes the only shelter for God's faithful few, in all the city? If they are his, and have the truth, why are their voices silenced in decorated synagogues, when with burdened hearts they but reiterate the precious truths of God's word, pointing out the old paths? There is but one solution to the above questions.

God will have a tried people. He has chosen his people in "the furnace of affliction." It is through "much tribulation" we "enter into the kingdom of God." What we know we learn by contrast. So it is bitterness here, and sweet over there; dishonor here, but glory over there; sickness and death here, but eternal life and health there. O truth of God! thy bulwarks shall be my defense still. With the shield of faith, the breastplate of righteousness, and the helmet of salvation, I will hide behind thy massive walls, and bid defiance to thy countless foes. With thee will I live, when oblivion's waves cover thine enemies.

"HE CARETH FOR YOU."

"The Lord taketh pleasure in those that fear him, in those that hope in his mercy."—Ps. 147: 11.

Our first duty is to obey God in all things. We cannot expect his favor, or that we shall feel his approving smiles, unless we try to live up to his requirements. And who will say that his commands are grievous or hard to obey? Jesus says, "my yoke is easy, and my burden is light" Yet what frail, erring ones we are. How "we grovel here below, fond of these trifling toys." Is it not sometimes the case, that we almost fear to ask for the blessings we need and desire, because we have wandered from the fold, and lost the evidence of the favor of the Good Shepherd? Let us not try to hide our faults, and make clean the outside while conscious of having grieved our Master by our sin. No; let us rather humble ourselves, abase ourselves, confessing all, that he may exalt us in due time.

O may we keep close to his bleeding side. May we not be left to wander away from the Good Shepherd, who is ever watching over us to keep us from the snares that are set for us, and from the sin that doth so easily beset us. Let us live close to him, casting all our care upon him, for he careth for us. Yes; he who hears the young ravens when they cry, will not turn away his ear from the prayer of his humble little ones. O trust in him at all times, for his mercy endureth forever.

A BETTER WAY.

There are various habits and customs which are common among the people, and some of these habits are sinful and degrading. I propose to write a few words in a plain way about one of these, and with the help of the Lord I wish to suggest a better way. The bad habit to which I refer is evil speaking, or slander. It is easy to find occasion to speak against almost any one, and especially easy to such as have formed the habit of evil speaking. Reflect a moment and see who there is among men, or ever has been, who was absolutely without fault, and therefore beyond the reach of evil tongues. Adam and Eve, and most of their immediate successors, acted unwisely, sinfully, in some respects. And so did Noah on one occasion. Samson also, and David, and Solomon; and the tongue that delighteth in mischief can find something to say against all these and many others. But the slanderer, like other hunters, prefers living game. With the spirit of envy within he delighteth to rake up the evil reports that have been circulated about good people now living. And doubtless sometimes he manufactures, or makes up, from "whole cloth" foul slanders against the chosen ones.

But it is with the "little flock" that I wish to talk now. We sometimes hear more than we wish to, of evil speaking even among us. Says one, what shall we talk about? Allowing that you must talk, talk of the good that is done, and "speak not evil one of another, brethren." A good idea may be suggested by the direction given by our Master to his disciples. He says, "Into whatsoever city or or town ye shall enter, inquire who in it is WORTHY." There is a subject for you. Speak of the best deeds of the best men. You can hardly fail to feel better while you are speaking, and you will certainly feel much better when you lie down at night with the consciousness that you have done no harm to any one by thought, word or deed.

The divine record says that "David did that which was right in the eyes of the Lord, and turned not aside from anything that he commanded him, all the days of his life, save only in the matter of Uriah the Hittite." Who of our friends can show a fairer record than that, if the woful exception could be removed? And even that dreadful crime was forgiven; but malice, envy and slander would not forget, even when it was blotted out of the book of God's remembrance, as it is written, "their sins and iniquities will I remember no more." Nearly all who read this may remember what a good sister said of Satan himself. It was her habit to say something good of every person she spoke of. Her son said he thought his mother would have something to say in favor even of the old serpent. And sure enough, when the subject was presented she spoke of him as being a model of activity. There is an old and well known proverb which says, "Speak good of the dead or speak not at all." Let us all add, "Speak good of the living" also.

COVETOUSNESS.

Dear brethren, shall this prevailing sin prove to any of us a snare also, to drown us "in perdition?" Have we no reason to fear that this sin will destroy more professors of religion than any other, or all others as we were about to say, put together? Paul says, "Covetousness is idolatry;" and that "no man, who is an idolator, hath any inheritance in the kingdom of Christ and of God." Eph. 5. 5. O how many we fear will be cut off from lack of confidence, and of a practical faith in the plain declarations, as well as the sure promises of God's word. Why this grasping after the things of this world, or holding on to the same for selfish purposes? When inspiration plainly declares, "For the promise, that he should be the heir of the world, was not to Abraham, or to his seed, through the law, but through the righteousness of faith." "Therefore it is of faith, that it might be by grace; to the end the promise might be sure to all the seed;" Romans 4: 13, 16. Think you, my brethren and sisters, our title will not be sure? therefore we must secure and hold on to as much as possible now? This is worldly wisdom. This is the fatal snare. Not belief of a practical kind in the sure promises, not keeping the word of Christ's patience, therefore not kept from the hour of temptation.

O awake, and escape, and see what is promised to us if we are obedient children. "And if children, then heirs, heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ; if so be that we suffer with him, that we may be glorified together." Rom. 8: 17. Again, the sure promise is still further confirmed: "And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." Gal. 3: 29. Again, says Paul, "for all things are yours;" "all are yours; and ye are Christ's; and Christ is God's." 1 Cor. 3: 21–23. "For such as be blessed of thine shall inherit the earth;" "and their inheritance shall be forever." Ps. 37: 22, 18. Is not this enough to satisfy us? The day of full possession is near at hand. Praise the Lord.

FOLLOW THE LIGHT.

These are truly eventful times in which we are living. Wickedness abounds in high places, and signs portend that Jesus' coming is near at hand. It may not be this year, but surely the time cannot be very distant, when Christ shall set up an everlasting kingdom; and it behooves us as rational beings to make some provisions for an endless home with the pure and holy. During the late war, a union soldier was taken prisoner by the rebels, and incarcerated in the Andersonville prison-pen; but he finally escaped from that horrible den of filth and misery. He wandered about the swamp all day, not knowing in what direction to go in order to reach the Federal lines; but when night spread her sable mantle over the earth, he had no longer any doubt as to the direction he should take, so as to gain the Union Army, for the North star was shining brilliantly, and he journeyed on toward it, and soon reached the place where the banner of the free waved triumphantly.

God has set a light on a hill to guide us to the portals of endless rest; and if we follow the light that he has given us, we will surely reach that blissful haven. Supposing the soldier had not followed the light that was placed in the heavens, but turned back toward the enemy's land; would he not have suffered punishment, and perhaps death for his presumption? In some respects we are like the soldier. Perhaps we are just released from the bonds of iniquity; and declare that we seek a country, even an heavenly one; but we will never reach it except we follow the light. If we turn back, death, even eternal death, awaits us. If we turn to the left, we shall be punished for our presumption. Our heavenly Father has given us light in his word, and we need not be deceived; for there are sufficient directions marked out for us to follow; and if we journey on having confidence in our guide, and knowing that the directions he has given us are correct, we shall gather with the saints at the river, in the kingdom that is soon to come.

Rochester, N. Y. J. B. Wells.

Without an Enemy.—Heaven help the man who imagines he can dodge enemies by trying to please everybody! If such an individual ever succeed we should be glad of it—not that we believe in a man going through the world trying to find beams to knock his head against; disputing every man's opinion, fighting and elbowing and crowding all who differ with him. That again is another extreme. Other people have a right to their opinion, so have you; don't fall into the error of supposing they will respect you less for maintaining it, or respect you the more for turning your coat every day to match the color of theirs. Wear your own colors, in spite of winds and weather, storms or sunshine. It costs the vacillating and irresolute ten times the trouble to wind and shuffle and twist, that it does honest, manly independence to stand its ground.

The World's Crisis AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, April 1, 1868.

☞ Take Notice!

All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.00 a year.

☞ Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the Business Agent, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ MONEY ORDERS.

Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the office they send it to and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money, for anyone may draw the amount named in the order, if those names are given.

Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too.

Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to Geo. T. Adams, directing it to Miles Grant, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us YOUR NAME AND POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

☞ ATTENTION! ATTENTION!!

Our subscribers in Massachusetts, Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Ohio, will find their credit of money received for the Crisis on the strip pasted on their paper, which shows the date to which their subscription pays, instead of the No., as formerly acknowledged. Others will be sent likewise as fast as we get each State so arranged. So you can look at the date on your paper, and see if it is changed after sending us money.

BUSINESS CORRESPONDENCE.

In writing to the office on business, correspondents will please observe the following:

1. Be sure and write your POST OFFICE and STATE DISTINCTLY. DON'T FORGET IT. Some people write to us and leave off the address, and if in any way we chance to find out where they live, and write to them, they reply like this:

"I have taken the Crisis for a number of years, and you ought to know my address by this time."

It is not to be supposed that we should know the address of between eight and nine thousand subscribers; and besides there are several of the same name in different States.

2. Be very particular to sign your name so that we can read it. Some neglect to do this, and then blame us because the business is not properly done. We have many nameless letters on hand now.

3. Be sure and put business matters on a separate sheet from articles for the Crisis, or for the Editor. We very often have to read three or four pages to know what is to be done with money enclosed. We have not time to do this, and it is for the Editor only to read. Write your business plainly and briefly on a separate sheet.

4. Be sure and write appointments on a separate sheet, and sign your name.

5. If you are away from home, and send us money for the Crisis, be careful to tell us where your paper is sent.

6. In writing to have your paper changed, be sure and state where from, and where to, Post Office, County and State.

7. Do not write to have your address changed after such a date,—several weeks or months ahead. Wait till you want it changed, and then write.

8. In sending money, state whether for new subscribers or not.

9. In writing and referring to a previous letter, state what was in it, and do not expect us to remember what was in it.

10. If you see a mistake, write to us plainly and meekly, and we will cheerfully rectify it. Dont write us a "blow up." HARSH WORDS are not for christians. Be kind to all.

11. If you fail to comply with these few requests, and the business is not properly done, don't blame us, or call us dishonest, or any harsh names.

12. Be very sure and pray for us twice where you find fault and talk against us once.

A. P. MOORE, Clerk.

We hope these most reasonable requests will receive very careful attention by all who do business with the office; and it will save our faithful clerk much trouble and perplexity. Please do observe them. Will you?—EDITOR.

BABYLONIANISM.—Our readers will find an interesting article in another column, entitled "Babylonianism." We took it from the Rainbow, an able monthly, published in London, Eng. Those familiar with the teachings of the spirits will discover a great similarity between their present doctrines, and what they taught concerning the "Queen of Heaven" in ancient times.

"ARM! ARM!"

Notwithstanding all the professions of PEACE by Napoleon III., facts show that he is preparing for war as fast as possible. He is endeavoring to have his Empire so well armed and fitted for war, that no nation will dare to cross his path. We may expect some new developments among the great powers of earth before mid-summer comes.

The following is the latest news from Paris:—

"A letter from Paris says the armaments of France are pushed forward with incessant activity, spite of the universal cry of Peace! Peace! and the Garde Nationale is being enrolled as fast as possible. This latter fact does not add to the popularity of the administration. But the latter seems to care but little for this, the one great apparent concern being to arm, arm."

THE SUEZ CANAL.

When Napoleon III. decided to connect the Mediterranean and Red seas by a canal, he took an important step to advance his political and military power. That canal gives him the key to the East. The following shows the success of that great work:—

"The directors are pushing this enterprise with great vigor, and declare that it will be finished next year. Last January one hundred thirty-seven barges of merchandise passed through it from one sea to the other, and the receipts in 1867 amounted to 1,292,822 francs. The English Abyssinian expedition gives the canal a good deal of business."

MILFORD DISCUSSION.

Our late discussion with Moses Hull, at the town hall, in Milford, N. H., March 17th, 18th, 19th and 20th, has afforded us most decided satisfaction in its results. We shall not give any detailed report, but only mention a few leading points of our opponent. We presume he did as well as any one could for that side of the question. He is well acquainted with the Scriptures, a ready speaker, good reasoner, knows how to make the most of a point, and to get past a difficult one; and is well posted in Spiritualism. We discussed the following question:—

Resolved, "That the spirit of man exists in a conscious state after the death of the body, and can, under favorable circumstances, return and communicate with the inhabitants of earth."

His first and leading argument was based on the expression, "we are the offspring of God," Acts 17: 29. He claimed that the spirit of man is immortal bocause we are the offspring of God, who is immortal. To this it was replied that God is also omnipotent, omniscient, and created all things; therefore, if his position is true that man is immortal because his Creator has that attribute, he must, for the same reason be omnipotent, omniscieni, and have the power to create all things. To our surprise, our opponent assumed that man is omnipotent, omniscient and has the power of creation; and then asserted that A. J. Davis had made butterflies. We felt quite anxious for the proof, but that, of course, was wanting. He further asserted that all have an immortal spirit, which is God. We then inquired if he believed in a perfect God? He replied that he believed we are progressing continually, and that we shall eternally. Hence we learned that according to his creed, man is the highest, or most intelligent God, and that he keeps for ever progressing from infancy. According to his theory, God barks in the dog, neighs in the horse, sings in the bird, the cricket and grasshopper; mews and squalls in the cat, cries in the child, hoots in the owl, roars in the lion, hisses in the serpent, cackles in the hen, bites in the gnat, musquito, and bedbug; is dumb in some, deaf in others, blind, deaf and dumb, is young, grows old, is idiotic, crazy, gets drunk, lies, steals, seduces the virtuous, and is continually devouring himself in eating up other animals. We thought our opponent's theology had quite outstripped the heathen in its absurdity. Yet such is the result of a belief in the teachings of the spirits.

He further claimed that all who denied that the spirit of man is immortal are atheists. The reader will see the point in this. If the immortal spirit in man and all animals is the God, then it would follow that there is no God, if man and animals have no immortal spirits.

He admitted that the spirit—his God—could not make good manifestations when the organism is defective; and to illustrate his view of the matter, he compared the body to an axe, and the spirit to the wood-chopper; and then said, when he had a good axe he could do well chopping wood; but if the axe was very dull, and somewhat broken, he could not accomplish much. We inquired how he could chop when the axe was destroyed? The answer was not at hand.

He claimed that man is not a free agent, does not sin, needs no pardon from Jesus; that Christ was never raised from the dead, will not come again personally; but is now coming in Spiritualism. He said Elijah's body died, and denied that Lazarus died. Although Jesus said plainly, Lazarus is dead," our opponent claimed it was only a state of catalepsy. After we proved that the spirits are liars, he said he did not blame them for lying.

At the beginning of the discussion, he said, "God always teaches the same things in all places," and claimed that the spirit in man is God. After he admitted that many of the spirits—his Gods—are liars, we remarked that as "God always teaches the same things in all places," these sprrits could not be Gods, for they contradicted each other. We left him to get out of the difficulty the best way he could.

He said his spirit was as perfect as that of God Almighty, and had existed just as long; but it manifested itself in his present organism, seeing through his eyes, hearing through his ears, etc. We inquired if he recollected anything that took place before he came into his present organism? We received silence for an answer. Inasmuch as a physical body is absolutely necessary in order to see, hear, smell, taste and feel, we inquired how he could exercise these functions when the body was mouldering in the grave? We received no explanation.

He declared that "man's NATURAL demands are God's HIGHEST COMMANDS." According to this proposition, if man has a natural appetite for strong drink, then his God commands him to drink; and, if he has a natural desire to indulge in licentious practices; then the commands of his God are in harmony with his nature; but the Bible teaches that "the carnal [natural] mind is enmity against God" (Rom. 8: 7,) and every christian knows that this is true. If Satan can only make us believe that our "natural demands are God's highest commands," he may be sure of securing them as his subjects.

Our opponent also declared himself opposed to all laws for the purpose of regulating marriage. In short it was very evident that his position was in full harmony with what the Bible says the spirits of demons should do in the last days. The whole system of Spiritualism is opposed to Christ, God and the Bible; and according to the Scriptures is "an abomination unto the Lord." We trust that much good will result from the discussion, in causing some to renounce the delusion of the Devil and to embrace the religion of Christ.

MOSES AND ELIAS.

"ELD. MILES GRANT:—Respected Sir:—I received not long since a copy of your pamphlet, entitled, "What is man?" and have spent this evening examining it with much interest. Objections to such a literal rendering of every Biblical phrase, however, trouble me, chiefly in regard to such statements as appear on the 28th and 29th pages. You say, "Is it possible the Lord would say Moses was dead, when he was alive in heaven, or any other place?" I reply, is it possible that the Evangelists falsify when they declare (as in Mark 9: 4) that Moses really appeared on earth and talked with the Lord Jesus? Surely that scene upon Mt. Tabor could not have been a mere pantomime. Yet you declare, "We have got to learn from the Bible, that any part of man is conscious between death and the resurrection."

That scene on the mount of transfiguration was "between death and the resurrection," certainly; now, in all sincerity, am I to suppose that Moses and Elias were raised from the dead simply to appear for an hour to the astonished disciples, and to the Master, then to fall back again into unconsciousness until the final resurrection? We reply in your own phrase, "It is hard to believe such theology."

Wellesley, Mass. GEORGE G. PHIPPS.

It should be observed first that Moses died but Elias [Elijah] was translated, and did not see death. The record of the death of Moses is as follows:—"So Moses the servant of the Lord died there in the land of Moab, according to the word of the Lord. And he buried him in a valley in the land of Moab." Deut. 34: 5–6. In Joshua, we read: "Now after the death of Moses the servant of the Lord, it came to pass that the Lord spake unto Joshua, the son of Nun, Moses' minister, saying, Moses, my servant, is DEAD." Josh. 1: 1–2. We say again, is it possible the Lord would say Moses was "dead," when he was in heaven praising the Most High? How could he praise the Lord when his organs of speech were dead and in the grave?

We turn now to the transfiguration: "And, behold, there talked with him two men, which were Moses and Elias."—Luke 9: 30. It does not say one man and a spirit, but "two men;" hence it follows that Moses was there as truly as Elias. In Jude we read:—"Yet Michael the archangel, when contending with the Devil he disputed about the body of Moses, durst not bring a railing accusation, but said the Lord rebuke thee." Jude 9. We believe it is impossible to have Moses present without his physical organism, for that was what constituted him a man. It will be recollected that Peter proposed to make "three tabernacles," one for Jesus, "one for Moses, and one for Elias," which shows that Peter thought Moses was as truly present as Jesus or Elias; hence it was not a disembodied spirit, of which we find no proof in the Bible that there is such a thing in the universe.

It is absurd to suppose a man can actually talk without organs of speech; but Moses had previously died and been buried; therefore he could not be really present on the mount, and be talking unless he had been raised from the dead.

If it be said that in case Moses was raised from the dead, then Christ would not be the first fruits of the resurrection; it may be remarked that he raised the widow's son, Jairus' daughter, and Lazarus; but he was the first who was raised to immortality.

There is another view of this subject, which is also in harmony with the scripture. After the wonderful appearance on the mount, and their return to the plain below, "Jesus charged them, saying, Tell the vision to no man until the Son of man be risen again from the dead." The Greek word rendered vision is horama, and is defined as follows: "a thing seen, sight, appearance, a supernatural appearance, vision;" and Greenfield quotes this passage as an example. The word is derived from horao, which is defined "to see mentally," as well as to see with the eyes in common vision. The following are examples of the use of horama:

"And there was a certain disciple at Damascus, named Ananias; and to him said the Lord in a vision, Ananias. And he said, Behold, I am here, Lord. And he said unto him Arise, and go into the street which is called Straight, and inquire in the house of Judas for one called Saul, of Tarsus; for, behold, he prayeth, and hath seen in a vision a man named Ananias coming in, and putting his hand on him, that he might receive his sight."—Acts 9: 10-12.

"I was in the city of Joppa praying; and in a trance I saw a vision, a certain vessel descend, as it had been a great sheet, let down from heaven by four corners; and it came even unto me; upon the which when I had fastened mine eyes, I considered, and saw fourfooted beasts of the earth, and wild beasts, and creeping things, and fowls of the air. And I heard a voice saying unto me, Arise, Peter; slay and eat."—Acts 11: 5–7.

"And the angel said unto him, Gird thyself and bind on thy sandals; and so he did. And he saith unto him, Cast thy garment about thee, and follow me. And he went out and followed him; and wist not that it was true which was done by the angel; but thought he saw a vision."—Acts 12: 8–9.

"And a vision appeared to Paul in the night. There stood a man of Macedonia, and prayed him, saying, Come over into Macedonia, and help us. And after he had seen the vision, immediately we endeavored to go into Macedonia, assuredly gathering that the Lord had called us for to preach the gospel unto them."—Acts 16: 9–10.

The following are examples of horasis derived from the same root:—

"And it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams." Acts 2: 17.

"And thus I saw the horses in the vision, and them that sat on them, having breastplates of fire, and of jacinth, and brimstone; and the heads of the horses were as the heads of lions; and out of their mouths issued fire and smoke and brimstone."—Rev. 9: 17.

When the word horama is used to represent "a supernatural appearance," or "to see mentally," of course the things are not actually present. This was the case with Peter's "vision," and John's. The latter saw in vision "a new heaven and a new earth; but they were not realities at the time he saw them in vision, and yet they appeared real to him; so, when Moses and Elias appeared in "vision," it was not necessary that they should be really present. John saw in vision the unborn martyrs and heard them sing and talk, after the manner we see and hear persons in our dreams. While in that state they are realities to us. In that vision on the mount, the face of Jesus "did shine as the sun, and his raiment was white as the light." This appearance of the Savior was not a permanent one; for when he came down from the mount, he looked as before. We understand that in the vision he appeared as he will look when he comes into his kingdom; in his glorified state.

ELIJAH THE PROPHET.

As we have now come to the last days of the present dispensation, Satan is endeavoring to introduce counterfeits of prophets, of Christ himself, and of his words and teachings, so that if it were possible, he would deceive the very elect. It seems strange that any will believe what many are embracing; but the time has come when men have so far departed from the Lord and his word, that they are ready to adopt the wildest theories imaginable. Those who have once been intelligent, humble followers of Jesus, looking for his literal coming, are now led far from him and his truth by some one who may claim to be "Elijah the prophet," or some other ancient seer.

The following, which was received a few days since, is a sample of the deceiver's work in these times of peril:—

"FROM ELIJAH THE PROPHET.

To the World's Crisis, for the benefit of the world at large:

I have a few words to say in regard to the latter days, which won't last long. You are going to have war shortly on this earth. It will commence sometime in 1868, and in 1869 it will be the bloodiest war that ever was known; father against son, and son against father; and mother against daughter, and daughter against mother; every neighbor will be against one another; and about the close of 1869, the English, Irish and French will step in and clean out the United States, and then the Roman Catholics will commence their reign, and then the sun will forget to shine, and the moon will turn to blood, and then the Lord will pour out his last vial upon the earth, or have the seventh angel do it, and destroy the whole world in the twinkling of an eye. Of course some will say this is all false, but time will tell. I am going west for a few days, then I shall go through the Eastern States, and on the fourth of July, 1868, I will be in Davenport, Iowa, at which time I will make myself known among the people, and preach to them on the fifth, in the grove on the top of the hill, somewhere near the upper end of Main street, and then I will tell you a great many things that you are not aware of. It is altogether likely that John the Baptist will be there with me, and our blessed Savior too. This is in behalf of the world. Prepare to meet your God. From Elijah the Prophet. Other papers please copy."

Dubuque, March 2d.

"P. S. I will have the same mantle with me that smote the waters in olden times, and I will show to the people that the same mantle can smite the waters of the Mississippi, so that you can go through dry shod."

DARING ROBBERY.

This is an age of most daring deeds of wickedness; and the tide of evil is rapidly rising. It seems as though Satan did really rule in the hearts of men. Wickedness is carried on in the most systematic manner, by men high in office, and noted for their intelligence. So long as they are not detected, they are called "smart men." We do not think it best to fill our paper with the accounts of the horrid deeds of vice and blood, that are now so common. Let the following suffice for a sample:—

"PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 25, 1868. A daring bank robbery was committed at Scituate, about fourteen miles from this place, between one and two o'clock this morning. Four desperate villians went to the house of Mr. Albert Hubbard, Cashier of the Scituate National Bank, and proceeding to his sleeping apartment, surrounded his bed and then endeavored to intimidate him by threats of death, if he moved or made any noise. Finding that this did not succeed they bound and gagged him, subsequently disposing of his wife and little boy in the same manner. Two of the robbers then proceeded to the bank, leaving the other two to guard the family.

The former worked nearly an hour unsuccessfully in attempting to open the bank vault. Then returning to the house they placed a rope around Mr. Hubbard's neck, compelled him to accompany them to the bank, and then forced him to open the vault. This accomplished, they proceeded to take the entire property, without examination, including specie, bills and United States bonds. The value of their plunder will reach the sum of $25,000.

They then returned to the Cashier's house with Mr. Hubbard, bound the members of his family still more securely, and after remaining awhile to satisfy themselves that there was little immediate danger of detection, took their departure. As soon as they were gone, Mr. Hubbard commenced the process of extrication from his bonds. The manacles upon his wrists were a little large, and, his hand being rather small, he succeeded, after violent efforts, in slipping his hand through, and then unbound and removed the gags from himself and family. Without waiting to dress, he ran out and gave the alarm to the President of the bank, and messengers were at once dispatched to this city, where they arrived about 5 o'clock, A. M.

The probability is that the robbers took the steamboat train for Boston, which passed here about four o'clock."

NEW RELIGIONS.

It seems as if men were stretching their imagination to get up new systems of religion, and using all their powers to keep the "good old way" out of sight. They do not wish to acknowledge that their salvation depends on following and believing in Christ. They wish to find some new way of being saved and Satan is using all his ingenuity to invent some plausible plan of salvation, in which it will not be necessary to look to Jesus for eternal life.

The following, from the Boston Journal, of of March 25th, 1868, shows an effort to start another religious party, in which every man's idea of what is right becomes his standard of faith and practice; instead of making the Bible the only rule of faith and practice:—

RADICAL RELIGION. A meeting of the Radical Religious Association was held in Concord Hall last evening for the purpose of adopting a series of articles of belief, which should foreshadow the aims of the Society. The assemblage, some fifty in number, was called to order by Mr. Henry Damon, who read the articles of the creed which it was proposed should be adopted. These articles were as follows:

"We believe in one all pervading spirit which we call God. We believe that God acts through uniform laws, which ultimate in universal progress. We believe that the human soul is eternal and coeval with God, and that man ennobles himself, and maintains unison with God, by exercising his reason and heeding his intuitions. We believe in scientific truth, and by the light of that truth, all so-called miracles and supernaturalisms appear to us to be the conceptions of ignorance and credulity, and not founded in reason or fact. We recognize as truth, in all writings of the past, only such portions thereof as meet our spiritual wants, and bear the evidence of conformity with God's uniform laws. We believe that Love, Purity, Charity and Honesty are natural fruits of human development, and holding these views in common, we unite for mutual Religious and Social improvement in all the Virtues and Graces. We welcome all honest seekers after truth to our meetings and discussions, and hold ourselves in readiness to modify or change our statement of belief, should it appear to us at any future time to conflict with scientific truth, or with better and broader views of God or the progress and welfare of man."

He then said that the provisions of the creed were open for discussion, and invited all present to speak. Accordingly remarks were made by Mr. H. S. Morse, editor of the Radical, Mr. Damon, Mr. Coleman, Rev. James Freeman Clarke, D. D., and several others. The discussion was exceedingly metaphysical and took a wide range. The general tenor of the remarks, however, seemed to express a belief that each man's conception of what was good and just was the true basis of his religious faith.

The meeting lasted for about three hours and was finally adjourned till the 30th instant, when the subject will be further discussed, and some definite plan of action in regard to organizing a religious association will be determined on.

THE BOSTON CONFERENCE.

The friends in New Hampshire, on the line of the Concord R. R., who purpose to attend the meeting next week, will please take notice that, in order to obtain the advantage of the reduction of fare, they will please come on the Nashua and Lowell Road,—not over the Boston and Maine R. R. Those who come on the N. and L. Road can have a free return pass, as far as Nashua. *

SPRINGFIELD NATIONAL ADVENT CAMP-GROUND.

The Committee have published a lithographed plan of our new camp-ground, which gives a good representation of the shape of the ground, the circle for the seats, the lots for the tents, which are all numbered, the locations of the various avenues, buildings, etc., etc. The plan will be a great convenience for all who attend the campmeeting, and be interesting to those who do not.

The Young Pilgrim for April 1st.

An interesting and beautiful number.—Beautiful stories, beautiful poetry, and beautiful pictures. The young pilgrims will all like it. The contents are as follows:—

"That Eden Land" (poetry.) "The Beautiful Garment" that never fades or wears out—a conversation between a girl and her grandmother. The Caterpillars' talk about becoming a butterfly—exemplifying the Resurrection and the New Life. A little talk about "The New Song." An account of "The Star Shower in China." A large and beautiful picture of two lovely maidens "Gathering Snow-Drops," with poetry. "The Young Pilgrims' Love-Feast," with ten little testimonies from the pilgrim band. "I will begin now" to be the Lord's. "How to cure a Bad Temper." The Wee Ones' Column:—"Minnie and her Kitten"—Minnie teaching her to read, (with a cut.) "Every Bit of it,"—the little girl that gave her whole heart to Jesus, "every bit of it." "A Kiss for a Blow,"—or what a little girl did to her brother when he struck her. "The Sabbath School in Augusta." "The Kennebunk Band of Hope." Puzzles, Charades, etc.

One Thousand More.

Nearly 900 new subscribers for The Young Pilgrim were received in the months of January, February and March; mostly in clubs of ten to sixty, and by the efforts of about 100 of its friends. Thanks! And now, is there not another 100, or even 200, or 300, who will do as much as that, or more, in the months of April, May and June? Shall we not receive at least 1000 more? or even 2000? The season is favorable. With the coming of warm weather, many schools will be enlarged, and need more papers; new schools will be started, and frozen ones thawed out. In every such case, a little timely effort by its friends to introduce The Young Pilgrim, would greatly enlarge its circulation, and increase its means of doing good. Please send for specimen numbers, and begin the work as early as you can. Address the Editor,

WILLIAM B. HERRON, Boston, Mass.

YOUNG MINISTERS.

I am always glad to see competent young men enlist to preach the truth in these days of error. I acknowledge the obligation of those older to assist and encourage them, and I would hereby commend our Bro. W. Marlett, of Woodhull, Steuben Co., N. Y., to all the faithful in Jesus. Brethren, invite him among you. He will do you good, and you will have no need to be ashamed of him. He is older than many at his age.

THE MEMPHIS MISSION.

To the Church scattered abroad:—I thank God I am with you in tribulation and patience. We are having a heavy battle here; but God is with us. I never had such liberty in preaching the gospel as I do of late. All eyes are fastened on me, and ears opened to hear the word of God. I do not shun to declare the whole counsel of God. Sinners are being converted, church waked up, the Holy Spirit is with us, and the devil has got mad. We hear there is a plot laid to take our lives. While Bro. Leslie and myself were sitting in our room a few nights ago, in came a billet of wood through the window, smashing the glass. We understand it was by a Roman Catholic. I told Bro. Leslie it was a good sign God was at work. When God works, the devil always starts up his team. None of these things move us. I feel to thank God we have got a chance to suffer with Christ.

I like the spirit and language of St. Paul, who was not afraid to go up to Jerusalem to be bound, but was willing to die for the Lord Jesus. If our Advent preachers had more of the cause of God at heart, it would be much better for the cause. Get on the whole armor, and you can fight much better. Try it and see. It will be through much tribulation that we shall enter the kingdom of God. St. Paul says, "God forbid that I should glory save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ." "If we suffer with him, we shall also reign with him." It is a great thing to be just right in the sight of God. Those only will see God who are pure in heart.

This is the best place that God could put me in to fit me for his kingdom. There is nothing here that I desire but to get a church ready to meet Christ at his coming. I wish you could be here and see the fruits of our labor. God has converted some of these freedmen right into the love of Christ and the patient waiting for his coming. They talk as good faith about Christ's soon coming as you ever heard at the North; and they feel it. We are all looking for Jesus to come soon. Our hearts beat high for glory and immortality. God is doing a great work here. Thank his blessed name. We see some very bad cases here, and still they profess religion.

As regards the marriage covenant, they have not thought much of it until of late. We have to attend to many of those cases. A few days ago a mulatto freedman and wife came some twenty miles to see us, and hear us preach. After we got through, he arose and told the congregation it was God's truth. He had seen it in vision some two years ago, and he and his wife had been going from house to house warning the people to get ready, for Christ was soon coming. After having some some talk with him, I found he had never been married. Said I to them, "How long have you been living this way?" They said, "Twenty years." I told them it was wrong in the sight of God for them to live so. Said they, "We do not see it so. We have loved each other, and have always lived in peace, and we love God with all our hearts." I said, "I believe you are both christians; but understand, this sin God once winked at. When you were in slavery you could do no better; all your pretensions to marriage were a complete sham; but now the light has come, and you are no longer in darkness." Then I commenced quoting Scripture to him, and the word of God went home. He said, "Stop, brother, you have said enough. I see, I see, it is all clear now." They have since been married according to law. This man is a preacher, and God is with him.

You do not know the depth of heathenism down South, where the curse of slavery has blighted all good morals. This land lies in heathen darkness. Those poor freedmen do not know what sin is. Under God we are doing a great work here. I tell you if God has not sent us here, he never sent his servants anywhere. I am happy in God to think he has counted me worthy to be put in trust with the gospel to preach down South. When I stand up to speak, God starts up with me, and the truth cuts on the right hand and on the left. I expect to go up from those southern climes.

Glory to God, my soul is happy in him. I want you to pray for me. I have the heart complaint. I had a very bad spell a few days ago. Bro. Leslie was afraid that I was going to die; but they prayed for me, and God has raised me up again. Thank his blessed name. I do not want to die until the field is all laid out. I love to suffer with my brother Leslie and sister Northrup. I do not wish to shirk out, and throw the burden on somebody else.

I received seven barrels of potatoes and onions from Bro. Gideon Gray, of Bristol, R. I. God bless the good brethren. His wife sent $6.20 to buy meat to go with her husband's potatoes. $1.20 of this was sent by her grand-children. God bless their little hearts. I received $2.00 from Sr. Williston, of Bristol, R. I., sent by little Bennie and his sister, to be given to some poor, ragged children. I have given it to them. It made them laugh all over their faces. May Heaven smile on those little children. I received one barrel of clothing from Sr. Humphrey, of No. Scituate, R. I. It came in good time. Thank God and the church for sending those needed garments. I received a barrel of beans from Bro. Miles Pray, of No. Scituate, R. I. God bless that good brother. O what great good those beans will do us. In hope,

STAR OF HOPE MISSION.

BRO. GRANT:—Many of the brethren and sisters where I have visited, and others, desire to know, through the Crisis, what the expenses of our Mission are per month. For the encouragement of those whose hearts are with us in this highway and hedge work, thus far we have "lacked nothing."

First, our Mission rent will be $100 till the first of May. Four missionaries, $10 each. Our missionary at Hackensack, $30. Out of this she must pay her rent, find her table, buy her clothes, wood, or coal; and as the Doctor has removed Sr. Williams, and also withdrawn all his aid, this $30 rests on us for the present, till we see what the Lord will do for us. Then we have Sr. Boynton there, whose husband is with Mother Howard, in Virginia, tramping through the woods, preaching and baptizing in the name of the Lord. Sr. B. is much liked by both white and colored people, and we think will be an instrument in the hands of the Lord for doing much good.

Our table, with those who labor with us, and what is given away, costs about $25 per week. Thus our monthly expenses are $270, to say nothing of burying the dead, and helping to pay the rent of the old, infirm, and sick ones, who must go to the Poor House unless we do it. Nearly all of this help comes east of N. Y. City. I am often astonished how God has sent us means, especially through this winter; we have had so much suffering among the class that we visit, and it is the Lord who sends help; because in visiting the churches, I never speak of my mission work unless it is positively requested. How glad I am that I am not dependent on men, for they would surely fail me. But God's promises never fail. He is a very present help in every time of trouble. And the great secret is prayer. How many hundreds who read the Crisis pray so earnestly for his choicest blessings to rest upon us, and that we may have souls for our hire. It is even so. Still pray for us. A few months or weeks, and all will be over. The Lord will come, and we shall be at home with Jesus. Amen. Your sister in the highways and hedges,

New York, Mar 19. ANNA E. SMITH.

READ, AND ACT!

They say I am Tract Agent for the State of Maine; that being the case, I must have some money, that I may buy the little live preachers and send them out into destitute places, where the poor, who cannot get the words of life from men's lips, may read them from their pens, and perhaps be saved.

Come, who will send me a lot of the Lord's tens and fives, and threes, and twos, and ones, just as he has prospered you, that I may begin my work? I have just come from a new place for our doctrine, where two noble men becoming interested (by a tract, perhaps; I will ask when I go again) have been turned from the Baptist church. One of them came for me, and I sent an appointment, which was given out in the F. W. Baptist house, many saying they wished to hear. But before I arrived, there was a consultation had, and some of the readers of the Morning Star, which styles us infidels, could not have that pestilent fellow in their house, and one was very bitter with invective, wishing I might die on the way; but thank the Lord, I did not, and I trust I shall live to go again. Well, we turned aside to a good large school-house, well filled, and the word took effect. A number of the F. W. Baptists confessed the truth the second evening, and how the tracts did go. They came round me for them like salt-hungry sheep. I am going again in a few days, and shall carry another bundle. They will help me preach so much.

So all our preaching brethren want to take along with them a bundle of these silent, effective workers, to scatter and leave where they go, that they may stay in a community, and preach after we may have left for other fields. Send your money to James A. Libby, West Poland, Me. J. A. LIBBY.

Correspondence.

From Bro. P. A. Smith.

BRO. GRANT:—I arrived here last Tuesday, the 10th, and commenced meetings Tuesday evening in the Court House, with a good, intelligent and attentive congregation of the most influential part of the city. The interest has increased so rapidly that all other topics give way to the new and startling views of the Bible we set forth and maintain. Lawyers, doctors, ministers, and a greater number of smart, intelligent citizens than I ever saw in the same number of inhabitants, are in constant attendance at our meetings, and quite a number of them are very strong believers and advocates of the doctrine, so far as they have heard it set forth. The excitement is most intense all through the city, and the surrounding country. I have been in a great many new places, and seen a great many interesting times, but I must say this is one of the most interesting openings I ever saw. Not one has presented an objection publicly yet. O what a field this State is for the spread of this last call of mercy to the children of men; and what an intense thirst and desire the people have for us to come into their neighborhoods and preach to them the word of life.

But no sleepy, selfish novice will do or answer here; for the people are far more intelligent than I thought they were, and on their guard against being imposed upon; but when they are convinced and believe, they take hold with all their heart. We discover the direct interposition of the Spirit in all this work. It is as plain to be seen as the effect of the wind in the forest. It is wonderful, I assure you. It seems as though the whole country was impressed with a presentiment that some awful event was at hand; consequently, they want to hear for themselves. The Devil has done our advertising for us, at his own expense, by sending his emissaries through the State with the most absurd stories about us, and what we preach; such as setting the time to go up on the 22nd of Feb., and putting on white robes, and together with the Advent church getting on the Market and waiting all night for the Lord to come. Those very stories have caused the people to want to hear and see for themselves.

Glory to God for the fulfillment of the promise—"All things work together for good to them that love God." I will praise him for such a display of his goodness and power which attends the proclamation of the gospel of the kingdom. Now is the time, the set time to give the South the gospel. The North has had it for a witness; and as they have freely received, they must also freely give to those whose hearts the Lord has opened to receive the truth. If the North could know what we know, they could not doubt in this matter. O my dear brethren, you who have means, but do not know how to use it for the glory of God, only think of the millions of the poor in the South that can hardly get their bread, and are starving for the bread of life. Take your means, put it on the altar, and then offer yourself as a living sacrifice, and let God send you out, and then you will understand what I say. P. A. SMITH.

From Bro. J. G. Hook.

BRO. GRANT:—We arrived in safety last evening, though we had a narrow escape, as the tire of one of the drive wheels of the engine broke, and went through the boiler. We, of course, could not go on until a messenger went to Trenton, N. J., and another engine came to our rescue. The train kept on the track, and no one received harm. We were greeted very cordially by our much esteemed brother, F. H. Burbank, who, under God, is doing a great and glorious work, as far as we are able to judge the short time we have been here. I think much of the "Dorcas Mission," and also of the "Star of Hope Mission" in New York. They are doing great good. The results of these missions can not be known till the day comes when God shall judge the world by his Son Jesus Christ.

I had a good opportunity, during my stay of four weeks in New York, to learn many things concerning the efforts and labors of Srs. Smith, Boide, and Hanford, who so faithfully toil and labor day after day in the wicked city of N. Y. I have not time, nor would you have space in our dear paper, to give an account of the dens of misery and want where they visit and labor. Some are sick, with no coal, nor food, and not a cent to buy any. One dear old saint, part Indian and part negro, had her last coal in her little stove. She had not a cent of money, no victuals, except a little Graham gruel which had been sent from the Mission two days before; and worse than all, she was sick with a felon on her hand, all alone in a basement room, where she had lived some six or more years; but had been lately ordered out by the landlord, because she could not pay her rent. She had seen better days. Srs. Boide and Hanford, who believe in God, called to see this aged pilgrim; and while at prayer with her, Sr. B. obtained the witness that her rent would be paid. The dear old saint had the money in a short time. One man came in and gave her three dollars in about thirty minutes, and another soon after made up the deficiency. Our God does hear and answer the prayer of faith.

One case more. One Sunday morning, I was requested to attend the funeral of a child. Sister Boide (whose heart is in sympathy with these sufferers) accompanied me to the place of the dead. It was a room about 14 x 14 feet, just large enough for a bed, and no window in it. Eight human beings dwelt there, —two families. Such a sight! There was a table, on one end of which was food, and several eating; on the other end of the same lay the coffin, with the dead child in it. The head of the coffin was next to the victuals, where they were eating, and the lid was open. The child had been dead since Thursday, and the mother could not bury it before for the want of $19.00, which was exacted by the undertaker. So the dead and the living remained in that small room until the fourth day. Such are some of the scenes in New York. You who love to do good and communicate, help these missions.

Brethren, you would feel so well to be there and see the letters come with the needful, and barrels packed with divers articles. How cheerful those dear missionaries are, when the expressman comes with a barrel from one place, and a box from another, hoping they contain articles that are needed for the many who are continually ringing the door-bell and calling for a little help this cold, hard winter. If you should see how thankful they all are, you would be all fired up with new zeal in the Master's cause. "Give, and it shall be given to you." Don't send things that will cost more for freight than they are worth. Some do. Pay the freight if you can.

Our meetings in New York, at 24th St., and corner of Grand and Allen Sts., have been attended by Divine power from the beginning; also at the Mission. I don't know how many have been converted and reclaimed, but a goodly number. The ordinance of baptism was administered four Sundays in succession. Last Sunday thirteen more were baptized in the pool, in the large Baptist meeting-house, through the kindness of the pastor,—Elder Hodges, and the officers of the church, who gave us the use of the font, the rivers being full of floating ice.

The interest increased to the last. The church in West 24th St. is in a much better condition, being revived in the spirit of their minds and cemented together in love. May the good work go on. I send three new subscribers for the "World's Crisis." Brn., let each one send them, that it may live, and feed the flock of God. JOHN G. HOOK.

From Bro. H. Pratt.

BRO. GRANT:—The cause in Rochester is in nowise abating in interest or in numbers. New ones are coming along with us, and the great work of God is not only widening, but deepening as we near the shore. One of the students, who was preparing for the ministry, who has now come among us, said in our conference Sunday morning—I never knew what it was to be a pilgrim and stranger before, or realized what it was to suffer for Christ till now. The people are more than ever astonished at our increasing interest.

I have engaged to supply their desk, being satisfied that I can do more for the cause in this place and vicinity, than elsewhere. People from many of the western and southern states, and the Canadas, have listened and gone to tell the glad tidings everywhere. Bro. Himes' son, who was with us last Sabbath, said that Rochester was an exception to all other cities. While at the West this gospel was a success in the country, the cities could not be moved by it, only temporarily. Last evening another student, preparing for the ministry, said in our meeting, "I came to Rochester with the belief that man was immortal. I have given up that delusion. My Bible was a dry book; it is precious to me now." A gentleman in the meeting arose and said, "I never spoke in meeting; never went forward for prayers, have not yet endorsed all you advance, am a lover of music, go to church, set in nicely-cushioned seats, (for I dress well); listen to the sweet tones of the organ; but I had rather set on your hard seats, and hear what I hear here, than to attend any church in the city. When I hear christians extolling some great money-making project, I put my hand upon my wallet. I feel no concern about my wallet, with pockets open, among this people."

Pray for us, that the word of God may have free course, run, and be glorified. "In expectation sweet," Yours, H. PRATT.

P. S.—Bro. Sidney Hall's free tracts are finding great acceptance in Rochester and vicinity. The Lord bless the donor.

From Sr. A. E. Smith.

BRO. GRANT:—I have just returned from a blessed visit among the Shinnecock tribe of Indians, on Long Island. Sr. Boide and myself were there eleven days, and the Lord gave us ten souls for our hire. We had meetings every afternoon and evening. Every night the church was crowded. There were several teams down from Good-Ground, and also from Tuckahoe, three or four evenings with white people. The first Sunday evening there were four forward for prayers, and one converted. We found those who were converted when we were there three years ago this month still holding on, and making good workers in the church. Some of them were away, and we did not see them, but learned they were doing well. O how encouraging to know that our work in the Lord is not in vain. To be converted is one thing; but to stay converted is another. In these days of fashionable religion, it does me good to see men and women get the right kind, that will stand persecution; and I am so glad to-day there is a know so religion, and that is the kind the dear Indian children got.

We stopped at Good Ground on Monday night, and preached for the Methodist people. The house was crowded. Fourteen of the Indians came that far with us, and staid all night. Poor creatures, when we bade them good bye, they looked as though they had lost their last friend. It does seem hard, drove off the land by the white people, and then nobody care for them. O when will Jesus come and judge with equity? O Lord, hasten the time, for thy people's sake. Death has been there since our last visit. Three have died from our church, and one from the other church. I called to see a white sister, and took dinner. She gave me a barrel of turnips, the freight of which was only a dollar; so it was a cheap barrel to me. This sister is getting the light, but her church is in a dreadful way about it. I guess it will not make any difference with her; if she is the Lord's, he can do his own work. Praise his holy name. I would say to the friends, we have school books enough now to supply our different missions for the present, with the exception of histories, or some interesting books that will do for our circulating library.

RECEIPTS. From Maria J. Jones, Canaan, N. H., $1.00. A small box of books and papers from J. Weston, St. Charles, Mo. The express was $2.00. A trunk from Miss Lizzie Nixon, Springwater, N. Y.; also from Sr. Ruth Spurr $1.50, Sr. Eunice Ruggles $1.50, Sr. Susan Harris $4.00, all of Hillsborough, N. Y. From Oquawka, Ill., $10.00.

New York, Mar. 25th. A. E. SMITH.

From Bro. J. Wendell.

BRO. GRANT:—I have just returned home after an absence of over three months, and I find a number of letters inviting me to come and preach the word to them. Now as I would not have those dear brethren think me indifferent to their calls, will you please give this a place in the Crisis, which I hope will be a sufficient apology. Yours in the blessed hope, J. WENDELL.

Edenboro, Erie Co., Pa.

From Bro. L. Allen.

BRO. GRANT:—For the first time I improve a few moments in writing for the Crisis. When I read the warm letters of the dear brethren and sisters, I feel moved to add my testimony to theirs. The year that is just past has been one of deep trial; also one during which I have enjoyed the most of God's blessing, and a constant peace, that has been like a river, flowing deeper and wider. I attended the conference in Springfield last week. I have not seen the church more united, or on better ground than now. They are growing in numbers and graces. Thank the Lord. There never has been a time in our history, when the brethren and sisters, of one talent, could be more useful in the advancement of the Lord's cause than now. Our success depends upon God's being with us. Without him, we can do nothing. Christ strengthening us we can do all that he requires. Amen.

I used to go to meeting to get a blessing; now I carry one with me. Lambs need good feeding in the spring, or they will perish with cold and hunger. If left to themselves, they often ramble about and pick up something poisonous. So young converts need to be fed with the sincere milk of the word, that they may grow thereby. Otherwise, they go about seeking food, and pick up errors that checks their growth. Some doctrines that are taught in these last days are as poisonous to the young converts as low laurel is to the sheep and lambs. I have read Bro. Stetson's piece in the Crisis of Feb. 19th six times, and I mean to read it until I can remember and practice it in every meeting I attend. I think it will do us all good. Yours patiently waiting for the Lord. LEVI ALLEN.

Chicopee Falls, Mass., Feb. 27th, 1868.

From a Theological Student.

BRO. GRANT:—I embrace the present to inform you that I am and have been investigating and comparing the doctrines which you and Bro. Pratt have set forth here and elsewhere, with those which I have been in the habit of harboring. It begins to seem as though I had been harboring error; and if such proves to be the case, I am heartily in favor of discarding it as soon as possible. When I first heard of your new doctrine, I, of course, had some curiosity to hear you, but I must confess that I listened with no small degree of prejudice, admitting at the same time the clearness with which you presented your subject. I would go for the purpose of becoming somewhat more posted, if nothing more, and finally I became considerably worked up, and thought upon the whole I had better drop it entirely, until I entered upon my theological course; but did not yield wholly to that conclusion. My chum and I would consider the matter occasionally, and sometimes would conclude to do one thing, and sometimes another. I was so striven with by the Spirit that I dropped my studies. I have set about investigating which seems to be my duty. I am not the only one who appears to be considering these things. I may say that I have thrown aside all prejudices. I am candidly seeking for the whole truth as it is in Jesus, and I trust the Holy Spirit, whose guidance I have, will lead me into the path of rectitude. J.

BRO. H. R. TRYON, Orangeport, N. Y., March 2nd, 1868, writes:—"Although we are strangers to each other in the body, yet I feel that we are indeed one in spirit, as regards spiritual things. I have long been a reader of the "Crisis," and esteem it a valuable paper; in fact the best religious paper that I ever read; and as we seldom have Advent preaching near us, the sermons and writings it contains are feasts to our souls. It appears to me that a person that is familiar with the teachings of our Savior, and also the prophecies, must see by the signs daily fulfilling before our eyes, that the day of the Lord is right at hand, and yet men will laugh and make sport of these warnings."

Obituaries.

BAKER. Fell asleep in Jesus, in Philadelphia, Jan. 15th, 1868, Eliza, the beloved wife of J. G. Baker, in the sixty-first year of her age.

She was the child of pious parents, and her father's house was the pilgrim home of Methodist ministers. She was early taught to remember her Creator, but she never united with said church. She was a great sufferer for the last three years of her life. She bore all with christian fortitude until death. During her last illness, as she became satisfied that her time was short, she employed her heart in prayer, and cast her all on Jesus. A few hours before she died she called a dear christian friend to her bedside, and embraced her in her arms, and asked her to meet her before the throne; and thus expressed that all was well. She found Jesus precious in her last moments, for which her pious friends feel to thank God. She was a believer in the sleep of the dead, and of receiving her reward at the resurrection of the just, and of the soon coming of Jesus to reign on the earth. Our Bro. is bereaved of a wife, who was the companion of his youth, and the recipient of his early love, the solace of his life for more than forty years.

"Nature will mourn departed friends,
And shake at death's alarms;
'Tis not the voice that Jesus sends,
To call us to his arms."

We expect to see our sister again who now lies in yon graveyard beside her dear children, who have died in the Lord. Soon she will rise immortal, and unite in the general song of triumph over death. May we all be there. Words of comfort were spoken by W. C. Robinson, of the M. E. church. S. B.

AMES. Died in Garland, Me., March 13th, 1868, Ellura, wife of Francis M. Ames, aged twenty-two years.

The days of her pilgrimage were few and full of trouble; but they ended in great peace. Amid the fury of the storm she heard Jesus say, "It is I," and she was not afraid.

'Our loved ones, they are sleeping
Beneath the cold, cold ground;
We wait the morn of waking,
When the last trump shall sound."

She selected the following to be read, and as a subject for remarks by Eld. I. Dammon, on the occasion of her funeral: "And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are passed away." Rev. 21: 4.

Hark! what is that note so mournful and slow,
That sends on the wind the tidings of woe?
It sounds like the knell of a spirit that's fled,
It tells us, alas! that Ellura is dead.
Yes, gone to the grave is she whom we loved,
And lifeless the form that so gracefully moved;
The clods of the valley encompass her bed,
A marble reminds us Ellura is dead.

SEAVERY. Died in Charlton, Mass., March 9th, 1868, of lung fever, Bro. Reuben Seavery, aged fifty-six years and four days.

It is with a sad heart that I am called to write this notice, for it was at his house I held meetings the past winter. Bro. S. has been a believer in the blessed hope several years, and this past winter he gladly threw open his doors and invited his neighbors in; and night after night we met there. God blest his neighbors, and he lived to see several converted, his wife being among them. He told the writer that he was well paid. His prayer was answered, his wife was converted, and is now happy in the Lord; although the message to me to-night says that she is dangerously sick with the same fever. Bro. Daniel Pratt, of Southbridge, spoke to them comforting words.

His work is ended; he sleeps to awake in the morning.

"Soon will the trumpet
Peal the glorious sound;
All the saints will then awaken
From beneath the cold, cold ground."

GEO. A. STREETER.

HURD. Died in Sunapee, N. H., Mar. 5th, 1868, of dropsy, Sister Dolly Hurd, wife of Bro. Ira Hurd, aged sixty-eight years and one month.

This blow has fallen with great weight upon our aged brother. He is bereft of a much loved companion, one who had shared with him life's joys and sorrows for nearly fifty years. Although he mourns, still he is comforted with this consolation, that soon he will meet her on the shores of the redeemed. Funeral services attended by the writer. C. H. FLETCHER.

CHURCHILL. Died in Brookfield, N. H., Feb. 18th, Bro. Eben C. Churchill, aged sixty-five.

The subject of this notice was one of those exemplary christians, whose daily walk was such as friends love to commemorate; whose memory children love to cherish; conscientiously scrupulous for the right, he bore a character unstained. He was a bold defender of the truth, and met death with perfect composure. C. C.

KAHARL. Died in Newton Upper Falls, March 17th, 1868, Mrs. Hannah Kaharl, wife of William Kaharl, aged fifty-nine years.

She sleeps in Jesus. May the Father of all mercies smile on the bereaved father and husband, who has been so suddenly afflicted, after a life of almost fifty years with this companion of his youth, and of his joys and sorrows, and finally gather him with all the sons and daughters in one unbroken band in the great gathering day, is the fervent prayer of the eldest son and brother, W. H. KAHARL.

YOUNG. Died in Lincolnville, Me., Jan. 19th, 1868, Mrs. Caroline Young, widow of the late Bro. Joseph Young.

Remarks were made by the writer, founded on these words: "Let every thing that hath breath praise the Lord." Ps. 150: 6. JOEL S. RICHARDS.

MESSER. Died in Bow, N. H., March 24th, 1868, of chin cough, Nellie A., daughter of Lydda A. and Ward Messer, aged one year and nine months.

May God bless the parents in their affliction. Words of comfort by the writer, from Jer. 31: 15, 16. D. EASTMAN.

CRAIG. Died in Westford, Mass., March 15th, 1868, Sister Belinda S. Craig, wife of Elder John Craig.

Sister Craig was a great sufferer, as her disease was a cancer; but she was very patient in her affliction. She trusted in the blessed Savior, and had a peaceful and quiet death. She leaves a husband and three children to mourn her loss.

"Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep,
From which none ever wake to weep."

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable Dispatches.

LONDON, March 24. Emeutes are reported to have occurred at Bordeaux, and seditious placards have made their appearance at Paris, Lyons, Marseilles and Rouen, and the reforming of the Guard Mobile is assigned as the cause of these disturbances.

NAPLES, March 27. Admiral Farragut has returned to this city from Rome. He will remain here a few days for repose and recruitment of his health, and then sail with his fleet for Constantinople.

PARIS, March 29. It is understood that the Emperor Napoleon is engaged in preparing an important manifesto with regard to the foreign policy of his Government. The document is to appear about the 15th proximo.

It is estimated by the Minister of War (Marshal Neil) that since the new army law has been put into operation the Garde Mobile of France has increased to 500,000.

BERLIN, March 29. Anti-Prussian riots have taken place in the northern part of Bavaria. Crowds gathered at several places and made violent demonstrations against Prussian influence and the union with the Northern Confederation.

THE RUSSIAN FAMINE. A letter from Europe says that the Russian famine is no longer limited to the northern districts, but extends over the central provinces from Finland to the borders of Siberia, and affects the most fertile regions. The peasants mix their corn with bark, or the thatch of their roofs, or try to sustain life on acorns, roots and moss. The inhabitants of whole villages are begging for food, and hundreds are dying of hunger. It is said that the government was kept in ignorance of the condition of things until it was too late to be remedied, and that at last they were indebted for the information to the British Ministers and Consuls. A committee has now been formed at St. Petersburg, and some £7000 subscribed, but more than two millions are needed, and the state of the roads in spring will make relief in many cases impossible.—Boston Journal.

DOMESTIC.

New York, March 29. A dispatch from Autalo, Abyssinia, March 16, via London, March 28, says the commander-in-chief and the officers of the English expedition have become convinced, from positive information from the extreme front that King Theodorus is prepared and means to fight. Major Gen. Napier is now aware that the royal native army is placed in a very strong position between two rivers, near Lake Hiak, the water shed of the country, being, it is said, in this region. The fortress and palace of Magdola are two days' march in the rear of the king's headquarters. Deep ravines encircle the Abyssinian camp. In this camp and on the line towards Magdola, Theodorus has 15,000 warriors, the wards and camps being defended by six large guns. Gen. Napier has six thousand English troops posted here at Autalo, Euderta and at one of the principal towns. He will move to Ashague. To-morrow the advance brigade moves. The baggage of every description has been reduced two-thirds by order. Forage for cattle is scarce. The roads are very bad and difficult to travel, the country being for the most part dry and of volcanic formation. The soldiers are suffering from dysentery and fever.

ANOTHER BATTLE—DEFEAT OF THE TURKS.—Washington, March 29. News from Crete was received here to-day, to the effect that another battle had been fought, which resulted in the death of two hundred Turks, although the Sultan's gunboats were in the immediate vicinity of the battle field. Gen. Corroneos landed at Canea, on the 1st inst., with a fresh supply of picked volunteers, and others are to follow. The Provisional Government publishes an official bulletin of Turkish massacres and crimes, which discloses the fact that from June 1, 1867, to January 1, 1868, one hundred and twenty married women, and forty-three other females, of from two to twenty years of age, and thirty-seven from twenty to thirty years, 55 children and 345 men, chiefly aged, were massacred, and 84 married and 205 unmarried women ravished by the Turks, 35 corpses were devoured by dogs, 23 victims were burnt alive, and 45 females tortured; eight churches were desecrated and disgustingly outraged by Moslem soldiery.

The Russian fleet humanely continues to carry non-combatants to Greece.

The Cretan Commission at Athens has addressed an appeal for help to all the sovereigns of Europe, and to the President of the United States. The Holy Father was the first to respond by forwarding 3000 francs. The King of Greece has contributed 15,000 francs.

HOW OUR ROMAN CATHOLIC BRETHREN MANAGE.—The following, from Mr. Parton's last article in the (Atlantic Monthly,) may be rather over-strained, but it affords matter for serious consideration, nevertheless:

"Our Roman Catholic brethren are acquiring so great an estate in the United States, and acquiring it so rapidly, that it becomes a matter of public concern how they get it, what they do with it, and, especially, what they will do with it by and by, when it shall have become the largest property held in the country by or for an organization. Other organizations usually live from hand to mouth; but, somehow, the Catholics always contrive to have a little money ahead, to invest for the future. The Catholic Church, seven-tenths of whose members are exempt from the income tax because their income is under a thousand dollars a year, is a capitalist, and has the advantage over other organizations which a man has over his fellows who, besides earning his livelihood, has a thousand dollars to operate with. There are spots in the Western country, over which the prairie winds now sweep without obstruction, that will one day be the sites of great cities. Our Roman Catholic brethren mark those spots and construct maps upon which, not existing towns alone are indicated, but probable towns also. A professor of one of our Western colleges saw, two years ago at Rome, a better map of the country west of the Mississippi than he ever saw at home, upon which the line of the Pacific Railroad was traced, and every spot was dotted where a settlement would naturally gather, and a conjecture recorded as to its probable importance. Five hundred dollars judiciously invested in certain localities now will buy land which, in fifty years or in twenty may be worth $100,000,000. Thirty-seven years ago the best thousand acres of the site of Chicago could have been bought for $1,25 an acre; and there is one man now in Chicago who owns a lot worth $20,000 which he bought of the Government for fifteen and five eighth cents. Now there are in the Roman Catholic Church men whose business it is to turn such facts to the advantage of the church, and there is also a systematic provision of money for them to expend for the purpose."

Items.

☞ There is considerable distress prevailing in the western section of Prince Edward Island, which will require the aid of the Government to alleviate. In the Eastern section there is great scarcity of fodder for cattle, and it is feared large numbers will perish this spring, in consequence. Seed grain, potatoes, etc., are also scarce, and will command an enormous price.

☞ Letters from New Mexico, dated Lansburg, March 3, say that the Indians in the adjoining county of Grant are infesting the roads and depredating upon almost everybody who travels that way. They appear in large numbers—sufficiently so to jeopardize the safety of the largest trains. Two trains were recently attacked, one man killed, and many mules stampeded.

☞ The Emperor Napoleon makes a note of everything he wishes to remember in his memorandum book. As soon as he has filled up a page of it he tears it out, reads it over, and then he tears it to pieces. He says he never forgot anything noted down and read over in this manner.

☞ A cure of one of the Paris churches has denounced from the altar all persons who go to see M. Emile Augier's new play, "Paul Forrestier," and has declared them ipso facto excommunicated. This is rather awkward, for the Emperor and Empress have been to see this very play, and loudly applauded it.

☞ The French seem to demand a revolution about once in every quarter century. The riot in Toulouse on March 16, of which little has been said, turns out to have been a very threatening affair—indicative of great popular dissatisfaction and desire for a political change.

☞ Advices from St. Thomas are to the 16th inst. There had been strong shocks of earthquake and business was paralyzed.

☞ Serious bread riots occurred at Grenada, Spain, last month. A crowd of two thousand people filled the streets, demanding a reduction of the price of bread. They attacked the houses of the wealthy, robbed the grain stores, and committed other acts of plunder. The military were called out and several of the rioters were killed before order could be restored.

☞ The demolition of the Universal Exhibition in the Champ de Mars, Paris, is now proceeding far more rapidly than before, and it is calculated that by the month of May not a vestige of the great World's Fair will be left.

☞ Earthquakes are becoming common again in the West Indies, Porto Rico and St. Thomas sustaining their character for shakiness. Quite a number of lives have been lost.

☞ Of every thousand francs expended by the French Government, two hundred and ninety-five francs are appropriated to the army and navy, and only eleven francs to public education.

☞ Blowing out the gas in his room at the Walker House, Portland, just before retiring to bed, will probably cause the death of a young man named Bridges of Dover, Me.

☞ A religious newspaper says that "such a revival as has not been witnessed since 1832 is now prevailing in Connecticut."

☞ It is estimated that immigrants are going to Missouri at the rate of a thousand a week, although the season has scarcely opened.

☞ Some of the Southern papers apprehend a return of the yellow fever this summer.

GENERAL CONFERENCE IN BOSTON.

The church of the Lord Jesus Christ worshiping at Lowell Street Chapel, Boston, to those of like precious faith, and who wait for the Son of God from heaven, greeting:

Beloved in the Lord, believing that yet a little while and He that shall come will come, and will not tarry; and that the signs of the times indicate that we are among the predicted perils of the last days; and that we are rapidly approaching those scenes of final trouble such as never was, which shall convulse the world with sorrow and distress; we have thought it good to invite our brethren in Christ, and the preachers of his word who are interested in these momentous themes, without distinction of sect or name, to meet us at our place of worship, at the CORNER OF LOWELL AND CAUSEWAY STREETS, BOSTON, on Tuesday evening, March 31st, 1868, and to continue with us over the coming first day of the week.

To unite with us in worship and thanksgiving to God for his abundant mercies to all men, and to us who have learned his will, and tasted that he is gracious:

To listen to the proclamation of the truth of God for the edification of the church, and the preaching of the glad tidings of the kingdom at hand:

To exhort one another, and so much the more as we see the day approaching:

To invite sinners to Christ, the refuge from approaching wrath, pointing them to the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world:

To encourage each other in the great work, committed to us as a people, of proclaiming life and immortality through Christ alone, the resurrection of the dead, and the speedy coming and kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ.

For these objects we invite our brethren and sisters, and the servants of the Lord, and shall make them welcome to our worship, our homes, and our hospitalities, trusting that we may thus be blessed and comforted together. And we desire the prayers of God's people that our gathering together may be to the praise and glory of our heavenly Father. And when the mighty voice shall be heard, saying, "Alleluia, for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth, let us be glad and rejoice, and give honor to him: for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready"; may we all be found arrayed in that righteousness which alone will insure admission to the marriage supper of the Lamb.

The Mass. Advent Christian Conference is cordially invited to meet with us, and to hold its annual session in connection with the general conference.

Friends coming from Portsmouth and intermediate places, on the Eastern R. R., also Nashua, Lowell, and intermediate places on the Lowell and Nashua R. R., will purchase regular tickets at the various offices, and will receive from the Conference Committee, at the meeting, return passes free.

In behalf of the church,
GEO. T. ADAMS, MILES GRANT, } Elders.
J. G. HAMBLIN, S. HOVEY, GEO. T. ADAMS, M. H. PIPER, GEO. E. FOSTER, GEO. W. WOOD, } Committee.

NOTICE.

The Springfield National Advent Camp-meeting Committee.

The above committee, at the request of the Chairman of the Building Committee, are notified to meet at the office of the "World's Crisis," Boston, on Friday, April 3d, at 10 o'clock A. M.

GEO. T. ADAMS, Secretary.

New York Conference.

The Western New York Quarterly Conference will be held at Hemlock Lake, Livingston county, commencing Thursday evening, Apr. 2nd, and holding over the following Sunday. Come, brethren and sisters, in the name of the Lord, having on the whole armor, prepared to work whilst the day lasts; and let this meeting be especially to build up the church of Christ and bring sinners to God. There are but two families in the place that are believers in the same blessed hope; so brethren will come prepared to board at the hotel if required, so that the burden may not rest too heavily upon the few who have so manfully held up the truth and mean to sustain it. Brethren coming on the cars will stop at Livonia, thence by stage to Hemlock Lake, distance four miles.

C. W. LOWE.
P. B. STEVENS.
D. COGSWELL.

A Quarterly Conference.

A quarterly session of the Advent Christian State Conference of New Hampshire will be held in Manchester, N. H., commencing Thursday evening, April 9th, and hold over the following Sunday. In the meantime let prayer go up to God for his blessing. A. W. SIBLEY, Secretary.

Notice.

The Conn. Second Advent Christian Conference will hold its second quarterly session at Bristol, commencing Wednesday, April 22d, at 7½ P. M. Come, brethren and sisters, from the North, East, South and West. Come praying. Come prepared to work for the Lord. Will all the preachers come? We want to see you all. Will the churches send delegates? See to it immediately. Let those who want the missionary to come and labor in their vicinity, come and state their case. Let us make a united effort to get the present truth preached in every school district in Connecticut.

B. ST. JOHN, Sec.

STAR OF HOPE MISSION,

give the South the gospel. The North has had it for a witness; and as they have freely received, they must also freely give to those whose hearts the Lord has opened to receive the truth. If the North could know what we know, they could not doubt in this matter. O my dear brethren, you who have means, but do not know how to use it for the glory of God, only think of the millions of the poor in the South that can hardly get their bread, and are starving for the bread of life. Take your means, put it on the altar, and then offer yourself as a living sacrifice, and let God send you out, and then you will understand what I say. P. A. Smith.

Lake City, Fla, March 16th, 1868.

From Bro. J. G. Hook.

Bro. Grant:—We arrived in safety last evening, though we had a narrow escape, as the tire of one of the drive wheels of the engine broke, and went through the boiler. We, of course, could not go on until a messenger went to Trenton, N. J., and another engine came to our rescue. The train kept on the track, and no one received harm. We were greeted very cordially by our much esteemed brother, F. H. Burbank, who, under God, is doing a great and glorious work, as far as we are able to judge the short time we have been here. I think much of the "Dorcas Mission," and also of the "Star of Hope Mission" in New York. They are doing great good. The results of these missions can not be known till the day comes when God shall judge the world by his Son Jesus Christ.

I had a good opportunity, during my stay of four weeks in New York, to learn many things concerning the efforts and labors of Srs. Smith, Boide, and Hanford, who so faithfully toil and labor day after day in the wicked city of N. Y. I have not time, nor would you have space in our dear paper, to give an account of the dens of misery and want where they visit and labor. Some are sick, with no coal, nor food, and not a cent to buy any. One dear old saint, part Indian and part negro, had her last coal in her little stove. She had not a cent of money, no victuals, except a little Graham gruel which had been sent from the Mission two days before; and worse than all, she was sick with a felon on her hand, all alone in a basement room, where she had lived some six or more years; but had been lately ordered out by the landlord, because she could not pay her rent. She had seen better days. Srs. Boide and Hanford, who believe in God, called to see this aged pilgrim; and while at prayer with her, Sr. B. obtained the witness that her rent would be paid. The dear old saint had the money in a short time. One man came in and gave her three dollars in about thirty minutes, and another soon after made up the deficiency. Our God does hear and answer the prayer of faith.

One case more. One Sunday morning, I was requested to attend the funeral of a child. Sister Boide (whose heart is in sympathy with these sufferers) accompanied me to the place of the dead. It was a room about 14 x 14 feet, just large enough for a bed, and no window in it. Eight human beings dwelt there,—two families. Such a sight! There was a table, on one end of which was food, and several eating; on the other end of the same lay the coffin, with the dead child in it. The head of the coffin was next to the victuals, where they were eating, and the lid was open. The child had been dead since Thursday, and the mother could not bury it before for the want of $19.00, which was exacted by the undertaker. So the dead and the living remained in that small room until the fourth day. Such are some of the scenes in New York. You who love to do good and communicate, help these missions.

Brethren, you would feel so well to be there and see the letters come with the needful, and barrels packed with divers articles. How cheerful those dear missionaries are, when the expressman comes with a barrel from one place, and a box from another, hoping they contain articles that are needed for the many who are continually ringing the door-bell and calling for a little help this cold, hard winter. If you should see how thankful they all are, you would be all fired up with new zeal in the Master's cause. "Give, and it shall be given to you." Don't send things that will cost more for freight than they are worth. Some do. Pay the freight if you can.

Our meetings in New York, at 24th St., and corner of Grand and Allen Sts., have been attended by Divine power from the beginning; also at the Mission. I don't know how many have been converted and reclaimed, but a goodly number. The ordinance of baptism was administered four Sundays in succession. Last Sunday thirteen more were baptized in the pool, in the large Baptist meeting-house, through the kindness of the pastor,—Elder Hodges, and the officers of the church, who gave us the use of the font, the rivers being full of floating ice.

The interest increased to the last. The church in West 24th St. is in a much better condition, being revived in the spirit of their minds and cemented together in love. May the good work go on. I send three new subscribers for the "World's Crisis." Brn., let each one send them, that it may live, and feed the flock of God. John G. Hook.

Phila., Feb. 6th, 1868.

From Bro. H. Pratt.

Bro. Grant:—The cause in Rochester is in nowise abating in interest or in numbers. New ones are coming along with us, and the great work of God is not only widening, but deepening as we near the shore. One of the students, who was preparing for the ministry, who has now come among us, said in our conference Sunday morning—I never knew what it was to be a pilgrim and stranger before, or realized what it was to suffer for Christ till now. The people are more than ever astonished at our increasing interest.

I have engaged to supply their desk, being satisfied that I can do more for the cause in this place and vicinity, than elsewhere. People from many of the western and southern states, and the Canadas, have listened and gone to tell the glad tidings everywhere. Bro. Himes' son, who was with us last Sabbath, said that Rochester was an exception to all other cities. While at the West this gospel was a success in the country, the cities could not be moved by it, only temporarily. Last evening another student, preparing for the ministry, said in our meeting, "I came to Rochester with the belief that man was immortal. I have given up that delusion. My Bible was a dry book; it is precious to me now." A gentleman in the meeting arose and said, "I never spoke in meeting; never went forward for prayers, have not yet endorsed all you advance, am a lover of music, go to church, set in nicely-cushioned seats, (for I dress well); listen to the sweet tones of the organ; but I had rather set on your hard seats, and hear what I hear here, than to attend any church in the city. When I hear christians extolling some great money-making project, I put my hand upon my wallet. I feel no concern about my wallet, with pockets open, among this people."

Pray for us, that the word of God may have free course, run, and be glorified. "In expectation sweet," Yours, H. Pratt.

P. S.—Bro. Sidney Hall's free tracts are finding great acceptance in Rochester and vicinity. The Lord bless the donor.

From Sr. A. E. Smith.

Bro. Grant:—I have just returned from a blessed visit among the Shinnecock tribe of Indians, on Long Island. Sr. Boide and myself were there eleven days, and the Lord gave us ten souls for our hire. We had meetings every afternoon and evening. Every night the church was crowded. There were several teams down from Good-Ground, and also from Tuckahoe, three or four evenings with white people. The first Sunday evening there were four forward for prayers, and one converted. We found those who were converted when we were there three years ago this month still holding on, and making good workers in the church. Some of them were away, and we did not see them, but learned they were doing well. O how encouraging to know that our work in the Lord is not in vain. To be converted is one thing; but to stay converted is another. In these days of fashionable religion, it does me good to see men and women get the right kind, that will stand persecution; and I am so glad to-day there is a know so religion, and that is the kind the dear Indian children got.

We stopped at Good Ground on Monday night, and preached for the Methodist people. The house was crowded. Fourteen of the Indians came that far with us, and staid all night. Poor creatures, when we bade them good bye, they looked as though they had lost their last friend. It does seem hard, drove off the land by the white people, and then nobody care for them. O when will Jesus come and judge with equity? O Lord, hasten the time, for thy people's sake. Death has been there since our last visit. Three have died from our church, and one from the other church. I called to see a white sister, and took dinner. She gave me a barrel of turnips, the freight of which was only a dollar; so it was a cheap barrel to me. This sister is getting the light, but her church is in a dreadful way about it. I guess it will not make any difference with her; if she is the Lord's, he can do his own work. Praise his holy name. I would say to the friends, we have school books enough now to supply our different missions for the present, with the exception of histories, or some interesting books that will do for our circulating library.

Receipts. From Maria J. Jones, Canaan, N. H., $1.00. A small box of books and papers from J. Weston, St. Charles, Mo. The express was $2.00. A trunk from Miss Lizzie Nixon, Springwater, N. Y.; also from Sr. Ruth Spurr $1.50, Sr. Eunice Ruggles $1.50, Sr. Susan Harris $4.00, all of Hillsborough, N. Y. From Oquawka, Ill., $10.00.

New York, Mar. 25th. A. E. Smith.

From Bro. J. Wendell.

Bro. Grant:—I have just returned home after an absence of over three months, and I find a number of letters inviting me to come and preach the word to them. Now as I would not have those dear brethren think me indifferent to their calls, will you please give this a place in the Crisis, which I hope will be a sufficient apology. Yours in the blessed hope, J. Wendell.

Edenboro, Erie Co., Pa.

From Bro. L. Allen.

Bro. Grant:—For the first time I improve a few moments in writing for the Crisis. When I read the warm letters of the dear brethren and sisters, I feel moved to add my testimony to theirs. The year that is just past has been one of deep trial; also one during which I have enjoyed the most of God's blessing, and a constant peace, that has been like a river, flowing deeper and wider. I attended the conference in Springfield last week. I have not seen the church more united, or on better ground than now. They are growing in numbers and graces. Thank the Lord. There never has been a time in our history, when the brethren and sisters, of one talent, could be more useful in the advancement of the Lord's cause than now. Our success depends upon God's being with us. Without him, we can do nothing. Christ strengthening us we can do all that he requires. Amen.

I used to go to meeting to get a blessing; now I carry one with me. Lambs need good feeding in the spring, or they will perish with cold and hunger. If left to themselves, they often ramble about and pick up something poisonous. So young converts need to be fed with the sincere milk of the word, that they may grow thereby. Otherwise, they go about seeking food, and pick up errors that checks their growth. Some doctrines that are taught in these last days are as poisonous to the young converts as low laurel is to the sheep and lambs. I have read Bro. Stetson's piece in the Crisis of Feb. 19th six times, and I mean to read it until I can remember and practice it in every meeting I attend I think it will do us all good. Yours patiently waiting for the Lord. Levi Allen.

Chicopee Falls, Mass., Feb. 27th, 1868.

From a Theological Student.

Bro. Grant:—I embrace the present to inform you that I am and have been investigating and comparing the doctrines which you and Bro. Pratt have set forth here and elsewhere, with those which I have been in the habit of harboring. It begins to seem as though I had been harboring error; and if such proves to be the case, I am heartily in favor of discarding it as soon as possible. When I first heard of your new doctrine, I, of course, had some curiosity to hear you, but I must confess that I listened with no small degree of prejudice, admitting at the same time the clearness with which you presented your subject. I would go for the purpose of becoming somewhat more posted, if nothing more, and finally I became considerably worked up, and thought upon the whole I had better drop it entirely, until I entered upon my theological course; but did not yield wholly to that conclusion. My chum and I would consider the matter occasionally, and sometimes would conclude to do one thing, and sometimes another. I was so striven with by the Spirit that I dropped my studies. I have set about investigating which seems to be my duty. I am not the only one who appears to be considering these things. I may say that I have thrown aside all prejudices. I am candidly seeking for the whole truth as it is in Jesus, and I trust the Holy Spirit, whose guidance I have, will lead me into the path of rectitude. J.

Bro. H. R. Tryon, Orangeport, N. Y., March 2nd, 1868, writes:—"Although we are strangers to each other in the body, yet I feel that we are indeed one in spirit, as regards spiritual things. I have long been a reader of the "Crisis," and esteem it a valuable paper; in fact the best religious paper that I ever read; and as we seldom have Advent preaching near us, the sermons and writings it contains are feasts to our souls. It appears to me that a person that is familiar with the teachings of our Savior, and also the prophecies, must see by the signs daily fulfilling before our eyes, that the day of the Lord is right at hand, and yet men will laugh and make sport of these warnings."

Obituaries.

Baker. Fell asleep in Jesus, in Philadelphia, Jan. 15th, 1868, Eliza, the beloved wife of J. G. Baker, in the sixty-first year of her age.

She was the child of pious parents, and her father's house was the pilgrim home of Methodist ministers. She was early taught to remember her Creator, but she never united with said church. She was a great sufferer for the last three years of her life. She bore all with christian fortitude until death. During her last illness, as she became satisfied that her time was short, she employed her heart in prayer, and cast her all on Jesus. A few hours before she died she called a dear christian friend to her bedside, and embraced her in her arms, and asked her to meet her before the throne; and thus expressed that all was well. She found Jesus precious in her last moments, for which her pious friends feel to thank God. She was a believer in the sleep of the dead, and of receiving her reward at the resurrection of the just, and of the soon coming of Jesus to reign on the earth. Our Bro. is bereaved of a wife, who was the companion of his youth, and the recipient of his early love, the solace of his life for more than forty years.

"Nature will mourn departed friends,
And shake at death's alarms;
'Tis not the voice that Jesus sends,
To call us to his arms."

We expect to see our sister again who now lies in yon graveyard beside her dear children, who have died in the Lord. Soon she will rise immortal, and unite in the general song of triumph over death. May we all be there. Words of comfort were spoken by W. C. Robinson, of the M. E. church. S. B.

Ames. Died in Garland, Me., March 13th, 1868, Ellura, wife of Francis M. Ames, aged twenty-two years.

The days of her pilgrimage were few and full of trouble; but they ended in great peace. Amid the fury of the storm she heard Jesus say, "It is I," and she was not afraid.

'Our loved ones, they are sleeping
Beneath the cold, cold ground;
We wait the morn of waking,
When the last trump shall sound."

She selected the following to be read, and as a subject for remarks by Eld. I. Dammon, on the occasion of her funeral: "And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are passed away." Rev. 21: 4.

Hark! what is that note so mournful and slow,
That sends on the wind the tidings of woe?
It sounds like the knell of a spirit that's fled,
It tells us, alas! that Ellura is dead.
Yes, gone to the grave is she whom we loved,
And lifeless the form that so gracefully moved;
The clods of the valley encompass her bed,
A marble reminds us Ellura is dead.

Seavery. Died in Charlton, Mass., March 9th, 1868, of lung fever, Bro. Reuben Seavery, aged fifty-six years and four days.

It is with a sad heart that I am called to write this notice, for it was at his house I held meetings the past winter. Bro. S. has been a believer in the blessed hope several years, and this past winter he gladly threw open his doors and invited his neighbors in; and night after night we met there. God blest his neighbors, and he lived to see several converted, his wife being among them. He told the writer that he was well paid. His prayer was answered, his wife was converted, and is now happy in the Lord; although the message to me to-night says that she is dangerously sick with the same fever. Bro. Daniel Pratt, of Southbridge, spoke to them comforting words.

His work is ended; he sleeps to awake in the morning.

"Soon will the trumpet
Peal the glorious sound;
All the saints will then awaken
From beneath the cold, cold ground."

Geo. A. Streeter.

Hurd. Died in Sunapee, N. H., Mar. 5th, 1868, of dropsy, Sister Dolly Hurd, wife of Bro. Ira Hurd, aged sixty-eight years and one month.

This blow has fallen with great weight upon our aged brother. He is bereft of a much loved companion, one who had shared with him life's joys and sorrows for nearly fifty years. Although he mourns, still he is comforted with this consolation, that soon he will meet her on the shores of the redeemed. Funeral services attended by the writer. C. H. Fletcher.

Churchill. Died in Brookfield, N. H., Feb. 18th, Bro. Eben C. Churchill, aged sixty-five.

The subject of this notice was one of those exemplary christians, whose daily walk was such as friends love to commemorate; whose memory children love to cherish; conscientiously scrupulous for the right, he bore a character unstained. He was a bold defender of the truth, and met death with perfect composure. C. C.

Kaharl. Died in Newton Upper Falls, March 17th, 1868, Mrs. Hannah Kaharl, wife of William Kaharl, aged fifty-nine years.

She sleeps in Jesus. May the Father of all mercies smile on the bereaved father and husband, who has been so suddenly afflicted, after a life of almost fifty years with this companion of his youth, and of his joys and sorrows, and finally gather him with all the sons and daughters in one unbroken band in the great gathering day, is the fervent prayer of the eldest son and brother, W. H. Kaharl.

Young. Died in Lincolnville, Me., Jan. 19th, 1868, Mrs. Caroline Young, widow of the late Bro. Joseph Young.

Remarks were made by the writer, founded on these words: "Let every thing that hath breath praise the Lord." Ps. 150: 6. Joel S. Richards.

Messer. Died in Bow, N. H., March 24th, 1868, of chin cough, Nellie A., daughter of Lydda A. and Ward Messer, aged one year and nine months.

May God bless the parents in their affliction. Words of comfort by the writer, from Jer. 31: 15, 16. D. Eastman.

Craig. Died in Westford, Mass., March 15th, 1868, Sister Belinda S. Craig, wife of Elder John Craig.

Sister Craig was a great sufferer, as her disease was a cancer; but she was very patient in her affliction. She trusted in the blessed Savior, and had a peaceful and quiet death. She leaves a husband and three children to mourn her loss.

"Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep,
From which none ever wake to weep."

I. Newton.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable Dispatches.

London, March 24. Emeutes are reported to have occurred at Bordeaux, and seditious placards have made their appearance at Paris, Lyons, Marseilles and Rouen, and the reforming of the Guard Mobile is assigned as the cause of these disturbances.

Naples, March 27. Admiral Farragut has returned to this city from Rome. He will remain here a few days for repose and recruitment of his health, and then sail with his fleet for Constantinople.

Paris, March 29. It is understood that the Emperor Napoleon is engaged in preparing an important manifesto with regard to the foreign policy of his Government. The document is to appear about the 15th proximo.

It is estimated by the Minister of War (Marshal Neil) that since the new army law has been put into operation the Garde Mobile of France has increased to 500,000.

Berlin, March 29. Anti-Prussian riots have taken place in the northern part of Bavaria. Crowds gathered at several places and made violent demonstrations against Prussian influence and the union with the Northern Confederation.

The Russian Famine. A letter from Europe says that the Russian famine is no longer limited to the northern districts, but extends over the central provinces from Finland to the borders of Siberia, and affects the most fertile regions. The peasants mix their corn with bark, or the thatch of their roofs, or try to sustain life on acorns, roots and moss. The inhabitants of whole villages are begging for food, and hundreds are dying of hunger. It is said that the government was kept in ignorance of the condition of things until it was too late to be remedied, and that at last they were indebted for the information to the British Ministers and Consuls. A committee has now been formed at St. Petersburg, and some £7000 subscribed, but more than two millions are needed, and the state of the roads in spring will make relief in many cases impossible.—Boston Journal.

DOMESTIC.

New York, March 29. A dispatch from Autalo, Abyssinia, March 16, via London, March 28, says the commander-in-chief and the officers of the English expedition have become convinced, from positive information from the extreme front that King Theodorus is prepared and means to fight. Major Gen. Napier is now aware that the royal native army is placed in a very strong position between two rivers, near Lake Hiak, the water shed of the country being, it is said, in this region. The fortress and palace of Magdola are two days' march in the rear of the king's headquarters. Deep ravines encircle the Abyssinian camp. In this camp and on the line towards Magdola, Theodorus has 15,000 warriors, the wards and camps being defended by six large guns. Gen. Napier has six thousand English troops posted here at Autalo, Euderta and at one of the principal towns. He will move to Ashague. To-morrow the advance brigade moves. The baggage of every description has been reduced two-thirds by order. Forage for cattle is scarce. The roads are very bad and difficult to travel, the country being for the most part dry and of volcanic formation. The soldiers are suffering from dysentery and fever.

Another Battle—Defeat of the Turks.—Washington, March 29. News from Crete was received here to-day, to the effect that another battle had been fought, which resulted in the death of two hundred Turks, although the Sultan's gunboats were in the immediate vicinity of the battle field. Gen. Corroncos landed at Canea, on the 1st inst., with a fresh supply of picked volunteers, and others are to follow. The Provisional Government publishes an official bulletin of Turkish massacres and crimes, which discloses the fact that from June 1, 1867, to January 1, 1868, one hundred and twenty married women, and forty-three other females, of from two to twenty years of age, and thirty-seven from twenty to thirty years, 55 children and 345 men, chiefly aged, were massacred, and 84 married and 205 unmarried women ravished by the Turks, 35 corpses were devoured by dogs, 23 victims were burnt alive, and 45 females tortured; eight churches were desecrated and disgustingly outraged by Moslem soldiery.

The Russian fleet humanely continues to carry non-combatants to Greece.

The Cretan Commission at Athens has addressed an appeal for help to all the sovereigns of Europe, and to the President of the United States. The Holy Father was the first to respond by forwarding 3000 francs. The King of Greece has contributed 15,000 francs.

How Our Roman Catholic Brethren Manage.—The following, from Mr. Parton's last article in the (Atlantic Monthly,) may be rather overstrained, but it affords matter for serious consideration, nevertheless:

"Our Roman Catholic brethren are acquiring so great an estate in the United States, and acquiring it so rapidly, that it becomes a matter of public concern how they get it, what they do with it, and, especially, what they will do with it by and by, when it shall have become the largest property held in the country by or for an organization. Other organizations usually live from hand to mouth; but, somehow, the Catholics always contrive to have a little money ahead, to invest for the future. The Catholic Church, seven-tenths of whose members are exempt from the income tax because their income is under a thousand dollars a year, is a capitalist, and has the advantage over other organizations which a man has over his fellows who, besides earning his livelihood, has a thousand dollars to operate with. There are spots in the Western country, over which the prairie winds now sweep without obstruction, that will one day be the sites of great cities. Our Roman Catholic brethren mark those spots and construct maps upon which, not existing towns alone are indicated, but probable towns also. A professor of one of our Western colleges saw, two years ago at Rome, a better map of the country west of the Mississippi than he ever saw at home, upon which the line of the Pacific Railroad was traced, and every spot was dotted where a settlement would naturally gather, and a conjecture recorded as to its probable importance. Five hundred dollars judiciously invested in certain localities now will buy land which, in fifty years or in twenty may be worth $100,000,000. Thirty-seven years ago the best thousand acres of the site of Chicago could have been bought for $1,25 an acre; and there is one man now in Chicago who owns a lot worth $20,000 which he bought of the Government for fifteen and five eighth cents. Now there are in the Roman Catholic Church men whose business it is to turn such facts to the advantage of the church, and there is also a systematic provision of money for them to expend for the purpose."

Items.

☞ There is considerable distress prevailing in the western section of Prince Edward Island, which will require the aid of the Government to alleviate. In the Eastern section there is great scarcity of fodder for cattle, and it is feared large numbers will perish this spring, in consequence. Seed grain, potatoes, etc., are also scarce, and will command an enormous price.

☞ Letters from New Mexico, dated Lansburg, March 3, say that the Indians in the adjoining county of Grant are infesting the roads and depredating upon almost everybody who travels that way. They appear in large numbers—sufficiently so to jeopardize the safety of the largest trains. Two trains were recently attacked, one man killed, and many mules stampeded.

☞ The Emperor Napoleon makes a note of everything he wishes to remember in his memorandum book. As soon as he has filled up a page of it he tears it out, reads it over, and then he tears it to pieces. He says he never forgot anything noted down and read over in this manner.

☞ A curé of one of the Paris churches has denounced from the altar all persons who go to see M. Emile Augier's new play, "Paul Forrestier," and has declared them ipso facto excommunicated. This is rather awkward, for the Emperor and Empress have been to see this very play, and loudly applauded it.

☞ The French seem to demand a revolution about once in every quarter century. The riot in Toulouse on March 10, of which little has been said, turns out to have been a very threatening affair—indicative of great popular dissatisfaction and desire for a political change.

☞ Advices from St. Thomas are to the 16th inst. There had been strong shocks of earthquake and business was paralyzed.

☞ Serious bread riots occurred at Granada, Spain, last month. A crowd of two thousand people filled the streets, demanding a reduction of the price of bread. They attacked the houses of the wealthy, robbed the grain stores, and committed other acts of plunder. The military were called out and several of the rioters were killed before order could be restored.

☞ The demolition of the Universal Exhibition in the Champ de Mars, Paris, is now proceeding far more rapidly than before, and it is calculated that by the month of May not a vestige of the great World's Fair will be left.

☞ Earthquakes are becoming common again in the West Indies, Porto Rico and St. Thomas sustaining their character for shakiness. Quite a number of lives have been lost.

☞ Of every thousand francs expended by the French Government, two hundred and ninety-five francs are appropriated to the army and navy, and only eleven francs to public education.

☞ Blowing out the gas in his room at the Walker House, Portland, just before retiring to bed, will probably cause the death of a young man named Bridges of Dover, Me.

☞ A religious newspaper says that "such a revival as has not been witnessed since 1832 is now prevailing in Connecticut."

☞ It is estimated that immigrants are going to Missouri at the rate of a thousand a week, although the season has scarcely opened.

☞ Some of the Southern papers apprehend a return of the yellow fever this summer.

GENERAL CONFERENCE IN BOSTON.

The church of the Lord Jesus Christ worshiping at Lowell Street Chapel, Boston, to those of like precious faith, and who wait for the Son of God from heaven, greeting:

Beloved in the Lord, believing that yet a little while and He that shall come will come, and will not tarry; and that the signs of the times indicate that we are among the predicted perils of the last days; and that we are rapidly approaching those scenes of final trouble such as never was, which shall convulse the world with sorrow and distress; we have thought it good to invite our brethren in Christ, and the preachers of his word who are interested in these momentous themes, without distinction of sect or name, to meet us at our place of worship, at the corner of Lowell and Causeway Streets, Boston, on Tuesday evening, March 31st, 1868, and to continue with us over the coming first day of the week.

To unite with us in worship and thanksgiving to God for his abundant mercies to all men, and to us who have learned his will, and tasted that he is gracious:

To listen to the proclamation of the truth of God for the edification of the church, and the preaching of the glad tidings of the kingdom at hand:

To exhort one another, and so much the more as we see the day approaching:

To invite sinners to Christ, the refuge from approaching wrath, pointing them to the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world:

To encourage each other in the great work, committed to us as a people, of proclaiming life and immortality through Christ alone, the resurrection of the dead, and the speedy coming and kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ.

For these objects we invite our brethren and sisters, and the servants of the Lord, and shall make them welcome to our worship, our homes, and our hospitalities, trusting that we may thus be blessed and comforted together. And we desire the prayers of God's people that our gathering together may be to the praise and glory of our heavenly Father. And when the mighty voice shall be heard, saying, "Alleluia, for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth, let us be glad and rejoice, and give honor to him: for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready"; may we all be found arrayed in that righteousness which alone will insure admission to the marriage supper of the Lamb.

The Mass. Advent Christian Conference is cordially invited to meet with us, and to hold its annual session in connection with the general conference.

Friends coming from Portsmouth and intermediate places, on the Eastern R. R., also Nashua, Lowell, and intermediate places on the Lowell and Nashua R. R., will purchase regular tickets at the various offices, and will receive from the Conference Committee, at the meeting, return passes free.

In behalf of the church,

NOTICE.

The Springfield National Advent Camp-meeting Committee.

The above committee, at the request of the Chairman of the Building Committee, are notified to meet at the office of the "World's Crisis," Boston, on Friday, April 3d, at 10 o'clock A. M. Geo. T. Adams, Secretary.

New York Conference.

The Western New York Quarterly Conference will be held at Hemlock Lake, Livingston county, commencing Thursday evening, Apr. 2nd, and holding over the following Sunday. Come, brethren and sisters, in the name of the Lord, having on the whole armor, prepared to work whilst the day lasts; and let this meeting be especially to build up the church of Christ and bring sinners to God. There are but two families in the place that are believers in the same blessed hope; so brethren will come prepared to board at the hotel if required, so that the burden may not rest too heavily upon the few who have so manfully held up the truth and mean to sustain it. Brethren coming on the cars will stop at Livonia, thence by stage to Hemlock Lake, distance four miles. C. W. Lowe. P. B. Stevens. D. Cogswell.

A Quarterly Conference.

A quarterly session of the Advent Christian State Conference of New Hampshire will be held in Manchester, N. H., commencing Thursday evening, April 9th, and hold over the following Sunday. In the meantime let prayer go up to God for his blessing. A. W. Sibley, Secretary.

Notice.

The Conn. Second Advent Christian Conference will hold its second quarterly session at Bristol, commencing Wednesday, April 22d, at 7½ P. M. Come, brethren and sisters, from the North, East, South and West. Come praying. Come prepared to work for the Lord. Will all the preachers come? We want to see you all. Will the churches send delegates? See to it immediately. Let those who want the missionary to come and labor in their vicinity, come and state their case. Let us make a united effort to get the present truth preached in every school district in Connecticut. B. St. John, Sec.

STAR OF HOPE MISSION, No. 14 Laurens Street, New York City.

ANNA E. SMITH, Superintendent and Manager.

MEETINGS.
Sunday School 10 o'clock every Sunday.
Love Feast 2 o'clock every Sunday.
Preaching 7 o'clock Sunday evenings.
Meetings every evening during the week.

Notice.

Several brethren and sisters having come out from Cooper Institute, New York City, have taken a hall corner of Allen and Grand Sts., where meetings will be held every Sunday A. M. and P. M. Preaching brethren passing through the city, believing in the resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust, are invited to give them a call. J. K. Bellows.

For the World's Crisis.

CHRIST IS COMING.

AIR—"We are coming."

In this world of woe and sadness,
Lone pilgrims here we roam;
Looking for that day of gladness
When we shall rest at home.

CHORUS.—Christ is coming, Christ is coming,
Christ is coming, lonely pilgrim;
Christ is coming, Christ is coming,
To take his children home.

Here are trials that afflict us,
But we've a faithful friend,
Ever willing to protect us,
And guide us to the end.

All our trials and temptations
Will surely pass away;
And this long dark night of weeping
Be changed to endless day.

Savior come, thy saints are calling,
Come and reign forevermore;
Come and bring that happy morning,
When our sorrows will be o'er.

Concord, N. H. MARY V. SALTMARSH.

For the World's Crisis.

WHAT SHALL BE THE SIGN OF THY COMING?

In Matt. 24: 3, we learn that as the Lord Jesus Christ "sat upon the Mount of Olives," his disciples questioned him, "saying, Tell us, . . . what shall be the sign of thy coming?" In giving the answer to their question, Jesus commenced with saying, "Take heed that no man deceive you: for many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ; and shall deceive many." He then with a very condensed prophetic sketch brought them down through the "sorrows" and "afflictions" of the Lord's suffering people by the persecutions of Pagan Rome, and through the "great tribulation" (v. 21) by the "abomination of desolation" (v. 15) or Papal Rome, into the time of shortened days (v. 22), to the time when "the earth helped the woman" (Rev. 12: 16), or, as Daniel has it, "Now when they shall fall, they shall be holpen with a little help" (Dan. 11: 34); in fact, to the world's last generation, the only generation that could be really benefitted by the signs he was about to give them in his reply to their questions. Having done this, he said to them, "Then if any man shall say unto you, Lo, here is Christ, or there; believe it not. For there [in that last generation] shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, and shall show great signs and wonders; insomuch that, if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect." Vers. 23, 24. He then calls attention to his former words of prophecy and admonition by saying, "Behold, I have told you before." That is, as if he had said to them, I have already told you that "many shall come in my name saying, I am Christ; and shall deceive many"; and I have also given admonition for those who shall live in that last generation, not to be deceived by them.

By the foregoing it will be seen that Jesus has located these false Christs and false prophets between the ending of the great tribulation and the time of his coming. And as we are occupying the time allotted to the false Christs, the question arises, Where and who are these false Christs and prophets that were to arise? Are they really in our midst, and we know them not? In deciding this question, let us notice the profession, doings, and the time occupied by the Spiritualists of our times, and see if they do not correctly fulfill this prophecy. If they do profess the same thing, and are doing the same work, and occupying the same time that Jesus has here allotted to the false Christs, how can we come to any other conclusion than that they do fulfill this prophecy, and that consequently they are the real false Christs pointed out by Jesus' own prophetic wisdom?

First. They were to say, "I AM CHRIST."

Second. "Show great signs and wonders," and by them deceive many.

Third. They were to occupy the time between the ending of the great tribulation and the coming of Jesus.

That the Spiritualists do say these same words is true beyond a doubt; for in their sittings, or circles, when the spirit of Jesus Christ is called for at different times and places, they have responses from many mediums saying, "I am Christ." Concerning their work of showing great signs and wonders, we need only to say of it what is well known, and that is that their work or works of deception are extensively practised by them, for they traverse the world to exhibit them in public and in private. That they occupy the same space of time allotted to the false Christs has already been sufficiently noticed.

If Jesus has located the false Christs in this generation, it is enough for us; for we are sure that there are no others but the Spiritualists that do or can fulfill these scriptures as they are now doing.

After presenting these false Christs and false prophets as a standing sign of his coming, and having cautioned his children not to be deceived by them, Jesus proceeded to give them a succession of signs that would lead on, step by step, through the last generation down to his coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory; so that those who will watch may know when "he is near, even at the doors." It may be plainly seen by the following scriptures that Jesus intended we should know and understand when our "redemption" would be drawing nigh, and also know when the kingdom of God would be "nigh at hand." Jesus says of them (Luke 21: 28), "And when these things begin to come to pass [that is, these signs], then look up, and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh." And then in a parable he said (vs. 29–31), "Behold the fig-tree, and all the trees; when they now shoot forth, ye see and know of your own selves that summer is now nigh at hand. So likewise ye, when ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand." Matthew has it as follows: "So likewise ye, when ye shall see all these things, know that it [or he] is near, even at the doors."

In presenting the Lord's signs, we will by his assistance endeavor in the first place to give that portion of each separate message which has already "come to pass," or that is now fulfilled in accordance with the prediction. And in connection with each of these we will also present their unfulfilled portion, that we may know the exact position we now occupy as we stand between fulfilled and unfulfilled prophecy, and what we are to look for next as a sign of Jesus' coming.

FULFILLED SIGNS.

"Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven."—Matt. 24: 29.

SIGNS UNFULFILLED.

"And the powers of the heavens shall be shaken. And then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven; and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn; and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory."—Matt. 24: 29, 30.

FULFILLED SIGNS.

"But in those days, after that tribulation, the sun shall be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars of heaven shall fall."—Mark 13: 24, 25.

SIGNS UNFULFILLED.

"And the powers that are in heaven shall be shaken, and then shall they see the Son of man coming in the clouds with great power and glory."—Matt. 23: 25, 26.

FULFILLED SIGNS.

"And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars."—Luke 21: 25.

SIGNS UNFULFILLED.

"And upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring; men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth; for the powers of heaven shall be shaken [the powers or armies of heaven shall be moved—Syriac.] And then shall they see the Son of man coming in the clouds with power and great glory."—Luke 21: 25, 27.

FULFILLED SIGNS.

"The sun became black as sackcloth of hair, and the moon became as blood; and the stars of heaven fell to the earth, even as a fig-tree casteth her untimely figs, when she is shaken of a mighty wind."—Rev. 6: 12-13.

SIGNS UNFULFILLED.

"And the heavens departed as a scroll when it is rolled together; and every mountain and island were moved out of their places. And the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains, and the mighty men, and every bond man, and every free man, hid themselves in the dens and in the rocks of the mountains; and said unto the mountains and rocks, Fall on us, and hide us from the presence of Him that sitteth on the throne [when Jesus appears], and from the wrath of the Lamb; for the great day of his wrath is come; and who shall be able to stand?"—Rev. 6: 14.

FULFILLED SIGNS.

"For the stars of heaven and the constellations thereof shall not give their light; the sun shall be darkened in his going forth, and the moon shall not cause her light to shine."—Isa. 13: 10.

SIGNS UNFULFILLED.

"And I will punish the world for their evil, and the wicked for their iniquity; and I will cause the arrogancy of the proud to cease, and will lay low the haughtiness of the terrible. I will make a man more precious than fine gold; even a man than the golden wedge of Ophir. [Is not this the man Jesus, or the Son of man coming?] Therefore I will shake the heavens, and the earth shall move out of her place, in the wrath of the Lord of hosts, and in the day of his fierce anger."—Isa. 13: 11–13.

FULFILLED SIGNS.

"I will show wonders in the heavens and in the earth, blood, and fire, and pillars of smoke. The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before the great and terrible day of the Lord come."—Joel 2: 30, 31. "The sun and the moon shall be darkened, and the stars shall withdraw their shining."—Joel 3: 15.

SIGNS UNFULFILLED.

"The Lord also shall roar out of Zion, and utter his voice from Jerusalem; and the heavens and the earth shall SHAKE; but the Lord shall be the hope of his people"; [or, he will come for their deliverance in the midst of this shaking of the powers of heaven, as described in the foregoing verses, 9–14, as follows]: "Proclaim ye this among the Gentiles [or nations, Douay translation], Prepare war, wake up the mighty men, let all the men of war draw near; let them come up; beat your plowshares into swords, and your pruning-hooks into spears; let the weak say, I am strong. Assemble yourselves, and come, all ye heathen, and gather yourselves together round about; thither cause thy mighty ones to come down, O Lord. Let the heathen be wakened, and come up to the valley of Jehoshaphat; for there will I sit to judge all the heathen round about. Put ye in the sickle, for the harvest is ripe; come, get you down; for the press is full, the fats overflow; for their wickedness is great. Multitudes, multitudes in the valley of decision."

SIGNS IN PROCESS OF FULFILLMENT.

"I will shake the heavens, and the earth, and the sea, and the dry land."—Hag. 2: 7.

SIGNS UNFULFILLED.

"And I will SHAKE ALL NATIONS, and the DESIRE of all nations shall come."—Hag. 2: 7. "I will shake the heavens and the earth; and I will overthrow the throne of kingdoms, and I will destroy the strength of the kingdom of the heathen; and I will overthrow the chariots, and those that ride in them; and the horses and their riders shall come down, every one by the sword of his brother." Vs. 21, 22.

We have selected from the word of the Lord, and have herein presented testimonies from seven of his sacred witnesses having reference to the signs and events that were to precede and give notice of his coming. Six of these have written of the signs in the sun, moon, and stars; four of them having received their testimonies directly from Jesus, as special signs of his near coming; John having seen them in vision, in addition to having heard them from Jesus' own lips. These signs in the sun, moon and stars have now been fulfilled; that of the falling stars of November 14, 1867, probably being the last one of this first class which were to appear in the "heaven above." Acts 2: 19, 20.

The second class of signs are those now in process of fulfillment, referred to in part by Luke, where he speaks of "the sea and the waves roaring"; and those by Haggai, as the shaking of the heavens and the earth and the sea and the dry land. It seems that the Lord's meaning here is that he would literally shake the air, earth, sea, and dry land.

Cruden, on the word "heaven," says:—"Heaven and earth, in Gen. 1: 1, are used for the substance and common matter of all sensible creatures. Heaven is often taken for the air. The fowls of heaven are the birds which fly in the air. Job 35: 11. The dew of heaven, the clouds of heaven, the winds of heaven,—in all which passages heaven is put for air." Then the meaning of this shaking of heaven would be that the Lord would shake the same heaven that "the fowls of heaven" occupy, and that the clouds of heaven move in, and in which the winds of heaven blow; and that he would shake the earth and sea and dry land, which constitute our literal earth. Is it not very evident that he is now fulfilling this prediction by the wonderful agitation of the literal elements of this world? as by the fierce winds of the numerous storms and hurricanes of the present time, which are truly shaking the heavens, causing great destruction of life and property, both on the sea and on the land, and by the numerous earthquakes which are "shaking terribly the earth" (Isa. 2: 19), causing islands to sink with the inhabitants and their possessions; also "the sea and the waves roaring, carrying in their course great destruction of shipping and buildings, besides the great loss of human life. Volcanoes are also doing their work of "shaking the dry land," and thus notifying us that the crust of the earth may break up and melt with the mountains and valleys as "wax before the fire." See Micah 1: 2–4.

We are now occupying ground directly between the first and the third class of these signs. The former were given as signs in the heaven above, and the scriptures have been most clearly fulfilled in their literal appearance in exact accordance with the prediction. The first series of these signs having now fully passed,—those in the sun, moon and stars, which were to appear in the "heaven above"; and those of the second class being fully before us,—the shaking of heaven, earth, sea, and dry land; we are now fully prepared to look forward consistently and consider the familiar question, "What next?" or, What is to be the next sign in the Lord's descriptive catalogue of the signs which he has been pleased to give us of his coming?

If the foregoing views are correct, then the signs of Jesus coming have been fulfilled up to the falling stars of Nov. 14, 1867. And in a second part of this communication we will search to know (Prov. 2: 3–5) the true Bible meaning of the words—"The powers of heaven shall be shaken."

ST. LOUIS MISSION.

BRO. GRANT:—Far away from all my eastern friends, how cheering to receive our weekly messenger, the Crisis. But when I read of the success attending the labors of so many preachers east, I feel almost discouraged sometimes to think how little has been done here. It does seem to me that in a land which might be called a heathen waste, more good might and should be done. I do feel that I have tried to be faithful to my charge, and no one can tell of the many trials, cares, and perplexing difficulties I have always met with since coming out here. Many times I have made up my mind that I must leave the field to those more able, and possessing more divine wisdom. But then I could not find a door open to leave. Those who might do more good here, perhaps are more needed in other fields.

It is now about twenty-eight months since I first came to St. Louis. And oh, how painful to think of the many disappointments within that space of time. It did appear to me when coming out here, that the first sound of the gospel of the kingdom would bring in the poor freedmen by hundreds; but oh, how disappointed are my expectations. I have wept and prayed and toiled through untold trials to give the light of God's truth to perishing sinners; and after all, we are still battling against the powers of darkness, with violent opposition on every hand. It may be I feel too ambitious. I may have some spiritual pride. I do most sincerely hope not. I may have too many fears about the future prospect of the work here. But, then, I do pray for faith to leave all in the hands of Him who "doeth all things well."

The work is prospering here; we are all united, and the preachers of our conference are in perfect harmony. We have three churches, three miles apart from each other, and new churches are being organized. We do most earnestly hope to have other churches represented at our quarterly conference, which meets next month. I need not say anything of our conference. You will see report of it in the Crisis before you read my letter. We already have a little circuit, with prospects of fast extending our labors. At the last meeting of our official Board, it was voted, at my request, that Bro. Commodore Decatur, pastor of Compton Hill church, should assist me in the work of establishing new churches. He is a faithful Bro., and commands a great influence. There is a prospect of a new church some four or five miles from here, in the northwest part of the city, where he is laboring with good success. Some twenty-five or thirty have been added to his church at Compton Hill in less than three weeks.

The Lowell church is growing finely; house filled. The Sunday School numbers seventy scholars; day school fifty-five scholars. Fifth and Biddle church is on the increase, and in all our churches a deep feeling is manifested for the salvation of sinners.

I visited a new place seven miles south of here, just opposite of Carondelet, on the other side of the Mississippi, last Saturday evening, where there is almost a whole town of freedmen. I preached in a small log house. Twelve came forward for prayers. I took with me four of our colored preachers, whom I left to preach yesterday. I go again on Wednesday evening, and remain over Thursday. A prospect of great good there, and a new church. I have just seen the preacher I left there. He tells me fifteen were forward for prayers yesterday. A very large congregation was out, who could not get into the house. We have at least two hundred and fifty scholars in our Sunday Schools, and one hundred and seventy-six scholars in our day schools, not including our night school.

I wish to say here to all, in answer to inquiries made to me in relation to our way of doing business, that we are acting in perfect harmony with the A. A. Mission Society. Upon my arrival out here, one year ago the first of October last, we voted to connect ourselves with the Mission, at the request of Bro. Himes, who promised to aid us what they could. We have always received the kindest attentions from Bro. Himes and the Mission; and they have always manifested a very deep interest in our welfare and prosperity. Bro. Himes and the Mission have never dictated to us, or even attempted to direct in our course of action in relation to preaching the gospel, or in conducting our schools or churches. I have often asked Bro. Himes, when here, to direct us in any thing he did not feel satisfied with. But I have always received the uniform answer to go on as we had begun; saying, that he was fully satisfied with our work, and wished us to act perfectly free in all our labor, according to the best of our understanding, and in harmony with our own views. Thus have we acted in perfect harmony with the views I expressed before leaving Mass., for the west.

Now in looking at the work of two and a half years' labor, both here and at Memphis, we find the practical results of each course pursued to be precisely the same. These facts, taken in connection with an experience in many other matters, bring us to the conclusion that where we may establish schools, churches must and will follow as a natural consequence. So, on the other hand, we may establish churches, but we find our schools an indispensable requisite to secure any permanent good. If there are any who should not feel satisfied with my conclusions, after years of labor among the freedmen, an excellent opportunity is presented them in many destitute fields to try experiments. I am fully satisfied that we can never secure divine favor without being united in our efforts for the salvation of the poor freedmen.

One thing ought to be better understood. Our schools here do not cost our brethren and sisters east, or even the mission, one cent. By keeping our schools, we draw from the U. S. Government aid to pay rents, without which we could not live. Col. Seeley, of the Freedmen's Bureau, takes a deep interest in our day, night, and Sunday schools. It cost $100 to seat our new church at Lowell, north part of the city. Col. Seeley furnished me the aid, in consideration that a school should be kept for the freedmen. There is a place seven miles from here where the inhabitants are most all freedmen. There is no church, school, nor preaching in the place; neither is there any kind of a building which could be used for a school or a church. The people are poor, but they offer to support a teacher. I have proposed to them to cut down and hew out their own timber, and put up a frame twenty by forty feet. We will furnish lumber and shingles to finish it for a school and meeting-house. Col. Seeley has promised me the aid. Now shall we neglect to give them the gospel because we do not wish to have the trouble of schools? or shall we accept the aid the U. S. Government so kindly offers us through their agent here to build a school-house, which is just what we want for a church? We are doing all we can to preach the gospel; but in this place I speak of, the only building we have to hold meetings in is a log hut, perhaps twelve by fourteen feet, with only one pane of glass in one end of the building, without any window at all. Just one room, and two beds in that. Now there are from two to three hundred to attend meeting. A teacher is ready to keep the school, etc., etc.

Dear brethren and sisters, the coming of Christ is just upon us. Don't let us stop to raise any question that will hinder the work of God, but do what we can to save souls. I have learned a great deal by experience since coming out here, which I could never have learned east. I must have the liberty to profit by that experience, even at the expense, perhaps, of favorite theories. We are the body of Christ, and members in particular. Let us be one, and have but one aim, and that God's glory, not ours.

I have received as donations, since my last letter, the following sums:—Jan. 1. Sr. Ruth Williams, North Canton, Ct., $1.00; a blank letter containing $5.00. Jan. 11. From Seneca Falls, N. Y., through Bro. Wm. Himes, $2.50; Bro. B. R. Fellows, Minn., $5.00; Bro. J. F. S. Brown, Chicopee, Mass., $5.00; N. and S. Collins, Craftsbury, Vt., $5.00; Bro. G. B., Whitford, Vt., $4.00; from some friend, Boston, Mass., $5.00; Sr. Emily Davis, Syracuse, N. Y., $5.00. Total, $37.50.

I came out trusting in the Lord for aid. I do feel thankful to the Lord and his servants for the aid we receive. I know if I should write oftener, and beg freely, the brethren and sisters would respond cheerfully. But I never have seen any reason why I should deviate from the gospel rule, to make known unto Father all my wants, since he has given me an infallible promise that he will provide. And oh, the multitude of blessings I have received in answer to prayer since coming out here! It is surely an hundred-fold in this life, with persecutions. Now do pray with me that I may have the life which is to come.

Death has just taken our little babe, but little over six weeks old. For a moment it seemed dreadful to give her up, far away from all our friends east. But the good Lord gave us grace and strength in time of need. We know that death can triumph but a few months more, praise God. We have not the least idea that the cold snows of another winter will ever cover her grave. The funeral was held in our church Wed., Feb. 26th. All the teachers of the schools, with many of their scholars, also the preachers of the other Advent churches, with many of their members, were present. The sympathy manifested on that occasion afforded us much comfort; and from those, too, we very much love and esteem as worthy friends. Bro. Commodore Decatur, pastor of Compton Hill church, preached the funeral sermon, assisted by the other preachers of the conference. Text from Matt. 19: 14. Remember us at the throne of grace. Your Bro., looking towards home,

SALVATION TO ISRAEL.

I find there is nothing surer than that God has promised salvation to Israel. But two questions arise from this statement; viz., what is the salvation promised? and, who are included in the term Israel? Salvation, in the common use of the word, signifies simply a deliverance, and is valued according to the greatness of the deliverance. As, for instance, a person may be saved from greater or less pecuniary loss, or from trouble, or from temporal disaster. Thus Israel was saved at the Red Sea, and the like. But the salvation promised to Israel under the new covenant is no less than eternal life. Let us see if this be true, for if proved it cuts off all theory of a mortal Israel in the "aionce" or "world to come." In Dr. Murdock's translation of the Syriac N. T., the word salvation does not occur, but in its stead the word life is used. And this life is qualified in Matt. 25: 46 and Rom. 6: 23, and elswhere, by the Greek term "aionion," as applying to the age or dispensation introduced by the second coming of Jesus Christ. "To them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation," or "life." This promised salvation, or life, is to be obtained through a resurrection from the dead of the righteous who have died, and by a direct personal change for the righteous living at that time. And no one can "enter into" or inherit" the kingdom of God" without this change. Mark this well.

Jesus said, "except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." This we understand refers to the production of a spiritual body at the last day, and is the same as a change from mortal to immortality. And this must be done, says Jesus, for a person to be able to enter into the kingdom of God, which is the same as the "aionce" or "world to come." Again, Paul says, "flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God. This is given to prove that mortality cannot be expected in the age to come. We are now flesh and blood, and consequently subject to death. But the promise is that the children of God shall be quickened by the Spirit and thus made immortal in order to enter into the kingdom of God, and no others can enter therein. I think then it is fully proved that the salvation promised to Israel is no less than immortality, or eternal life; and that the theory of mortals in the kingdom of God is untrue.

We might rest the condition of the future age right here, but as so many changes are rung upon the term Israel, I wish to write a few lines on the second question of the subject; viz., who are included in the term Israel? It has been stated by some that the term Israel never means Gentile believers, or, in other words, christians who are not literal descendants of Jacob. This I believe to be an error, although I once supposed it to be true, as also the doctrine of mortals in the age to come. But having "learned the way of God more perfectly," in my estimation, I write this short article to define my position at the present time, and to give a "reason for the hope that is in me, with meekness and fear." Paul says, "all Israel shall be saved." Does this mean all the descendants of Jacob according to the flesh? Let Paul explain himself. "They are not all Israel which are of Israel." Rom. 9: 6. This asserts that not all the literal descendants of Jacob are included in "all Israel." But are any included who are not the literal descendants of Jacob? Let us see. Paul speaks in Gal. 6: 16 of the "Israel of God." This must be God's Israel and include certainly the heirs of salvation, and we read in Rom. 9: 8, that "the children of the promise are counted for the seed;" and in Gal. 4: 28, "Now we brethren (Gentile christians of Galatia) as Isaac was, are the children of the promise." Thus we see "all Israel," is "God's Israel," "the children of promise" and includes Gentile christians so called; but the word says there is neither Jew nor Gentile, that is, no distinction of nationality, but all are one in Christ. Again, "he is a Jew which is one inwardly" says Paul. Does not a Gentile become a Jew inwardly when he believes on Jesus Christ? Can an unbelieving Jew become any more than this? I think not.

Much more might be written in explanation of this matter, but I stop here for the present, for in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word is established. I am satisfied the theory of mortals in the kingdom of God, whether Jew or Gentile, is not scriptural. I claim, by all the promises of the New Covenant, to be a member of the "house of Jacob," with Jesus as my everlasting King. I claim to be an "Israelite indeed, in whom there is no guile," for "the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin." Now, I dwell among the ungodly, but soon I look for the King to come and "turn away ungodliness from Jacob." Here we are to turn from ungodliness, but then ungodliness shall be turned from us. I expect to reign in the kingdom of God even as the children of Adam would have reigned had he not transgressed, and sin never entered the world. To the children of God belong all the promises, the heirship, the eternal life, the unfading glory of the world to come, and to them alone. May God keep us to the end. F. BURR.

GOOD EXAMPLE.

In Paul's first letter to Timothy, he wrote, "Let no man despise thy youth, but make thyself a pattern of the faithful, in word, in life, in love, in faith, in purity." 1st Timothy 4: 12.—Bible Union Translation.

The young have more to overcome than than those who are older and have had more experience in the world. It is natural for nearly all young folks to enjoy lively society and indulge in light and trifling conversation. Festivals, picnics, dances, and other social parties have an attraction for them that those of maturer age have outgrown. They are quick to take offence, quick to resent injury, apt to talk over the faults of others, and to speak without reflecting, and do many other things which lessen the respect of the community for him who does such things.

The opinions of the young are not so much respected, nor their advice so often heeded, as those of older persons, and Paul knew this. He knew that he who is worldly and trifling does not command the respect, or have much influence on the minds of the people. Knowing that the young are liable to err in this respect, and knowing if Timothy carelessly conducted himself, he would have little influence, he wrote to him, "Let no man despise thy youth, but make thyself a pattern of the faithful, in word, in life, in love, in faith, in purity." O let us who are young be sober and earnest, live so that others will respect us, and pay heed to our words; live so that our influence will be great on the side of right; and let none despise our youth, but be examples of the believers. LOVE THY NEIGHBOR.

God is love, and he has taught mankind this great truth, that "love is the fulfilling of the law. He has taught us that it was love to the human race that prompted him to send his only begotten Son into the world to die. It was love and pity on the part of the Savior, that carried him through his sufferings while here, and made him willing to die for a fallen and sinful race. He manifested his love all through his life on earth, and he still manifests his love unto us by interceeding for us. Now if God so loves the creatures he has made; ought not those creatures to love one another. It is natural for us to love our kinkred and friends; but if we love them that love us what thank have we; do not the publicans do this? Love your enemies pray for them, and do them all the good we can; for, by so doing, we may bring them around by the influences of the Spirit, and thus they may be saved, and our happiness increased; for while we are doing good to others, we are getting good to ourselves.

How can we do good to our fellow men without the love of God in our hearts, and love to our fellow men? "Love worketh no ill to his neighbor." No, for if we truly love God and his cause, we shall love our neighbors, though they may not love us; and we shall manifest that love by our acts. We shall administer to them when sick, we shall aid them when needy. We shall sympathize with them in affliction. Finally, we shall do just the same by them as though they were our friends truly.

Dear brethren and friends, let us manifest true christian love in all our daily walk, and thus obey the command of God; and while we are trying to get good and happiness to ourselves, we shall do something for the good and happines of our fellow men. Let us work, for we are hastening to the end of our journey. N. B. MCMURPHY.

FAMILY ECONOMY.—There is nothing which goes so far towards placing young peope beyond the reach of poverty as economy in the management of their domestic affairs. It is as much impossible to get a ship across the Atlantic with half a dozen butts started, or as many bolt holes in her hull, as to conduct the concerns of a family without economy. It matters not whether a man furnish little or much for his family; if there be a continual leakage in the kitchen, or in the parlor, it runs away, he knows not how; and that demon, waste cries "more" like the horseleech's daughter, until he that provides has no more to give. It is the husband's duty to bring into the house, and it is the duty of the wife to see that nothing goes wrongfully out of it.

HOW TO CURE WOUNDS WITH SMOKE.—Burn some woolen rags or greasy wool, or better still, taglocks of wool, and hold the bleeding wound some minutes in the thick smoke. As soon as the bleeding stops, apply a bandage, and you need do nothing more to cause the wound to heal. The same remedy is good applied to ulcerous sores; but the benefits will be most marked upon fresh cuts. The smoke of the wool will answer a good purpose, though nothing is equal to taglocks.

THE BIBLE.

"This is a blessed book indeed,
Hopeful the child that loves to read";
Here's all that life or death requires,
The sum of all our best desires.
Our hope in life, our pass to heaven,
For here we have salvation given.
How sweet the words thus left behind,
What consolation to the mind;
How much encouragement have youth
To study close its sacred truth,
Riches untold are here conveyed,
The right to them is here conveyed.
How beautiful the lessons taught,
Wondrous the love by us unsought;
Priceless the great salvation wrought;
Salvation ready to impart
Blessings to the believing heart.
Opening the gates of joy on earth,
Leading to a celestial birth;
Displaying bright the love divine,
Offered indeed as yours and mine;
Showing the Lord the "one to bless,
All full of light and loveliness."
Offering its bliss to you and me
For Time and for Eternity!

THE LOST BIRD.

God has very many ways of taking care of those who trust in him. Sometimes he uses boys and girls to carry his gifts to those who are in want. And at other times he takes so small a thing as a little bird to convey his blessings to the needy.

Once in Germany there lived a man who owed a bill, which he had no money to pay. He was a christian who trusted in God and tried to be honest, and it grieved him much to be in debt.

And one day as he was sitting in his doorway thinking how he would get out of his trouble, a little bird flew over his head into the house. He rose up quickly and closed the door, and caught the bird, which he shut up in a cage.

The bird shortly recovered from its fright, and went to singing. It sounded to the distressed man just as though it was singing the tune of his favorite hymn:

"Fear thou not when darkness reigns."

Presently there was a knocking at the door. "Oh," thought the poor man, "there is the officer to take me to prison."

He was in a mistake. It proved to be the servant of the lady who owned the bird. A neighbor who saw it fly in sent her there. Very glad was she to find it, and in great joy she bore it away to her mistress. But before long she came back. "My mistress," said she, "values that bird very highly, so she begs you will accept this trifle of money with her thanks." When she was gone the poor man counted the money, and to his surprise, as he found it exactly the sum he needed to pay his debt, he cried out in joy, "The Lord has indeed sent this to me!" So good and sure is it to trust in the Lord. This story is related by Krummacher, in his "Elijah" and the man who owed the bill was a member of his congregation.—The Christian.

WHAT "UNCLE SAYS."

We wish our young friends, especially the boys, would read the following many times over, and never forget the wisdom that it contains.

My uncle is a woodman; he is now getting to be an old man. Some people say he is cross, but I do not think so. Trouble and thought may give to his face a thoughtful look sometimes; but I know he has a kind heart. Of one thing I am certain—he has got a wise head. Meet him whenever I may, he has always something to say. If you would like to hear some of his sayings, I will write down some of them for you.

One day I saw him with an ax in his hand, standing by a branch he just cut from an old oak tree, when he began:

"If you set a thistle seed, there will spring up not one or two, but twenty or thirty; and it will be just the same if you set one sin. One sin, he says, has been known to bring forth a hundred more. The farmer ought to take care that no thistle seeds are sown on his land; and you ought to take care that no sins are sown in your heart.

Uncle says a boy seldom looks forward unless it is to a holiday; when he is well, he seldom dreams of being sick; when he has money, he thinks it will last him for weeks; and when the sun shines he almost expects it to shine forever; but he says we should be ready to endure patiently, as well as enjoy gratefully. "Shall we receive good at the hand of God, and shall we not receive evil?" Job 2: 10.

Uncle says that if a traveler once leaves the turnpike road in a part of the country that he does not know, he may wander about in lanes the whole of the day, and when night comes, get stuck in a bog at last; and that if I venture to wander away from the path of duty, I may lose myself in the cross roads of error and vice all my days, and at last fall into the pit of destruction.

Uncle says he had rather read the Bible and never look at any other book, than read every other book in the world and never look at the Bible; for this reason: other books are books of men, but the Bible is the book of God; and as man's knowledge is but ignorance when compared with God's knowledge, so the wisdom of all the books of men is but folly, when compared with the wisdom of the book of God.

Uncle says that a bushel of wheat will weigh more than two bushels of bran; and that a little modesty is worth more than a great deal of conceit. He says that a boy who is modest will learn twice as much as one who is conceited. The modest boy will always be wiser than he appears, while the conceited one will not know half what he pretends to understand. I must strive to be modest, and watch against self-conceit.

Uncle says that it requires more steadiness and true courage to despise the laugh of a bad companion, and to say no when tempted to evil, than it does to march up to a cannon's mouth. He says hundreds, who are not afraid of bullets, balls, and bayonets, have not courage enough to resist the derision of their thoughtless companions. I will try my best not to be overcome by a laugh; and I will learn, if I can, to say no when asked to do evil.

Uncle says that forgiving an injury is better than revenging it; and doing one kind action is better than intending a hundred. I wonder whether I shall ever be as wise as my uncle is. He says the first step toward wisdom is the fear of the Lord, and that the second is much like it.

Uncle says a boy will do more in one month by correcting his own errors, than he will do in a year by finding out the failings of others; and that he will get more knowledge by studying his own heart, than by watching all the people that are around him.—Christian Advocate and Journal.

"I WISH I WAS A CHRISTIAN."

You do, little friend? Why are you not a little christian, a meek and lowly follower of Jesus? What hinders? Who is in fault? The Lord is more desirous for you to bow the knee in humble submission to his will, confess your sins and put them away, then you can possibly be. He gave his precious life for you.

Many, many times did little Anna say to herself, "I wish I were a christian."

Why was she not a christian? She had excellent parents and many pious friends. She had been taught a great deal about God, and heaven, and all good things. She had often read the story of the blessed Savior's life and death. She knew very well that to be a christian was the best of all things.

Anna thought she did not know how to be a christian. She often said: "I read my Bible every day; I pray to God, and ask him to give me a new heart; I try to please him and do right, and I very often give myself to him as I have been taught. But still I am not a christian, and I don't know how to be one." Anna was very sincere, and it was all true. She did read her Bible, and try very earnestly to please the Lord; and he saw in her heart the beginning of a holy life, though she did not know it.

How do you think Anna at last became a christian? After thinking a great deal about it, and praying a great many times to the Lord to teach her, and shedding a great many tears over her naughtiness, she one day made this resolution:

"I don't know as ever I shall be a christian," said she, "but this I will do. I will give myself to the Savior every day of my whole life. I will read my Bible, and pray that my sins may be forgiven; and then I will act just as christians do. I will, the Lord helping, do no wrong thing; and I will do all I can to help my little brothers and sisters to do right and love the Savior; and I will love him dearly, because he is so good, whether I am his child or not."

So Anna commenced to do as she had said; and the blessed Savior listened to her prayers, and forgave her sins, and accepted her when she gave herself to him, and loved her dearly, as she loved him.

Thus little Anna became a christian, and walked in newness of life.—Ex.

LITTLE HARRY'S SERMON.

"Eddie," said Harry, "let's go to church, and I'll be the minister, and preach you a sermon."

"Well," said Eddie, "and I'll be the people."

"My text is a very short and easy one—Be kind. There are some little texts in the Bible on purpose for little children, and this is one of them. These are the heads of my sermon:

"Firstly, be kind to papa when he has a headache, and do not make a noise. I had one once, and I did not want to hear any one speak a word.

"Secondly, be kind to mamma, and don't make her tell you any thing more than once. It is very tiresome to say, 'It is time for you to go to bed,' half-a-dozen times over.

"Thirdly, be kind to baby."

"You have left out be kind to Harry," interrupted Eddie.

"Yes," said Harry, "I didn't mean to mention my own name in the sermon. I was saying, be kind to little Minnie, and let her have your red soldier to play with when she wants it."

"Fourthly, be kind to Jane; don't kick and scream when she washes and dresses you. Here Eddie looked a little ashamed, and said,

"But she pulled my hair with the comb."

"People must not talk in church," said Harry.

"Isn't the sermon done?" asked Eddie; I want to sing. And without waiting for Harry to finish his discourse, or give out a hymn, he began to sing, and so Harry had to stop. But it was a very good sermon, don't you think so?"—Selected.

JESUS, I ASK THY AID.

While toiling o'er life's rugged road,
Beset with trials, oft a heavy load,
Fightings without, and fears within,
And longing to be saved from sin;
Jesus, I ask thy aid,
On thee may I be stayed,
My Savior and my God.

I come to thee, for thou alone
Canst bid my anxious fears begone;
Thou, only thou, canst cleanse the soul,
And from my heart its burden roll.
Jesus, I ask thy aid,
On thee may I be stayed,
My Savior and my God.

Oh, may I ne'er the cross lay down,
Till thou dost say—come, wear the crown;
But may I feel thy promise sure—
They're safe who to the end endure.
Jesus, I ask thy aid,
On thee may I be stayed,
My Savior and my God.

This is our night; the morn will come,
The saints of earth be gathered home;
But till the day of God appears
To end our sorrows and our fears,
Jesus, I ask thy aid,
On thee may I be stayed,
My Savior and my God.

For the World's Crisis.

WHAT SHALL BE THE SIGN OF THY COMING?

(Concluded.)

According to the first part of our communication, we were in this to search for the true meaning of the words "powers of heaven," and of their being "shaken." And as we thus take our stand-point between the fulfilled and unfulfilled prophetic signs, having behind us the falling stars of Nov. 14th, 1867, as the last fulfilled sign; and looking forward, while the heaven, earth, sea, and dry land, are being shaken; what do we see to be fulfilled next in order but the "shaking" of the "powers of heaven"? This doubtless stands first in Jesus' descriptive series, and this we take for granted is the next great and important sign to be fulfilled before his coming. If we can know of a truth what the powers of heaven are, and what Jesus meant by their being shaken, we may know just what to look for next as a sign of his near coming. This may be shown by ascertaining the Bible meaning of these two words—"powers" and "shaking." In these passages where the word "powers" is used, we find it as a general thing applied under God to intelligent and active creatures of his to whom he had delegated power. Jesus said to his disciples (Luke 12: 11), "And when they bring you unto the synagogues, and unto magistrates and powers, take ye no thought how or what thing ye shall answer, or what ye shall say." Again (Rom. 13: 1), "Let every soul be subject unto the higher powers, for there is no power but of God; the powers that be are ordained of God." Also vers. 2–7. In Titus 3: 1, "Put them in mind to be subject to principalities and powers, to obey magistrates." In 1 Pet. 3: 21, 22,—"Jesus Christ, who is gone into heaven, and is on the right hand of God, angels, authorities, and powers, being made subject to him." In these passages, "powers" mean men having some kind of authority as rulers in nations and communities, they themselves being subject to the authority of Jesus. Webster, in defining the word power, says: "The powers of government are legislative, executive, judicial, and ministerial. Under this sense may be comprehended civil, political, ecclesiastical, and military powers." These, then, are the powers that are to be shaken.

And now for the Bible meaning of the word shaken. Notwithstanding our common translation has failed in this connection to convey to us the true sense of this word, yet the Syriac translation, by James Murdock, has given its meaning in a peculiar and conclusive manner. These passages from the Syriac we have already quoted in part, and in presenting them here will enclose the marginal reading in brackets. In Matthew it reads as follows: "And the powers [or armies] of heaven will be agitated. And then will be the signal of the Son of man in heaven; and then will all the tribes of the earth mourn, when they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven, with power and great glory." Luke thus; "And the powers [or armies] of heaven will be moved; and then will they see the Son of man coming in the clouds, with much power, and with great glory." Mark says: "And the powers of heaven will be shaken. And then will they see the Son of man coming in the clouds, with great power and glory." Mark here connects the shaking of the powers of heaven with the immediate coming of the Son of man; he must therefore have comprehended in those words the same thing that Matthew does when he says, "The powers [or armies] of heaven will be agitated." And the same that Luke does when he says, "The powers [or armies] of heaven will be moved." If by the word shaken Mark means the same that Luke does by the word moved, then the true meaning must be that the powers which have herein been proved to mean the governments and armies of this world are to be removed, to give place for the coming kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ.

With this testimony agrees that of John the revelator. In Rev. 6: 14 he says, "And every mountain and island were moved out of their places." Mr. Barnes in his Notes on this passage says: "This would denote convulsions in the political or moral world, as great as would occur in the physical world, if the very mountains were removed and the islands should change their places. * * * If thrones and dynasties long established were overthrown; if institutions that seemed to be fixed and permanent were abolished; if a new order of things should rise in the political world; the meaning of the symbols, so far as the language is concerned, would be fulfilled." Mr. Barnes in this comment has taught us that the moving of mountains and islands out of their places represents or figures forth the "overthrow" or removal of earthly thrones and dynasties.

This passage of Scripture must needs be a parallel passage with that of Matt. 24: 30, where he says, "And then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven." By this we see that where John the revelator says, "Every mountain and island were moved out of their places," Matthew says of the same event, "Then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven"; that is to say, when the powers of heaven shall be shaken so as to begin to remove earthly governments out of their places, that event would be the only remaining sign of the coming of the Son of man in heaven.

We will now let Paul testify on this point. In 12: 26, 27, after speaking of the wonderful and terrible scenes of Mt. Sinai, he says: "Whose voice then shook the earth; but now he hath promised saying, Yet once more I shake not the earth only, but also heaven. And this word, yet once more, signifieth the removing of those things that are [or may be, margin] shaken, as of things that are made, that those things which cannot be shaken may remain. Wherefore we, receiving a kingdom which cannot by moved," or, as Mr. Murdock gives the 27th verse, "And this his expression once more, indicateth the mutation [or change] of the things that are shaken, because they are fabricated [that is, forged, or devised falsely—Webster], that the things which will not be shaken may remain."

This testimony of Paul's is very conclusive. He gives us to understand that the things which are to remain will constitute a kingdom which cannot be removed, plainly indicating by this that the things which were to be removed are kingdoms, which will be removed for the purpose of setting up an everlasting kingdom which cannot be removed.

The foregoing Divine testimonies conclusively prove that when we see the present existing earthly powers being removed out of their places, we may know that Jesus is immediately coming to establish his own great and glorious kingdom under the whole heaven. Dan. 7: 27. By these scriptures, and their fulfillment thus far, we are led to believe that we have already had the signs in the sun, moon and stars of the heaven above, in perfect accordance with the prediction, and that we are now having signs in the air, earth, sea, and dry land, whatever this last may mean, whether volcanoes, or land in general; and that we are next and very soon to have a sign or signal in the nations of the earth, which are prophetically called the powers of heaven; which will be the very last sign in this series of signs, and will constitute the real signal of Jesus' immediate, personal approach to earth.

This sign or signal being so very easily understood when seen, some unprepared ones may be led to say, If this be a fact, then I can know by it when the Lord is coming as well as his prepared people; therefore I will wait until I see that sign, when I will prepare to meet him. To such persons we would say, Stop, whoever you may be, and consider before you come to such a rash and unwise conclusion. For when that signal shall be lifted up (see Isa. 18: 3), or that sign shall have fully appeared, the servants of God will all be sealed in their foreheads, and then the four angels that now hold the four winds of power will cease to hold them, and the winds will blow, and the "earth" will be "hurt," and that by the same angels or powers that now hold the winds from "hurting" the "earth." Please read Rev. 7: 1–3, and 9–19. After the sealing of the servants of God, we find them (v. 9) before his throne and before the Lamb with palms of victory in their hands; but all the unsealed ones must have been left behind in the midst of the destructive winds of power. By these scriptures (Rev. 7: 1–3), we are made to understand that no one will be sealed after the winds of power have done their work of hurting the earth or of removing the governments. This undoubtedly is a parallel passage with those of the shaking of the powers of the heaven, and their final result will be the same in both cases. Then all those who are not sealed or prepared to meet the Lord before the accomplishment of that event will be too late, and will lose the opportunity of procuring the true seal of God in their foreheads. Unconverted friends, it would be well for you to seek the Lord now, while he is on the mercy-seat; for he will not occupy that mercy-seat and the judgment seat at the same time. "When once the master of the house is risen up, and hath shut to the door," he will say to them that begin to stand without, "I tell you I know you not whence you are; depart from me, all ye workers of iniquity."—Luke 13: 25, 27.

Beloved brethren, this is a most solemn time, and we are greatly admonished by these signs to faithfully examine ourselves, and see that we have sufficient oil, or grace of God in our foreheads; that our lamps are trimmed and burning; that we have a sufficiency of oil in our vessels, and that we make a good and proper use of our talents (Matt. 25), the true sense and meaning of which is that we be entirely consecrated and wholly sanctified to God. Most assuredly it is through faith in our Lord Jesus Christ that we obtain salvation and sanctification of the Spirit, for the Scriptures plainly teach us this. Yet it requires in us obedience to all his requirements. And for us to successfully obtain this sealing, there is something more than a nominal profession of the religion of Jesus, or a formal life of pretense in his service.

We find in many passages in both the Old and New Testaments, wherein the Lord's coming to judgment is brought to view, that he has therewith given very urgent and impressive invitations, exhortations, and warnings, to all classes of people, that they be prepared to meet him in peace, from which we quote a very few. Ps. 2: 6–12;—"Yet have I set my king upon my holy hill of Zion. I will declare the decree; the Lord hath said unto me, Thou art my Son; this day have I begotten thee. Ask of me, and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession. Thou shalt break them with a rod of iron; thou shalt dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel. Be wise now, therefore, O ye kings; be instructed, ye judges of the earth; serve the Lord with fear, and rejoice with trembling. Kiss the Son, lest he be angry, and ye perish from the way, when his wrath is kindled but a little. Blessed are all they that put their trust in him."

The second message we quote is for the ministers of the Lord, for little children, and the Lord's people generally. Joel 1: 13–15;—"Gird yourselves, and lament, ye priests; howl, ye ministers of the altar; come, lie all night in sackcloth, ye ministers of my God; for the meat offering and the drink offering is withholden from the house of your God. Sanctify you a fast, call a solemn assembly, gather the elders and all the inhabitants of the land into the house of the Lord your God, and cry unto the Lord. Alas! for the day, for the day of the Lord is at hand, and as a destruction from the Almighty shall it come."

Again in chap. 2: 1, and 15: 17;—"Blow ye the trumpet in Zion, and sound an alarm in my holy mountain; let all the inhabitants of the land tremble, for the day of the Lord cometh, for it is nigh at hand. . . . . Blow the trumpet in Zion, sanctify a fast, call a solemn assembly; gather the people, sanctify the congregation, assemble the elders, gather the children, and those that suck the breasts; let the bridegroom go forth of his chamber, and the bride out of her closet. Let the priests, the ministers of the Lord, weep between the porch and the altar, and let them say, Spare thy people, O Lord, and give not thy heritage to reproach."

The third message that we here give is for the Lord's meek ones who have wrought his judgment, by Zephaniah, 2: 1–3;—"Gather yourselves together, yea, gather together, O nation not desired"; or, as the margin reads, "not desirous." Is not this language very appropriate to our present condition? Are we not less "desirous" to have Jesus come than we ought to be? Let us see to this matter.

The Lord further says by Zephaniah, v. 23, 'Before the decree bring forth, before the day pass as chaff, before the fierce anger of the Lord come upon you, before the day of the Lord's anger come upon you, seek ye the Lord, all ye meek of the earth, which have wrought his judgments; seek righteousness, seek meekness; it may be ye shall be hid in the day of the Lord's anger."

This fourth message is given through Paul to "brethren," "children of the light, and the children of the day," and is as follows:—1 Thess. 5: 16–24:—"Rejoice evermore. Pray without ceasing. In every thing give thanks; for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you. Quench not the Spirit. Despise not prophesyings. Prove all things; hold fast that which is good. Abstain from all appearance of evil. And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly; and I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. Faithful is he that calleth you, who also will do it." That is, if we on our part are faithful to do that to which he has herein called us, he on his part will be faithful to "sanctify us wholly, and preserve us blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ."

It requires faithfulness and a most thorough consecration to him on our part to procure of him this inestimable blessing of being wholly sealed with his royal seal of his everlasting kingdom. S. K. Baldwin.

THE COMING CRISIS.

What! still another crisis? many will say. Yes, dear reader, nothing can be more sure than still another crisis, and such an one as will throw all that has gone before in our world's history quite in the shade. Verily this is the very thing of which "God has spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began."

There is at the present time, a host of the wise and good, scattered over the whole world, who are earnest students of prophecy, learned, humble and honest persons, who claim that we are now living in the "time of the end," when, according to the word of God, by the mouth of the prophet Daniel, there shall be such light on what was before "closed up and sealed," that the wise should understand when these things should come to pass, even the completion when the blessed shall come to the thousand three hundred five and thirty days, when Daniel will stand in his lot with them. Yes, a host of watching, praying ones, believe that we are nearly there, and that the next great event in our world's history will be the coming and kingdom of our Lord, when the righteous dead shall be quickened, and the living changed in a moment and "caught up to meet the Lord in the air." Surely none who are prepared can object, and those who are not prepared, as in the days of Noah and Lot, have grave objections, for they are not ready. But what if he does not come? Still watch and wait, for [illegible] as with the bride expecting her lord; surely in his return is our only hope. Long and weary ages have proved this true.

What a world ours still is—how abortive are human efforts when put forth to regulate and cure its evils. We need no revelation to teach us that the curse rests upon it. The power of evil is everywhere in the ascendancy. The pestilence walks abroad at noon and night. Earth's history is still written in blood and tears—its constant dirge, wails, sighs and groans. Mildew blights and the insect make the avails of the tiller's soil precarious.—Perishing in want and neglected, many have to lie down and die. The dominion of man has long since departed and the beast rises up in rebellion against his former ruler. Everywhere we see where lie the dead, and death sways his sceptre over the universal empire. Indeed, it would seem that all with one accord should ever pray, "Even so come, Lord Jesus."—Northern Independent.

For the World's Crisis.

THE HOPE.—No. 4.

"Wherein God, willing more abundantly to show unto the heirs of promise the immutability of his counsel, confirmed it by an oath; that by two immutable things in which it was impossible for God to lie, we might have a strong consolation, who have fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope set before us."—Heb. 6: 17, 18.

We have learned that the hope set before us is predicated on the promise made by God to the fathers, which promise was confirmed by his oath. We have also learned that God did make a promise to Abraham and his seed of an eternal inheritance; and that if we are Christ's, we are heirs of that inheritance also; and now if we can learn that this promise made to Abraham was confirmed by an oath, we shall conclude that it is the promise upon which is based the hope of eternal life; for "an eternal inheritance" implies eternal life; and this promise is confirmed "in Christ," in whom also is eternal life.

But before we proceed any further in this direction, let us stop and inquire where this inheritance is located? In Rom. 4: 13, we read, "For the promise that he should be heir of the world, was not to Abraham, or his seed (Christ), through the law, but through the righteousness of faith." Here we are informed that the inheritance promised to Abraham and his seed is the (kosmos) earth, or globe. The word kosmos, in Scripture, always signifies the world, either physical or political. When Christ says to his disciples, "Ye are not of the world" (kosmos), of course he had reference to the world politically, for they were "of the earth, earthy." But in 2 Pet. 3, the world (kosmos) is set in contrast and used synonymously with the heavens and the earth. And now God has promised Abraham and his seed the world, politically; or, he has promised him the earth for an eternal inheritance; and by reference to the original promise, we learn that it is the latter: "Lift up now thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art, northward, and southward, and eastward, and westward; for ALL THE LAND that thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed, . . . FOREVER." "And he saith not, and to seeds, as of many; but as of one, and to thy seed, which is Christ." Gen. 13: 14, 15; Gal. 3: 16. It is the land, then, the earth, that God has promised to Abraham and Christ; and "if ye are Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed," and "heirs of the world" also.

Say not, then, that the saints are "poor"; no, no; desponding pilgrim, "the world is yours; for ye are Christ's; and Christ is God's." Although you may be poor in this world's goods, yet if you are only "rich in faith," you are "heirs of the kingdom" that God has prepared for "them that love him"; and in a few more days—even "in the days of these kings," that now exist, shall "the God of heaven set up a kingdom; and the kingdom, and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven shall be given" unto you. The saints are decidedly rich. As a brother remarked a short time ago, "He had preached the gospel over twenty years, and traveled in several different States, and had not been off from his farm yet." Yes, "the world is ours," as a Methodist minister, in a wonderful piece of slang in the shape of poetry, has it,—

"And when the heretic's are dead,
And they are left alone;
They'll clap their hands, and shout for joy,
And call the world their own."

Yes, we'll do it, bless the Lord; and we expect some Methodists will join us in the shout.

But in Rom. 4, Paul continues, "Therefore it (the inheritance) is of faith, that it might be by grace; to the end the promise might be sure to all the seed; not to that only which is of the law, but to that also which is of the faith of Abraham, who is the father of us all." Verse 16. Then if there is but "one faith," and that is the faith of Abraham, it is quite essential for us to know what the faith of Abraham was. If his faith was founded on the promise of God, as the apostle several times informs us, then his faith must have been that he and his seed should inherit the earth; and "they that are of (the) faith, are blessed with faithful Abraham," for, "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit (what God promised to Abraham) the earth." And this faith is "the faith of the gospel," for "the gospel" is the "good news," or "glad tidings" of redemption; and this "redemption" through our Lord Jesus Christ is the redemption, not only of man, but his inheritance also,—the "purchased possession." Eph. 1: 13, 14; Matt. 13: 38, 44. And it is the "earth redeemed" that Abraham expected to receive in fulfillment of the promise, as is evident from the apostle's language, in Heb. 11;—"By faith Abraham, when he was called to go out into a place which he should after receive for an inheritance, obeyed; and he went out, not knowing whither he went. By faith he sojourned in the land of promise, as in a strange country, dwelling in tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise; for he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God"; and John informs us that this city is to be on the new earth. This is "the faith once (for all) delivered to the saints"; it is the faith in which the patriarchs and prophets of old lived and died; it constitutes the "everlasting covenant," confirmed in Christ, and ratified by his blood.

Mark, the original promise is, "all the land that thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed, forever." The prophet Isaiah, with the promise in view, sang: "Violence shall no more be heard in thy land, wasting nor destruction within thy borders; but thou shalt call thy walls salvation, and thy gates praise. The sun shall be no more thy light by day; neither for brightness shall the moon give light unto thee; but the Lord shall be unto thee an everlasting light, and thy God thy glory.—Isa. 60: 18, 19. John says of the New Jerusalem, "And the city had no need of the sun, neither of the moon, to shine in it; for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof."—Rev. 21: 23. But the prophet continues: "Thy sun shall no more go down; neither shall thy moon withdraw itself; for the Lord shall be thine everlasting light, and the days of thy mourning shall be ended. Thy people also shall be all righteous (the spiritual seed of Abraham); they shall INHERIT THE LAND FOREVER (according to the original promise), the branch of my planting, the work of my hand, that I may be glorified."—verses 20, 21. It is the land, then, that God promised to Abraham and his seed; the earth, according to Paul, and Christ, that the "righteous" are to inherit "forever." And "although our earthly house of this tabernacle be dissolved"; although our temporary habitation, which we now occupy, be destroyed by the fires of the last day, "we have a building of God, a house not made with hands," "we, nevertheless, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness," or, "wherein the righteous shall dwell," as Milton truly sang,

"The world shall burn, and from her ashes rise
New heavens and earth, wherein the just shall dwell."

In Gen. 17; 7, 8, God calls this promise to Abraham "an everlasting covenant"; and in 1 Chron. 16: 15–18, we are exhorted to "be mindful always of his covenant; the word which he commanded to a thousand generations; even of the covenant which he made with Abraham, and of his oath unto Isaac; and hath confirmed the same to Jacob (the twelve tribes) for a law, and to Israel (the Is- of God for an everlasting covenant," saying "to thee will I give the land of Canaan," etc. But Isaiah, in chap. 24: 5, says, "The earth also is defiled under the inhabitants thereof; because they have transgressed the laws, changed the ordinance, broken the everlasting covenant."

RADICALISM.

Radicalism is the order of the day, and works mischief by making work for others, of sober, considerate minds, and puts back the work they want done. But radicalism makes work for others to do, who will consider before they begin the best way to benefit the greatest number. These are stirring times, and every body is doing something, right or wrong, in politics and religion. We are in the prophetic quick time, and wicked times; and God's prophetic people see and know it, and we are preaching it as a people, and have done much to injure the very cause, by being too radical on set times. We must settle down on what Christ says to us that believe he is soon coming. Why do we believe he is soon coming? Because we see the signs he gave this generation taking place now. These signs are to bring us into a watching position, not knowing certain. But a radical mind will say the wise shall understand. We have heard this some three or four times by those who pretended to be wise, and know certain; and, like all radical men, push the thing beyond the mark; and with all their wisdom and knowledge proved that they did not know. This telling people that God's word says so and so, and then going to history to prove it, is about played out, I hope; for the truth has suffered so much from radicalism. We speak of things we have seen and know about. I therefore take the responsibility to exhort those that have lately come among us, and those that are looking at this present blessed truth, to follow Christ's words, as found in Matt. 24: 32–46. He told us that certain signs should precede the destruction of Jerusalem; see Luke 21: 20, also signs before his second coming,—the restoration of the Jews to the privileges of human beings, and citizens of the world, was one sign. This took place in 1778, for the first time for over seventeen hundred years. This was a great prophetic sign given by Luke, as he followed down the prophecy touching the Jews.

Matthew runs the church of Christ through the dark ages of Papacy to another sign for them; i. e., they were to come out from the tribulation of those days, the same year. Christ did as he said he would, and darkened the sun immediately after these two prophetic signs had appeared—one for each distressed class. He confirmed it by darkening the sun at that very time. Soon after knowledge began to increase as it could not before on Scripture doctrine, and a demand for Bibles caused the world to unite in publishing and distributing them as a witness of his second coming. This started the knowledge of science, which always followed the knowledge of God's word. Such a state of progression in these directions caused the opposite side, led by the devil, to get his books out by thousands, and the world is full of bad books, as well as good ones, and knowledge has increased in every way since the darkening of the sun. [illegible] state of the nations [illegible] Christ in Luke 21: 26. We see these. Lukewarmness and a form of godliness were to come in the last days. See 2 Tim. 3: 1–7. Out of this state of things in the professed church, would start another; i. e., Spiritualism, which Paul compares to Jannes and Jambres, working miracles.

These are some few of the things that were to come to pass, for which Christ told us to watch, as these were signs of his coming. Watch, because we don't know the time any more than we know when summer is coming nigh. See Matt. 24: 32–33. Watch, because we don't know only by the signs. Christ tells us the Father will make the time known as he did to Noah and Lot; and I ask you to believe it. The exhortation of Christ to us down here is to watch. The righteous will not suffer loss, even if they are at work in the field and mill with the wicked, as Christ tells us in Matt. 24: 40–41. In the whole of his instructions he keeps this fact prominent,—Watch and be ready, knowing that radicalism on this subject would grow out of what he had said about the last day signs.

We know by the prophecies and the signs now taking place, that Christ is very soon coming; while the wicked will see no signs to convince them. Those who pretend to be wise enough to tell the time, will have their wisdom brought to an end, as in every other instance. All the church will see signs enough to be watching. Keep steady at work; and do not let radicalism, that may be seen again, throw you aft, or over the track. Your faith will be strengthened by signs this year, no doubt. Many are coming into the light. Thank the Lord. H. Munger.

CHRISTIAN LIFE.

Did a holy life consist of one or two noble deeds—some signal specimens of doing, or enduring, or suffering—we might account for the failure; and reckon it small dishonor to turn back in such a conflict. But a holy life is made up of a multitude of small things. It is the little things of the hour, and not the great things of the age, that fill up a life like that of Paul and John, like that of Rutherford, or Brainerd, or Martyn. Little words, not eloquent speeches or sermons; little deeds, not miracles, nor battles, nor one great heroic act or mighty martyrdom—make up the true christian life. The little constant sunbeam, not the lightning; the waters of Siloah, "that go softly" in their meek mission of refreshment, not "the waters of the river, great and mighty," rushing down in torrent noise and force—are the true symbols of a holy life.

The avoidance of little evils, little sins, little inconsistencies, little weaknesses, little follies, little indiscretions and imprudencies, little foibles, little indulgences of self and of the flesh, little acts of indolence, or indecision, or slovenliness, or cowardice, little equivocations, or aberrations from high integrity, little touches of shabbiness and meanness, little bits of covetousness and penuriousness, little exhibitions of worldliness and gayety, little indifferences to the feeling or wishes of others, little outbreaks of temper, or crossness, or selfishness, or vanity; the avoidance of such little things as these goes far to make up at least the negative beauty of a holy life. And then attention to the little duties of the day and hour, in public transactions or private dealings, or family arrangements; to little words and tones; little benevolences, or forbearances, or tendernesses; little self-denials, and self-restraints, and self-forgetfulness; little plans of quiet kindness and thoughtful consideration for others; to punctuality, and method, and true aim in the ordering of each day—these are the active developments of a holy life, the rich and divine mosaics of which it is composed. What makes yon green hill so beautiful? Not the outstanding peak, or stately elm, but the bright sward which clothes its slopes, comprised of innumerable blades of slender grass. It is of small things that a great life is made up; and he who will acknowledge no life as great save that which is built up of great things, will find little in Bible characters to admire or copy.—Bonar.

FAITHFULNESS.

Faithfulness should characterize every child of God, but in these last days how few are giving heed to the commands and examples of Christ. We have certainly come down to the time which the apostle Paul spoke of, when some should depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils. How many talents are hid in the earth. Many, because they have not ten, will not improve upon what has been entrusted to them. Do such expect, when the Lord comes to reckon with them, to hear it said, "Well done, good and faithful servant?" "Know ye not that to whom ye yield yourself a servant to obey: his servant ye are to whom ye obey: whether of sin unto death or obedience unto righteousness?" Do we meet often together and exhort one another and so much the more as we see the day approaching? Are we all ready to meet the Judge? Behold, he standeth at the door. Now we can warn sinners to flee the wrath to come. Are we doing it?

God help us to be faithful in all things. If by our faithfulness one sinner is saved, it will be worth more than all this world; and on the other hand, if by our unfaithfulness one should be lost, how great the loss. God forbid that we stand in the way of sinners. Our time is short. What is done must be done quickly. We are doing our very last work. Let us not slack our hand. God is with us, and will give all needed grace. We have some faithful servants who are giving meat in due season. A blessing is promised upon such. [illegible] Are any sick among you? any poor, any mourning and afflicted? Visit and comfort them by your words and acts. Christ says, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." We are living in a grand and awful time, and if ever we should lift up our heads it is now. Why? Because our redemption is nigh. The faithful of all ages are to be gathered. Our King is coming. Our loved ones are coming from their dusty beds. Death is to be destroyed. Do not these promises comfort you, my pilgrim Brs. and Srs.? He who has promised is faithful. But shall you and I be among the redeemed? All depends upon our faithfulness. I trust we soon shall join in the song of redemption, and chant the praises of of Him who hath redeemed us to God by his blood. Georgia A. White.

CHURCH ORGANIZATION.

There is no good reason why law-abiding citizens should oppose order; and there is no such thing as order without law in this world. The law of God, in its connecting links, binds his universe in one great and perfect system.

Law precedes everything in all the works of God. He had a law of creation, and created in harmony with it. He established a law of circulation, and arranged each orb in harmony with it. He framed a law for man, and produced him, and placed him under it. Even his only begotten Son was placed under the most rigid discipline, not because he was unrighteous, but to try his virtues.

Some people are particularly afraid of law, if it is in any way connected with religion. There are men who are perfectly willing to spend time and money to examine titles of land, and who will have no title if they cannot get a good one. There are plenty of men who will have no scruples in legalizing a deed of a ten thousand dollar farm, but could not conscientiously unite with a church which had legalized its incorporation in the capacity of a free church, that they might enjoy a title to a thousand dollar chapel and lot.

Again, you will have no trouble in finding twenty men who will not object to a warrantee deed of five thousand dollars' worth of land each, making a sum total of one hundred thousand dollars; yet you will be troubled to find seven out of the twenty who will be willing to go before a Justice and acknowledge a certificate, to be filed in the office of the Secretary of State, so that they, as trustees of a Free Church, may take a deed of a half acre on which to build a house to worship God in. That never would do; it would be too much like somebody else, who, after the house was built, had built a forty rail fence.

I do not believe in forty rail fences, or creeds of forty articles in them; but I am completely sick of this hap-hazard, no-system way of doing business for the Lord, or in his name. We should discharge any agent that would pretend to do business for us, as we sometimes do business for the Lord. Let us put away childish things and act like men. If we wish to buy a house to worship God in, or a lot on which to build one, let there be seven responsible men appointed as trustees, and let them draw up a certificate expressing the object of their organization; let them sign and acknowledge it before a Justice, and have it filed in the office of Secretary of State, and a duplicate filed in the office of the County Clerk, and thus become a legal incorporation in the capacity of a Free Church, and not trust the interests of all in the hands of one man, and get swindled out of part of it.

But some are averse to law. Throw away your titles, then, and have nothing to do with law or government. If it is wrong for seven men to occupy a legal position that they may enjoy a title to property used for religious purposes, it is wrong for one man to do it. Why should we be so afraid of legality, as churches, and yet have no scruples to enter it as individuals?

Some will say, The Lord is too near to enter into any such system as you propose. Well, if you think so, you had better sell what you have, and give alms. But we have been making that plea for twenty-five years, and the result is we have had all kinds of work but right work; and for one I would just as soon be found legalizing a church organization, as holding a title of a farm, when Jesus comes. Am I all wrong, or right? Let the prudent observer answer. Wm. A. Fenn.

P. S.—The above will apply to State Conferences, which should own tents, form Tract or Publishing Societies, or adopt anything else of a responsible character. "A word to the wise is sufficient." W. A. F.

THE LIFE STRUGGLE.

This world knows no victory to be compared with victory over our own passions. The struggle of life is between the flesh and the spirit, and one or the other finally gains the ascendency. Every day and every hour of the christian's life is this contest going on, and sad is it to think how often it is that victory is declared in favor of this earth with its sinful passions. The apostle Paul, after having labored long and earnestly in his Lord's service—after having done more for the spread of the truth than all the other apostles, still felt that he was a human being, and liable at any time, through the weakness of the flesh, to lose all. "I keep under my body," says he, "and bring it into subjection, lest after I have preached the gospel unto others, I myself should be a castaway." If this watchfulness was needful on the part of this aged and long tried servant of God, what care and diligence ought we, my brethren and sisters, [illegible]

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, April 8, 1868.

☞ Take Notice!

All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

☞ Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank-checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ MONEY ORDERS.

Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given.

Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too.

Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us YOUR NAME AND POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

☞ ATTENTION! ATTENTION!!

Our subscribers in Massachusetts, Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Ohio, will find their credit of money received for the Crisis on the strip pasted on their paper, which shows the date to which their subscription pays, instead of the No., as formerly acknowledged. Others will be sent likewise as fast as we get each State so arranged. So you can look at the date on your paper, and see if it is changed after sending us money.

BUSINESS CORRESPONDENCE.

In writing to the office on business, correspondents will please observe the following:

1. Be sure and write your POST OFFICE and STATE DISTINCTLY. DON'T FORGET IT. Some people write to us and leave off the address, and if in any way we chance to find out where they live, and write to them, they reply like this:

"I have taken the Crisis for a number of years, and you ought to know my address by this time."

It is not to be supposed that we should know the address of between eight and nine thousand subscribers; and besides there are several of the same name in different States.

2. Be very particular to sign your name so that we can read it. Some neglect to do this, and then blame us because the business is not properly done. We have many nameless letters on hand now.

3. Be sure and put business matters on a separate sheet from articles for the Crisis, or for the Editor. We very often have to read three or four pages to know what is to be done with money enclosed. We have not time to do this, and it is for the Editor only to read. Write your business plainly and briefly on a separate sheet.

4. Be sure and write appointments on a separate sheet, and sign your name.

5. If you are away from home, and send us money for the Crisis, be careful to tell us where your paper is sent.

6. In writing to have your paper changed, be sure and state where from, and where to, Post Office, County and State.

7. Do not write to have your address changed after such a date,—several weeks or months ahead. Wait till you want it changed, and then write.

8. In sending money, state whether for new subscribers or not.

9. In writing and referring to a previous letter, state what was in it, and do not expect us to remember what was in it.

10. If you see a mistake, write to us plainly and meekly, and we will cheerfully rectify it. Dont write us a "blow up." HARSH WORDS are not for christians. Be kind to all.

11. If you fail to comply with these few requests, and the business is not properly done, don't blame us, or call us dishonest, or any harsh names.

12. Be very sure and pray for us twice where you find fault and talk against us once. A. P. MOORE, Clerk.

We hope these most reasonable requests will receive very careful attention by all who do business with the office; and it will save our faithful clerk much trouble and perplexity. Please do observe them. Will you?—EDITOR.

THE BOSTON CONFERENCE.

Our conference, now in progress, at the Lowell St. Chapel, is the largest we have ever enjoyed in this city. We are having a heavenly time. A large number of ministers are present. It seems quite like a campmeeting. The Spirit of the Lord is with us, and our hopes are bright in favor of soon seeing Jesus. More next week.

THE SPIRITUALIST'S JUBILEE.

Twenty years ago, the 31st of the last month, dates the commencement of the spiritual manifestations to the Fox girls, at Hydeville, near Rochester, N. Y. On the 31st ult. the Spiritualists held "jubilee" meetings in various cities, and among others, at Boston, in the Music Hall, which is the largest one in the city. In the afternoon they had an exhibition of the "Children's Lyceum," which may properly be called the Devil's Sunday School, got up in opposition to the Sabbath schools in the churches. The great hall was not large enough for the occasion, though a fee of twenty-five cents was required for admission. The hall was decorated with various banners. On one was a representation of an old meeting-house in a very dilapidated condition, with the steeple tumbling down into a mass of ruins. Just in front of the old house was an old grave sinking down into the ground, with old, leaning moss-covered stones at each end. On the foot-stone were the letters "O. T.;" on the head-stone, "Tight-jacket old theology rest in peace." Underneath, on the banner was the following:

"Hark from the skies a joyful sound,
Our ears attend the cry;
Old errors come and view the ground
Where you must shortly lie."

On another banner was the following:—

"Broad is the road that leads to life,
And thousands walk together there,
But error shows a narrow path,
With here and there a traveler."

On another the following:—"The stroke of death is but a kindly frost which cracks the shell and leaves the kernel room to germinate. What consummate fools this fear of death hath made us."

On another conspicuous banner was the following:—"The fear of the Lord is the beginning of folly."

It is a settled fact that Spiritualism is most emphatically antichristian; but we firmly believe we have not seen it yet in all its hideous deformity. But few are aware what deadly hostility it manifests towards everything christian. It is high time every friend of Jesus was awake and girded with the whole armor of God, that he may be prepared to meet Satan's advancing legions, waving their banner, with the inscription on it: "THE FEAR OF GOD IS THE BEGINNING OF FOLLY."

CAIN'S WIFE.

BRO. GRANT:—Having been a reader of the Crisis for some time, and noticed therein your willingness and ability to enlighten the inquiring mind upon passages of Scripture, not fully understood, I thought I would venture to trespass upon your patience by asking the following question:

Genesis 4: 16, 17. As Adam, Eve and Cain appear to be all the living we have any account of at that time, who was Cain's wife?

Gen. 6: 1, 2. Who were the sons of God in contradistinction from the daughters of men? I ask these questions because we have had a lecturer here teaching the people, that there were races of men living before the creation of Adam. Again, Ezekiel 38: 8–13, inclusive. Has this prophecy been fulfilled in the past, or are we to look for it in the future? If in the future, is it before or after the coming of the Lord? If before the coming of the Lord, are we not to expect a gathering of the Jews as a nation, before the Lord appear? Yours in love of the truth, ORMON SPICER.

Kendall, Orleans Co., N. Y.

In relation to Cain's wife, it should be observed that the Bible does not give any account of Adam's daughters, but the line of male descendants that lead to Christ as the promised seed. It is estimated that, according to the laws of generation, there must have been not less than fifty thousand inhabitants upon the earth when Cain took a wife.

We are not fully satisfied as to who are meant by "the sons of God," in Gen. 6: 2. There is some evidence to show that they were "the angels which kept not their first estate," (Jude 6), called also evil angels, demons, unclean spirits; and that from them came the giants, who are now extinct.

Of Ezek. 38: 8–13, we would say, we think that is already accomplished.

INQUIRIES.

BRO. GRANT:—I was interested in the "inquiries" of Eld. Fassett in relation to baptism, as given in the Crisis of March 18th, and am satisfied with your reply, and the implied views of Bro. Fassett. But the greatest difficulty I have seen and felt in this matter of fellowship is not properly touched, neither in the inquiries nor in your reply; it is this: suppose a brother in some church, who has been sprinkled, either in infancy or on joining his church, becomes convinced that our views, on the whole, are more correct than those of the church to which he belongs, and wishes to unite with one of our churches, but does not feel it his duty to be immersed, thinking he has already been baptized, or that his baptism was correct enough. If he gives evidence of real conversion, and no difficulty but this appears, should we receive him as a member in full fellowship, by simply advising him to continue to search for more light on this subject? Such cases I have known, and they now exist. There are godly brethren who have the belief that sprinkling is legal baptism, so riveted in their minds by education, that it seems impossible for them to remove it, even by a re-examination; nor by all the instruction we can give them. I conversed several times with our beloved and lamented Bro. C. F. Hudson, and think this was the case with him, as he was never immersed.

I have known two prominent Methodist brethren, who were long in an Advent church; one saw it duty, and was immersed, the other did not see it to be a duty. The one who was immersed was rigid, and labored so much with the other that it made trouble in the church, and was one cause of breaking it up, and I believe it is yet extinct, though they had a chapel.

I know not what has been the general practice of Advent churches as to this question, but it appears to me of more practical importance to be settled among us, than the inquiry of Bro. Fassett; for the reason that the "impossibility of being baptized," can but very seldom occur; this may often. I have my opinion what would be right in such cases, but withhold it till I hear yours, or that of other brethren. Yours in love, J. BLAIN.

Buffalo, March 28, 1868.

We think the answer to the foregoing inquiry is easily given. We must all admit that there have been good christian men, like John and Charles Wesley, Luther, and a host of others in the different churches, who were never immersed. They loved the Lord, and delighted in his service; but had been educated to believe that sprinkling was baptism as truly as immersion. Will such be saved? Who will say No! As there is no doubt about their salvation, there can be no doubt but that they will be at "the marriage supper of the Lamb"; then, of course, they have a right to the sacrament of the Lord's supper. Men should not be more rigid than the Lord; but we fear some are on some things. We think every christian should always be invited to the Lord's table.

THE "SPICY" LETTER.

A correspondent wishes to say a word in behalf of the writer of the "spicy" letter, which appeared in the Crisis of March 18th. She says:—

"After reading that 'spicy' letter in the Crisis, a mother's heart has been deeply impressed to ask of all who love the truth, and the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ, to offer up to God special, importunate prayer in behalf of that son, who would so peremptorily stop his mother's paper. Pray earnestly that his heart may be subdued before seducing demons gain any further control over him; that God's Holy Spirit may be commissioned anew to convince him of sin, of righteousness, and a judgment near to come; that he may repent of his sin against a holy God, and believe on the Lord Jesus Christ before he rises from the mediatorial seat, and mercy be gone forever. It is God's prerogative to bring good out of evil; and the prayers of the righteous availeth much. O that believing prayer, united prayer, might be offered in this case, that God would cause it to result in good to some poor souls. No doubt that prayer has done its office work on the hearts of some in that family. May God preserve them as the apple of his eye through the perils of these last hours of time."

JOSEPH BARKER.

Joseph Barker was a christian, wrote an able defense of christianity, then became a noted Atheist and opposer of the Bible. He was the President of the Anti-Bible Convention, held in Hartford, Ct., some years since. After wandering for years in the mazes of infidelity, he has been again rescued from the power of Satan and is laboring successfully in the vineyard of the Lord. In a communication from him, Victor Place, William St., Southport, England, Nov. 21st 1867, he gives the following excellent advice to young men:

"To you, young men, who are beginning to entertain sceptical views, let me offer a word of counsel and warning. I assure you, you know not what you are doing. The path on which you are entering may seem right to you in your present state of mind, but the end thereof is death. You are preparing for yourselves matter for bitter repentance.

I have trod the dreadful path from beginning to end. I know it all. It is a weary and dismal road, and it leads to wretchedness and ruin. I have seen the terrible effects which infidelity produces on men's characters. I have had proof of its deteriorating influence in my own experience. Its tendency is to utter debasement. I have studied both sides, and what is more, I have tried both, and the result is a full assurance that infidelity is madness, and that the religion of Christ is the perfection of wisdom and goodness.

I think of my wanderings in the dark shades of doubt and unbelief with unspeakable sorrow. I would give a world if I could have my time to live over again, that I might avoid the dreadful mistake I made in turning my back on Christ and his cause, and joining the ranks of his enemies. The only comfort I have is that I was permitted to return while in the fulness of my health and strength, and in the full vigor of my mental powers; that I am allowed to speak for Christ and Christianity once more—that my family are all happy in the love of God and in the faith of the gospel, and that my large and varied experience enables me to speak of the infinite excellency of religion with an assurance, and to substantiate what I say with a kind of evidence, which, without such an experience, might have been impossible.

I have no inducement to address you thus but regard to your welfare, and to the welfare of those over whom your influence may extend, and a sense of duty to that great, good God who is the Father of us all. I owe it to you, I owe it to all, to make known the result of my life-long experience; and this is the reason why I speak. I know that virtue is necessary to happiness, and that religion is necessary to virtue, and that christianity is religion, and virtue, and happiness, in their highest and divinest forms. I have proved its power, I have felt its worth, I have tasted its blessedness, I have seen its elevating and cheering power in others near and dear to me in the hour of grievous suffering. It is—as the best and dearest creature I know on earth said to me not long ago, when apparently drawing near to death—it is "the pearl of great price;" "the one thing needful."

I could say more; my heart is full, and would fain pour forth itself in prayers and entreaties to you to return to Christ. The man that leaves the religion of Christ for unbelief, or sinful pleasures or worldly gains, makes a dreadful exchange. He leaves the fountains of living waters for cisterns that hold no water. Like the prodigal son, he leaves the home of his soul and the love of the Father for a far country, where, after his short delusive pleasures, he must encounter the horrors of friendlessness and starvation. The prodigal was beside himself, and so are they who imitate his example. When the prodigal came to himself he returned with shame and sadness to his father and his home again, and when you come to yourselves you will do the same.

God grant that it may be soon. God grant that you may be brought to see things in their true light, and to seek his mercy, and give yourselves to his service without delay.

Infidelity, and sin, and all that they can give, are but vanity and vexation of spirit; but a life of faith on the Son of God, and of obedience to his gospel, "is profitable unto all things, having promise both of the life that now is, and of that which is to come."

THOSE WINTER BLOSSOMS.—We are desired to say to Bro. J. M. Weston, of Keesville, N. Y., relative to those "marvelous" December blossoms, that others, who thought they read carefully, think that Sr. Mathewson understood and represented the matter correctly.

SHUT OUT.

The following very sensible remarks concerning the popular places of religious worship are from "The Christian Banner and Tract Fund," sent us by D. D. Chaffee. We are glad to know that people are waking up to this important subject:

PUBLIC PREACHING—TICKETS FOR SALE.

We observe an increasing attention on the part of the christian public to the question of opening the house of God more freely to the public. It is a matter in which we feel a peculiar interest, because our paper is largely taken by the poor as well as the rich. In previous articles on this subject, we have said to the rich, "Beware, lest you indirectly shut out the poor from the sanctuary;" and we have said to the poor, "Let nothing keep you from the Lord's house; deny yourselves that you may contribute to its support; and, above all, deny and subdue your pride and envy."

The subject is important as connected with the great movement of our times toward evangelizing the masses. It can not be settled on the one side by an indiscriminate cry for free seats, nor on the other by the oft-repeated statement that people in this country value only what they pay for. There are great principles involved. There are also embarassing practical difficulties. The principles point one way, and the difficulties, of course, the other. Between the two, the progress will be slow enough to be safe; so that no one need fear that the financial foundations of our churches will be speedily upturned.

What is the true theory of christian Sabbath worship? Is it, strictly speaking, public worship? Are there no limitations to its publicity? Can its public character be secured in harmony with an efficient money-provision for its maintenance? Are free seats essential to public worship? Should our Sabbath congregations be as free as a political mass meeting? or is it enough that they be like a ticketed lecture or a Dickens reading? These are natural questions, and many are asking them.

It is obvious that our present system is essentially a ticket-system. Under it, worship and preaching are, in a measure, public. In the first place, when the church is built, or at other times, the tickets are offered to the public for sale; it matters not whether these tickets are printed, or written in the form of a bill for pew-rent. To go out and compel people to come in that God's house may be filled is to urge them to take stock in the new meeting-house, or to hire a pew. In the second place, a few free seats are generally reserved, but with the understanding that for anybody to occupy them permanently would be disgraceful, and for anybody to seat a respectable stranger in them would be discourteous. In the third place, transient visitors are welcomed to all the vacant places, being considered in the light of guests.

This is a fair statement of the system that obtains in the vast majority of churches in our country. Is this all that is desirable? and, if not, is it all that is practicable? The former of these questions we will answer by presenting the following fatal objection to the present system:—

It stands in the way of public preaching to the mass of the people. This is no light charge; but it can be easily sustained. One duty of the minister of Christ is to "feed the flock of God;" to take care of those who are already christians; and this he may do inside of a ticketed fold. But there is a command given before the one to "feed the flock," and lying deeper than that: it is, "Preach the gospel to every creature." The minister of the gospel is both an evangelist and a pastor; evangelist first, pastor next. His pulpit is a preaching-stand for a lost world, as well as a place of instruction and comfort for the elect. The functions of a pastor may be discharged under the present system, but not those of the gospel-herald.

Suppose a corps of public lecturers should receive a divine commission to deliver their lectures to everybody in the five large cities in the United States. It would, of course, be understood, that if the people would not come to hear them, and could not be induced to by any proper motives, then the lecturers would not be responsible for a partial fulfillment of their commission. But suppose they should, after a careful calculation of the expenses of their work, decide to issue tickets ranging in value from five to a hundred dollars a year; would that be obeying the command? Could their friends "go out into the streets and lanes of the city," and say, "Here are men whom God has commanded to come hither and instruct every one of you; come and hear them; as you value God's love and your own good, come and hear them?"

This is just what we are doing in preaching the gospel. It is plain as the sunlight that Jesus meant to have his gospel preached with the utmost publicity. It is equally plain that we in a measure restrict that publicity. Having calculated the expenses of gospel institutions (not scrupling to introduce into the bill a good many luxuries,) we issue tickets for that amount. When God says, "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money; come ye, buy and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk without money and without price,"—we say, "Ho every one that thirsteth and hath money, come ye, buy and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk with money;" and then add, "If you are willing to come and be a class by yourselves, come 'without money.'"

"But," says one, "this is all theory. Practically it is not so." It is so. The public is thoroughly imbued with the idea that churches are for those who pay for them. It will take at least a half-century of faithful efforts at reform in this respect to eradicate this idea from the public mind. We have ourselves been asked in all sincerity by a stranger in a church-porch in Boston, at the usual hour of Sabbath worship, whether there would be any objection to his going in. This was, of course, an extreme case of outspokeness on the part of the stranger; but he was an index of the general understanding in regard to christian churches. It is an accepted maxim, that churches are for those who pay for them. Cooped up within their ticketed walls, the servant of God can indeed "feed the flock" already gathered in; but little chance has he to reach with his voice the "other sheep which are not of this fold." The great trouble lies in the general impression made upon the outside public by our present system. The publicity of gospel-preaching is restricted in that most fundamental way,—the formation of popular sentiment. Occasional free chapels are not enough to turn the tide. They set off the prevailing system the more strongly by contrast. They are, too often, mere safety-valves to keep the other and more powerful organizations from explosions of conscience.

To be consistent, we must either give up the idea that the commission to preach the gospel can be executed in connection with our ordinary Sabbath services, or we must strike off the chains that money has riveted upon our church doors. Are we prepared for the former alternative? Must the pastor cease to be a herald to the outside world? Shall he lay down his public commission received from the Master, and take up instead the chaplaincy of a club of believers and their friends?

Let it be added, that the present money-system affects not merely the number and kind of hearers, but also the style and matter of preaching. The freer the sanctuary, the more freshness and earnestness will characterize the preacher in his unfolding the great themes of the gospel. He will feel the stimulus of his commission as an evangelist. He will look each day for some new and more needy hearer, either attracted by the open door or brought in by the persuasion of his people. We know of a minister, who, for a considerable time, had scarcely an impenitent person in his Sabbath congregation; and his preaching, of course, corresponded. Is that what our churches are coming to? If so, then the main preaching of the gospel is to be outside of church-walls.

We beg our readers not to judge of what we have now written by what we have omitted. We hope to take up the subject again.

NOTICE.

BRO. GRANT:—May I through your paper inform our Father's children that a tract may be had at the Crisis office, claiming, by the unerring authority of the word of God, to have established the time of the first jubilee even to absolute certainty, and by the authority of the Jews to have adjusted its cycle to our Bible chronology. The tract was intended for gratuitous distribution, but if those who wish to pay would give us ten cents each, we may have the more to give. Another tract will be out soon setting forth the evidence that the appearing of Christ will be in a jubilee year. WM. C. THURMAN.

THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION.

COMMENDATIONS.

"The Plan of Redemption is a book to be studied rather than read simply. If I could give my time, I would devote it wholly to the sale and distribution of this excellent book. I wish it might be read by the inmates of every dwelling in the land."

D. W. GRIFFIN.

"I am highly pleased with the 'Plan of Redemption.' It seems so clear and expressive of Scripture sentiment, I want to get it into the hands of every one." C. FULLER.

The edition of one thousand copies is nearly exhausted. Price $1.25. Sold at this office.

SPRINGFIELD NATIONAL ADVENT CAMP-GROUND.

The Committee have published a lithographed plan of our new camp-ground, which gives a good representation of the shape of the ground, the circle for the seats, the lots for the tents, which are all numbered, the locations of the various avenues, buildings, etc., etc. The plan will be a great convenience for all who attend the campmeeting, and be interesting to those who do not.

Price, postpaid, 20 cents per copy. For sale at this office.

"THE FIRST DAY SABBATH."

Those who wish a thorough work on the Sabbath question, will do well, to get Bro. T. M. Preble's work, entitled, "The First Day Sabbath." For sale at this office. Price $1.50, postage 20 cents.

"FEED MY LAMBS."

Now the third time that Jesus showed himself to his disciples, after he was risen from the dead, he told them to feed the lambs. "Peter was grieved because he said unto him the third time, Lovest thou me? and he said unto him, Lord, thou knowest all things; thou knowest that I love thee. Jesus saith unto him, Feed my sheep." Now there are many weak and tender lambs in the little flock, that need care, and must have it, or perish. There are many calls for help, and it is a great blessing to me when I can respond to those calls. It is truly more blessed to give than to receive. I remember, too, that Jesus said, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these," etc.

I wish to speak of one of those suffering lambs—Sr. Luthera B. Weaver. For nearly three weeks I was by her couch of sickness, and an eye-witness of her sufferings. It was enough to melt the most obdurate heart. I never saw anything that could compare with with it. I know something of the sacrifice that Bro. and Sr. Streeter have made in her behalf. For the last thirteen years disease has deprived her of the use of her lower limbs. She has been dependent upon her friends to be moved around. For the last year she has been confined entirely to the bed, suffering the most excruciating pain and distress, yet manifesting the patience and resignation of the true child of God.

I wish to say to those who have corresponded with her,—if you wish to learn any particulars concerning her sickness or circumstances, write to the subscriber, who will be happy to inform you; but do not forget to gladden her sad heart by your kind letters and donations. They have been as cordials to her in soul and body. You will in no wise lose your reward. M. FOSS.

THE VINE.

"I am the vine, ye are the branches. He that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit; for without me ye can do nothing."—JOHN 15: 5.

We are informed in Gal. 5: 22–23, what the fruit of the Spirit is if we abide in Christ, who is the true vine. Love is the foundation of all graces. Wherever there is a union to Christ there is love, and this love produces joy. Joy is the happiness of love; it is love exulting. If joy is love exulting, peace is love reposing. Long-suffering is love enduring. Gentleness is love in society. Goodness is love in action. Faith is love in the battle field. Meekness is christian lowlihood. Temperance is love enduring hardness, love seeking to become healthful and athletic, love striving for the mastery in all things, and bringing the body in subjection.

Who would not love Jesus? In the christian character what great attractions. There is great encouragement for every one to walk in the way of righteousness. For those who walk in this way have promise of the life that now is, and of the life which is to come. How strange it is that amid all the searchings for happiness in this world (and this is what all desire and seek for), that the true source is overlooked. Give me an humble place among the despised disciples of Christ, with the assurance that the approving smile of my heavenly Father rests upon me, and it is enough. AMANDA WHITFORD.

AN OPEN DOOR.

It rejoiced my heart to read Bro. Grant's account of his discussion in Webster, and the prospects of the cause there. He says at the close of the article referred to, "We left an open door for the truth in Webster."

Having been acquainted in that place for many years, and having resided there some portion of the time since 1851, I felt a special interest in the report of Bro. Grant, and my companion shared deeply in the same. No place seems to us so much like home as Webster, but, to use a hackneyed phrase, "circumstances which we could not control" have kept us in Sutton for the last four years. But now a door seems to open for us to return to Webster. A correspondent writes to us from there to that effect, and if the Lord will, we intend to move to that place about the first of April.

Friends, please notice the change of address, as after April 1st it will be Webster, Mass. Pray for us.

MAINE MISSION TENT NOTICE.

We wish to notify the brethren East, who have not seen credit in the Crisis for money they have paid for purchasing the tent, that we think we have credited from time to time the names and amounts of all we have received for that purpose. We have also sent a list of the same to Bro. Moses Young, Camden, and any who wish can consult him; and if they do not find their credit, then please write to me, and state the case. I. C. WELLCOME.

MAINE WESTERN QUAR. CONF.

Convened in Topsham, March 18th, 1868. The roads were in a bad condition, and but few attended from abroad; but those who did attend had a mind to work, and the brethren and sisters in Topsham and Brunswick are deeply engaged in the work, and thus we enjoyed a precious season in the Lord. Several from other churches came in and united with us in worship. Strangers to our hope were present, and listened with attention to the word preached. A good impression was left on the minds of those who heard. Ministers present, Wm. H. Mitchell, R. R. York, L. F. Cole, J. A. Libby, N. G. Reed, C. Goud, H. D. Reed, I. C. Wellcome. At the close of the P. M. sermon Sunday, a church of thirteen was organized by choice of C. Goud Elder, George Howland Deacon, James Howland Clerk, George M. Howland Treasurer; after which we enjoyed a precious communion season at the Lord's table. The prospect is good for the advancement of the cause of our soon coming Lord in that place. There are others who will yet unite with this church.

ST. LOUIS CONFERENCE.

The Missouri Advent Christian Conference will hold its second meeting at the Advent Christian Church, near Compton Hill, on Chouteau Avenue, west part of the city of St. Louis, commencing Saturday, April 18th, at 10 A. M., and continuing over the following Sabbath. Each church connected with this Association will send four delegates. All preachers in good standing, and connected with said churches, are members of this Association. All christians in love and harmony with the Advent Christian faith are cordially invited to come and be with us during the conference meetings. Churches desiring to unite with this conference can send their preachers and delegates, the same as other churches in full connection. Strangers visiting us at this time will call at the Advent Christian Hall, 1136, corner of Fifth and Biddle Sts. Per order of Conference Board, Correspondence.

From Bro. A. Damon.

BRO. GRANT:—I would like to say to the brethren and sisters scattered abroad, that I am still on the battle-field fighting for King Jesus. I am not weary in well doing. I love the service of my Redeemer, and am determined to wage war with the powers of darkness in the name of Jesus Christ, who has promised to be with me unto the end. I am now in Philadelphia laboring with Bro. Hook. A number have started here of late. When I came, I found Bro. Hook quite unwell, but by the blessing of God he is getting better, and will be able to preach in a few days. I have visited Bro. Burbank, who is laboring among the colored people. Have preached there once. Truly the Lord has blessed our brother while endeavoring to do good to this people. There is not probably one in a thousand who would be willing to occupy the place he does. While I hear some preachers tell how they have taken their lives in their hands and have gone out to preach the gospel (that is to say their lives were in danger), I think if they should go round with Bro. Burbank a few days, they would find that it is quite different from what they have been accustomed to do. And furthermore, I heard our dear brother remark, that he felt he was pretty well off if he got enough to eat and second-hand clothes to wear. Beloved, pray for our brother, and not only pray, but do; for he is surrounded with many cares, and even his life is in danger many times. He is situated among thieves and murderers and all kinds of evil persons.

While here, I have thought of what the prophet said: "Woe unto them that are at ease in Zion." O Lord, help me to be more willing to sacrifice all for Christ, and venture out upon his word, and believe what it says. My brethren, awake! awake! and gird on the whole armor, for the storm is coming. Cry aloud, and spare not, and let the church and world know that these things are so.

If the sinner's eye should fall on these lines, let me say to you, you have no time to waste. The hour of probation is almost passed, and soon the High Priest will lay aside his priestly robe, gird himself with his kingly garment, and ride on the great white cloud through the burning pathway of heaven. Pleasant homes and palaces cannot shelter you then. Father and mother cannot save you then; but Jesus will save you if you give your heart to him. God grant that you may improve these golden moments. ALLEN DAMON.

P. S.—My address for the present will be 450 North Fifth St., Phila., Pa.

From Bro. H. Bailey.

BRO. GRANT:—We have arrived at the year to which I think the Spirit of God directed me, some ten years ago, as the last year that men would riot in wickedness, and which would end the labors of the pure in heart; not knowing that a person in this world was looking for the return of the Savior but myself, until I got hold of some tracts written by Bro. J. V. Himes, and others, which pointed to the same year. To look upon the world and see with what anxiety and perseverance in worldly matters men are planning and working to accumulate wealth, and to gain honor and respect of men, one would suppose that the day of rewards was far in the future; but to take our Father's will, which points the heir to his inheritance, and examine it carefully, points down to this time when we may lift up our heads, knowing deliverance is near.

A few days ago a neighbor riding past me said, "To look over the face of the earth now does not seem that seed-time and harvest would come in a few months." I told him a year ago Bro. Brewer expected now to be in in the kingdom of heaven, but was disappointed; and so we may be as easily as was he. He remarked that vice was raging at a great degree all around us. I told him it was a particular sign of the last day of which we were reminded by our Savior, and we cannot be mistaken when the time draweth nigh.

It is an easy matter for a person with an unprejudiced mind, studying God's word, to see that the day for our Savior to make his appearance again in the clouds to redeem his people has almost arrived. What a glorious subject for the christian to reflect upon, and how delightful to contemplate the unfading crowns, the joys and pleasures, free from afflictions and sorrows, from separated ones, and a life to continue for ever. Deliverance, how it cheers and consoles me amid earth's trials, when they come like a flood. To meditate upon the blessed hope brings peace in a measure to my poor soul, of which the ungodly know nothing. I long for the day to come when I can behold my Lord and appear with him in glory. And those lovely little forms, with rosy cheeks, sparkling eyes, and flaxen hair, that I laid away in the cold ground to await the trump of God to bid them rise, how I long to see them in immortal beauty, and to greet all the saints of God, and roam the beautiful streets of the golden city. Who would be so hard-hearted as to not wish for such a day to come? Who can be so indifferent and careless as to neglect his soul's salvation in order to secure the promised reward? It must be one strongly attached to this world, with its corruption, who will not give the subject a candid reflection and make his peace with God, knowing the sad state that the world is in. Probation's time how short. How soon it will be past. How precious the few remaining months. We would like to see things in their perfect state; but we cannot do so until He comes whose right it is to reign; when paradise will be restored, and Eden shall bloom again. HACHALIAH BAILEY.

Brewster's, March 3d.

From Bro. H. Campbell.

BRO. GRANT:—I write to inform you in relation to the work of God which is and has been going on in our meetings in New York. For some time past the churches in the city were not in as good state as they felt they ought to be as believers in the immediate coming of our blessed Lord from heaven. The Lord in mercy sent two of his ministering servants to preach the word of life to us. They have preached it faithfully, accompanied by the Holy Spirit, which has resulted in the quickening of the church and the salvation of sinners. A few of the brethren formerly worshiping at Cooper's Institute, who were tired of hearing the non-resurrection and no-devil doctrine, have hired a comfortable hall, corner of Grand and Allen Sts. We have been there six weeks, and have full houses. We open morning service with a short prayer-meeting before preaching, and afternoon with prayer-meeting between two and three o'clock, preaching at three o'clock. Lord's Supper first Sabbath afternoon, and love-feast second Sabbath afternoon. A number of brethren from other churches meet with us, and are profited. God be praised.

The ministering brethren above alluded to are Bro. Hook of Concord, N. H., and Bro. O. D. Woodruff of Southington, Conn. We have thought it best to ask the great Head of the church to send us men of his own choice to minister to us, rather than to call ministers ourselves. If he sends them, their preaching will gather the flock and not divide. Dear brother, as a people we have made much progress in Bible knowledge, but I fear we have not made as much progress in Bible holiness as we ought to have made. I fear we have rested too much in theory. It seems to me that we have all the light we shall ever need on the time of our Lord's coming. We may expect the Lord this year. Let us live near to God by faith. Amen. Yours in hope,

Green Point, L. I. H. CAMPBELL.

From Bro. J. G. Hook.

BRO. GRANT:—I am yet in the Quaker City. I have been feeble in health since I came here,—some would say sick; but the good Lord has favored me with his Holy Spirit, and strength sufficient to preach his word three times every Sunday, save one, and several week-day evenings. Good is being done in this city. The churches are being revived, united, and blessed; wanderers are coming home; sinners are being converted to God, and many from other denominations come in and worship with us, and are listening to the word of God, and see it as never before. There is a good prospect of a glorious work of grace. May the Lord speed it in his time.

Bro. Allen Damon, of Fair Haven, Mass., is now with me laboring with good success. Direct all letters, for the present, to me at No. 809 Coates St., Phila., Pa.

N. B. To the praise of God, I am on the amend. Praise the Lord. J. G. HOOK.

CORRECTION—In reading my letter as it appears in the Crisis, April 1st, I discover that I or the printer made a mistake. It is this: Where I found the dead child, it should read, the room where eight lived was about 14 x 14, and another one just large enough for a bed. This last mentioned room had no window in it. The first mentioned room had a window. I suppose it was my carelessness. J. G. H.

From Sr. L. B. Weaver.

DEAR BRN. AND SRS. IN JESUS:—Grace, mercy and peace be multiplied to you, through our Lord Jesus Christ. I thank my God this morning for all the blessings he has seen fit to strew in the path in which I am striving to journey. I am glad that signs seem to speak more than ever that Jesus is so soon to come to make up his jewels, and take the weary, lone bride home, where no trials or sorrows, pains or distresses, can ever come.

Dear ones in Jesus, you who have been so good as to send me both temporal and spiritual aid, God bless you to all eternity for your dear words of kindly cheer. They have been such a help to me when so near fainting and sinking beneath these heavy afflictions, and have caused me many seasons of rejoicing. And for the temporal aid—God only knows, beside myself and those who take care of me, how timely it has been, and how deeply appreciated by me; and may God reward you richly for all you have done for this weary child of suffering.

To those two sisters in Alleghany City who sent me one dollar each, and one dollar last August, I would say, it was received, and thankfully appreciated; and do accept my sincere thanks. It came when I had none of this world's goods, and many are the earnest and heartfelt prayers I have offered in your behalf, although I know not your names, but Jesus does.

May God bless you all, dear ones. Pray for your suffering sister, sighing for home,

No. Dana, Mass. L. B. WEAVER.

From Bro. E. B. Wood.

BRO. GRANT:—While our hearts are cheered as we hear of what the good Lord is doing in various parts of the land by his Spirit, in bringing men and women into the field of Christ, I thought I would tell the saints what the Lord is doing for us in Lafayette, R. I. We have been holding meetings for the last six weeks. The Lord has blessed us abundantly; backsliders have been reclaimed, and many others have found Christ. From forty to fifty have been brought from Satan's ranks, and have enlisted under the banner of the Prince of Peace. And still they come. Praise his name forever.

Sunday, Feb. 23d, we had the privilege of burying eleven happy souls in the liquid grave, and eleven more Sunday, March 1st. Sunday, 8th, seven more, and others are expecting to go forward soon. My prayer is, that they may be kept blameless unto the coming of the Lord. Then if we are faithful, we expect to meet all the dear saints of God on the ever green shore. It cheers my heart when I look forward to that time when the curse will be removed from the earth, and God's everlasting kingdom set up under the whole heaven. Then will the glory of God fill the earth as the waters fill the sea. Then will God's will be done on earth as it is in heaven. My soul says, Praise the Lord.

March 16th. EDWIN R. WOOD.

From Sr. E. M. Dow.

BRO. GRANT:—I feel that we are occupying a solemn moment of time that tries men's souls; and nothing but the pure love of God in the heart and his all sufficient grace will enable us to stand amid the buffetings of the enemy, the fiery darts which are continually being hurled at us on every side, by those who are under his control, and led captive by him at his will. We can bear to have hard things said about us by the enemies of God and of truth, but, when from those from whom we should expect sympathy and help, we hear our sayings and doings misrepresented, our motives misjudged, it cuts close, and causes our hearts to feel sad; and we are led to say oftentimes, In whom can we confide? We are often brought in contact with those whom we deem to be true friends to us, and apparently they are so while with us, but when away from us, and under different influences, how they change. Our confidence is betrayed, and we are injured by some unkind and unfriendly remark made by them in the presence of others. How unlike the spirit of the Master. May the Lord help us to see to it that we have the Spirit of Christ, without which we are none of his; that our aim is not to destroy, but to build up the the Master's cause. Lord help us to realize that we must soon

"——be to judgment brought,
And answer in that day
For every vain and idle thought,
And every word I say.
How careful then ought I to live,
With what religious fear,
Who such a strict account must give
For my behavior here."

M. E. DOW.

Star of Hope Mission, New York.

From Bro. P. A. Smith.

BRO. GRANT:—Here is an extract from a letter received from a sister of a young man that came here from Kentucky, and was converted to this truth, and sent the little Second Advent Hymn book and some tracts to her in London, England. By this we see how much good may be done by scattering tracts.

Jacksonville, Florida. P. A. SMITH.

EXTRACT FROM A LETTER WRITTEN IN LONDON, ENG.

"I received the pretty little hymn book you sent me, also the tracts. Is that minister still in Jacksonville? I would like very much to hear him preach. I wish you would send me some more of his tracts, if you can get them. I have read those over and over you sent me. They throw more light on the Bible than any I ever read. Several persons have borrowed them, and seem delighted. Two ladies have just sent in for them, but they are out. Some Advent preachers have been here, but they set the time, and that seems to kill the meetings."

From Bro. W. S. Howden.

BRO. GRANT:—We wish to build a place of worship in Bristol, Vt., if we can encourage a few of our brethren to move to this place. We have a good business which can be increased to a considerable extent, and there is an opening for other branches of business here. It is not so much for means to build a house for the Lord we lack, as for material to support a meeting.

"Howden, Bosworth & Co." have several hundred acres of nice timber land, also a saw-mill with circular saw; a door, sash and blind factory in the place. They wish to encourage some of our brethren, who would like to engage in such business, as partners, or as mechanics, and who wish to make a home in a pleasant and healthy village, to write or come and see them. Their buildings and mills are all in thorough repair, and they have a good, thriving trade. W. S. HOWDEN.

From Bro. E. Blanchard.

BRO. GRANT:—The Lord is reviving his work in this place, and the most of the brethren have laid aside all differences in opinion as tests of fellowship, having no test but christian character. The result has been good. Backsliders are coming back to their Father's house, and a deep conviction is on the people. Bro. Wyman is laboring with us, and good is being done in the name of Christ. I believe we are almost home. Rest will soon be given. I long for it, for I am weary, not in well doing, but of mortality.

Cheer up, lone pilgrims, your redemption is near. Yes, very near. Endure a little longer, and you are saved forever, to enjoy all the blessings of eternal life. We have the promise of it through our Savior. Let us walk in his steps, and keep his Spirit, and he will own us when he comes. Your Bro. in Christ, E. BLANCHARD.

North Adams, Mass.

Extracts from Letters.

BRO. WM. L. PARKER, Greene, Me., Jan. 10th, writes:—"I am in trouble. The cause of the trouble is this: I am a member of the first Baptist church, in Greene, and have previously had a good standing for about thirty years; but through the conversation of Brn. A. L. Parker, J. B. Staples, and Sr. Lois, of Carthage, of the Second Advent faith, together with the reading of the Crisis, which you have sent me since last March, I have become fully convinced that the Bible teaches the mortality of man; and that we have immortality only by seeking for it in and through the Lord Jesus Christ. The church becoming acquainted with my views on this subject, are about to deal with me. They have already dismissed my brother John, with whom you met at Canton, for embracing such ideas. This was done at the annual church meeting, Jan. 9th, 1868.

Now we are alone in one sense of the word, but we trust that we have the Lord and his word on our side, and this is enough."

BRO. C. R. WHITE, Louisiana, Pike Co., Mo., Jan. 17th, writes:—"With the peculiar views entertained by you, I am only able to judge from one copy of the "World's Crisis," you sent me last October. From what I could learn from that, we agree, except in the annihilation of the wicked, on either side of which, as well as the unconscious state of the righteous, after death until the resurrection, I am not committed. I have never heard or read much against the popular view, except an essay I have in Dr. Watts' "World to Come," which I do not think is very conclusive on either side. Excepting these points, I hold precisely to the same views as the Advent people. I believe with them that the first resurrection is the resurrection of the righteous dead from creation, in connection with the change of all the righteous living; the second advent of Christ, the destruction of antichrist, the end of this mortal state, the final closing of the day of grace, and the end of probation. I am now attempting to lecture, or rather am giving my views in this place, on the second advent. There are some interested on the subject, but it is little understood, and much misunderstood, and much prejudice against it."

BRO. G. DILLABAUGH, Battle Creek, Mich., writes:—"As it has been some time since I have written to the Crisis, I have thought it might interest some to hear from me, as I have been here since the first of January. I have not enjoyed the privilege of meeting with those of like precious faith. The pure teaching of the word of God is but little known here, except what is held forth by the seventh day Adventists.

The Spiritualist's are gaining ground in this State faster than all the other denominations put together. They boast of their one hundred thousand in this State. A few weeks ago they held a convention here, and they had some one hundred and fifty join them. They held another in Jackson, where they had representatives from all parts of the State, and other States. They boasted of numbering eleven million in the United States. The Devil is doing up his work, knowing his time is short.

We think some of our eastern brethren should come out west, where people are perishing for lack of the true knowledge of revelation, and like a drowning man, are ready to catch at anything. Hence Spiritualism—the ripe fruits of the immortality of the soul—is fast gathering in the great mass into their net. Brethren, let us put on the whole armor of God, and be bold soldiers for Jesus and his precious truth."

BE PERFECT.

"Be ye therefore perfect, as your Father which is in heaven is perfect."—MATT. 5: 48.

We are of God commanded to be perfect. There is therefore a sense in which we can and ought to be perfect. I know many kick against it, and say they never saw any perfect ones, or that those professing perfection are generally detected in immorality; but this kind of reasoning is an evasion, and not to the point. If God hath said, Be ye perfect, it is certainly our duty to be perfect. If it is our duty, we certainly have ability so to be, for God is not so inconsistent as to command what we cannot perform, for then would the accountability rest on him. Let us therefore understand in what sense we may be perfect.

1. Not in knowledge. For we finite creatures cannot know, as God knows, all things. Yea, we know not even our own hearts which are deceitful above all things.

2. Certainly not in power can we assume to be perfect as God, the Almighty; for we cannot make one hair white or black.

3. But evidently, in love, are we requested to be perfect. And why stumble at this? Was it not said before in olden times, (Deut. 6: 5,) Thon shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy might?" And again, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." John 13: 24. A uew commandment give I unto you, that ye love one another as I have loved you, that ye also love one another. Here our Savior requires us to love each other as he hath loved us. And this also accords with the prayer of our Lord (John 17: 23) that they may be made perfect in one that the world may know that thou hast sent me, and hast loved them as thou hast loved me. Then the story is told. To be perfect as our Father which is in heaven is perfect is to love God as he hath loved us, to love our neighbor as our self, to love the saints as Jesus hath loved us. But who is our neighbor? Jesus answers this question by presenting a case of two natural enemies, a Jew and a Samaritan, who had no dealings with each other. The Samaritan was kind to the Jew, who hated him. Now of this Samaritan Jesus said, go do thou likewise. Likewise how? Be kind to your enemies. Count them as neighbors, love them as God hath loved us. To what would such love lead? to doing them good to the uttermost of our ability. God loved when we loved him not. God so loved the world that he gave his Son. But to understand the depth of love, read where Abraham so loved God that he could give up his son to die. Gen, 22: 2. As he required Abraham to try his faith, and to teach him what he himself was willing to do for Abraham, so he actually did for all,—gave up his own Son to die. Matchless love! We can love with all our power or capacity. So God did. So we can do. A pint cup will not hold so much as a gallon cup, but both may be filled, and of them may be said they are both alike full. So let us love them according to 1 John 4. Please read it and practice it. Love is the fulfilling of the gospel, as well as the law.

RECEIPTS FOR "STAR OF HOPE" MISSION.—From friends in Vershire, Vt., $3.00; also a barrel of clothing and beans from the same place. P. W. Jones, West Winsted, Conn., $1.00. S. K. Baldwin, Laconia, N. H., $3. "A friend," Fisherville, N. H., $1.00. A box containing clothing and some cranberries, with $1.00 in cash, from E. C. C., Framingham, Mass. M. E. DOW.

THE METEORIC SHOWER OF 1867.—Mr. O. B. Bradford, of the United States Consular service, had the pleasure of witnessing the meteoric shower of 1867, while traveling about fifty miles northwest of Pekin and near the Great Wall of China. It was on the morning of the 15th of November. At about 5.15, A. M., his attention was attracted by the wild shouting of his guide, and he was not a little startled to find himself a witness to the annual meteoric shower in that quarter of the world. The grand spectacle was displayed in an arc of not less than 120 deg. in the Northeastern portion of the firmament, which at times seemed to be be rent in twain from about 25 deg. of the zenith, by solid masses of luminous bodies of various magnitudes and surprising brilliancy, which darted in dazzling confusion across his vision. Several hundred of these meteors of different sizes would be observed at the same time, all emitting the most intense light, and the nebulæ of the largest lasting sometimes three minutes. One of these meteors shone with a distinctive brightness above that of the moon, as it issued from about 15 deg. of the North Star, and passed vertically below the horizon, giving forth as it fell coruscations of various bright colors, and when disappearing its nebulæ resembled a waterspout in high latitudes. It was not until quite 6.30 A. M. that the approaching dawn began to dim the glory of this fiery exhibition, and the rising sun soon put an end to the exciting display.

Obituaries.

BOOTHBY. Died in Kennebunk, Me., March 15th, 1868, of consumption, Alden W. Boothby, aged about twenty-five years.

Alden died in the hope of being made like Jesus when he shall appear. He did not wait for a sick bed to reflect upon his future interests; but in the strength of manhood, vigor of health, and with flattering temporal prospects before him, he "gave up all for Christ," embraced the "blessed hope" of the gospel, and lived a consistent christian life until he calmly fell asleep in Christ, to await the sound of that trump which shall awake the sleeping millions of the dead. He left a beloved companion, parents, one sister, who lies at the point of death, two brothers, and a large circle of other relatives and friends to mourn. God bless the mourners. W. H. MITCHELL.

STEVENS. Died in Kennebunk, March 25th, 1868, very suddenly, Matilda Stevens, aged about twenty-six years.

Matilda loved Christ, and so fond was she of the house of God and social worship, that she would often be found there when it seemed most imprudent. She sleeps in Jesus but will awake ere long to enjoy the society of Jesus, the angelic throng, and of saints made immortal to die no more. May God sanctify the bereavement to the good of parents, brothers and sisters, who mourn her loss, and bring them all to meet her in the immortal state, is my earnest prayer.

TEMPLE. Died in Webster, Me., March 7th, 1868, Sister Emily Temple, aged forty-six years, ten months and two days.

Sister Temple has been for many years a true follower of Christ, and loved the sound of the soon coming of Jesus. She leaves a dear companion, and two children, and a large number of mourning friends; but it will be but a little while before she will live again. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer, from 1 Thess. 4: 18.

A. H. WALKER.

SMITH. Died in Johnstown, R. I., March 4th, 1868, of lung fever, Perry L., only child of Thomas E. and Carrie M. Smith, aged five months and one day.

By request, we tried to comfort the mourners with the hope of a better life beyond this vale of tears.

There my little ones, I know,
Round me shall be clinging;
There the loved of long ago
With me shall be singing.

D. V. COREY.

HATHERWAY. Died in Adams, Mass., March 23d, 1868, Sr. Amanda Hatherway, aged forty-seven years.

She died in the triumph of faith, and with the expectation of soon being raised from the dead. Funeral sermon by the writer, from 2 Cor. 4: 17.

E. MCCULLOCK.

MACOMBER. Died in Sterling, Ill., March 21st, 1868, Sr. Ruby Macomber, wife of Levi Macomber.

She bore her suffering with christian patience and resignation. Her faith was unshaken in the advent of the Lord soon. L. MACOMBER.

BAKER. Died in New Hartford, Ct., July 15th, 1867, Bro. David Baker, aged seventy years.

His wife, Sr. Caroline Baker, died in Riverton, Ct., March 18th, 1868, aged sixty years.

They sleep in Jesus, waiting for his coming.

H. ROCKWELL.

NOE. Died suddenly in Oxford, Ct., Jan. 5th, 1868, Sr. Lucinda Noe, wife of Bro. Ritchard Noe.

She sleeps in Jesus. The writer attended the funeral in the Methodist meeting-house.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable Dispatches.

FLORENCE, March 31. King Victor Emanuel is confined to his bed by serious illness.

A dispatch from Rome says the Pope is sick. The nature of his attack is not known.

DOMESTIC.

NEW YORK, March 31. A Montreal special says: "We are in the midst of another Fenian scare. Private orders have been issued to all the regiments in garrisons to have ammunition and two days' rations served, and to make ready to march at a moment's notice. The artillery is also under orders.

To-day a quantity of Greek fire and phosphorus was stolen from a druggist and found stored in Griffenstown, the most Irish portion of the city.

Considerable excitement prevails in the city. Volunteers in various parts of the country, as well as regulars, have received orders to prepare for duty if called out.

The Government account for these precautions by statements that have been received in private reports, of arms and materials of war being stored on the frontier, near Buffalo and St. Albans. Private dispatches from Ottawa to-day say that all this is only a stragetic move to enable the Government to carry a militia bill of unusual stringency, amounting to a conscription, during the excitement caused by groundless agitation.

REV. MR. TYNG IN HIS OWN CHURCH.—The Church of the Holy Trinity in New York, of which Stephen H. Tyng, Jr., is pastor, was crowded to its utmost capacity on Sunday, the audience evidently expecting some pointed allusion to the late trial of Mr. Tyng, on the "admonition" of Bishop Potter. Those who came with such an expectation got the benefit of a good sermon, prefaced by the following words:

It is hardly necessary for me to say to my own people and others accustomed to worship here that this pulpit is never degraded by personal vindications, nor made the place to pander to partisan feelings, but from it only can be heard the simplest vindication of the gospel. Those among you that have come for any other purpose will be disappointed, but it may be good that you are here, as some of the simplest truths of the gospel may find a resting-place in your hearts, helping you to eternal salvation.

A VALUABLE DISCOVERY.—One of the early Baptist ministers of this city was Obediah Holmes. Little is known of him, except that he was pastor of the First Baptist Church. He came to Massachusetts to preach. He had no license. The Puritan preachers, who did not like to have a Rhode Island Baptist preaching on their manor, had Mr. Holmes arrested, put in jail, tied to a cart and publicly whipped. So far as is known, he is the only Baptist minister that shed his blood for this land for the good cause. In the bottom of an old chest in this city an autograph volume has been found, written by Mr. Holmes and dated 1675. He gives the history of the Rhode Island Colony that he founded with the charter that he obtained from Charles II.; the incidents of his life; his faith in Christ; with a letter to his family, his church and the world. Mr. Holmes gives an account of his public whipping in Boston, and attests:—"I did there shed my blood." The Newport Historical Society are to put this valuable work to press. It will prove very valuable to the Baptists. —Journal.

☞ The armies of Europe are said to be larger at present than at any time since the wars of the first Napoleon. France has 1,300,000 men, of whom 550,000 are in the reserve; England has 200,000 men; Prussia 600,000; Italy about 215,000; Austria 700,000; Russia 800,000, with 400,000 more in reserve; and Spain about 80,000.

☞ An English envoy recently visited the Grand Lama of Thibet. He found him to be a handsome boy of thirteen. The Lama asked if his sovereign was well, whether his country prospered, and whether he was in good health; and receiving an offering of silks, sweetmeats and money, bowed him out.

☞ If you want to make a sensation and be regarded as senseless, enter a church, a place of amusement, or any assemblage half an hour after everybody is seated and the exercises are well under way. You can add to your peculiar reputation by leaving half an hour earlier than anybody else.

☞ Certain parties in Russia agreed to make a present of a tun of wine to a popular man, and that each should contribute a certain quantity. When the receptacle for the offering was tapped it was found to be filled with water. Each honest man believed that his share of the contribution would not be discovered, but unhappily they all had the same idea.

☞ Letters from Paris say that the Emperor never looked better; never showed himself more frequently in public; never seemed stronger on his legs, or fonder of exercising them. He and his now matronly, but still pretty and elegant wife, may be seen almost daily taking their stroll together.

☞ Weston, the pedestrian, is said to have walked one hundred and three miles, finishing the distance at Buffalo on Saturday afternoon, in twenty three hours and fifty eight minutes, and to have been quite fresh at the close, although the roads were heavy.

☞ Miss Josephine Comstock, teacher in one of the Chicago public schools, was, on Thursday, in broad daylight, enticed by an unknown woman to an unfrequented part of the city, and there knocked down and terribly beaten upon the head with a mallet. The unknown person is supposed to have been prompted to the assault by jealousy.

☞ There is not now a single theatre in operation in Tennessee. The Memphis Theatre having been kept open at a loss for some time, closed last week. The Nashville theatres have been closed for some time.

☞ In Waterbury, Ct., a revival greater than any in half a century is in progress. As many as two hundred and forty persons had on one occasion signified their desire for the prayers of christians.

☞ The government sold seven million acres of land last year, and has four hundred and sixty-five millions remaining, besides three hundred and sixty-five millions more in Alaska.

☞ There are still over three and a half millions of serfs unemancipated in Russia, out of nearly ten millions which constituted their number before emancipation was decreed.

☞ The Berliner Reform states that the Emperor Napoleon and the Empress Eugenie are expected to pay a visit to Berlin in May, and that they will then proceed to Vienna, accompanied by the King of Prussia.

☞ The peach trees in Southern Illinois are now in full blossom, and the gardeners there promise ripe strawberries in about three weeks.

☞ The once popular melody known as "Dandy Jim" was originally an Italian air, doing service in high mass in Italian churches.

☞ Queen Victoria has over thirty tons of silver and gold plate.

☞ The mortality among children is said to be unprecedented this spring in San Francisco.

☞ A disease very like the rinderpest is afflicting the cattle in Iowa.

☞ In Belgium and Switzerland telegrams can be sent for a dime anywhere.

☞ The remains of the Duke de Reichstadt, son of Napoleon I., are to be brought to Paris.

☞ It is stated that Gen. Grant was never heard to utter an oath under any circumstances.

☞ Let every minister, while he is preaching, remember that God is one of his hearers.

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

CASH RECEIPTS FOR THE CRISIS.

To find how your account stands.

The present No. of the Crisis is 653. The No. which follows your name is the No. to which you have paid.

If the No. paid to is greater than the present No., the difference shows how many weeks you have paid for in advance. If the No. paid to, is less than the present No., the difference shows for how many weeks you owe.

For every week of indebtedness, if less than 26 weeks, charge five cents; if more than 26 weeks, six cents. From the product (which will be a fraction over the actual indebtedness) deduct four cents for every dollar, and you have the exact amount due.

THE ROD.

BY HORATIUS BONAR.

I weep, but do not yield;
 I mourn, yet still rebel;
My inmost soul seems steeled,
 Cold and immovable.

The wound is sharp and deep;
 My spirit bleeds within;
And yet I lie asleep,
 And still I sin, I sin.

My bruised soul complains
 Of stripes without, within;
I feel these piercing pains—
 Yet still I sin, I sin.

O'er me the low cloud hung
 Its weight of shade and fear;
Unmoved I passed along,
 And still my sin is here.

Yon massive mountain-peak
 The lightning rends at will;
The rock can melt or break—
 I am unbroken still.

My sky was once noon-bright,
 My day was calm the while;
I loved the pleasant light,
 The sunshine's happy smile.

I said, My God, oh, sure
 This love will kindle mine;
Let but this calm endure,
 Then all my heart is thine.

Alas, I knew it not!
 The summer flung its gold
Of sunshine o'er my lot,
 And yet my heart was cold.

Trust me with prosperous days,
 I said, O spare the rod;
Then and thy love I'll praise,
 My gracious, patient God.

Must I be smitten, Lord?
 Are gentler measures vain?
Must I be smitten, Lord?
 Can nothing save but pain?

Thou trustedst me a while;
 Alas! I was deceived;
I reveled in the smile,
 Yet to the dust I cleaved.

Then the fierce tempest broke,
 I knew from whom it came,
I read in that sharp stroke
 A Father's hand and name.

And yet I did thee wrong;
 Dark thoughts of thee came in,
A froward, selfish throng—
 And I allowed the sin.

I did thee wrong, my God,
 I wronged thy truth and love,
I fretted at the rod,
 Against thy power I strove.

I said, my God, at length,
 This stony heart remove,
Deny all other strength,
 But give me strength to love.

Come nearer, nearer still,
 Let not thy light depart;
Bend, break this stubborn will,
 Dissolve this iron heart.

Less wayward let me be,
 More pliable and mild;
In glad simplicity
 More like a trustful child.

Less, less of self each day,
 And more, my God, of thee;
O keep me in the way,
 However rough it be.

Less of the flesh each day,
 Less of the world and sin;
More of thy Son, I pray,
 More of thyself within.

Riper and riper now,
 Each hour let me become,
Less fit for scenes below,
 More fit for such a home.

More moulded to thy will,
 Lord, let thy servant be,
Higher and higher still,
 Liker and liker thee.

Leave nought that is unmeet,
 Of all that is mine own,
Strip me; and so complete
 My training for the throne.

For the World's Crisis.

FAITH TO BE HEALED.

Faith is the living, moving principle in the child of God, and is the gift of God; therefore God has all the glory of it, let it be manifested in whomsoever it may. This relieves the recipient of such grace from all responsibility. God did it is the feeling of his heart, and I only live to tell of it. "O! magnify the Lord with me, and let us exalt his name together."

When God works, human effort and will are laid aside. "Not as I will, but as Thou wilt," is the language of the whole being. If God can glorify himself in doing this for me, then I wish him to do it; not otherwise. My will is God's will, for I know he knows best. It is safe for God to work for an individual whom he has trained up to this point.

An instance of this preparation of the heart, and this answer of the tongue, which is from God, came under our observation very recently.

A beloved Sister B——, who has been trained in God's school these many years, and borne the yoke in her youth, and has "seen affliction by the rod of his wrath," came to visit us. She had been an invalid nearly a year, and did not think herself able to venture from her home when she did, but was persuaded so to do by a dear Sr. R——, who now is matron in one of God's homes, offering to accompany and take care of her.

They arrived on the morning train of Friday, and from extreme weakness of the back it was with difficulty that our sister got into the carriage to come to our residence, and on arriving took her bed, which she was not able to leave until the next morning, nor could she eat anything from the distress in the back, causing extreme headache and nausea.

In the morning all the symptoms were abated from having enjoyed refreshing sleep. With great care she dressed and came down and partook very lightly of food; but at the family altar she knelt with us and partook bountifully of the hidden manna, and broke it abundantly to us all. It was good to be there. But she could not rise without being lifted up. She soon returned upon the bed and fell into sleep like a weak and weary child.

The next morning, Lord's day, she was much worse. She slept little during the night and was suffering great pain in her hip and back and walked with difficulty; she had walked lame for months. She now feared she had mistaken duty in coming, and that she would again become bedfast.

About ten A. M. she and I were in my chamber communing together before the Lord, when Sister R—— entered with her open Bible, and her face radiant with communion with God. As she began to speak of the love of God in some portion of his word which she had been reading, I felt it to be holy ground, and my soul longed to improve the heavenly gale and draw near to God in prayer, which I proposed. Sister B—— then spoke, quite to our surprise, and said, calling us by name,

"I have been thinking if you pray for me, God will heal me of this sickness!"

We then repeated several portions of God's word calculated to inspire faith, and then prayed. The golden scepter was held out; we drew near and touched it, and our petition was accepted, and our request granted—blessed be God!

Our sister rose up without human aid, and with her face buried in her hands, walked the floor praising God and saying,

"I am free from pain. God has laid his mercy upon me. I am healed!"

We both rose up in admiration of the Lord, and I opened the door and invited my dear neice in, and we all praised God together for his healing power. Just at this moment our beloved Sister H.'s case came upon our mind, and we proposed prayer for her. We all again fell before the Lord, and, like the Samaritan that was healed, gave thanks to God; and together asked the Lord, if for his glory, to give Sister H. faith to be healed as he had done for her in years gone by. O! it seemed so easy to us at this time for the Lord to heal her, that we almost believed it to be done. (This was two weeks ago to-day, March 22d.) We felt that she need not go to Cuba for health, or anywhere else, but to the living God, and he would heal her.

After this we all accompanied our healed sister down stairs, that she might honor God in confessing what he had done in her. We found husband singing—

"I want to cross over, don't you, where he reigns,
And join the bright angels on Eden's fair plains?
I want to be gathered with all the redeemed;
'Tis over the river, where the fields are all green."

We joined, and when it was through our sister advanced, and giving husband her hand, said,

"Bro. W., I am healed. The Lord has made me whole."

Bless his name! was on all our lips.

In the afternoon several came in, and we had a feast of love. Our sister confessed that it was Jesus had given her this perfect soundness in our presence; and in the evening we broke bread as Jesus told his disciples to do in remembrance of him; and he was in our midst.

Two days ago husband visited Sister B—— at her house in the city, and found her very well. She informed him that on her return to the city she walked from Vine street wharf to her house, a distance of over two miles, and carried a heavy little basket. All glory to the living God! E. S. Willard.

LETTER FROM BRO. E. T. HIMES.

Bro. Grant:—Though I have not seen you face to face since I met you in Chicago, about four years ago, yet in the weekly visits of the Crisis I have been made to rejoice, as I learned of the prosperity of the cause in different parts of the east, and the success which has attended your labor in the proclamation of the truth.

For more than a year I was strongly impressed that it was my duty to enter the vineyard of the Lord, and share with those who had borne the burden and heat of the day, in the toils, sacrifices and cares connected with the ministry. I held back from duty praying to be excused, not that I was unwilling to serve the Master in this, or any other way in which I could glorify him or advance his cause, but because I felt my own weakness and insufficiency for a work of so much responsibility. I finally resolved to do what I could, and commenced, taking courage from the fact that God had chosen some of the weak things through which to work, and if he had chosen me I should find it out by improving the first opportunity that presented itself, to carry out my convictions of duty.

The result has been that since I turned the key of my tool chest and took the sword of the Spirit in my hand, going out not knowing whither I went, I have had no desire to leave the work, and have I had any opportunity to return, for the calls for help have increased until I have sometimes hardly known which way to go. I find that humility and meekness, which are always found where the love of God is shed abroad in the heart by the Holy Spirit, are indispensable to success in leading mankind to the way of life, and that a good spirit will accomplish more than words of eloquence.

God has blessed me while thus trying to do what I can, and I write this for the encouragement of any who may be in the same position I was, that they may take courage and go forth with the precious seed.

It seems to me when I look at the great work before us and hear so many cries for help, that laborers will be sent, and those who are called will find it out if they live near to God. You who have felt the "woe" resting on you, "go and preach," can best understand this matter. I have no evil report to bring, and think we are well able to go up and possess the land. As long as we work and trust in God we shall lack nothing that will be for our good, though we may expect to suffer affliction with the people of God. Yours watching for Jesus, Edwin T. Himes.

For the World's Crisis.

FIRE WITHIN! FIRE WITHOUT!

KEEP IT IN? No, YOU CAN'T.

If it is within you, it will come out of you. Keep it in? Impossible. As the tree, so the fruit; as the fountain, so the stream; as the heart so the life. If you are of the earth, you are earthy. "The world knows its own, loves its own. If folly is in you, it will be sure to come out, sooner or later. "A fool layeth open his folly." "When he that is a a fool walketh by the way, his wisdom faileth him, and he saith to every one that he is a fool. Eccl. 3. If wisdom from above is in you, the fear of God, it will surely come out, show itself; light, hope, joy, truth on truth, love on love.

If the heart is full of good things heavenly, divine, spiritual, these good things will surely appear, manifest themselves, shine brighter and brighter. "A good man out of the good treasure of his heart bringeth forth good things." Matt. 12: 35. "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." Wherever church members are dumb when things heavenly are introduced, but glib, voluble, fluent, when something of the world, funny to laugh at is discussed; rest assured the heart is not in tune for heaven, joys unspeakable. Old things have not passed away, and all things become new; crucifixion has not taken place. Rest assured the fountain is not pure. There is a lack of fire. Fire that is inside will be sure to manifest itself outside, fire on fire.

If our souls are alive in God, on fire pentacostally, we delight to dwell on Bible subjects, things that make for peace; things pertaining to God and his Christ, the glories of heaven, the praises thereof. David's whole soul was absorbed—on fire!—kindled to a flame in meditating in God's law. No subject was so absorbingly, soul-kindlingly delightful as the Bible. So it was with the primitive disciples; the Bible was their text-book, a constant topic of conversation. The truly upright and holy in heart in all ages drank deeply at this living, overflowing fountain of salvation, with ecstasy seraphic. Christ and his great salvation was to them new, beautiful, henceforth, forever and forever.

Those having fire within, let it out, here, everywhere, fire on fire; they feast on angel's food. God's word is their meat and their drink, sweeter than honey and the honeycomb, more precious than gold. So it was, so it is, so it will be, with all holy beings in heaven and on earth; all who fight the good fight, the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life. Every moment is counted lost, unless, in some way, God is in it. They are never weary, never clogged with heavenly things, things everlasting, glory eternal.

"Their souls break out in strong desire,
 The perfect bliss to prove;
Their longing hearts are all on fire,
 To be dissolved in love."

Friend, is your soul thus on fire? kindled to a holy flame, while meditating and conversing about God, his Son, his word, the home of the weary, the heavy laden, the rest of God's people? Is the subject of religion your chief delight, always, everywhere? or are you mum when this blessed subject is introduced? Where the treasure is, there will be the heart also. "By their fruits ye shall know them."

"Let worldly minds the world pursue,
 It has no charms for me;
Once I admired its trifles too,
 But grace has set me free."

BEAR AND FORBEAR.

In those weary half-hours which now and then you spend pacing a railway platform waiting for a train behind its time, you are glad to find some occupation for your mind in watching the porters and drivers adjusting trucks and carriages, unshackling some from one train and attaching them to another, or shunting them into the sidings. As you do so, your ear becomes familiar with a sudden bumping sound, as one carriage comes into sharp contact with another, as you see the usefulness of those strange projections which bear the unclassical name of buffers, and are designed to break the force of the carriages as they run against each other. If you are at all in a meditative mood, you begin to think that some of the same kind might form a useful appendage to human beings: not, of course to the outer man, but in the region of the temper, where collisions are so apt to occur. You think how differently some of your friends are constituted in this respect. There, for example, is your friend Ramstam, a blunt, heedless fellow, always bumping up against some one, always taking the bull by the horns, and always requiring some one to arrange matters for him, when he has contrived, as he is always contriving, to get into difficulty. How different it is with your other friend, Mr. Tact! He glides with ease and safety between angry neighbors, like a railway porter between moving carriages, and seems to have some mysterious faculty of adjusting difficulties, managing delicate negotiations, and even saying and doing unpleasant things, without either offending others, or hurting himself. Expressing the difference in railway language, you would say that Mr. Tact was provided with buffers, and Mr. Ramstam with none. And the difference is so great that if all the world were Ramstams, society would be positively unendurable. You are compelled to go in for buffers; elegant or inelegant, they are a great comfort, and whoever devotes himself to promote the use of them does a real service to his race.

The two qualities or habits we have in view are—bearing; or as some one has called them the two bears. In the christian sense of these terms no better contrivances could be found for smoothing the intercourse of life, and preventing collision in little matters.

It is a wonderful power we have got from our Maker—if only we had grace to use it—that of making up our minds to things that are unpleasant. More than half the discomfort of many things seems to disappear when once you have made up your mind to them. A draught of medicine, a surgical operation, a sea voyage, a large payment of money, a toilsome effort, a great coming down in the world, seem alike to lose more than half of their disagreeableness when you have determined to bear. The impatient schoolboy, for example, thinks it a dreadful thing to have to learn some odious task. Perhaps he spends half-an-hour, to begin with, in weeping over it, sometimes clenching his fists, gnashing his teeth, and tearing his hair, to vary the expression of his disgust. But when, yielding to better counsels, he makes up his mind to the effort, his misery passes away. His spirits rise as he masters portion after portion in succession, and when at last he closes the book in triumph, he finds what a miserable thing it is to kick against the pricks, and how little one would feel the pricks if only one would not kick against them. The control one is enabled to gain in this way over hundreds of the minor miseries of life is amazing. Where this power of accommodation is unknown, the passage through life resembles those dismal scrambles which Dr. Livingstone describes, through thickets of thorn and cactus. Where it is known and used, the thorn seems to use itself up, like the leaves of the sensitive plant, and the traveler gets through with little hurt.

With some persons this faculty of "bearing seems almost an instinct. As regards the common troubles of life, it comes to them almost without an effort. Many persons endure a life of toil, suffering and manifold privations and hardships with a patience, that is all the more beautiful because it seems so natural. It is a settled point with them—it has been so, through God's mercy, all along,—that life is not an easy sail down a smooth-flowing river. They have made up their minds to find in it many tempestuous passages and painful experiences, just as they have made up their mind to seasons of storm and winter. It would never occur to them to be angry with frost and snow, or to gnash their teeth at foul weather. As little would they think of being ruffled or enraged at crosses or troubles in their providential lot. The one thing for them to do is to assume a calm attitude, and adjust themselves as they best can to hardships that are inevitable. Like men in business, they lay their account with a certain amount of loss and fruitless labor, and when it comes, they are little disturbed—they know it was to be looked for. Business is not all profit, and life is not all pleasure.

It is very different with another class. Their bristles rise at the slightest cross or unpleasantness, as surely as those of the cat or the tiger at the sight of a natural foe. To learn to bear has been no part of their education, either common or christian. The effects of this are various in different cases. In some the effect is a constant and passionate irritability, passing as life advances, into a settled sourness or perpetual grumbling. It is surely one of the most important parts of early training when the young are not taught the necessity of bearing. Even in games and recreations nothing is more necessary. How often, when victory seems on the eve of being grasped, fortune suddenly changes, the first are last and the last become first. On the croquet-green, the ball that lay a few inches from the final post may be rudely dislodged at the last moment, and the hopes that had been becoming more eager as the crisis of the game approached, are dashed at the very moment when they were most intense. It is no small achievement to bear this with calmness and good humor; as one succeeds or fails in doing so, one is likely to succeed or fail in meeting the more serious disappointments that are seldom wanting in the struggles of active life.

In its best and highest form the power of bearing is a christian grace. It is a fruit of the Spirit. True christian charity "beareth all things." And well it may. It has a wonderful pattern of bearing in its master. What did he not bear for our sakes, and what ought we not to bear for his? Nothing serves more to lighten a burden or to make provocations endurable, than love to one for whose sake they are borne. It was easy for Jacob to bear the selfishness and perversity of Laban for seven years for the love he bore to Rachel. It was easy for Paul to bear the hardships of his missionary life for the love he bore his Master, and to the souls for whose good he labored. It becomes easy for the christian to bear his crosses, when he does it for the sake fo Him who died on the cross for him. Under christian teaching, too, he gets a far higher and more satisfying view of the end for which such crosses exist. All are seen to enter into the grand scheme of discipline by which he is getting trained for a life of heavenly glory, heavenly purity, and heavenly bliss.

Every one must have noticed the prominent place assigned to patience among the many graces of the New Testament. The singular endurance of martyrs and confessors under persecution forms one of the chief glories of the christian church. And even in ordinary life, people instinctively feel that a christian without patience is but a sorry specimen of his order. On the other hand, one of the most impressive marks of real saintliness, one of the features that most undeniably proclaim the heavenly birth, is a habitual serenity, and even benignancy of spirit, especially under trials. This is the power of "bearing" in its highest form. And the beauty of this spirit in the eyes of others is not less than the happiness it brings to its possessor. . . .

If its power of "bearing" be thus a most happy protection from many of the jars and buffets of ordinary life, that of "forbearing" is hardly less so in its peculiar sphere. The one leads you to endure quietly things that befall yourself; the other leads you to abstain from contending with others on many occasions when you might naturally be tempted to give them battle. One of the best uses of the latter is expressed in the well-known proverb of Solomon,—"A soft answer turneth away wrath." When you are treated sharply, your natural tendency is to treat sharply, or, as the phrase is, to give as good as you get. On second thoughts, you feel that the soft answer is more agreeable to christian duty, and more likely to prevent sin, and to restore peace; you arm yourself with this safeguard against collision, and when it is brought into play, the waves of passion subside, and immediately there is a calm.

"Forbearing" is especially necessary when two opposite wills are likely to come into collision; and the closer the two persons are to one another, the greater is the need of forbearance. Nothing can be more unseemly than a collision between husband and wife—between those who are one flesh before God, but not always of one sentiment. Opposition on some points it is almost certain there will be; if there be no forbearance on either side, if, indeed, there be not some forbearance on both sides, there must either be a perpetual jar, or a reign of terror. As often as any matter comes up that causes a difference, there will either be an unedifying wrangle, or the weaker nature will sullenly submit to the stronger, but with a mortifying sense of defeat and wrong. And like a thorn in the sole of your foot during a long walk, or a mote in your eye on a windy day, this little matter may cause no small discomfort throughout life's long journey. Where a little forbearance has been acquired at the beginning, it is as if the thorn were extracted, and the mote removed; and then the journey is made in comparative comfort and peace.

And who has not observed how much in every relation of life harmony and good feeling depend on not pushing things to extremities, not pressing rights to the uttermost, not contending to the death for every trifle? Whether the relation be that of parents and children, masters and servants, partners in business, or counsellors or directors of public companies, it is forbearance that oils the wheels, and enable the machinery to work smoothly, and at the same time efficiently. Of course, "forbearing," like "bearing," must have its limits, and of these I will speak presently. But no small point is gained when the necessity of this quality in some form and to some extent is apprehended by all; when people and especially young people come to see that if they are to get on comfortably with their fellows, there must be some forbearance in pressing their opinions or even urging their rights; there must be some consideration even for the infirmities and unreasonableness of others; some care taken not to drive them without cause into open hostility, not to bring things to a dead lock with them. It is melancholy to think what feuds have often raged through want of this forbearance. Even christian congregations have been convulsed by lasting quarrels that have begun about the merest trifles. A whole neighborhood has been known to be at daggers drawn on the question whether a school should be built on one site or on another. Neighboring families have been kept at variance for years because on one occasion a member of the one has sneered at the dress worn by a member of the other. According to the story, the Trojan war had its origin in the fact of the palm of beauty being accorded by the shepherd on Mount Ida to Venus, in preference to Juno and Minerva. How many bloody wars have been due to causes quite as frivolous, it is impossible to say. Of the six millions of men in the prime of life who are maintained by Europe in arms at this day, who can tell how many might be set free for the pursuits of productive industry, to gladden homes and spread peace and plenty, if only there was more forbearance in the temper of nations, and of those who rule them?

But we are wandering into the reign of great events, in place of confining ourselves to those of humbler or ordinary life. We do not wish so much to show how the great collisions of war may be avoided, as the little collisions of daily experience. Yet, probably, it is just the same spirit of forbearance that would equally prevent the one and the other. One little text of Holy Scripture—"If it be possible, as much as lieth in you, live peaceably with all men"—written by God's Spirit on men's hearts, would do it all. Only get men generally to have regard to that simple rule of the christian life, and what a different world you would have! How many domestic brawls, how many children's squabbles, how many ecclesiastical strifes, how many public feuds, how many gigantic wars it would prevent! How many policemen it would supplant, how many regiments of the line, how many iron-clads and monitors, how many rifled cannon and patent shells! How greatly it would facilitate the transaction of business! How much it would sweeten the breath of society! How much it would do to bring back the balmy breezes of Paradise,—to restore to those that have almost ceased to dream of it, and the long lost golden age!—Banner of the Faith.

LINES.

Responsive to Anna E. McEllister.

Ah! sister, well I know the trust
 That stays thy fainting heart,
When all the light of life grows dim,
 And earth-born joys depart;
When darkness, deeper than the grave,
 The spirit hovers o'er,
When comes the fearful, whispered word,
 "Thy joys return no more;"—

When the grim tempests of the night
 Their sullen gloom do lend,
And on the bowed, defenceless head
 Their gathered fury spend;
When prone in dust, with speechless lip,
 Lies the frail, shrinking form,
Bleeding and bruised, and broken by
 Affliction's wasting storm;—

When friend and lover stand afar
 With coldness or disdain;
And powerless the faithful few,
 To assuage the mortal pain;
Then cometh to the ear of faith
 That gracious voice, which gave
Peace to despair, and life secured
 From Chinnereth's mad wave.

And though still swells the o'erwhelming flood,
 Now faint we not, nor fear,
Forever soundeth through the storm—
 "'Tis I, be of good cheer."
Then, sister, we may joyful sing,
 While ever thus we prove
Our Father's never ceasing care,
 Our Savior's wond'rous love.

Soon shall these mortal ills be past,
 Soon shall our troubles cease,
And we attain the land at last,
 Of quietness and peace;
There we, far from the realms of night,
 Far from the tempest's roar,
Shall join the children of the light,
 In bliss forevermore.

WORTHY OF IMITATION.

Although iniquity abounds, and the love of many is waxing cold, yet God has a few faithful ones who have not bowed the knee to Baal. Had there been any doubts in my mind as to this, they would have vanished during my recent visit to Square Pond, Ct.

I found in that place a company of believers in the speedy consummation of the christian's hope, who are bound together in the bonds of christian love and unity. So faithfully have they discharged the duties which devolve upon them as christians, that our heavenly Father has had a tender watch-care over the church, and has shielded them from those who would sow seeds of dissension among them. He has sent them men who would labor for their upbuilding and the salvation of souls. One thing I wish to mention concerning them, something which may seem incredible to some: while I was there, not a word of tattling did I hear. They seemed rather to consider others better than themselves.

Brethren and sisters, one and all, would you not do well to imitate the Square Pond church in this respect? When the minister visits your neighborhood, do not fill his ears with accounts of the misdeeds of those with whom you are connected in church fellowship. Do not try to influence him to preach something that will hit some one against whom you have become prejudiced. Let the Lord direct. He knows what the people need far better than you do. If you will seek to imitate the above church in this respect, the preacher will enjoy his visit with you much better, more good will be accomplished, and you will feel better yourself. C. H. Sweet.

MORRIS, CONN.

For the encouragement of those who feel interested in the people here, I would say the meetings which commenced in this place Mar. 3d are still in progress, and good is being accomplished. Several who had lain down the weapons of their warfare have confessed their past heart-wanderings, and expressed a determination to take their places in the ranks of the Christian army once more, and urge a continual warfare against the world, the flesh, and the devil, that when Jesus comes they may share in the triumph of the redeemed.

Considerable of an interest has been awakened among those who have never as yet experienced the joys of pardoned sin. We hope before the meetings close that their names will be enrolled in the Lamb's book of life. There were only a few believers in Jesus' soon coming, who have been willing to lay aside all things else and labor for the salvation of souls, making character the only test of christian fellowship. God has been with them.

During the winter some six or seven have been hopefully converted to God. Although they have but very little preaching, yet their meetings are well attended.

Preaching brethren traveling in this region, who feel more interested in the salvation of men than in sustaining some favorite theory, would be cordially received by this people, and I doubt not their labors here would be blessed of the Lord. Let all such correspond with Bro. Samuel H. Glover.

Morris, Ct., Mar. 12. C. H. Sweet.

Where we have one hour of pain, we have ten of ease; where we have one of misery, we have at least a score of mercies. If this be true, and we have no reason to doubt it, where we thank God once, we ought to thank him a hundred times over.

☞ Never speak badly of others, even with a cause; remember we all have our faults, and if we expect charity from the world, we must be charitable ourselves.

A "NATURAL FIT."

"Fits" where? In the N. Y. Ledger. Who fits so naturally into that sheet? The "Rev. Henry Ward Beecher." Who says that? Read the following letter to Bonner, the publisher of that paper, and you will see:—

My Dear Mr. Bonner: You have herewith the last line of Norwood. I began it reluctantly, as one who treads an unexplored path. But as I went on, I took more kindly to my work, and now that is ended I shall quite miss my weekly task.

My dear old father, after his day of labor had closed, used to fancy that in some way he was so connected with me that he was still at work; and on one occasion, after a Sabbath morning service, some one in a congratulatory way said to the venerable and meek old patriarch: "Well, Doctor, how did you like your son's sermon?" "It was good, good as I could do myself." And then, with an emphatic pointing of his fore-finger, he added, "If it had'nt been for me, you'd never have had him!"

If anybody likes Norwood, my dear and venerable Mr. Bonner, you can poke him with your finger and say, "If it had'nt been for me, you never would have had it."

You ask me to resume my old place, and write for you regular or occasional articles on one of the ten thousand topics that are interesting. I shall be glad to do so. I have got so used to the Ledger that I seem to fit into its columns more naturally than anywhere else. I am, truly yours,

Henry Ward Beecher.

Remarks by Ed. of Herald of Life.—How "natural" the process of temptation.—$25,000 for writing "Norwood" made the author "fit" into the Ledger "more naturally than anywhere else." When we read the foregoing letter, we could not help thinking of the following story:

A Providence boy, five years of age, having stolen a can of milk, his mother took him to task with moral suasion, and wound up her discourse by exclaiming, "What in the world was you going to do with the milk, anyhow?" "I was going to steal a little dog to drink it," was the crushing reply.

How many "little dogs" in the churches will now run after 'the can of milk"—the Ledger—who would never thought of such a pool to quench their thirst but for having been stolen "to drink it." How "naturally" it "fits."—Ex.

CONVERSATIONS ON IMPORTANT SUBJECTS.

BY ELD. D. M. CANRIGHT.

Minister. Now brethren, we are prepared to go on with our investigation. The eating of meat I believe was the subject under discussion.

Bro. A. Well, I don't think for my part that I could labor as hard as I do, without such hearty victuals as pork, beef, etc.

Min. But my dear brother, you are greatly mistaken about meat being such hearty food. Graham flour, peas, beans, and such like, are much more hearty than meat.

Bro. B. Pshaw! you can't make me believe that.

Min. I think I can, if you will believe facts. The object in eating food is to supply the waste which takes place in the system by nature and by work; also to build up the system, is it not?

Bro. A. Certainly. And when it does this we feel stronger for eating. That is the reason why I think meat is so hearty, because I feel strong after eating.

Min. But does not a man feel strong also after drinking liquor?

Bro. A. Why—yes, I believe he does.

Min. Do you therefore believe that liquor is hearty food, and builds up the system?

Bro. A. Well no, not exactly. I believe that it is only a stimulant, and it only makes him feel better for the time being, without actually building up his system any.

Min. Very well, then it will not do to go by your rule only, that is, to eat everything that makes us feel stronger for the time being. May not the meat have the same effect, in a great degree, that liquor does? Is it not more a stimulant than a nutriment?

Bro. B. You ministers, who do not labor hard, can live on lighter food, but we farmers must have hearty victuals. It looks to me, that pork was designed for farmers and working men.

Min. But, Bro. B., the Jews were farmers, and God did not allow them to eat pork. I have a few facts here which I wish to read to you, from Dr. Cole's Philosophy of Health. It is a table showing the amount of nutriment contained in vegetable and animal food. He says that 100 parts of wheat contain 85 parts of nutriment. That in a hundred pounds there would be 15 pounds of waste matter, where there would be 85 pounds which would go to nourish and strengthen and build up the system. I will read the table clear through. Barley 83, oats 79, oat meal 93, rice 90, peas 93, beans 93, potatoes 25, chicken 22, codfish 20, oysters 13, white of eggs 20, yolk of eggs 46.

Now let us examine the table. Here is a pound of wheat and there is a pound of meat. The pound of wheat contains 85 parts of nutriment, and the meat only 25 parts, which is less than one third as much nourishment as the wheat. Peas contain nearly four times as much as the same amount of pork. Hence, if one man eats a pound of meat, and the other a pound of flour, the latter will derive more than three times as much benefit from his meal as the other does from his. Now which is the most hearty food of the two?

Bro. A. Well, it would seem according to that, that a grain or vegetable diet would be the most hearty.

Bro. D. Now I think that I can convince you, Bro. A., that a vegetable diet is the most hearty food. You, living largely on meat, find that you must have your three meals a day regularly.

Bro. A. Oh! yes, I never can come to the two-meal system, I can hardly get along on three a day. I think that four would be better. If I should eat only two meals a day, I know that I should be so faint that I could not stand it.

Bro. D. Now I am a farmer as well as you, and do I not work as hard as you?

Bro. A. Oh! yes, I guess you do.

Bro. D. Very well. Now you know that I have eaten only two meals a day for a year and a half past. I do not feel faint and languid as you say you do. The reason is very obvious to my mind. I live on graham flour, corn meal, beans, fruit, etc. When I eat a meal of this, my system receives real strength and nourishment from it. This strength thus received, lasts me for several hours; hence I can easily do with two meals a day. But the meat which you eat, acts more as a stimulant than as a nutriment. It acts upon your nerves, and makes you fell stronger than you really are, for a short time, and then it is all gone; and you feel faint and weak, and need something more to eat. Are not these facts?

Bro. A. Well, it does look some so, and I don't know but that you are about half right.

Min. Yes, this alone is sufficient, and is enough to show that meat is not such hearty food as has been supposed, nor so hearty as the grain and vegetable diet.

Bro. B. But we poor folks cannot afford to adopt the health reform. To carry out the health reform, we should have plenty of fruit; berries and sauce, the best of graham flour, etc. This costs a good deal.

Min. Can not afford it! Why, my dear brother, you are just the one that cannot afford to do without it. Let us look at the figures a moment. We have just seen that one pound of wheat contains more than three times as much as one pound of meat. One pound of salt pork will cost twenty-one cents. This pound will contain twenty-five parts nutriment. Now for twenty-one cents, you can obtain three pounds of flour, which contains two hundred and fifty-five parts nutriment, which is ten times as much nutriment as you will get in your pork, for the same money. What do you think of that, Bro. B?

Bro. B. I declare, I had not supposed that was so. I guess I must think of that a little more.

Min. But why should we eat meat any way? It contains nothing that the sytem can use but what may be found in grains and vegetables. For instance, you take the pig that weighs ten pounds, you shut him up and feed him on milk, meal, corn and such like, and after feeding him thus for several months, he at length weighs several hundred pounds. You now kill him and put his flesh on the table and eat it. What is that flesh made of? of course it is made of the meal and corn which you have to take second-hand, after going through what seems to me, not a very cleansing process, namely, the dirt and filth of a pig-sty, and swine's flesh for a filter. Now why not take it first-hand, clean and pure, just as the Lord made it? It certainly would have all the properties of nutrition that it now has. I can see no reason in first letting the hog eat our food for us.—Review and Herald.

INFLUENCE OF DIET.

It may seem like meddling to say to a man, that his dietetic principles and habits affect his character here and his destiny hereafter; to tell him that his habits are gluttonous; that he is a sybarite, and luxurious; and to say to him, Sir, your wantonness proceeds from your habits as to eating and drinking; to say to him, Sir, your prayers are baffled by your appetite, and your resolutions in favor of reform are all vetoed by your late suppers; your highly seasoned food stimulates you to impurity; your tea and coffee have a like effect; and as a consequence, your moral susceptibilities are seared, your intellect is stupefied, your brain is disturbed and weakened, your judgment is perverted, and your hand is tremulous. . . .

For about two years myself and family have tried the two-meal per day system, during which time we have not used meats of any kind; neither have we used tea or coffee, nor any highly seasoned food, and but a very small quantity of fish; we have used grains, fruits, and vegetables. The results of the system are, evenness of temper, clearness of mind, steadiness of nerve, increased mental power, and a better subjection of the physical to the moral power. I feel as if I were entering upon a new life, with new strength of hope and faith. Indeed, without the experience, I could hardly have believed it possible that the quality of our food, and the intervals between our meals, had so great an influence for good or evil.

I first saw the practical working of the two-meal per day system, upon a community, nearly two years ago; and having read Dr. Jackson's argument in its favor, I determined to test it upon my farm; and I find that I can do more work, with less fatigue, and do it better, upon this system, than with three meals per day as formerly.

It is now nearly two years since we began to practice upon this system, in all kinds of weather, at all work, in the long days of harvest and haying, and the short days of winter; whether at the plough or the hoe, the axe or the spade. I find I am not as hungry for my meals as formerly, when eating three meals a day and lunches besides; neither do I crave more at a meal, if as much; neither do I feel half as much inconvenience from faintness when hungry, as formerly.

At first I was so much pleased with the good effects of this system, that I feared it was enthusiasm in part, and that a re-action would follow; but sober reality, from two years' experience has satisfied us that it is still better for us than our most enthusiastic dreams had pictured to our minds. Others in the vicinity have the same views of the matter, and will, I hope, bear testimony to the same. . . .—Review.

Of what Man is made.—Of the sixty-two primary elements known in nature, only eighteen are found in the human body, and of these seven are metallic. Iron is found in the blood, phosphorous in the brain, limestone in the bile, lime in the bones, and dust and ashes in all. Not only these eighteen human elements, but the whole sixty-two, of which the universe is made, have their essential basis in the four substances—oxygen, dydrogen, nitrogen, carbon—representing the more familiar names of fire, water, saltpeter, and charcoal. And such is man, the lord of the earth—a spark of fire, a drop of water, a grain of gunpowder, an atom of charcoal.—Amer. Phren. Jour., Vol. 38, No. 1.

Temperance and Longevity.—Ephraim Pratt, who lived in the town of Shutesberry, Mass., many years, and died there in 1804, was a remarkable man. He lived to be over one hundred and sixteen years of age. He married at the age of twenty-one, and could count fifteen hundred descendants. He was a very temperate man, so much so that for forty years he took no animal food. He was a farmer, and his health was so uniformly good, that he was able to mow a good swath one hundred and one years in succession. He was born at Sudbury, in 1687.—N. E. Gazetteer.

DEATH HAS COME.

Death has come,
Taken from us, one by one,
Our heart's treasures to the tomb,
Wrapped us deep in sorrow's gloom,
Death has come!

Nevermore
Come they to our waiting door,
To our fond hearts as of yore,
Tell their joys, their sorrows o'er,
Nevermore!

But they sleep
Where the night dew sadly weeps,
And dear love its vigils keeps,
There in dreamless slumber deep
Peaceful sleep.

And they rest,
No more now by sorrow prest,
Folded to our mother's breast,
With those whom God calleth blest.
Precious rest!

Other hands
Twine for us fair friendship's bands,
Kindly all, but love commands,
And we grope for broken strands,
Prisoned hands.

They have gone!
List we now in vain each tone,
And the hand that clasped their own
Reacheth vainly,—all alone.
They have gone!

Gone alway!
When returns the glowing day,
Or again the evening gray,
Vain for them we watch or pray,
Gone alway!

Holy trust,
Lift the fainting spirit up,
While we drink of sorrow's cup,
Bid us see them rise from dust,
Holy trust!

They shall come!
From death's iron grasp shall come,
By the Prince of life called home,
Nevermore to sleep or roam.
They shall come!

THE HOPE.—No. 5.

"Wherein God, willing more abundantly to show unto the heirs of promise the immutability of his counsel, confirmed it by an oath; that by two immutable things in which it was impossible for God to lie, we might have a strong consolation, who have fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope set before us."—Heb. 6: 17, 18.

We closed our last by quoting the language of Isaiah, which declares that the "ordinance is changed," and the "covenant is broken." Lamentable indeed, and yet how true. The ordinance connected with the covenant is changed, was changed in the days of Constantine the Great. Paul says, "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ. There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female; for ye are all one in Christ Jesus. And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise."—Gal. 3: 27-29.

"Baptism," then, is the ordinance which inducts an individual into Christ, and makes him a covenantee, or heir of the promise; and it is this very ordinance that is changed. Paul plainly declares there is but "one baptism"; and also clearly shows that it is a figure or type of "death and resurrection" (see Rom. 6); and therefore immersion alone can be made to correspond with the figure. Has it not been changed, and the covenant broken? Answer, ye who can.

But some one may say, The promise of God to Abraham, that he and his seed should inherit the land, was not confirmed by his oath, and therefore is not the promise upon which the hope is predicated. We will see soon. But first let me inquire, Why was it that God selected Abraham, in preference to any other individual, to whom to make the promise? Why was not the promise made to Adam, or Abel, instead of Abraham? as they lived before his day. We reply, It was not simply because his name was Abraham, or because he was the son of Terah; but because he wanted to set him before the world as a pattern of faith. No other individual had possessed the faith that Abraham possessed. Therefore we say God did not make him the promise simply because his name was Abraham, neither because he wanted to make him an heir of the world; for indeed he is no more an heir of the world than any other righteous man; and the same promise, virtually, only in another form, was made to Eve in the garden of Eden. But because of his unwavering faith did God select him, that he might set his faith before the world as an example for others to follow. Therefore we must possess "the faith of Abraham," not only theoretically, but as a "principle" also.

After God has made the promise to Abraham that he and his seed should inherit the land for ever, he then makes him another promise,—that four hundred years from that time his seed, being as the stars of heaven innumerable, should go in and possess the land of Canaan; and that that multitudinous seed should come through Isaac, his only son. And now, while Isaac is a lad, or, at least, without issue, he commands Abraham to take him, the son, through whom this multitudinous seed was to spring, to Mount Moriah, and make a sacrifice of him. Unbelief would cry instantly, Where is that multitudinous seed coming from, Abraham, if you slay your only son? Here the faith of Abraham is tried; but it is unwavering. He takes his son, and starts for the distant mountain.

By and by the mountain top is reached, the altar is built, and the child is bound upon it. The father raises the cruel knife, to bathe it in the blood of his only son. It seems awful indeed to Abraham, but heaven has demanded it. But hark! as the knife is about to descend, the spell is broken by the voice of an angel of the Lord. "Stay thy hand, Abraham; hurt not thy son"; the order is countermanded. And now the faith of Abraham is tried, and God is ready to confirm the promises by his oath: "By myself have I sworn, saith the Lord; for because thou hast done this thing, and hast not withheld thy son, thine only son, that in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy [one] seed [Christ by faith] as the stars of heaven, and as the sand upon the sea-shore; and thy seed [Christ] shall possess the gate of his enemies."—Gen. 22: 16, 17. To possess the gate of his enemies is to possess that which they are now possessing, which is the earth; and when he gathers out of his kingdom—the world, or field—all things that offend and that do iniquity; when he commands that these, his enemies, that would not that he should reign over them, be brought and slain before them, then he will undoubtedly possess their gate.

But this oath is spoken of by Abraham (Gen. 24: 7) thus: "The Lord God of heaven, which took me from my Father's house, and from the land of my kindred, and which spake unto me, that sware unto me [what did he swear to?] saying, Unto thy seed will I give this land; he shall send his angel before thee," etc. Here we have the testimony that the promise of the land, or inheritance, was confirmed by the oath of Jehovah.

But some have attempted to sustain, regardless of all the facts to the contrary, that the children of Israel going in and possessing the land of Canaan four hundred years after the promise was made to Abraham, was a fulfillment of the same. But it seems to me that Paul sets the matter all straight, in Gal. 3: 15,—"Brethren, I speak after the manner of men; though it be but man's covenant, yet if it be confirmed, no man disannulleth, or addeth thereto." This language of the apostle is very forcible and full of meaning. A covenant is a "contract," or "agreement between two parties"; and, although it be but man that makes the covenant, yet if it be confirmed by law, no man can disannul, or add thereto. That is, A. sells a farm to B., and B. has the contract confirmed by law, by taking his deed to the County Clerk, and having it recorded; and now no man, not even A. himself can disannul or make void the contract. He can not, after he has sold the farm to B., and B. has had the contract confirmed by law, sell it again to any one else.

Exactly so with the promise God made to Abraham, as Paul remarks: "Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to seeds [in the plural], as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ." "And this I say, That the covenant that was confirmed before of God in Christ, the law, which was four hundred and thirty years after, can not disannul, that it should make the promise of none effect. For if the inheritance be of the law, it is no more of promise; but God gave it to Abraham by promise." Here we have the facts plainly set before us, that God made the promise of the inheritance to Abraham and Christ, and confirmed it himself; yea, by his own oath; and now we inquire, How could he, four hundred and thirty years after this promise or covenant was confirmed, give the inheritance to the Jews, under the law? No, says Paul. "The law, which was four hundred and thirty years after, can not disannul, that it should make the promise [of the inheritance to Abraham and Christ] of none effect."

No doubt the children of Israel going in and possessing the land of Canaan, under the law, was a type of the saints' everlasting inheritance; and Joshua leading them over old Jordan into the goodly land, was a type of Jesus' leading the true Israel of God over the Jordan of judgment into their eternal abode. But to say that the oath and promise of God to Abraham was then and there fulfilled, is the height of puerility. Paul expressly affirms that "the twelve tribes of Israel, who instantly served God day and night, hope to come to this promise" (Acts 26: 7), and yet "they all died in faith, not having received the promise." Heb. 11: 13, 39, 40. "Wherefore, then, serveth the law?" Why was the law added, if the inheritance was not to be obtained by it? "It was added because of transgression, until the seed come to whom the promise was made"; which shows conclusively that the promise could not be fulfilled until the seed did come; and that seed was Christ; hence could not be fulfilled under the law. "Is the law, then, against the promise of God? God forbid; for if there had been a law given that could have given life, verily righteousness should have been of the law." But the promise was that of the earth for an eternal inheritance, and the law could not give life to inherit it eternally. But the covenant can, being "confirmed in Christ, who is the resurrection, and the life."

We see, then, why it is that "eternal life," or the "divine nature," is gained through this promise; because it is "confirmed in Christ," through whom alone eternal life can be obtained. May both the reader and the writer inherit eternal life when He who is our life shall appear. Amen. J. W. TAYLOR.

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST.

Never was any other truth so well attested as the divinity of Christ. The fact and manner of his wonderful and miraculous conception was foretold by heaven-taught prophets, and pre-announced to the virgin-mother by the angel Gabriel who stands in the presence of God. To the awe-struck and affrighted shepherds who were watching their flocks by night, the glad tidings of a Savior born were announced by a messenger from on high, while "the glory of the Lord shone round them;" "and suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host" who chanted the celestial anthem never before heard by mortal ears—"Glory to God in the highest; on earth peace and good will among men."

His childhood was marked by a dignity and wisdom far above his years, and at the age of twelve he was found sitting among the sages of Israel, asking and answering the most difficult questions. At his baptism, as he emerged from the liquid grave, the heavens were opened, and the Holy Spirit assuming the form of a dove, descended upon him, while a voice from the most excellent glory proclaimed, "This is my Son, the beloved, in whom I delight."

At his transfiguration, the divinity within burst through its tabernacle of humanity; "his face did shine as the sun, and his garments were white as snow" "a bright cloud overshadowed them," and the voice of the Father out of the cloud again announced—"This is my Son, the beloved, in whom I am well pleased: hear ye him."

From the time of his entrance upon his mission of love and mercy to sinful and wretched men, till his unjust condemnation was extorted from a time-serving procurator by a fanatical, malevolent populace, every incident of his eventful life and tragical death showed that he was "God manifest in the flesh."

Such were the power and the sublimity of his discourses, notwithstanding their simplicity, that even his opposers were struck with wonder and admiration, and exclaimed, "Never man spake like this man." His works bore testimony to his divine character and heavenly mission. At his word and touch the blind saw, the deaf heard, the dumb spake, and the lame walked. Even the stormy winds and raging waves were obedient to his high command. He entered the abode of the sick, and disease fled at the approach of his footsteps. He arrested the bier on its way to the grave, and snatched from the hands of death his pallid victim. He opened the dark portals of the tomb, and called its sleeper forth to life and health again.

At his crucifixion, nature, shocked at the sight, gave indubitable evidence that it was the Lord of creation who was impaled on the Roman cross. The heavens were shrouded in darkness—the earth was convulsed to its centre—the veil of the temple was rent—even death forgot his prey, and dropped his chains, and many came out of their graves and went into the holy city.

And finally, to cap the climax of evidence, God raised him from the dead, showed him openly to chosen witnesses, exalted him with his right hand, and crowned him with glory and honor amid the joyful acclamations of angelic hosts. And then in his glorified humanity he "sat down on the right hand of his Majesty on high;" to him the Father intrusted the government of the worlds; he is to reign until "he hath put all enemies under his feet."—Banner of the Faith.

For the World's Crisis.

ONE FOUND WORTHY.

"In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth." "And God saw everything that he had made, and behold it was very good." "The morning stars sang together and all the sons of God shouted for joy." The earth was clothed in beauty, there was nothing to hurt or destroy in all its borders. Man was made in the image of God, free from sin, and to him was given the dominion. But there came a change. Sin entered the world, and death by sin. Man lost his first estate, became mortal, subject to death, a candidate for the grave, and the ground is cursed for his sake. God looked down and saw this earth was one vast graveyard, this world a charnel house. Mercy wept and desired to enter, and set the prisoners free, but Justice barred the door and held the key. God's law had been broken,—man had sinned, and his life was the forfeit; how could the door of the charnel house be opened and the law be satisfied?

But mercy still pleads, and weeps and cries "Oh, who will ransom these?" Hark! sweet and gentle as a zephyr, yet mighty and powerful, there comes a voice,—"So, I come to do thy will, O God!" "I will redeem them from death, I will ransom them from the power of the grave." "But the law has been broken," cries justice. "I will magnify the law and make it honorable." Who art thou that speakest in such lofty strains? "Who is this that cometh from Edom with dyed garments from Bozrah? this that is glorious in his apparel, traveling in the greatness of his strength?" "I that speak in righteousness, mighty to save." "Wherefore art thou red in thine apparel, like him that treadeth in the winefats?" "I have trodden the winepress alone; and of the people there was none with me. . . I looked, and there was none to help, and I wondered that there was no intercessor; therefore mine own arm brought salvation." But what is thy name, thou great Deliverer? "I, the Lord, am thy Savior and thy Redeemer, the mighty one of Jacob." Thank God! There is one found worthy.

The first intimation or promise of the Savior was given in the garden of Eden. It was somewhat dim and shadowy, but as time went on the light increased. The promise was renewed to Abraham in a more definite form. Then came the Law, which was a schoolmaster to bring us to Christ. All its types and shadows, forms and ceremonies, pointed to the coming one. Then arose the those holy men of old, who wept over the sins and sorrows of Israel, and prayed day and night for redemption. The Spirit of the Lord came upon them, and a panoramic picture was spread out before them of what should come to pass. In that picture they read the history of the world in advance. First in the panorama passed before their vision the Jews, that rebellious nation. They saw their kingdom overturned, overturned and overturned. They saw the throne of David cast down, to be no more until He whose right it is should come to reign. They saw them carried away into a long captivity—they beheld them weeping by the rivers of Babylon, unable to sing one of the Lord's songs. After seventy years have passed they see them brought back to their own land, but still subjects of other kingdoms.

Sadly they watch the picture, and by-and-by over the plains of Judea their eyes catch the bright rays of the beateous star of Bethlehem. They hear the angels saying, "Behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be to all people, for unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord." They follow the star to Bethlehem,—there lies the babe in the manger. Now the prophets begin to rejoice. Hear Isaiah, "Unto us a child is born, unto us a child is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulders: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, the Mighty God, the everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government there shall be no end, upon the throne of David and upon his kingdom to order it and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth, even forever. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this." Isaiah watches the picture. He sees Jesus grow up and go forth to preach his own gospel; but ah! he sees him as a man of sorrows, acquainted with grief, despised and rejected of men. He changes his song of triumph to one of sadness. "Surely he hath borne our griefs and carried our sorrows; . . . he was wounded for our transgressions, he was buried for our iniquities. . . . the Lord hath lain upon him the iniquity of us all." "He was oppressed, and he was afflicted, yet he opened not his mouth; he is brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before his shearers is dumb, so he openeth not his mouth. He was taken from prison and from judgment, and who shall declare his generation? for he was cut off the land of the living; for the transgression of my people was he stricken." He poured out his soul unto death, and was numbered with the transgressors. I think Isaiah wept when he reached this point in the picture.

Christ is dead and laid in the rich man's tomb, and the promises are still unfulfilled. God's people have not been redeemed from death, nor ransomed from the power of the grave. David's throne has not been re-established, and the curse is still resting upon the earth. Does the picture end here? Is the world to be left in darkness and gloom because the hope of Israel is brought low? No; the vision moves on. While the prophet is watching with tearful eyes the tomb where sleeps the crucified man of sorrows, the great stone rolls back, and Jesus of Nazareth steps forth a risen Savior. Hope revives; surely now he will redeem Israel, and establish his kingdom. But no; the prophet is again disappointed, for soon he sees him standing with his disciples on Mount Olivet, "and while they beheld, he was taken up, and a cloud received him out of their sight."

Has he gone at last and left his work undone? Will he never come back? 'Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven. Then the disciples remembered that he said unto them, "It is expedient for you that I go away, for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you, but if I go away I will send him unto you." The prophet exclaims, "Thou hast ascended on high, thou hast led captivity captive." He has seen him go away, and now how anxiously he watches the picture for his return. He sees the labors of the apostles and the trials of the early church. He follows her as she wades through the dark ages, her footsteps marked with blood. Then comes a little season of prosperity. The apostate church, or harlot woman, loses her power to consume and destroy, and the true church shines out once more. Then comes the time of the end. Many run to and fro; knowledge increases, but iniquity abounds, and the love of many waxes cold.

There are wars and rumors of wars, signs in the sun, moon, and stars, and on the earth distress of nations with perplexity, earthquakes and famines in divers places. Men become "covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, truce-breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, high-minded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God." Spirits of devils are working miracles, to deceive if possible the very elect. The churches fold their arms, forget to watch, and say, "My Lord delayeth his coming." What a sad picture!

But in the midst of all this wickedness, darkness, and death, the heavens open, and the Son of God is revealed coming the second time without sin unto salvation. Not as the babe of Bethlehem; not as a man of sorrows; not as a lamb for slaughter, but as a mighty conqueror. Not as a mediator, but as a judge to take vengeance on them that know not God and obey not the gospel. Not as a sin-offering, to give his life a ransom for many; not as a servant; not as a despised Nazarene; but as a King to take possession of the field for which he sold all that he had, and to bring forth the treasure which lies hidden there. He comes to claim the throne of his father David, and to rule over the house of Jacob forever. Will he redeem his people from death? Will he ransom them from the power of the grave? Hear him;—"I am he that liveth and was dead, and behold I am alive forevermore, amen, and have the keys of hades and of death." Ah! the prophet understands it now. "Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust; for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out her dead. Come, my people, gather thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee; hide thyself as it were for a little moment, until the indignation be overpast."

The picture now moves rapidly. Christ has satisfied the law and made it honorable. He has got the keys of the charnel-house. Justice smiles and resigns his claim; the prison doors fly open; the saints come forth shouting, "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? Thanks be to God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." See them come from the four quarters of the earth, the precious jewels of God, gathered from every age and clime. They hide in the chambers for a little moment, while "upon the wicked he shall rain snares, fire and brimstone, and an horrible tempest; this shall be the portion of their cup." The heavens (or this poisonous atmosphere) pass away with a great noise (it explodes), the elements melt with fervent heat, the earth also; and the works that are therein are burned up.

Then comes a restitution of all things spoken of by all the prophets since the world began. A new earth, beautiful, glorious, "very good." A new atmosphere which is pure and exhilarating. The tree of life once more stands in the midst of the paradise of God. The first dominion is brought back. The kingdom of God is established under the whole heavens. The saints take it, and possess it for ever and ever. The holy city, the New Jerusalem, comes down out of heaven, and a great voice cries, "Behold the tabernacle of God is with men." Christ takes the throne of his father David, and rules in righteousness, and of his kingdom there shall be no end. The last enemy, death, is destroyed; all tears are wiped away; the glory of God covers the earth as the waters cover the sea. All sin and wickedness is at an end, and the children of God enjoy everlasting rest, fulness of joy, and perfect peace. Once more the morning stars sing together, and the sons of God shout for joy. Amen! Lord, hasten the day. B. P. F.

For the World's Crisis.

THE FOUR KINGDOMS.

"And the king said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and my spirit was troubled to know the dream."—DAN. 2: 3.

The king spoke these words to the wise men of Babylon, who were called in to tell and interpret this dream. It appears that these men had pretended to interpret dreams, but in this case the king desired that they should tell him the dream, then he knew they could give him the interpretation; but they could form no idea of what he saw. He said to them,—"For ye have prepared lying and corrupt words to speak before me till the time be changed."—Dan. 2: 9. "For this cause the king was angry and very furious, and commanded to destroy all the wise men of Babylon." And they sought Daniel and his fellows to be slain."—Dan. 2: 12, 13. This aroused Daniel to save his life and the lives of his friends. He went to the king and desired time that he would show him the interpretation. His request was granted. He then went to his house, where he and his friends prayed to the Lord that the secret might be made known to them. "Then was the secret revealed unto Daniel in a night vision."—Verse 19.

In the 31st verse and onward we have the dream as it was presented to the king by Daniel.

"Thou, O King, sawest, and behold a great image. This great image, whose brightness was excellent, stood before thee; and the form thereof was terrible. This image's head was of fine gold, his breast and his arms of silver, his belly and his thighs of brass, his feet part of iron and part of clay."

This is the dream, and the prophet proceeds to interpret it.

"Thou, O King, art a king of kings; for the God of heaven hath given thee a kingdom, power, and strength, and glory. . . . And after thee shall arise another kingdom inferior to thee, and another third kingdom of brass, which shall bear rule over all the earth. And the fourth kingdom shall be as strong as iron. . . . And as the toes of the feet were part of iron, and part of clay, so the kingdom shall be partly strong and partly broken."

In the interpretation of this dream we discover that there were four kingdoms to bear rule over all the earth. The first kingdom, symbolized by the head of gold, was Babylon; for Daniel after he had informed Nebuchadnezzar of the greatness of his kingdom, tells him (38 v.) that he was the head of gold. Did Babylon bear rule over all the earth? Verse 38,—"And wheresoever the children of men dwell, the beasts of the field and the fowls of the heaven hath he given into thine hand, and hath made thee ruler over them all: thou art this head of gold." The above is the extent of Babylon as presented by Daniel; but what does history say? Read Ramsay's "Universal History," Vol. I., p. 43, 44. He had now so nearly attained universal dominion, that the spoils of other nations and the riches of the world centered in Babylon. Thus we see that Babylon was the capital of the then known world, according to Bible and history.

"Babylon was surrounded with walls eighty-seven feet thick, and three hundred and fifty feet high. These walls formed an exact square, each side of which was fifteen miles in length. In the whole of the wall there were one hundred gates, all made of solid brass. The Euphrates divided the city by running through the middle of it from north to south."—Ramsay's History, p. 45. "The Lord said of Babylon he would dry up her rivers."—Isa. 44: 27. 45: 1, 2: "I will loose the loins of kings to open before him the two-leaved gates, and the gates shall not be shut. I will break in pieces the gates of brass." In the 44th chapter it will be seen that the Lord chose Cyrus to carry out the the above plan. Belshazzar, who became king of Babylon, after the death of Nebuchadnezzar, on a certain night made a great feast to a thousand of his lords. "Cyrus who had surrounded the city, took advantage of this feast, and caused deep and large ditches to be dug all around it. On a certain night, when all the Babylonians were engaged in feasting and merriment, he ordered the dams of the ditches to be thrown open, that the waters of the Euphrates might run into them. By this means the channel of the river, which ran through the city, was left dry. Thus we see the opening of the gates before Cyrus, as predicted by the Lord, and the gates being opened he marched his troops into the city. "The guards were slain with the king of Babylon." Thus ended the head of gold, or the first kingdom.

The breast and arms of the image symbolized the second universal kingdom, which was the Medo-Persian empire. It was founded by Cyrus shortly after the destruction of Babylon. Read Ramsay's History, vol. I, p. 56. "In about three years after the reduction of Babylon, Cyaxares, king of Media, and Cambyses, king of Persia, both departed this life. Cyrus, who had pretensions to both kingdoms, returned to Babylon, and took upon him the government of the whole empire." Robbins' History (p. 77) says that it is sometimes called the Medo-Persian empire. Did this empire get the supremacy? Read Ezra 1: 1, 2:—"Now in the first year of Cyrus, king of Persia, that the word of the Lord by the mouth of Jeremiah might be fulfilled, the Lord stirred up the spirit of Cyrus, king of Persia, that he made a proclamation throughout his kingdom, and put it also in writing, saying, thus sayeth Cyrus, king of Persia, the Lord God of heaven hath given me all the kingdoms of the earth." The above testimony is positive proof that Medo-Persia was the second universal kingdom.

The belly and thighs of the image symbolize the third universal kingdom, the same as symbolized by the rough goat in Dan. 8: 21. Gabriel says that this rough goat is the king of Grecia, and the great horn that is between his eyes is the first king. "Now that being broken, whereas four stood up for it, four kingdoms shall stand up out of the nation, but not in his power."

This great horn that was between the eyes of the rough goat was Alexander the Great. When he was but a boy he showed signs of one day becoming a great conqueror. M. Rollin says of him (vol. 5, p. 76) every time news was brought him that his father had taken some city, or gained some great battle, Alexander, far from sharing in the general joy, used to say in a plaintive tone of voice to the young persons that were brought up with him—"friends my father will possess himself of every thing and leave nothing for us to do."

Rollin says a "horse was presented to Phillip, the father of Alexander. After viewing him he found that he was too fiery, and ordered him back again. Alexander, who was present, cried out what a noble horse they are going to lose. Phillip gave him leave to try what he could do. He went up to the horse, took hold of the bridle, stroked him gently with his hands, soothed him with his voice, and in proper time sprung upon his back. He moved him forward, and gave him the rein, and spurring him with great vigor, animated him with his voice to his full speed. While this was doing Phillip and his whole court trembled with fear; but when Alexander returned we are told Phillip shed tears of joy, and embraced Alexander, and kissing his head he said to him, "My son, seek a kingdom more worthy of thee, for Macedon is below thy merits."

He then ascended the throne at the age of twenty, and when he had conquered the most part of the world, "he marched his men a distance of two hundred and forty miles, through hot sand and scorching sun, to the temple of Jupiter Ammon."—Rollin, Vol. 5, p. 158. Alexander being come into the temple, the senior priest declared him to be the son of Jupiter, and assured him that the god himself bestowed this name upon him. Alexander accepted it with joy, and acknowledged Jupiter as his father. He afterwards asked the priest whether his father Jupiter had not allotted him the empire of the whole world. The priest replied that he should be monarch of the universe. (Rollin, Vol. 5. p. 159.) Alexander having conquered the then known world.

"He (Alexander) knew that there were arrived in that city (Babylon) ambassadors from all parts of the world. The whole earth echoing so much with the terror of his name, that the several nations came with inexpressible ardor to pay homage to Alexander, as to him who was to be their sovereign."

What was said of Alexander? Whereas Alexander, who is justly entitled the plunderer of nations, made his glory to consist in carrying desolation into all places and in rendering himself the terror of mankind. Thus he conquered the world, reigned over it in Babylon, and there died at the age of thirty-two years and eight months, having reigned twelve years. Shortly after his death the third kingdom passed away, it being divided into four kingdoms. These kingdoms are symbolized by the four horns coming out of the nation, when the great horn is broken, or at the death of the first king, Alexander.—"After the battle of Ipsus, the four confederate princes divided the dominions of Antigonus among themselves, and added them to those which they already possessed." The empire of Alexander was thus divided into four kingdoms, of which Ptolemy had Egypt, Libya, Arabia, Cœlosyria, and Palestine: Cassander had Macedonia and Greece, Lysimachus, Thrace, Bythynia, and some other provinces beyond the Hellespont and the Bosphorus. Seleucus all the rest of Asia to the other side of the Euphrates, and as far as the river Indus.

Thus Alexander's kingdom was divided by the prophet.

The legs of iron symbolize the fourth universal kingdom, which was Rome, founded by Romulus. Roins says, "Romulus began the building of Rome. His brother Remus was indeed concerned in the projected undertaking, but a dispute arising between the brothers respecting the place where the city should stand, they had recourse to arms, in consequence of which Remus lost his life. Romulus, only eighteen years of age, was thus left to pursue the enterprise alone on the Palatine hill he fixed as the spot." There he began the building of a city that was one day to be the capital of the world. In the days of our Savior Rome did rule the world. For proof of it read Luke 2: 1,—"And it came to pass in those days that there went out a decree from Cesar Augustus that all the world should be taxed." Cesar Augustus was Emperor of Rome.

Read also Milman's Gibbon's History of Rome, (vol. I. p. 99), which says: "But the empire of the Romans filled the world, and when that empire fell into the hands of a single person, the world became a safe and dreary prison for his enemies." Having proved from the Bible and history that Rome filled the world, it is certain that this empire was the iron legs of the image, or the fourth kingdom.

By following the fourth kingdom down the stream of time, we discover that through wars and revolutions this once world-wide empire has been dismembered. The Philadelphia Catholic Standard, published Nov. 2d, 1867, gives the following square miles and population of the Roman States, from 1859 to 1867:

	SQUARE MILES.	POPULATION.
In 1859—	15,429.	2,898,115.
In 1867—	4,520.	700,000.
Decrease—	10,909.	2,198,115.

The above statistics show that Rome is decreasing.

In the forty-first verse of this prophecy Daniel predicts Rome as being in a divided state. "And whereas thou sawest the feet and toes, part of potter's clay, and part of iron, the kingdom shall be divided." Is Rome not thus divided? Part of her inhabitants want Victor Emmanuel to be their king, and part of them want the Pope.

Daniel 2: 45;—"Forasmuch as thou sawest that the stone was cut out of the mountain without hands, and that it break in pieces the iron, the brass, the clay, the silver, and the gold; the great God hath made known to the king what shall come to pass hereafter; and the dream is certain, and the interpretation thereof sure."

The stone that is mentioned in the above verse, as breaking those four elements, is Christ. A few passages will show that Christ is represented in the Bible as a stone. Read the 108th Psalm. "The stone which the builders refused is become the head stone of the corner." Thus was Christ refused by the Jews at his first advent. When he was on earth he asked them "whether they never read in the Scriptures the stone which the builders rejected, the same is become the head of the corner."

To prove that Christ has become the corner stone, read Eph. 2: 20. "And are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone."

Daniel informs the king (2: 34) that the stone smites the feet of the image, which symbolizes the divided state of Rome, and at the very time that Rome is smitten all the nations of the earth will be demolished. For the prophet says in verse 35, "Then was the iron, the clay, the brass, the silver and the gold broken to pieces together and became like the chaff of the summer threshing floors; and the wind carried them away, that no place was found for them, and the stone that smote the image became a great mountain, and filled the whole earth."

Dear reader, we are approximating that solemn hour when all the nations will be swept from off the earth, like the chaff of the summer's threshing-floor. Rome is tottering, and soon it will be no more. Then the opening heaven will reveal the King of kings and Lord of lords. Are you prepared for that solemn hour? Do you feel that when he comes you can say, "this is our God, we have waited for him, and he will save us; this is the Lord, we have waited for him, we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation." If not, let me invite you to come to Jesus, and accept offered mercy while it may be found; for yet in a little while the door of mercy may be closed; and you may knock, but the answer will be, Depart, I never knew you.

THOMAS I. WHITECAR.

"COME QUICKLY."

This is the church's hearty echo to Christ's promise: "Behold, I come quickly." Come, Lord Jesus! thus beats the pulse of the church, thus the mystical body of Christ, and we should never be satisfied till we find such a spirit breathing in us, and causing us to look for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearance of the great God, and our Savior Jesus Christ. What comes from heaven in a promise, should be sent back to heaven in a prayer. Come, Lord Jesus, put an end to this state of sin, and sorrow, and temptation, and gather thy people out of this present evil world."—Matthew Henry.

Many of the waves of trouble, like those of the ocean, will, if we await them calmly, break at our feet and disappear.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, April 15, 1868.

☞ Take Notice!

All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

☞ Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank-checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ MONEY ORDERS.

Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given.

Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too.

Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us YOUR NAME AND POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

INFORMATION.—OUR CHANGE.

We now have our new mailing list completed, and paste the name of each subscriber on his paper with the date when his subscription ends, instead of acknowledging in the Crisis as heretofore.

Some of our subscribers are troubled to ascertain their indebtedness by the date opposite their names. The names of the months are abbreviated thus:—Jan., Feb., Mar., Apr., May, Jun., Jul., Aug., Sept., Oct., Nov., Dec. And the year is given thus: 67, 68, etc. The figures preceding the month indicate the day of the month.

We have tried to be very careful in revising our large list of names, but for all our care there may be some names spelled wrong, and some dates wrong. We shall be very glad to be notified of all such mistakes, and will cheerfully rectify them. When you send us money, look for the date to be changed on the slip, and if you do not see any change in two or three weeks, write to us plainly. We have been to a very heavy expense in making this change, but it has been for the benefit of our subscribers. Hereafter, if any do not get their papers regularly, we mean that it shall not be our fault.

THE BOSTON CONFERENCE.

Our late conference at the Lowell Street Chapel, commencing March 31st, was one of deep interest and great profit to those who were favored with the privilege of being present. It was the largest gathering of the saints we have ever seen at a conference. Over two thousand meals and lodgings were taken at the Suffolk House, 43 Greene Street. This house is kept by Sr. Clark. Those who wish for comfortable quarters at a reasonable price, will do well to call there when they come to Boston.

The conference meetings continued to increase in interest from the commencement to the close. It was a great privilege to be there, and hear the earnest prayers and exhortations, and the sweet songs of Zion. All seemed to feel quite at home. The meetings were characterized by more than an ordinary depth of good feeling, devotion, and firmness in the cause of Christ, connected with a full assurance that we are right in expecting our Savior soon. All doubts in the matter seemed to be removed, and yet there was no harshness, or disposition to make the subject a test of fellowship. Accompanying the belief was a kind spirit, a love for all, and an anxiety that others should see and enjoy the same blessed hope. Many are looking with great interest to this year, as the one in which our dear Savior will return to this planet; and felt that it is high time to be ready and earnestly watching for the coming of the Son of Man. All appeared anxious to hear the evidence in favor of his immediate coming, and discourses on that subject received a candid hearing, not only by our Brn. and Srs., but from many members of other churches. Some of the latter class gave stirring exhortations, and manifested a deep desire to see the Coming One. It is very evident that the interest in the second advent of Christ is increasing among all his devoted followers, in every christian denomination. And we think the interest will continue to become deeper and more earnest.

At the great Pan-Anglican Conference of distinguished Episcopal ministers, held at Lambert, England, the latter part of last year, a Synodical Letter was drawn up in which we find the following important statement: "Brethren beloved, with one voice we warn you; the time is short; the Lord cometh; watch and be sober." Those who believe this feel called upon more than ever to let their light shine.

During our conference we had love-feasts from ten to twelve; preaching at 2.30 P. M., conference meeting at 7 in the evening, and preaching at 7½. Our love-feasts were seasons of great refreshing. They were feasts indeed. We also had excellent preaching from Brn. S. W. Thurber, J. V. Himes, H. F. Carpenter, J. G. Smith, S. G. Mathewson, H. Pratt, J. Hemenway, H. L. Hastings, Sr. A. E. Smith, Brn. J. Couch, and A. Simpson. On Thursday evening the conference meeting became so interesting that no place was found for preaching, and the whole time was occupied in singing, praying and speaking of what the Lord had done. It was a happy season for those who enjoyed the favored opportunity. It was a feast from the Lord. During the entire conference a very happy state of union prevailed. All seemed disposed to help each other, and act for the general good of the whole.

The State conference held its sessions in the same place. As that will be reported by the Secretary, we will not say more now.

Sabbath, April 5th, was the last day of the feast; and was truly the best. It will be long remembered by those present. At 9½ o'clock A. M., we met for a love-feast, and had a most heavenly one. Over one hundred spoke in less than an hour. It was a great privilege to be there. We had such joy and peace as the men of the word never tasted. It seemed as though we were almost home in paradise. Jesus smiled upon us and made us happy in his love. It was truly a resting place for weary pilgrims. The scene will not be soon forgotten by those who enjoyed the occasion.

At 11 o'clock, there was preaching by the writer, at 3 P. M. by Bro. Couch, and in the evening by Bro. Simpson. Bro. Couch showed clearly that the harvest of the earth is about ripe, and that soon we may expect the angels to begin their great work of reaping. Bro. Simpson spoke on the Jubilees, showing that they are forty-nine years apart, beginning on the 10th day of the seventh month; and that this is a jubilee year, when we may expect the Savior.

At 6½ o'clock, Sabbath evening, we met to commemorate the sufferings of Christ. The whole body of the house was full and many in the gallery, who were present to show their sympathy with our Lord. We longed for the time to come when the great head of the church will be with us at "the marriage supper of the Lamb."

During the conference about a dozen requested prayers, and we hope they will press on and secure an abundant entrance into the the everlasting kingdom.

We think a great amount of good was accomplished at this meeting. We have never seen before so many preaching brethren together at any conference. We parted in hope of meeting soon where we shall part no more.

BRO. WM. INGHAM.

Our readers will be saddened to learn that our faithful Bro. Ingham, of Nova Scotia, is sick and deranged, and the family is in a destitute condition. The following letter from Sr. Ingham, to a friend, though private, we think should be laid before the friends of Bro. Ingham. We hope he and his distressed family will receive practical sympathy.

Sr. Ingham writes:—

"DEAR BRO. & SR. P.:—I received your letter last Saturday, and will write you in return but very little. I have just written to Sr. A. Smith, and sent some money that was due her, and will enclose it to you, and drop a line at the same time, merely to let you know how my dear husband is. I would like to write to you lengthy, and a dozen others, but have no means to pay postage. Bro. Sydney told you, no doubt, how husband was taken. His health has been failing since last March; blood low, cold feet and dyspepsia. He went seven hundred miles round the south shore with Bro. Woodworth; did the most of the preaching and visited from house to house. He was gone six weeks, and came home all run down. He went into haying, but could not work but little. Then he took us and the burden of three other sisters to campmeeting.

After this he hurt his head on board the boat, and began right away to feel a pressure on his head at times. He lay very still for three weeks, and was very weak. We thought he would not live, but he is so he goes around his room. His mind wanders. He thinks he is lost, and never was good. He has got it so fixed in his head that you cannot change his mind. Sometimes I think I shall sink under the trial; then I ask God to help me bear it, and I find his grace is sufficient. I have no kind husband to provide for my temporal wants now, and flour is very high; but I expect the Lord will not let me suffer if I put my trust in him. We have five in our family. I want to try and sell my sewing machine to help pay Bro. Y. He is a single man, but he has an invalid father and four brothers and sisters to care for. Have any of you got faith enough to pray for my dear husband's recovery?"

GOOD FRUITS.—We hear good reports from the discussion with the Spirtualist at Stowe, Vt. The truth has gained friends. One said after the discussion:

"I came here two thirds a Spiritualist, and if what Eld. Grant said is true, the doctrine of Spiritualism is one of the greatest delusions in the world; and I believe every word he said."

Spiritualism is truly one of the greatest, if not the most antichristian delusion ever advocated by deluded men and women. I contains the sum of everything unchristian. It is Satan's crowning work, and calculated to deceive the whole world. Its progress is rapid.

TEMPERANCE.—Our readers will find an interesting article in another column on the subject of temperance. It deserves a careful reading, and a faithful observance.

MORAL PROGRESS.

Much is said by those who uphold Spiritualism concerning the progress that is now being made in society. Whatever favors the sentiments of Spiritualists, they claim as progress in the right direction. As it may be most clearly shown that Spiritualism is the Devil's religion, and is entirely antagonistic to Christ and his religion, it follows that all progress in favor of Spiritualism is a departure from Christ. It is a notorious fact that Spiritualism with its poison sentiments is rapidly advancing; therefore the world must of necessity be growing wicked. This is just what the Bible says would take place "in the last days."

The following from the Watchman and Reflector, (April 2nd. 1868, published in Boston,) gives a faint idea of the moral tone of society:—

"The ghastly crimes which genius passes by furnish the daintiest food for the diabolic spirit which has lately infested certain publishers of Boston and New York. In both cities there are illustrated papers published, and openly exposed for sale, which exceed in coarseness and vileness, both with respect to the news and the pictures, the most lecherous issues of the Parisian press. And no wonder. For it is a fact, that not long ago, the keeper of several houses of ill fame, whose business was broken up by the authorities, at once commenced the publication of two illustrated papers, both in perfect harmony with his previous career, and is now rapidly amassing a colossal fortune from their amazing profits. We trust that our readers have no personal knowledge of this class of publications; and it is only recently that, having had our attention called to them, we have become aware of their utterly infamous character. We do not choose to name them, because we would thereby advertise them, but we regret to say that they are distributed by thousands in New England. . . .

These papers are of large size and profusely illustrated; and one stands aghast at their boldness. The female form is depicted in every stage of nudity; picture after picture suggests the foulest thoughts; even, in one case, the ghost of a mother is introduced to give piquancy to a vile situation. When the subject of the illustration does not indicate the original calling of the typical publisher to whom we have referred, it invariably describes murder, outrage, or the grosser forms of crime. All our illustrated papers profess to be pictorial histories of the week; but this class of publications are only chronicles of the barroom, the brothel and the worst dens of the Five Points. One would think, after reading, them, that these United States were thirty-four districts of Pandemonium, instead of being, as they are, with all their shortcomings, the centres of the highest christian civilization that the world has yet seen. These carrion journals have an eye for the festering spots and the putrid carcasses only. . . .

These sheets are eagerly bought and stealthily read by thousands upon thousands of our young men, and even by boys in every city. It is time that the press, with entire unanimity, should demand the suppression of these foul birds of prey that hover over us. The evil is becoming too great to be ignored." . .

DISCUSSION.—We purpose to have another discussion with Moses Hall, in Dover, N. H., commencing Monday evening, April 20th, to continue five evenings. Subject, SPIRITUALISM.

GOOD TRACTS.

We have just received a package of good tracts from the "Tract Repository" of Bro. H. L. Hastings, No. 19 Lindall St., Boston. The following are their titles: "Sowing Wild Oats," "Pray for the Sailor," "What is God?" "What is Man?" "A Thousand Guineas," "The Life Boat's Last Turn," "A Mess of Pottage," "Sold Cheap," "What are you waiting for?" "The First Step," "Dead or Alive," "Hast thou Faith?" "Justification by Christ," "Pardon," "The Contrast," "Adolphe Gauvin," "De Gruchy," "Reading for the Sailor," "Conformity to the will of God," "Bethesda," "Jesus Christ's Money," "Sam the Sailor," "Let Go," "Lost," "The Guiding Hand," "Can't Kill God," "Watching and Praying," "Guidance for the Inquirer," "Remember," "Washing the Mouth," "Pleasant Words," "The Book," "Your Slave forever," "The Coachman," "I hope so," "Sun Down," "The Highland Piper," "Right in the Eye," "You can't pray now," "Tell the Lord so," "Mad Presbyterians," "The Good Master," "Anecdotes for Family Reading," "The Secret Spring," "The workman that needeth not to be ashamed," "The Sowing Hand," "I am the Lord's," "Fishers of Men," "The Enduring Glory," "My Father's House."

The whole contain 500 pp. Price 50 cts.

NEW MUSIC.—Bro. Geo. E. Lee, author of "Over There," has just issued two new pieces on one sheet, entitled, "The Bleeding Lamb," and "Jesus my Shelter." Price five cents for the sheet. Postage two cents. For sale at the Crisis office.

SPRINGFIELD NATIONAL ADVENT CAMP-GROUND.

The Committee have published a lithographed plan of our new camp-ground, which gives a good representation of the shape of the ground, the circle for the seats, the lots for the tents, which are all numbered, the locations of the various avenues, buildings, etc., etc. The plan will be a great convenience for all who attend the campmeeting, and be interesting to those who do not.

Price, postpaid, 20 cents per copy. For sale at this office.

"THE FIRST DAY SABBATH."

Those who wish a thorough work on the Sabbath question, will do well to get Bro. T. M. Preble's work, entitled, "The First Day Sabbath." For sale at this office. Price $1.50, postage 20 cents.

NEW TRACT.

'THAT MAN OF SIN." By Eld. O. R. Fassett.

The above is the title of a new tract just published by the W. A. C. P. Association, to which is added "The Only Hope," and "The True and Only Hope of the Church." An interesting and valuable tract. Price 5 cents single, postage 2 cents; 50 cents per dozen, postage 6 cents.

THE POWERS OF THE AIR;

Or, Spiritualism: What it is, and what it is not. By one who has had much painful experience during a period of over four years.

For sale at this office. Price, cloth $1.25 by mail; paper $1.00.

For the World's Crisis.

LOOKING FOR PLEASURE.

Why look for much pleasure here, when it was never promised? when he, whom we were bidden to follow, led a life of sorrow? Shall the servant be greater than his Lord? Shall we look for more than our Lord and Master received? Did he not say that he had not where to lay his head, and that he was a man of sorrow and acquainted with grief, and to his followers, "In the world ye shall have tribulation?" Why murmur, when the dark page of life comes to our view, and repine that our pathway through life has been so thickly interspersed with dark days? Why not rather turn our eyes "over there" for consolation, and cease looking for rest and peace where we shall look in vain? Would this not save us some sorrow, and many of the disappointments of life? We often build our hopes too high for things in this world, and time soon reveals this to us by the wrecks we experience on the shores of time; and yet, we go on, unmindful of our blasted hopes, and continue building castles, until hope deferred maketh our heart sick, and we despair finding the joy and rest for which we seek, and in solitude we sigh, and ask, O where is rest? where is peace? And the sweet answer is re-echoed back, "In me ye shall have peace." "Then we say, why have I been so long learning this short lesson, when all is comprehended in so few words.

Then we turn our eyes to the right source to find a balm for all life's sorrow. Here we find the reverse; instead of finding all our hopes and expectations too high, our eye rests on the sacred words, "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither has it entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him."

HELP! HELP!! FOR THE MISSIONARY WORK.

The financial committee, from time to time, find it necessary to commune with the supporters of our missions. The great body of Advent believers have felt that they had something to do besides the support of their own societies at home, and hence have originated the Missionary Society, and appointed a Business Board to carry on the work for them. We as your servants, therefore, would now make known to you the present wants of the treasury.

We are at this time nearly out of funds. We are paying out from two to three hundred dollars a month to our several missions in St. Louis, Memphis, Jacksonville, and Lagrange. Soon the Mission Tent will need to be assisted to go on its mission. And now, brethren, we make a special appeal to you all to set apart a portion of your Lord's money for the mission treasury. We do not beg, brethren; we only state the case, and tell you what we want, and we believe you will sustain us. We ought to raise a thousand dollars between this and the campmeetings in August, as the least that we can get along with and sustain our missionaries.

Besides this, a fresh call has been made upon us, that we do not know how to resist. Here it is:

To THE REV. ELDER HIMES,

President of Amer. Adv. Mission Society.

Rev. Sir:—The undersigned of this is of the nation of Norway. I was converted to God through Jesus Christ in the month of January, 1857. Since that time, I have preached the gospel, off and on, until my arrival in New York one year ago. I became a missionary in that city for the Scandinavians, and I have since that time preached continually, and know by happy experience that some souls have been converted to God. All glory belongs to him.

I hereby apply to you for help to aid me in going to Norway, for the purpose of proclaiming the glad tidings of the kingdom of Christ to be nigh, even at the doors. I feel this impression very heavy on my soul, that the Lord calls me to go there.

I will state here that this doctrine which my Advent brethren hold comes directly from the Lord. I never heard of such people before. Now, my brethren, will you send the glad tidings to Norway? I am willing to be sacrificed for the truth, and I would love to be on the watchtower, looking and laboring, when Jesus comes. Now, my brethren, if about four hundred dollars could be spent for that purpose, I believe that many souls could be saved for the harvest. I fully trust that the Lord will give us means to carry on the great work there, before he comes.

I am your very humble servant and affectionate brother in Christ,

OLLIVER BENDIXON.

So far as we know, Bro. Bendixon is a good man, and the right one to go to Norway. Who of their abundance will send him to his people? There is money in the hands of some that will read this that would be in better use in support of this mission, than it would be to lie idle, or at ordinary interest. Brethren, make investments now. Yes, now, for this is the time to help. Will any of you see the Lord's cause suffer when you have twenty-five cents to help? Remember that a hundred such will give to the treasury twenty-five dollars. Do not fail to send the mites. But what is fifty cents, or a dollar, for any of our brethren in the poorest circumstances to give? When you have read this, just enclose your mite and send it to the Treasurer. Do not put it off. You may forget it. Do it now. Out of the ten thousands of our membership, this poorer class can raise a thousand for the treasury and not be burdened by it. They would feel better.

And then, we look to those of more means, the well-to-do, the wealthy, those that have money at interest, money for which they have no use now, and may never have; money that you may see perish in the conflagration, without doing any good. Brethren, turn your cash into Norwegian converts, or converts among the poor and neglected ones, black and white, and in this way you can carry your money with you into the kingdom. This is a thought worth looking at, brethren and sisters. What you give you will save. What you keep you may lose. Better invest. One sinner saved to live with you in the kingdom of God will be the best investment. Will you make such an investment? The smallest gift may lead to the salvation of some soul, and larger gifts may save many.

We are speaking on a practical question. We are urgent. The body of Advent believers have placed us here to act for them. We must be faithful to our trust. We are doing all we can. Our missions are prosperous. God is with us. He has put the treasure into your hands, and is waiting for you to give. And now to the work, every one, and fill up the treasury. Let us show our faith in the soon coming of Christ by our works. Remember the Mission Tent should go into the field soon. It must go, but cannot go without funds. And then our Bro. must go to Norway, but cannot go without help. Our missionaries must be sustained, and they cannot be unless you give us the means. We do not fear that a people who have been so liberal hitherto, will fail us now.

NOTES BY THE WAYSIDE.

It has been about five or six months since I was converted under your preaching at the tent-meeting in Rochester, N. Y. A few days after I was baptized by you, I left for the South to proclaim the good news, of the coming kingdom, to the people of my native land. I have been in the highways and hedges ever since, feeling my way alone by faith, and laboring if by any means I might save some. I travel on foot, and go from house to house, warning people to flee from the wrath to come, and to prepare to meet the Lord Jesus, who is soon coming; thanking God as I go that I have been permitted to see this light, even in the eleventh hour, and have yet a small space of time to show my love for my blessed Master.

I journeyed from New York to Maryland. In Baltimore I received a package of tracts sent by that dear, good brother, H. Pratt, who was the first to give me light on the prophecies. May the Lord abundantly bless him, and fill his crown with stars. I also went to Washington, D. C., and Richmond, Va. At Richmond my tracts and money gave out, and I was left to grope alone, weary and wayworn, hungry and sore, without a place to lay my head. At this point in my experience my feelings can be better imagined than described. It is sufficient to say, I was left to examine myself thoroughly, and prove myself whether I was in the true faith, and was enabled to take fast hold of God and his promises, so that when the tempter came to me saying, "You poor fool, what do you look like now? You have traveled all this long distance, spent your money, taken cold by sleeping on the ground, and succeeded in making yourself a laughing-stock to all the people to whom you have distributed tracts. Now you had better go home and get yourself to a more useful employment, where you can be comfortable,"—I was enabled to say, "Get thee behind me." Father did not leave me long under the tempter, and when I came again into the light, I felt stronger in the Lord and in the power of his might. I see now that it is good for a man to be afflicted, for then he is led to deep searchings of heart, and of the law. I was led also to see our Lord's purpose in sending out the twelve apostles with a staff only. He wished them to go out trusting only in the Lord.

I went to Wilmington, N. C. From there to Charleston, S. C., and then on to Jacksonville, East Florida, where I met with Brn. Wilson and Smith, and spent about five days with them. These brethren rent a large hall, have large congregations, and very interesting meetings. Their mission seems chiefly to the whites, though all colors are invited. I passed the time very pleasantly, and having obtained a good rest, and renewed my stock of tracts, I left for Macon and Atlanta, Ga., at which place I received another package of your tracts sent me by that good man of God, R. W. Wilson. May the good Lord, for whom he is spending so much and laboring so hard, reward him a hundred-fold. I spent two days in Atlanta, and found the people very wicked. I distributed a large number of tracts with them. After packing my knapsack and satchel, to leave the place, I sent the remainder to Chattanooga. I stayed but a few hours in this place.

I visited the great cave at the Lookout mountain. I was told that it had been explored to the extent of half a mile. I left some tracts there, hoping they might do some one good. From this point I traveled the railroad, because the common roads were so wet and muddy. Found the country very mountainous between the Cave and Nashville. The people along this route are very poor and ignorant, and live in small, uncomfortable houses. Visited the home of one poor old blind saint, with whom I talked freely of the things of the kingdom. She said she loved Jesus, and was ready and waiting for his return. She wept like a child when I left her, and for my part I was almost equally sorry to part with her. When I came within fifty or sixty miles of Nashville, Tenn., I was overtaken by the cars, and the conductor, who had seen and become interested in some of my tracts, invited me to ride. As my stock of tracts had nearly run out, I accepted the invitation, though I must confess I did not feel very comfortable over it, as I was thinking all the while of the ground I had passed over. This conductor seemed deeply interested, confessed himself a sinner, and expressed his determination to leave the cars, go home, and lead a better life. I find very many all through these regions who are hungering and thirsting for knowledge on those subjects.

I only stopped for two days and nights at Nashville. While there I called on the Rev. D. Burt, Superintendent of Education for the State of Tennessee. I obtained some tracts of Bro. Robinson, and journeyed on my way to Memphis, where I arrived about the 20th of this month. I found Bro. Reed, Dr. Leslie, and Sister Northrup, hard at work, and seemingly prospering in their labors. The new building is nearly completed, and is the fruit of much self-denial, and I believe an offering of a sweet savor unto the Lord. The present place for meetings is filled to overflowing, and the congregations are increasing to that extent that we have reason to apprehend that even the new building will be too small. Sr. Prescott, of St. Louis, was here and spoke to our people last Lord's day. I was absent in the country, and thus lost the pleasure of hearing her; but returned in season to see the multitude in and around the house, and hear from our room some of the concluding exercises. The Sunday School and Band of Hope are increasing in numbers every day, and now consist, as near as we can tell, of about two hundred and fifty scholars. The church consists of about fifty or sixty members, and more are coming all the while. We have had two baptisms since I came, and others are waiting to follow their Lord under the water. The Spirit is evidently here, and we see its fruits in glorious good meetings. I think we have the best meetings I have attended since I left Rochester, N. Y. There is a great field here for labor.

Memphis seems to be a central point, from which the light and the truth can be made to emanate to all the regions beyond. This is one reason why I have remained here so long, making this my home, and going into the country around, as time and circumstances will allow. The dedication is expected to come off the eleventh of April, and we are hoping to see then, not only Bro. Himes, but Bro. and Sr. Mansfield and Sr. Prescott. We are expecting to put Bro. Reed's big tent in front of the new house, and draw in a large part of the town and surrounding country. How I wish you could be here and preach one of your rich gospel sermons. Well, perhaps I may see you sometime, even here, if time should continue, as I think now of making this the central point of a large circle of a hundred miles, more or less, wherein I intend, God helping me, to scatter tracts, and preach from house to house the coming of the Lord. Pray for me, that my faith fail not.

Please let my friends know that my P. O. address, for the present, is Memphis, Tenn., care of Dr. Leslie, Box 634.

I would like to state here that in my travels through all the South, I have ever found, here and there, inquiring minds upon whose ears these great truths fell like rain upon the thirsty ground; men and women who are willing to dig for wisdom as for hid treasure. I think that such might, under favorable circumstances, become radiating points, sending out the light and the truth all over the South. Now who is there among our friends in the North, who is instructed in the word, and willing to communicate, who would be willing to be placed in communication by way of corresponding with such persons, who would be willing to be at a little expense and trouble for the sake of disseminating these great truths, and being the favored instrument for sending these truths into these benighted regions. If there are such, let them send me their P. O. address, and I think it will not be long before I can supply them with a correspondent who will gladly receive and impart to others all the light they may be able to gain. May God help us.

I really think if the Advent people would write to such persons as I might send their names, it would do much good, and also add to the circulation of the paper, and perhaps be the means of saving many souls. If each subscriber of your paper would add one to the list, how the news would abound. So there is a work for us all, even by the fireside, if we will do our duty by resisting the tempter.

STAR OF HOPE MISSION.

BRO. GRANT:—I wish to say through the Crisis to those who have sent me money, or any thing else, and have not heard from me through the Crisis, or otherwise, will you please send me word where it was sent, as near the date as possible, and from what office and State it was mailed? I find on this tour that a great many have sent me letters that I have not received. We have changed letter carriers, but whether the fault is there or some where else we must ascertain. Will you all please write to me immediately. I suppose the many letters that came in January have been a temptation to somebody; and if you will all write to me, who wrote as far back as the first of October, 1867, I will try to find out what has become of the letters. Please say how much was in the letter, and what it was to be used for.

Again, I would say to those that are sending, you had better send it in post-office orders. It is a little more trouble, but I would rather have the trouble than to lose the letters. Please write immediately.

THE DORCAS MISSION.

Receipts. Anna 5 cts, and Bennie 50 cts.; North Scituate, $1.00; Clarissa Bidwell, $1.50; Quidnick, $2.00; M. J. P., $2.00; brother pilgrim, $2.00; May heaven's continued favors abide with these dear friends for their kindness unto us. Hachaliah Bailey, $7.00; J. B. Cook, $10.00; J. W. Sherman, $10.00; and J. G. Hook (since he has been in this city,) $21.17. May the Lord abundantly reward these ministers of his word for their liberality.

From Bro. Gresty, a barrel of potatoes; from Haddonfield, a half barrel of potatoes, turnips, dried peaches, and a pound of butter; from friends in Acushnet, Mass., a box filled with new garments, quilt, etc., and $5.00 from Bro. A. White; and from Bristol, Conn., a beautiful eight-day time-piece for our school room.

For all these benefits, we return our heartfelt thanks, and we pray that the Lord may prosper all these friends spiritually and temporally. All the inmates of the Home are well. Sr. Helen Robertson has given herself to the work here, and is matron, and is, we believe, qualified for the place by nature, by grace, and by experience in the past in the same kind of labor. Pray for us.

Yours in Christ, F. H. BURBANK.

TRUTH.

"Buy the truth, and sell it not."—PROV. 23: 23.

These words were spoken by the wise man many hundred years ago, yet none the less important to-day than they were at the time they were first stamped upon the sacred page of holy writ. That which he wished us to "buy" he considered of too much value to sell; hence we see that the king prized it above gold, or silver, or the honors or pleasures of this life. This is in itself small, though possessed of great power, as will be found by examining its nature. In the first place we will ask, What is truth? David in the Psalms says, "thy (God's) law is the truth." Again he says, "All thy commandments are truth." The Savior also in his prayer for his apostles tells us what truth is. "Sanctify them through thy truth, thy word is truth."

Since God is all powerful, it follows that his word, which is truth, has its power also. The apostle Paul in his epistle to the Hebrews declares God's word to be "quick and powerful." It has its durability as well as its power. In the one hundredth Psalm, fifth verse, we read that His truth endureth to all generations;" and in the one hundred nineteenth, "Forever, O Lord, thy word is settled in heaven." Peter also in his first epistle, 1 chap. 25th verse, tells us that the "word of the Lord endureth forever." Matt. 24: 25, "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my word shall not pass away."

Having dimly seen the importance that attaches itself to the word of God, let us inquire something in relation to that word. Is it anything that concerns our well-being in any way, and if so in what respect? In the first chapter of Genesis, we have an account of the creation. "God created the heaven and earth, and all things therein." The last work of his hand was man. On him he conferred a great honor, by creating him in his own image.

But let us pass briefly to see what next we may learn from God's truth in relation to this last wonderful work of his. God having already prepared a beautiful garden for him, placed man in it to dress it, and to keep it; at the same time giving him a command,—"That of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat; but of the tree of knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it; for in the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." But the serpent beguiled the woman with the words "Ye shall not surely die." Man, we are told, partook of the forbidden fruit, thus bringing himself under the penalty —death. The Lord saw it and said, "Behold, the man is become one of us to know good and evil; and now, lest he put forth his hand, and take also of the tree of life, and eat, and live forever; therefore the Lord God sent him forth from the garden of Eden, to till the ground from whence he was taken. So he drove out the man; and he placed at the east of the garden of Eden, cherubims and a flaming sword, which turned every way, to keep the way of the tree of life."

We have learned from God's truth that we are sinners doomed to death. Can we find in his word a remedy for sin? If so, we may take courage, for God's word is truth. 1 Cor. 15: 21, 22, "For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the deah. For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." Life, then, which was lost by man's disobedience, is regained in Christ who suffered death for us; "that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life." The terms are simple and easy,—only believe. Yes, that word believe is one that comes to us laden with good. God's promises, which are full of joy and peace, if believed, are all truth, and will stand forever, as we have found from the testimony of his people. Do we believe this? It is no difficult matter to admit theoretically a truth; but the question is are we willing to buy it? Do you say, how can I purchase it if it is of too much value to sell? Ah! here is the question. Let us look for a moment for an answer. There is only one place to purchase truth, and only one thing to purchase with. We have already found that the truth belongs to God; then he is the one to go to for it. All that he asks for it is the heart. "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness." "In the day thou seekest me with all thine heart, I will be found of thee." Reader, do you believe this? It is God's truth to you and me. Come let us go to him now, without money and without price, and "buy the truth and sell it not." MARY TRYON.

Correspondence.

From Bro. A. D. Flagg.

BRO. GRANT:—I have been thinking perhaps the readers of your valuable paper would be pleased to hear how the work of the Lord is progressing in this city. He is doing a good work. Some eight or ten have already acknowledged that the doctrine we advocate looks more plain and simple than any they ever heard before. Some have said, "I do believe," and have manifested that acknowledgment by asking the prayers of God's dear children, and to be baptized. I intend one week from next Sabbath to commence a Sabbath School, if the Lord will, and I can raise a little money to buy books. Some fifteen children have volunteered, five of whom are Presbyterians, and three are Roman Catholics. All I want in order to carry on a good work in this ungodly city is a little means, and that I know will come from some quarter, for our Father is rich.

Soon Jesus will come and crown us with eternal life. Let us be ready to hail that glad day. Let us bear the burden and heat of the day a little longer. Let us fight the battle of the Lord manfully, and then we will sing the new song,—"Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals thereof; for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation, and hast made us unto our God kings and priests; and we shall reign on the earth."—Rev. 5: 9, 10.

Jersey City, N. J. A. D. FLAGG.

From Bro. P. A. Smith.

BRO. GRANT:—We closed our meetings and left Lake City last Tuesday, Mar. 31st, holding meetings every evening but two, and three times on Sunday, with the exception of omitting two services for the purpose of hearing the Bishop of the Methodist Conference, which was in session, supposing that he would give his people some light on the immortality of the soul; but he said nothing. The people thought it very strange that twenty or thirty preachers should get together in conference, and do all they could in a private way to keep the people away from our meetings, by saying it was heresy and a very dangerous doctrine, and yet never take up the subject and prove by the Bible that it was so.

The other meeting we attended was a discourse delivered by a Mr. Moore, a school-teacher, who I understood had preached some. He thought we were teaching unsound doctrine, and if none of the other ministers would overthrow it, he would try and see what he could do. The time and place were appointed, and all the ministers, and others that were that were opposed to the truth, as we set it forth, rallied around him, and made quite a display in filling the pulpit with ministers, one praying, another giving out the hymn, and all saying by their actions, We have got our artillery loaded, and we will blow by the breath of Mr. Moore, our mouth-piece, this doctrine that is turning the world upside down to the four winds. He commenced reading what he had, but who wrote it I do not know. But, by the way it was put together, I should think quite a number of persons had a hand in the composition; for I do not see how one man could think of so many hard names as he applied to us, to prejudice the people. But it did not do what he expected it would. He held forth in the Presbyterian meeting-house. And the Mayor of the city, Mr. Ives, went to those who let Mr. Moore have the house, and requested them to let me have the house, in which to reply to Mr. Moore, but they refused. So I had to reply in the Court House; but it was not large enough to hold near all of the people. But the verdict of the people, who heard both sides of the question, was, that Mr. Moore made a perfect failure. The truth was triumphant, thank the Lord, and was made to shine brighter by comparing it with error.

The result of our meeting in Lake City is glorious. I baptized eleven, and there are more who would have been if we could have staid longer. We organized a church of seventeen members, and had the Lord's Supper. There are others who are with us in heart and hand, but belong to the churches. There are with us post-office proprietors, lawyers, doctors, merchants, hotel keepers, and more professional men interested in this truth than I ever saw before in the same number of inhabitants. The country around Lake City for twenty miles are imploring us to come and preach to them. They come in and hear one discourse, and say they never heard any preaching before. It almost broke my heart to hear them plead for us to come and preach in their neighborhood. There is no better place on this sin-cursed earth where consecrated, devoted preachers can do more good than in the South. God have mercy on the people, and give them this truth, is my prayer. P. A. SMITH.

BRO. GRANT:—As many are wondering at my silence of late, and are construing it into a lack of faith in our special nearness to the end, I wish to state through the Crisis that ill health has kept me silent. I have not preached a sermon for about three months, nor could I write much. Fear I shall not be able to do much for some time to come. Early in the winter I prostrated myself by laboring to excess with a cold on my lungs, and I have narrowly escaped quick consumption. In addition to this, nearly two months ago I had a tumor cut out of the cartilage of my left eye; but being unable to cut it all out, my physician made too free an application of caustic to eat it out, and the caustic nearly ate through the ball of my eye. I am still deprived of the use of it, and the other is affected by sympathy; so I can write but a little. I am also much affected with palpitation of the heart, and nervousness, so that I get but little sleep except under the effect of medical remedies. Hope warm weather will help me. My friends will please address me hereafter at Brodhead, Green Co., Wis., as my address is changed. How I want to be giving the cry, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh." WM. SHELDON.

Baraboo, Wis., April 7th, 1868.

A PREACHER writes, March 26th:—"I like the Crisis very much, and should feel sad if I had to give it up. My name is recorded with the United Brethren. I am a local preacher in that body. I am with you on the time when Jesus will come. I cannot find in the Bible the evidence that man is an immortal being, only by and through Christ. There are but few here who stand with us in the defense of the great truths of the Bible; but the more I read your paper the better I like it, it is so full of the Spirit of Christ, I should like to enjoy some meetings with you."

CORRECTION.—In an article I wrote some time ago, relating to my labors in Charleton, Mass., it reads nine were baptized; it should read three were baptized.

Your Bro. in Christ, GEO. A. STREETER.

PREACHING IN THEATRES.—We are glad that all the world is not fascinated with the novelty of hiring theatre buildings for the use of popular preachers. The New York papers state that Theodore Cuyler preached in the Academy of Music building and "emptied his own church," i. e., took his congregation with him. At another time Beecher did the same thing. The Christian Era inquires: "What is gained by this process but to familiarize young men with the way to the pit, give them a sight of the play-house, and make them have a desire to go to the same place to see the "Black Crook" or some other satanic play?" The Examiner and Chronicle on the same matter says: "How much is gained to the cause of truth and regular Sabbath services by shutting up well appointed and large churches, or what amounts to the same thing, emptying them and hiring a theatre at an expense of over one hundred dollars a night is a problem that prudent christians will by and by solve."

THE NEW FASHIONS IN HAIR.—A number of wealthy and fashionable ladies of New York city, who have been in the habit of using hair dyes for the purpose of coloring their hair, have become convinced that the use of many of these compounds is highly detrimental to the health, in many instances causing the most deplorable consequences, such as dimness of sight, intense headache, vertigo, etc. These ladies have decided to wear their hair gray, and we learn that gray hair is fast becoming fashionable, and is held by dealers at double the price asked for other colors. As high as $40, and even $75 have been paid in that city for a very small bunch of gray hair.

BABYLON.

Babylon stood on a large plain, in a very fat and rich soil. The walls were in thickness eighty-seven feet, in height three hundred and fifty feet, [authors differ as to the height of the walls,] and in compass sixty miles. These walls were drawn round the city in the form of an exact square, each side of which was fifteen miles in length, and all built of large bricks cemented with bitumen, a glutinous slime arising out of the earth of that country, which binds much stronger and firmer than mortar itself.

In every side of this great square, were twenty-five gates; that is, one hundred in all, which were all made of solid brass. From the twenty-five gates in each side of this great square, went twenty-five streets, in straight lines to the gates, which were directly over against them, in the opposite side; so that the whole number of the streets was fifty, each fifteen miles long, whereof twenty-five went one way, and twenty-five the other, directly crossing each other at right angles. The streets next to the wall were two hundred feet broad; the rest were about one hundred and fifty. The whole city was cut out into six hundred and seventy-six squares, each of which was two miles and a quarter in circumference. The houses were all three or four stories high, and beautified with all manner of ornament toward the streets. Babylon was greater in appearance than in reality, near one half of the city being taken up in gardens and other cultivated lands as we are told.

A branch of the river Euphrates ran quite across the city, from the north to the south side; on each side of which was a wall of the same thickness as the walls that went around the city. In these walls, over against every street that led to the river, were gates of brass. These gates were always open in the day-time and shut in the night.

There was also a bridge across the river, at the ends of which were two palaces. The old palace which stood on the east side of the river, was three miles and three quarters in compass; near which stood the temple of Belus. The new palace which stood on the west side of the river, opposite to the other, was seven miles and a half in compass. It was surrounded with three walls, one within another, with considerable space between them. In this last palace, were the hanging gardens. They contained a square of four hundred feet on each side, and were carried up in the manner of several large terraces, one above the other, till the height equaled that of the walls of the city.

Another of the great works of Babylon was the temple of Belus. A prodigious tower stood in the middle of it, six hundred feet in height. It is asserted that this tower much exceeded the greatest of the pyramids of Egypt in height.

Some authors believe that this is the very same tower that was built there at the confusion of the languages; and the rather, because it is attested that this tower was all built of bricks and bitumen, as the Scriptures tell us the tower of Babel was. —Ancient History.

Obituaries.

RICHARDSON. Died in New Market, N. H., March 8th, 1868, very suddenly, Lucy L., wife of M. D. Richardson, aged sixty-four years.

Sister R. remembered her Creator in the days of her youth. She gave her heart to God almost half a century ago, under the labors of Eld. Mark Fernald, in Kittery, Me. After her marriage she moved to Nottingham, N. H., where she joined the Freewill Baptist church, of which she remained a member until her death. When the light of Jesus' soon coming shone upon her pathway, she embraced the blessed hope, and walking in the light with her husband, waited for her Lord. On the Sunday morning of her death she appeared to be enjoying her usual degree of health, and got ready and went to the nine o'clock prayer meeting at the F. Baptist church. She had been in her seat but a few minutes, when she was heard to make a slight noise, at the same time falling over and dying without a struggle. Thus suddenly did one fall who was beloved by all who knew her. She leaves a husband and four children, who deeply feel and mourn their loss. But there is hope in her death. Sister R. was buried from the F. B. church, where she died. The funeral services were participated in by the F. Baptist, Methodist, and Congregational ministers of New Market. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer from Isa. 25: 8, 9. "He will swallow up death in victory; and the Lord God will wipe away tears from off all the earth; for the Lord hath spoken it. And it shall be said in that day, Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him, we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation." GEO. W. BROWN.

LOCKE. Died in East Weare, N. H., Jan. 29th, 1868, Bro. George Frank Locke, aged twenty-four years and four months.

He sleeps in Jesus, in hope of a joyful resurrection to immortal life. Bro. Locke had been for years broken down in health, but for sometime past by strict attention to diet and habits of living, he had enjoyed a comfortable condition of strength and activity. Some over exertion in the previous autumn of 1867 left him unable to resist an attack of fever, to which he was exposed; and though he passed through this disease, yet consumption claimed him as its prey.

Bro. Locke was a frank, noble, generous-hearted, consistent christian, honored and beloved by many who were privileged to share his friendship. His death was peaceful and full of trust. A loved and loving wife, a widowed mother, and a sister, mourn his loss and wait with longing eyes "till the day break and the shadows flee away," when they expect to see his face in peace and joy once more. The multitude who gathered at his funeral listened attentively to the words of life proclaimed by the writer, who was assisted in the exercises by the Baptist minister, in whose church the funeral services were held. The stricken ones are commended to the widow's God and to the sympathies and prayers of his afflicted church. Their sorrows are but for a night; their joys will last forever. The parting is bitter, but the reunion will be exceeding sweet.

Though parted in this thick'ning gloom,
Yet we shall meet to part no more;
And shout, while rising from the tomb,
There's sunshine on the other shore.

H. L. HASTINGS.

DIXON. Sank quietly to rest, at Rocky Brook, R. I., March 28th, 1868, Sister Hannah C. Dixon, wife of Anthony Dixon, and daughter of deacon James Knowles, aged thirty-six years and eight days.

In early life she publicly avowed her determination to walk the christian's path. She sought the Savior and found him precious. She pursued a consistent course, never bringing a reproach upon the cause of Christ. As a wife she was an example of virtue. As a mother she ever sought the welfare of her own. When she saw "the dark, cold stream," and "with Jesus as leader, she could walk through the valley in peace." Hers was a holy triumph. The tempter fled, faith won the victory, looking forward "a little while" to the resurrection of the just ones, she calmly fell asleep. Words of comfort were spoken by Bro. Augustus Durfee, from Eccl. 8: 2.—"It is better to go the house of mourning than to go to the house of feasting.

MARSHALL. Fell asleep in Jesus, at his home near Delton, Wis., March 19th, 1868, Thomas Marshall, aged fifty years, two months, and nineteen days.

Our dear father was one of the old pioneers in the Advent cause. He died easily, so easily that

"We thought him dying when he slept,
And sleeping when he died."

To him death had no terrors, for he was at peace with all mankind and with his God. He used often to say to us, "It is nothing to die, if you are only conscious of your acceptance with God, and that you will have a part in the first resurrection; it is like going to sleep in the evening, and waking up in the morning." We have lost one of the kindest of parents, and the world an honest man.

R. MARSHALL.

PINCKNEY. Died in Victory, N. Y., Feb. 26th, 1868, Willie Pinckney, youngest son of Bro. and Sr. Pinckney, aged seven years.

Thus the enemy suddenly entered the peaceful and quiet home of kind parents and seven dear children, and tore from their fond embrace the joy of each heart. Many were melted in sympathy while witnessing that parting and tearful scene. How great a light, in the midst of darkness, is the hope of the coming of the Just One.

MRS. P. A. ANDREWS.

DELIVEN. Died in Exeter, R. I., April 1st, 1868, George Deliven, aged eighteen years.

The subject of this notice was baptised by Bro. E. Bellows four years ago, but has since wandered from the fold of Christ. In his last sickness, knowing his situation, he again sought Christ, and gave good evidence of his acceptance with him.

Shall we meet him in the morning,
When Christ's voice shall wake the dead;
Shall we meet and greet each other
Where no farewell tear is shed?

EDWIN R. WOOD.

WHITNEY. Died in Grafton, N. H., Feb. 20th, of diphththeria, Anna Bell, aged four years and six months.

March 6th, of same disease, Mary J., aged eight years, daughters of widow Joseph Whitney.

In the decease of a husband and three dear children within a few years, our sister is deeply afflicted. She needs the sympathy and prayers of the faithful in her behalf. The promises are hers, and she finds grace sufficient. A. H. MARTIN.

HAMBLIN. Died in East Boston, Feb. 18th, of scarlet fever, Lucy H. Hamblin, daughter of Bro. Eli Hamblin, aged three years.

Lucy was a dear sweet child, and far ahead of her years, and was the idol of the household. She sleeps quietly, and if faithful a little longer, father, mother, and children will meet on the other shore, where death cannot enter. The writer tried to comfort the mourners with "these words": 1 Thess. 4: 18. A. P. MOORE.

WHITTEN. Died in Freeport, Me., March 7th, 1868, Alfred, son of Bro. Joshua and Sister Elizabeth Whitten, aged twenty-seven years.

Friend Alfred was a worthy young man, beloved by all who knew him; industrious, active, kind, and friendly to all; few will be more missed than him. May the Lord sustain and comfort the deeply afflicted parents and surviving children, and bring them all at last to that land, where there shall be no more death. R. R. YORK.

Married.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable Dispatches.

PARIS, April 12. The Moniteur to-day publishes the official report made to the Emperor by Minister Pinard, in which an account is given of the military changes which have been made since the bill for the reorganization of the army has gone into operation, and of the effect which they have had upon the country. The Minister states that all the reforms introduced into the Guarde Mobile, in accordance with the provisions of that bill, are now completed, and he asserts that these changes have been received with popular applause almost everywhere throughout the empire. He contradicts the reports of dissatisfaction, and declares that the new army law is sustained and defended by the patriotism of the French people, who thus give a new proof of their confidence in the Emperor.

LONDON, April 13. Official dispatches from Gen. Sir Robert Napier, in command of the Abyssinian expedition, have been received by the Government. They show that, in spite of bad roads, the British forces are steadily advancing toward Magdala, and meanwhile there is every evidence of the intention on the part of the King of Abyssinnia to offer serious resistance. Gen. Napier, in his latest dispatch, dated near Lake Ashanga, March 17, says: "Our advance will reach Lake Ashanga to-morrow. The rear, with the artillery and supply trains, is three days' march behind. The country is mountainous and very difficult for artillery and trains. King Theodorus is near Mugdala, where he intends to make a stand. Letters from the captives say they are well. The health of the troops is good." The effective force under Gen. Napier, now advancing on Magdala, numbers 3600 men.

DOMESTIC.

Ottawa, C. W., April 7. Hon. T. D' Aarcy McGee was assassinated at the door of his lodging in Queen's Printer's Building, after leaving the House of Commons this morning at half-past two.

He was shot through the back of the head by some one standing near him, and fell dead on the sidewalk, leaving his latch key in the door. No trace of the assassin has yet been discovered.

The authorities are on the alert. He had left the house with one or two members and parted with them a few yards from the house. He was all alone, therefore, with the assassin.

Portsmouth, N. H., April 9. Quite a severe shock of an earthquake was experienced here this morning at twenty minutes past two o'clock. Several families were aroused and frightened. Horses in stables and dogs in yards gave the first intimation of alarm. At New Castle, Newington, New Market, Epping, Candia and other towns in this vicinity, the shock was felt.

Reprimand of the Rev. H. Tyng, Jr.

Mr. Tyng was lately tried for the offence of preaching in a Methodist pulpit, contrary to the canon law of the Episcopal church. He was condemned to receive a reprimand from the Bishop, which was given. At the close of the services the friends of Mr. Tyng murmured their dissatisfaction at the proceedings, and were becoming boisterous, when a number of police who were present informed them that no such conduct would be allowed. The congregation then dispersed. After the audience left, the Rev. Dr. Tyng, father of the respondent, advanced to the altar and placed in the hands of the Bishop a protest, in which he brands the "whole proceeding, from its commencement to its conclusion, as false in its allegations, unjust in its principle, uncanonical in its form, illegal in its transactions, iniquitous in its purpose, and voluntarily and persistently persecuting in its spirit, process, and development." He also appeals to "the Supreme and final decision of the General Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States."

THE TYNG CASE. Rev. Stephen H. Tyng, Jr., has written the following letter to Bishop Potter since submitting to the admonition of the Bishop:

"CHURCH OF THE HOLY TRINITY, }
New York, March 11, 1868. }

Right Rev. and Dear Sir: I have now silently suffered all that the ecclesiastical authorities of this diocese have desired to inflict. Notwithstanding the allegation of your address, I affirm, without fear of disproval, that from the beginning to the end of my trial I have neither in my pulpit, before the public, or through the press, argued, still less agitated, the issues involved. I should, however, be false to candor and my independence as a presbyter and a man, did I not now take some notice of the ignominious ceremony to which I have, in submission to your request, been subjected, and the prolonged admonition and argument to which I have listened from your lips.

So soon as my Lenten engagements will permit, I purpose to present, both to yourself and the public, a full and frank review of the whole proceedings, including the language of your sentence.

The church which you chose as the scene, the presence of the city police, the clergy whom you selected as witnesses, the religious services which introduced and completed the exercises, your positive and rude refusal to receive the protest of my venerable and reverend counsel and father—all these were adapted, if not intended, to aggravate the attempted disgrace.

That there may be no reasonable ground for misunderstanding, previously to the preparation of the observations to which I have already referred, I desire now, and in full consciousness of the responsibilities which it may entail, solemnly to protest against the whole course, conduct and conclusion of the ecclesiastical trial in which I have appeared as repondent. I hold it, as in duty bound, to have been equally opposed to the principles of the common law, the canons of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and the doctrine and discipline of Christ as this church hath received the same. I absolutely deny its regularity and renounce its authority.

From its unjust presentment, oppressive rulings, predetermined decision and insinuating censure I appeal to the general judgment of the Protestant Episcopal Church, to the impartial review of the other christian churches of this land, to the word of the living God and to Jesus, the chief shepherd and bishop of us all.

Your servant in the church,

STEPHEN H. TYNG, JR."

☞ Rome is to be stripped of French troops, who are under orders to return home. Can it be that they are about to be actively employed in some other foreign country? Napoleon III. talks as if he were the most peaceable of peaceful men, but Alfred Tennyson once said of him, with more truth than politeness, that the devil only knows what he means,—that is to say, only his Satanic Majesty knows his Imperial Majesty's mind.—Boston Journal.

☞ The destitution is said to be very great in various parts of South Carolina. It is stated that there is great distress in the neighborhood of Marion Court House; and that, unless help comes soon from some source, starvation will result. One or two persons have already died of starvation in that neighborhood, and the destitution is said to be about equally divided between the whites and blacks.

☞ The Easter festival in Rome this year will be more than usually brilliant. Easter day falls upon the 12th April, the anniversary of the return of Pius IX. to Rome, after the capture of the city by the French. This anniversary is always celebrated by great popular fetes, and its concurrence with Easter day will render the occasion something equivalent in solemnity to the Centenary festival.

☞ It is expected sixteen thousand European converts to Mormonism will this year be brought over, principally by the aid of the Perpetual Emigration Fund, by means of which so many thousands have heretofore been brought from Europe. The parties agreeing to repay the cost of transportation and subsistence to the fund.

☞ At Toulon, in France, a school has been established on board an old frigate, for the study of torpedoes. Experiments are to be made in the harbor. All the five great French naval ports, Brest, Cherbourg, L'Orient, Rochefort and Toulon, are now defended by gigantic sunken torpedoes, which can be exploded in a second, by electric wires.

☞ The original London pippin tree in Virginia has borne from forty-five to seventy-five bushels of apples each year for the past eighty years, and it was known eighty years ago as an old tree.

☞ Since trees have been planted in Egypt they are beginning to have rain. A country will produce more food if one fourth is covered with forest than if the whole is cultivated.

☞ Philadelphia claims to be the greatest manufacturing city in the world, except London. In 1866 the factories there produced over two hundred million of dollars' worth of staple goods.

☞ If a pound of hay is wasted per day to each of twenty-five head of cattle, it will amount to nearly two tons loss during the winter.

☞ There is an awakening among the Second Adventists of Minneapolis. Mr. Fassett is doing a great and good work.

☞ Destitution still prevails to an alarming extent in some sections of Nova Scotia.

☞ Western papers state, and profess to believe, that the bloodiest Indian war on record will be commenced about the middle of April.

☞ England is ordering home her sailors, from fear of the occurrence of an American war.

☞ Would to God that all the party names and unscriptural phrases and forms which have divided the christian world were forgotten, and that we might all agree to sit down together as humble, loving disciples at the feet of our common Master, to hear his word, imbibe his spirit, and to transcribe his life in our own.—John Wesley.

☞ Many who would not for the world utter a falsehood, are yet continually scheming to procure false impressions on the minds of others respecting facts, characters, and opinions.

Notices.

Notice.

The Conn. Second Advent Christian Conference will hold its second quarterly session at Bristol, commencing Wednesday, April 22d, at 7½ P. M. Come, brethren and sisters, from the North, East, South and West. Come praying. Come prepared to work for the Lord. Will all the preachers come? We want to see you all. Will the churches send delegates? See to it immediately. Let those who want the missionary to come and labor in their vicinity, come and state their case. Let us make a united effort to get the present truth preached in every school district in Connecticut.

B. ST. JOHN, Sec.

Notice.

In obedience to a resolution passed by the Advent Christian Church, of this city, at their last monthly meeting, held on the evening of the 3d instant, I write to say that preaching brethren from other parts of the country, who wish to give us a call and help in the work of the Lord, by preaching to the people in our place of worship, are requested to correspond with the Secretary of the church, JAY FRANCIS, Secretary, 64½ West Lake Street.

For the World's Crisis.

AWAKE.

World, awake!
From thy dream of guilty slumber;
Look on Him who once was slain;
Lo! He comes, the "great and glorious,"
Over death and hell victorious,
Comes upon the earth to reign.

Can we sleep?
Rather, far, to wake and weep,
And we see the angel stand
Saying, "time shall be no more."

Dare we wait?
Soon, alas! 't will be too late,
The wicked shall be wicked still;
But those who love the Lord shall stand
With that happy, blood-washed band
That soon shall rest on Zion's hill.

Soon life's night
Shall be lost in endless light,
All earth's gloom shall roll away;
Sun, thy liquid gold shall fail,
Moon and stars, your splendors pale
In the glory of that day.

Even now
On the mountain's rugged brow
We discern the morning star;
Mourner, dry your bitter tears,
Lo! a golden gleam appears,
Streaming o'er the heavens afar.

Soon its light,
Scattering every trace of night,
Shall be seen on land and wave,
And from heaven the wondrous sign
Of the Son of God shall shine,
Telling that he comes to save.

We can see
All the lines of prophecy
Swiftly drawing to a close.
World, thy triumph soon shall end,
Christians, lo! your dearest friend
Comes, in Sharon's deathless Rose.

For the World's Crisis.

THE FRUIT OF THE SPIRIT.—No. 8.

"The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance; against such there is no law."—GAL. 5: 22.

TEMPERANCE.

Temperance is the last mentioned of the fruits of the Spirit, and the one which is the least preached, talked, and written about as such. Many do not know the meaning of the word as it is used here, and many do not consider it very important; but there is no grace so unimportant, and there is not one mentioned in the verse above that the Spirit will not bear if it is followed.

The word temperance in the original Greek does not mean simply a moderate use of every thing; it implies more than that. It is rendered in the Bible Union translation, "self-control." A man may be moderate in vice; that is, he may gratify his lusts however they may lead him, and if he does not indulge to excess he can defend himself with this text, if the word temperance here means only moderation. Many use intoxicating liquors as a beverage, and try to justify themselves by saying they are temperate in the use of them; but the word in the Bible will allow of no such construction. It signifies that principle which controls, not modifies, the sensual appetites and passions. In short, it means total abstinence from all indulgence of the appetites and lusts that is injurious to the person; and whoever gratifies his desires when he knows it will impair his health, is not biblically temperate.

There is no fruit the Spirit bears that is not positively necessary for our salvation. If it was as well for us to be intemperate, God would not make temperance one of the fruits of the Spirit. The Lord is not a selfish, unreasonable monarch, who, to glorify himself, requires useless self-denial of his followers; but a loving Father, who wishes nothing of his children but that which is for their most perfect happiness. Sometimes we cannot see why certain things are required, and have to walk entirely by faith, and do that which to our imperfect vision seems unreasonable; and sometimes we can see why we are told to do such and such things; and in this case, if we calmly look at cause and effect, we can see why the Lord wishes us to be temperate.

God has fixed laws that govern all creation; and the laws that govern the human system are as important and unalterable as those which control the heavenly bodies. The blood is formed from what is taken into the system, and the blood nourishes the brain, and of course if the blood is impure the brain will become diseased. The nerves centre in the brain, which is the organ of thought, and whatever affects the brain affects the whole nervous system. Is it reasonable to suppose that blood formed from grease and spices and rum and tobacco will form a clear, healthy brain? Every one knows that our minds and dispositions are affected by disease, and that one who is half-sick cannot enjoy life like one who has sound health.

Our spiritual and physical health are closely connected. There are many nervous, irritable individuals, who wish to be good, who cannot repress angry feelings and hateful thoughts; they cannot be long-suffering and gentle and patient. They read that the Lord is more willing to give the Holy Spirit to those that ask him, than earthly parents are to give good gifts to their children; and they read, "The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance." They ask for the Holy Spirit, and expect that, without their making an effort, it will take away the tendency to do wrong, and establish in its stead these fruits of righteousness; that it will change them from bad to good without any crosses or self-denial or giving up on their part. But the Holy Spirit seldom works that way. When Naaman went to Elisha to be healed, he supposed that by making an effort the disease would be taken away, and was surprised and angry when he was told to wash in the river seven times.

The Holy Spirit sometimes bears the fruits of righteousness by showing us what to do to produce these fruits. For instance, we may pray for meekness, and in answer to our prayer the Spirit may show us something to do which self and pride and love of the world forbid; but we obey and take up the cross, and by that cross are crucified to the world. If we could be saved without self-denial, nobody would object to being saved. It is the cross that keeps the multitude away.

There are many who have habits which they know are hurtful, but their appetites are so much stronger than their desires for holiness, that they will not give them up. I know many scolding, fretful, unhappy church members, whose nerves are in such a condition that the least thing will overthrow their temper and demolish their patience, who acknowledge that the use of tea, coffee and spices only aggravate their disease, but who will use them because they want to. They want salvation, but they want tea more.

There is nothing christians are so sensitive about as what they eat and drink. They forget the passage in the Bible that reads,—"Whether therefore ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." Those who are of the world have a right to eat, and drink, and do, and wear, any thing which will harm no one besides themselves; but those who have given themselves to the Lord have no right to do anything that cannot be done with an eye single to God's glory; have no right to defile or in any way misuse that which belongs to another. If a man should sell you a horse, and you should leave it in his care until you should call for it, has he a right to whip and drive and overwork that horse so that when you call for it it will not be worth half so much as it was when you bought it?

Every christian has a work given him that no one else can do. God has no idlers in his vineyard. Almost every one who is converted at once goes to work for sinners. His guilt and condemnation are gone, and in its place is peace and joy and love, and as a natural consequence he wishes the blessing he experiences to come upon others; so he tries to persuade others to forsake sin and find the happiness he enjoys. And from the time he is born a new creature, until his voice is hushed in death, his work continues. Christ spent his life in trying to benefit mankind, and his life was left a pattern for us to follow. If we can by denying self do more work for our fellow men, ought we not? A weak body and mind cannot perform the labor that a strong one can. And again, if forsaking habits that we consider harmless will extend and better our influence, should we not do as Paul did? Said he, "If meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth." If some of the preachers of this day were as conscientious about their tobacco as Paul was about his meat, there would be quite a reformation.

"He that's convinced against his will,
Is of the same opinion still";

and the Lord never convinces any one against his will. If any one wishes to know the Lord's will on any subject, he must give up his own will. A man whose constitution is broken down by late suppers, loss of sleep, and other irregular habits; whose mind is so enslaved by the use of tobacco, or rum, or opium, that he is good for nothing without it; and whose nerves are so unstrung that the most trifling thing will destroy his peace of mind, is hardly fitted to fight with Apollyon or giant Despair, or able to keep awake while passing over the enchanted ground. He will have hard work to keep in the path himself, to say nothing about his helping others. He who is in the water himself, and has to work and toil and struggle to keep his head above the water, is hardly in a condition to help his neighbor who is drowning; and a christian whose bodily health is such that his life is a constant warfare with impulses and passions that a healthy person knows nothing of, is not fit to work much for the salvation of others.

There are instances where the Lord has suffered sickness to come upon his children for purposes of his own, and what he gives to any one is for their best good, whether sickness or health; and often one whom God has thus afflicted is the instrument of doing a great deal of good; but when the Lord gives us health, he wishes us to take care of it. If a piece of timber falls upon a man's leg and breaks it, he is not responsible for the lost time and money and strength attendant upon the accident; he has only to trust in God and do the best he can; but if he sees the timber is liable to fall, and carelessly places himself in the way of it, he sins in not taking care of himself. It is this sin that James refers to when he says, "The prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up; and if he has committed sins they shall be forgiven him."

When the Israelites were journeying from Egypt to the promised land, part of the time they stood still, and part of the time they moved forward. They followed the cloud by day and the pillar of fire by night, and when that stopped they did, and when it advanced they followed it; and as the cloud guided them, so the christian may be guided now if he will. Sometimes he may have to stand still, and sometimes move; sometimes speak, and sometimes be silent; and if he is in a condition where he can feel the movings of the Spirit, he will know just when and how to move.

There is such a thing as being over zealous for the Lord. Sometimes the Lord's children forget that all their efforts will amount to nothing unless the Lord wants them to work. In their anxiety to see the cause of God prosper, they get the Lord's burden on their own shoulders and labor, when the Lord wants them to keep still and rest, and by overworking wear themselves out, and sink into a premature grave, when, had they followed the Spirit, they might have lived longer and performed much more labor. "The fruit of the Spirit is . . . . temperance," and whoever follows the Spirit will be temperate in all things, spiritual and temporal, mental and physical; will look upon himself as belonging to God, and do nothing but what he can by doing glorify his Father. O, let us obey in all things, and grieve not the Holy Spirit by which we are sealed unto the day of redemption; and which bears the fruits of "love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance." S. K. PAINE.

THE PATTERN.

The Lord shall come in great power," according to the glorious pattern which was shown Peter on "the holy mount." The Savior had said to them that there were some standing with him who should not taste of death till they should see the Son of man coming in his kingdom, or behold a pattern of what he should be when he came in his kingly glory. "For the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father, with his angels, and then shall he reward every man according to his works." The Savior here refers to the anticipated blessings of this kingdom, and the certainty of reward according to works, as a motive to severance from worldliness; for he had just said, "What is a man profited if he gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?" and, consequently, his place in the glories of that kingdom, a specimen of which he was just about to exhibit?

Accordingly, "after six days he taketh Peter and James, and John his brother, and bringeth them up into a high mountain apart, and was transfigured before them; and his face did shine as the sun, and his raiment was white as the light." "And behold, there appeared unto them Moses and Elias talking with him." Matthew 16: 26-28; 17: 1-3. Here, then, was a sample of "his coming," and of his power and majesty when he comes. And how will people make such a kingdom to be within us? How shall we put the glorified body of the Savior within us, and Moses and Elijah, who stood with him as types of the first resurrection and translation, and Peter and James and John, as types of christians in the flesh, who will behold him and his glorified ones at his coming?

And what a contracted and selfish view it is to make ourselves the seat and centre of the kingdom, as if Christ's paramount object was to glorify us! According to this pattern, his own person is the great centre of radiation. If we are radiant at all, it is by reflection from "his face," which did "shine as the sun," with brightness sufficient to illuminate all within its sphere. No wonder that "the moon shall be confounded, and the sun ashamed," when he shall "come in the brightness of his majesty."—Prophetic Times.

A FALSE TEACHER A WOLF IN SHEEP'S CLOTHING.

"Many deceivers are entered into the world."

Hear him preach? What for? Beware! How can you, how dare you thus bid him God speed? What! hear a slave to lust, of appetite and passion, the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eye, and the pride of life, hold forth from the sacred desk! "Dearly beloved, I beseech you as strangers and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts, which war against the soul."—1 Pet. 2: 11. Again, sit under the sound of a foolish talker and jester, a writer of novels, romances, silly love tales? an advocate of worldly amusements, of conforming to the world in dress and equipage? "Ye adulterers and adulteresses, know ye not that the friendship of the world is enmity with God? Whosoever therefore will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God."—James 4: 4. "If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." Once more: listen to the voice of one from the holy of holies, who places the religion of "bumps," the infidelity of Gall, Combe, Spurzheim and Shakespeare, next to the Bible! Shocking! blasphemous! Run! RUN!! flee! escape for your LIFE! Shake off the dust of your feet.

Reader, what numbers, think you, are rushing on to perdition through the instrumentality of these licentious writers? And here is a popular teacher in Israel, a man in sacerdotal garb, having the impudent, blasphemous assurance of placing next to the Bible these mischievous, infidel, corrupting, soul-damning authors before the public, in the pulpit and out of it, unblushingly! Shameful! "Some men's sins are open beforehand, going before to judgment; and some men they follow after. Likewise also the good works of some are manifest beforehand; and they that are otherwise cannot be hid."—1 Tim. 5: 24, 25.

Cross your threshold to listen to such a man? Pollute the gospel of Jesus with lips and hands thus defiled? hands dropping with the blood of souls? We say again, friends, beware lest ye be partaker of his evil deeds, his awful blood-guiltiness! Hear the Eternal speak—the Omnipotent: "If there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, neither bid him God speed; for he that biddeth him God speed is partaker of his evil deeds." "If any man love not the Lord Jesus Christ, let him be Anathema, Maran-atha." "There be some that trouble you, and would pervert the gospel of Christ. But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed. As we said before, so say I now again, If any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed."—Gal. 1: 8, 9. "And he said, Take heed that ye be not deceived; for many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ; and the time draweth near; go ye not therefore after them."—Luke 21: 8. "Woe to the pastors that destroy the sheep." Jer. 23: 1. Woe! woe!! woe!!! "For, behold, the day cometh that shall burn as an oven, and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble; and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch."—Mal. 4: 1. D. F. NEWTON.

CHRIST CRUCIFIED AFRESH.

"They cried out, away with him, away with him, crucify him, crucify him."—JOHN 19: 15.

If the crucifixion scene, enacted by the chosen people of the Father, was horrible and heart-rending, what must it be in this enlightened age? Who can imagine the depth of his anguish in beholding the same thing done by his professed friends? Angels can well look on in sorrow, and heaven be draped in mourning.

But what makes this thought doubly horrible is, that his most rabid enemies are those who profess to be his friends, and take the front rank with his people. They have a form of godliness, but deny the power thereof. They use the shadow of the cross in which to hide themselves, to pierce anew his side. But Satan whispers: "Who do you mean?" I mean the world-conforming, pleasure-loving, fashion-seeking, professed followers of Christ. If you, reader, are one of this class, I mean you. I say it with no feeling of personal animosity. But it is sin that I hate; and I feel woe to me if I withhold the counsel of God.

It was his enemies that crucified him eighteen hundred years ago. His enemies crucify him now. They are his enemies because they keep not his commandments. A man cannot love Satan and his works, and be a friend of Christ. He says: "If a man love me he will keep my words."—John xiv: 23. All possess an influence. That influence is either used for Christ, or against him. Therefore, Christ says: "By their fruits ye shall know them." This is an infallible rule which we must apply.

But one inquires: "How do we crucify Christ?" I reply: you crucify him in spirit by rejecting his commands, thus rejecting him, and casting your influence in favor of the devil. What intelligent, humble servant of Christ dare deny but the same spirit exists in the popular, world-conforming religion of to day that was possessed by those who crucified Christ eighteen hundred years ago? The minister, who professes to be the servant of the meek and lowly One, preaches to please the multitude. He takes the sacred desk; but does he rebuke sin? Ah, no! He smooths over the sins of his congregation, and delivering to them eloquent words of man's wisdom, he varnishes it up, and palms it off for the gospel of Christ. This gospel is not for the poor, for they have not the money to buy it. The right to hear the gospel is sold to the highest bidder. And the Devil sits by with grim silence, to see the Son of God again rejected, scoffed at, and crucified afresh. O, hypocrisy! where is thy shame?

Again the weekly sociable must be had regularly, where the world and the professed children of light (?) mingle together in joyous scenes of festivity. But the self denying religion of Jesus must not be brought here. If a faithful pilgrim should introduce it, he meets the scorn and contempt of all present. Christ is cast out from among them, again wounded and rejected.

The Devil whispers to them: "You must ornament your church, or the people will not come, and you will be left without support." Accordingly the church is put into the grandest style. A large debt is incurred. Satan again comes to the rescue. He says: "You must have a festival, and call upon the world to help, or your debt will overpower you." His suggestions are followed. Christ is again openly crucified. The festival comes, and with it all the modern expedients for raising money. Satan succeeds wonderfully well. Through this he introduces gambling to the young, with the sanction of the church. He scatters the seed broadcast that is sure to grow up thorns and briars in the Lord's vineyard. He links his dominion (the world) and the church together, and leads them on to ruin through the guise of popularity. Oh, shame on a religion that has to harness the Devil in to sustain it! It is an insult to Christ. It is a mockery of his promises. This practice already bids fair to surpass Rome's palmiest days, if time should last.

Oh, ye remnant that are treading the narrow way, purify yourselves even as he is pure. You cannot walk blameless with God, and participate in these soul-destroying corruptions of the church. These must be overcome. God says: "He that overcometh the same shall be clothed in white raiment; and they shall walk with me in white." Rev. 3: 5.—Glad Tidings.

PROPHESYING.

Does prophesying mean foretelling future events? It did once, but since the Apocalypse was written it has ceased, for it would be adding to that book, which is strictly prohibited. The testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy, and as prophets have a spirit (1 Cor. 14: 32), therefore those who address the church on prophecy are prophets. The two witnesses are called prophets. Paul calls the heathen poet Epimenides a prophet (Titus 1: 12). If any prophesy, let him prophesy according to the analogy of the faith (Rom. 12: 6). "He that prophesieth speaketh unto men to edification and exhortation and comfort." 1 Cor. 14: 3. "I would that ye all prophesied." "Ye may all prophesy one by one." "Let the prophets speak two or three, and let the other judge." If any man think himself a prophet or spiritual (1 Cor. 2: 15), let him acknowledge that the things I write unto you are the commandments of the Lord. "How is it, then, brethren? when ye come together, every one of you hath a psalm, hath a doctrine, hath a tongue, hath a revelation, hath an interpretation? Let all things be done unto edifying." "He that prophesieth edifieth the church." All these worketh that selfsame spirit, dividing to every man severally as he will. "The manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit."—1 Cor. 12: 7. "Despise not prophesyings."—1 Thess. 5: 20. IRA LAMB.

DEATH OF THE PROPHET ISAIAH.

There is a tradition which has found its way in some Gentile writings, that the evangelical prophet was put to death by sawing him asunder; but no one, as far as we could learn, has given the source whence they have derived it.

We give, therefore, our readers the passage in the Talmud, where it is found with the circumstances that were, according to that work, connected with, or caused his cruel death.

In Talmud treatise Yebamoth, folio 50, p. 2, it reads as follows: Rabbi Simeon, son of Asai, said, I have found in the Manuscript of Remembrance written of that man, the illegitimate; also a treatise of Rabbi Yacob who spoke little but pure and just, and there is also written that Mannasse—king of Judah—killed Isaiah the prophet. To this Rabah added: he—Isaiah—was regularly tried and sentenced to death.

King Manasse summoned Isaiah before his throne and said: "Moses thy master said in the book of the law (in the name of God,) 'For no man can see me and live' (Exod. 33.;) and thou saidst, 'And I have seen the Jehovah sitting upon the throne, high and exalted.' Again, Moses thy master said: 'Who is like Jehovah our God in all things we call on him,' which means that your God is ever near and ever ready to hear when called upon, while thou saidst, 'Seek ye the Lord when he is to be found,' which signifies that God is not always to be found, but only on certain stated times. Again, Moses thy master said: 'I will fill up the number of thy days,' that is to say, that God has numbered the days of every man, to which none can be added, and from which none can be taken away, and thou saidst to my father in the name of the same God, 'and I will add unto thy days fifteen years;' thou art, therefore guilty of death." Then said Isaiah to himself: "I could defend myself and put down his arguments with other passages, but I know the wicked king would not accept my defence, and put me to death notwithstanding. It is better, therefore, to let him commit the murder with a seeming justice, than arbitrarily."

Isaiah, however, was swallowed by a cedar tree; but Mannasse commanded the cedar to be sawn in twain, and the saw passed the mouth of Isaiah and he died. The prophet was punished because he said: "and I dwell among a people with unclean lips," therefore he was put to death by sawing his lips. "But," said one of the Rabbies, "how are these contradictions in Scripture which the king mentioned to be reconciled?" Said another, "Isaiah could have answered that Moses said in another place before, 'and they have seen the God of Israel,' let then Moses defend himself." Another said, "Our teachers have already reconciled these difficulties by saying, first, all the prophets have seen through a glass darkly; they thought, therefore, to have seen Jehovah, while Moses, who saw everything clear, knew that he did not, and could not see God. 2. God is always nigh and ready to hear when the congregation calls on him, and this is what Moses intended to say, while Isaiah spoke of the prayer of individuals, who have certain appointed times when to call on Jehovah, and that favorable times are during the ten days which intervene between the New Year and the Day of Atonement. 3. When Moses said, 'I will fill up the number of thy days,' it was on condition of obedience; when a man is good and obedient, his days are filled up, if not, they can be diminished." Other Rabbies said, "by obedience, the days of man can be prolonged; by disobedience, they can be diminished; to the days of the pious King Hezekiah, therefore, fifteen years were added."

This brief extract shows again how thoroughly and critically those ancient Rabbies have studied the Scriptures; but it did neither benefit themselves nor others; they swallowed camels and sifted gnats. Notwithstanding their great learning, the word of God was to them a sealed book, and therefore they could not find the Messiah in his humiliation in Moses and the prophets, and rejected Jesus of Nazareth, and this blindness continues to remain upon them unto this day.—The True Israelite.

A SERVANT OF CHRIST.

When the British sovereign issues a royal proclamation, she signs herself "Victoria, Queen of great Britain and Ireland." The martyr-President gave authority to the great edict of emancipation by subscribing himself "Abraham Lincoln, President of the United States of America." When the most influential man then living on the globe issued one of his inspired epistles, he commenced the document in these words, "Paul, a servant of Jesus Christ." This was his favorite title. It described him exactly. The original Greek word is a strong one—it signifies a slave, a bondmen; and Paul was the happy captive who cheerfully wore the easy yoke of his divine Master.

I imagine that there is some one among my readers who says, "I want to serve Jesus. How shall I do it? Give me my instructions, and tell me how I can be an efficient servant of him who died for me." My first answer to this question is, Keep your faith alive and active. Certain persons once asked the Savior, "What shall we do that we may work the works of God?" The reply of Jesus was, "This is the work, that ye believe on him whom he hath sent." You must heartily believe in Jesus. Give no heed to those men who flippantly scoff at "obsolete dogmas," and deride every thing in the form of a "creed." A creed simply signifies that which a man believes. You have got to accept this short Bible-creed, "believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved," or else you are not a christian. Without faith it is impossible to please God. Let your daily prayer be,—Lord! increase my faith!

2. A second duty I commend to you is, to dwell on the love of Jesus so constantly as to keep you thankful and cheerful. A fretful, scolding, morose "servant of Christ" is a disgrace to the name. When you encounter one cross, set over against it ten blessings. The more grateful you are, the more you will have to be thankful for. In the English collieries the same buckets that come down full go up again to be filled afresh; and, as God's bounties descend to your soul, let there be a continual uprising of your gratitude to him. Send up the line of buckets to be filled with new mercies. A servant of Jesus ought to be the happiest creature on the globe.

3. Deny yourself for Jesus. His own instruction to you is, "He that denieth not himself and taketh not up his cross for me cannot be my disciple." Christ, when on earth, "pleased not himself." That is, he did not indulge himself; and surely the servant is not above his Master, or the disciple above his Lord. A friend sends me a request this week to name a few simple rules for christian self-denial. I would specify the following as, in my judgment, the main points to be aimed at: Give up every thing that God's Word and conscience pronounce wrong. Give up whatever by its direct influence may injure others. This is the christian basis of total abstinence from intoxicating drinks. Give up whatever lowers or even endangers your religious influence. Give up whatever tends to pamper the passions and feed unholy desires. Give up everything, however attractive, that you can't afford.

4. Now, if you will practice on these principles of self denial, you will be able to perform the fourth duty of a good servant of Christ—and that is to give freely of your substance for christian charity. I have noticed that when a church member grows very profuse in his style of living, and spends extravagantly in self indulgences, he commonly becomes stingy toward the Lord. A genuine Christ-loving christian gives the key of his purse or his iron safe to his Master. When a dispute once arose in a company as to which had the finest hand, a lady shrewdly said, "The handsomest hand here is the one that gives the most liberally." I believe that a servant of Christ should systematically bestow in charity at least one-tenth of his annual income, and just as much more as he can afford without robbing others. I never knew of a child of God being bankrupted by his benevolence. What you keep you may lose; what you give to Christ you are sure to keep.

5. I need hardly say that the prime duty of a servant of Jesus is to work for him. Christ was a perpetual worker, and the servant is not above his Lord. The main talent that is required for this is a burning love of Jesus. The best worker I ever had in my church was a shy apprentice-lad of seventeen. He took hold of a dozen boys in the congregation, met them every Saturday night in a private prayer meeting, and labored with them until nine of the number were led to Christ! Pick out your place of labor—whether it be in the Sunday school, or in tract distribution, or in any post that you are best fitted for—and then stick to it. If your bed is in an out-of-the-way part of the garden, no matter. Christ is beside you there. The moment you think that you are too good for a place, then is the place become too good for you. Do not ask any one else to do your work for you; just as soon ask your neighbor to eat your dinner for you.

If you inquire for a "place to work in," I would answer—it is all place. When I see a minister of the gospel idling away his life in "waiting for a call," I usually conclude that the call he lacks is a call from God to the sacred office. Does a farm-laborer ever go over a whole hundred acres, and say to his employer, "I don't find a rod of fence to repair, or a single thistle or weed to pull up, or a single inch of ground to be plowed?" Pray, then, do not pretend that your Master has no place for you to toil in. Is the prayer-meeting in your church so crowded that you cannot get in, and the Sunday-school so full that there is not room for one more? and is Christ's work so thoroughly done in your town that he says to you, "I do not need any more servants; go your way to your farm or to your merchandise?"

My brother! opposite to your name on the church-roll stand these words: "Servant of Jesus Christ." Underneath it methinks I see a blood-stained hand write, "Occupy till I come. If thou art faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things." The night cometh in which you cannot work. Keep your hand to the plow until death loosens its grasp; and when the night comes on, you will find that the sleep of the laboring man is sweet.—Independent.

THE KINGDOM.

"Fear not, little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom."—LUKE 12: 32.

These are the words of the blessed Savior, and oh! how cheering to think that soon, if faithful, the kingdom will be ours. O to live and reign with Jesus and his saints forever and ever; no partings there, sickness, sorrow, pain, nor death. How blessed it will be. But do we realize what we should be, to be accounted worthy for an entrance into that blessed land? None but the pure and holy will ever enter those pearly gates. Jesus says, "Not every one that saith unto me Lord, Lord, shall enter the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." And we read in Rev. 22: 14, "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have a right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city."

If we love Jesus, we shall keep his commandments. Do we not love Jesus? He first loved us, and died that we might live. Yes, I know I love him, and by his help I'll keep his commandments, that when he comes I can enter those pearly gates with all of his dear saints, to live and reign forever. Jesus is coming soon, and I am so glad, for I want to see him. Truly I can say with the poet—

"This groaning earth is too dark and drear
For the saints' eternal home;
But the city from heaven will soon be here;
We know that the moment is drawing near,
When she in her glory shall come.

Her gates of pearl we soon shall see,
And her music we soon shall hear;
Joyous and bright our home shall be,
And we'll walk in the shadow of life's fair tree,
With our Savior forever near.

Dear young pilgrims, be faithful, and never be ashamed to stand up for Jesus. If you confess him here, before this world, he will confess you before his Father and the holy angels, when he comes. The Lord help you to be faithful to the end, that we may meet in the kingdom. AURILLA M. SALTMARSH.

LUCY'S NEW YEAR.

I am not a big girl yet, and my name is Lucy, but I have a dear, good aunt Maria, who always calls me Lulu. Last New Year's day she said to me, "My dear little Lulu, you are a good girl, but you have one great fault. If you would make it your business to correct that this year, I should feel that you had done a great thing."

"Well, auntie, what is my great fault?" I said.

"It is that you are sick so much. During this year I have been to visit your mother many times, and often I have found you so sick that you could not leave your room."

"But, my dear auntie, you don't think it my fault that I am sick, do you?"

"Well, if it is not your fault, it is somebody's fault. I am certain you need not be sick so much. You know that every time you are sick, your mother has to be up with you nearly all night, leaving baby to be taken care of by papa, which disturbs him. Then you have to be out of school three or four days, losing your lessons. All this disturbance comes because you are sick. Now if you could just as well avoid being sick as not, would you not think it selfish and wrong to be sick?"

"But," I said, "I cannot help being sick. I don't want to be sick, and you would not think I did if you knew how much pain I have to suffer when my sickness comes."

She said, "I used to be sick most of the time. I know now that the reason of it was because I did things that I ought not to have done. And since I learned how to live I am never sick. Now, Lulu, I feel sure if you lived rightly that you would not have such turns of sickness as you do. At any rate, if you want to grow good this year I think you can do nothing so useful to your papa and mamma as to try not to be sick."

I thought it was all strange, but I caught her round the neck, and said, "Well, auntie, if you will teach me how not to be sick I will thank you forever and ever! Tell me how, please." She told me then that if I would do one thing, which was never to eat anything except at my meals at the table, it would be a great help to me, "for," she says, "you are eating apples or nuts or candy or cakes or something all day long."

I thought it would be very hard not to eat between meals, for I was hungry so much, and I told her so.

"Oh! well," she said, "if you do not wish to do anything hard I cannot help you. It is not easy to grow good. I think you will fail if you expect to grow good by doing things easy and pleasant to be done."

I said, "I guess if Charley will promise to not eat between meals I can make it go. I should like to do something hard."

"Well," she said, "you talk with Charlie about it, and in the evening come up here and see me again."

I did not eat anything after that, all day, except at supper. It was pretty hard; but I felt as if it would be nice to do something hard on New Year's day. I told Charlie what auntie had said, and he said, "Well, Lu, if you would not be sick, I would not eat any thing till next New Year's. I cannot bear to hear you crying in the night when you are in so much pain."

When he told me that, I cried, for I thought if he was willing to go without eating to have me well, I ought to be willing to do so, if I was ever so hungry. Then he came to me and said, "Lu, you know that men and women have temperance meetings. Let us have a 'Good Health Meeting.' We will get all the children, and have a pledge, just as they do." So we went and got Fannie Stuart, and Joe and Ben and Clifton Greene, and all came up to see aunt Maria in the evening, and we told her what we were going to do, and she made a constitution for us, which said that for one year not one of us would eat anything except at our meals, and that we would be in bed every night at nine o'clock unless our fathers and mothers let us go to lectures or some meeting. It said, too, that every time we did sit up late or eat between meals, we should pay five cents to the society. Auntie said that "Good Health Society" would be a better name than "Good Health Meeting." And the constitution said, too, that every time one of us was sick we should pay ten cents. I tell you, I thought I should have to pay a good many ten cents, because I was always getting sick so much. But now, Mr. Putnam, I have not had to pay five cents this year. I have gone to bed every night at nine o'clock, and have not eaten once between meals. At first I was very hungry, sometimes; and sometimes when we had apples and cakes in the evening, I wanted them so much that I could not help crying. But Charlie helped me. He said, "don't you eat, Lu, and I won't," and I did not. What is better than all the rest, I have not had to pay one dime. I haven't been sick once this whole year. Now I am never hungry, and do not wish to eat except at meals. We don't get much money for the "Society."—Dr. Jackson.

A NICE HIDING PLACE.

A TRUE STORY.

One morning I went to my pleasant schoolroom, and found many vacant seats. Two little scholars who had been with us a few days before now lay cold in death, and others were very sick. The diphtheria had entered our village and our school. The children were weeping bitterly as I went in, and some of them ran quickly to me, saying: "O teacher! Minnie and Georgie are dead. What shall we do? Do you think we shall be sick and die?"

I touched the bell gently as a signal for the opening of the school, and when they had all taken their seats, I said:

"Children, you are all alarmed at the approach of this terrible disease. You sorrow for the death of your mates, and fear that you too may be taken. Many of you have asked me: 'What shall we do?' I know of but one way to escape this trouble, and that is to hide from it. If you will listen, I will read you of a hiding-place."

All listened eagerly, while I read the ninety-first Psalm. I made no comments, but in a few words asked that the Comforter would carry his message to their hearts. They all seemed hushed by the sweet words of the Psalmist, and the morning lessons went on as usual.

At noon, a sweet little girl named Lizzie, came to me, and said: "Teacher, are you not afraid of the diphtheria?"

"No," I answered.

"Well, wouldn't you, if you thought you would be sick and die?"

"No, dear, I trust not."

Lizzie stopped her questioning, and looked me full in the face some minutes, with thoughtful, wondering eyes, then her face brightened a little. "Oh! I know now," she said. "I know why you are not afraid. You are hiding under God's wings. Oh! what a nice place to hide! I thought of that as you read the chapter. I wish I could hide there too; then I should not be afraid of the diphtheria or anything else. Is there room for me too!"

"Yes, Lizzie," I said, "room for you and for every one who wishes to come. Oh! he longs so much more than you can think to hide you in his arms, to clasp you to his heart, to wash out your sins in his own blood. Used as he is to the music of heaven, with its choirs of ten thousand of thousands, yet it will be far sweeter in his ears to hear your childish voice whispering: 'Jesus, thou art my hiding place.' Will you not say with your whole heart those precious words?"

A soft "I will" was her only answer; but I trust at that glad hour Lizzie sought and found the shelter of her Savior's wing.—Central Presbyterian.

"NO,—P'RAPS."

A SKETCH FOR LITTLE GIRLS.

I was walking in the back garden belonging to a semi-detached villa the other day, when I became aware, by the musical chorus of voices, that four little girls were at play in the next garden,—Annie and Polly and Kate and Louey; but Louey was a very little girl, only six years old; scarcely able to enter into some of their games.

All at once it struck the elders of the party they might climb over the low wall at the bottom of the garden, and get away into the fields to gather king-cups, if they could only get rid of Louey, who was too little to accompany them, and yet would cry if they left her.

"How shall we do?" asked Kate.

"I know," Annie answered; "and we will not tell a story either."

"You send her away, then," said Polly.

"I am going to, if you will only have patience. 'Louey, dear,' she called in a different tone; and the child came bounding to her side.

"Will you go into the house for me, and fetch my large list ball, and then by and by we will play at rounders?"

"Yes," said the little one willingly; "but don't run away while I am gone."

"No,—p'raps."

The "p'raps," meant to express a doubt of their remaining, was spoken under her breath, but not so low but it reached my ears; for the gardens were separated only by a hedge.

"And you won't run away,' Katie?"

"No,—p'raps."

"Then I will go and fetch the ball; and you are sure you will play as soon as I come back?"

"Yes,—p'raps,"

Having perfect faith in the loudly pronounced no and yes, and not hearing the qualifying "p'raps," little Louey ran upon the errand.

No sooner was she out of sight, than, in a trice, they were over the wall, and had crossed the first field before Louey came back to the garden.

For a long time, she doubted their intention to deceive her, and peered about behind bushes, and in the summer arbor, to see if they had hidden themselves, so that they might laugh at her alarm.

But at length Louey, having searched every part of the garden, and called repeatedly upon their several names without receiving any answer, was obliged to believe they had given her the slip whilst she had gone into the house good-naturedly to oblige them. She sat down upon the turf and began to sob and cry as though her little heart would break.

Dear little children, was this right upon the part of Annie and Polly and Kate? I do not mean the running away, but the means they took to get rid of Louey?

Annie said she would tell no falsehood; but had she not done what was in every respect as bad,—acted one?—Well-Spring.

THE JOYFUL DAY.

Ye people all, with one accord,
Come, let us join to praise our Lord;
The day is near when all shall see
The wonders of his majesty.

We have his word, and power divine,
Which lights our path, and makes it shine;
All through earth's gloomy toils and snares,
He's ever near to ease our cares.

With willing hearts, then, let us all
Come boldly at the Savior's call;
And strive to be, as children dear,
Proclaiming that the Lord is near.

Make haste to join the blood-washed throng,
That shall praise God with a new song;
And in that day with all the host,
Praise Father, Son, and Holy Ghost.

Farewell, all trifling things of earth,
We hail with joy our Savior's birth;
He who for us his blood did pour,
Soon comes to reign forevermore.

Then hail that day, with loud acclaim!
In joyful songs we'll praise His name;
Till the whole earth, from pole to pole,
Through God's great might shall cease to roll.

THOUGHTS ON A FEW THINGS.

OUR COUNTRY AND ITS DANGERS.

There is a pretty general impression among all parties and classes, except among either the very ignorant or very sanguine, that the position of affairs in the nation is critical, if not actually alarming. And we do not need much verbal confirmation of the testimony of current events to convince us that our political situation is anomalous, complicated, revolutionary, and threatening. We do not think it is a just or an adequate expression of the danger to speak of it as hypothetical or remote; it is more than this; it is real, it is imminent, it is augmenting; and there is no man can tell how soon and suddenly it may take some new and startling phase of tremendous menace to the country. O, how deeply I have felt this, while perusing the boastful vaticinations of political prophets, all whose predictions were perpetually wanting in the slightest reference to the grand ultimatum of which these tumults are the omen,—that is, the return of the divine Jesus to earth. O, shrewd, but foolish human seers, the element you overlook in your calculations, will ever prove most potent, though least recognized! Heaven has a hand in earth's affairs, and in her destiny. And heaven has a King, and earth is his inheritance and his domain, and his possession, and her earthquakes will jostle your prophecies and your boastful hopes and calculations to the very day of his appearing.

I just quote a few lines, and dismiss the subject. First, from the New Orleans correspondence of the Buffalo Commercial Advertiser: "I wish I might impress upon the people of the north the fact that" (in a certain contingency which we do not mention) "another war, far more bloody than that through which the country has passed, will be the inevitable and almost immediate result." I also saw in the Southern correspondence of the N. Y. Times, not long since, something like this:—"The whole South is like a magazine of gunpowder, which a single spark may any moment kindle to an explosion." I quote from the N. Y. Tribune of a late date, as follows: "The government is in chaos. There are two officers claiming to be Secretary of War, each asserting the right to direct the operations of one of the most important of the executive departments. The army is probably divided in its judgment whom it ought to obey. This is a situation fraught with deadly peril. An accident, a mere trifle, an imprudent word, may whelm us in anarchy. Let there be justice, but let justice have wings."

I do not mention these things to excite unnecessary anxiety or alarm. But they should be looked in the face, and appreciated, that we may have a bright and heavenly armor, a courage and boldness for Christ and his cause, and be diligent in duty, looking to and leaning on the arm of power. May we have a readiness for all things and that day which must look the brighter and more dearly to be hoped for, as the clouds thicken and lower over and around us.

NAPOLEONISM.

I beg room for a word under this heading. I hope we may be willing to learn whatever we can touching all prophetic signals of earth's approaching trial. One thing I do believe,—it is very near. And if any one supposes that Napoleonism is defunct, or in a state of decadence, or that it is a mere hypothesis, and without substance or support as a prophetic evolution, I believe, on my word, they will soon see differently. I grant that the ready saints may look down on the earth from a cloud of glory, but they will see an earth demonized, I think, "for an hour," Romanized, dragonized, or whatever you will, and a false prophet careering with bloody domination. God grant that we and our dear ones, our wives and children may escape. Is there not a door by translation? Is not Christ a door? The Lord help us to understand his word, and to be guarded from harm.

Let me quote a little item of information from the N. Y. Tribune, which is in exact agreement with what I have supposed to be an altogether probable incident in current events, having expressed in terms the expectation of what is now in process of accomplishment. True, many, and most of those who have looked earnestly for Rome's downfall, have not expected the election of another Pope. And Pope indeed he probably will not be, except in a changed attitude and relation to the whole Romish world. In other words, if we understand the subject, he will be the literal false prophet, the ally of Louis Napoleon, adding to the latter's great military and political sway the tremendous weight of a vast ecclesiastical influence, harmonious with and tributary to the imperial arm and programme. I do not care to dwell on this subject. I have written perhaps all that is necessary at present, and would not obtrude further reference without some special indication perhaps. I have prepared carefully an article on the number 666, but withhold it until the coming revolutions in Europe, which shall ensure the triumph of democracy, and place Napoleon at the head of the great confederation of imperial republics (always supposing that life is spared amid the shocks of the last earthquake.) That these revolutions are probable this year, I do believe. O that we may be diligent and wise to win sinners to repentance before it is too late!

I append the quotation referred to:—

"Among the number of new Cardinals who were appointed by the Pope on Saturday is Prince Lucien Bonaparte, a near relative of the French Emperor, as he is the grandson of Lucien Bonaparte, the only brother of the first Napoleon who remained true to republican principles and declined the offer of a crown. Louis Napoleon will feel gratified at having established another similarity between himself and the great Napoleon, by obtaining a Cardinal's hat for a member of the Bonaparte family. Unlike Cardinal Fesch, the uncle of the first Napoleon, whose sentiments appeared sometimes to be divided between the interests of the Church and those of the Bonaparte family, the new Cardinal, Prince Lucien, enjoys the reputation of being an uncompromising champion of the strictest traditions of the Holy See, and never to have concealed his preference in cases when the Papal Court and the French Government were at variance.

Whether this report is correct or not, Louis Napoleon will certainly not fail to support the further advance of his cousin in ecclesiastical dignities, for to add to the lustre of the name Bonaparte by all means within his reach has always been a main object of his policy. Cardinal Bonaparte is at present the only Cardinal who is a blood relation of a European sovereign, for Austria, Spain, and other Catholic houses which, in former centuries, repeatedly had a Cardinal among their members, are at present unrepresented in the College of Cardinals.

For many centuries it has been, if not an explicit law, at least the habit not to elect a member of a sovereign house Pope; but public opinion in Europe ascribes to Louis Napoleon the intention of using his influence at one of the future vacancies of the Holy See for the promotion of his cousin to the highest honor in the church."

In hope of the kingdom of Christ and the glory of God, most sincerely yours, dear brother, C. COLEGROVE.

THE JUBILEE.

In tract number one, we observed that under the law, "which was a figure for the time then present," every "seventh day," every "seventh year," and every "seven times seven years," were sabbaths "of rest," and with the 26th of March, 1868, the seventh sabbatical year of rest begins "a sabbath unto the Lord," on the 10th day of the seventh month of which year the jubilee was proclaimed. Hence this may be the year in which "the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God" (1 Thess. 4: 16); "For the trumpet shall sound" (1 Cor. 15: 52); and, according to that "which was a figure for the time then present" (Heb. 9: 9), "in the year of this jubilee ye shall return every man unto his possession."—Lev. 25: 13.

Paul, having thus taught that Christ must come in a jubilee, caused the Thessalonians to believe "that the day of Christ" was "at hand" (2 Thess. 2: 2); for the expression, "we which are alive and remain" (1 Thess 4: 17), led them to think that Christ must come in their day; and since they could hardly expect "Paul the aged" to remain with them forty-nine years longer, it was natural for them to suppose that he meant the jubilee at hand; that is, the next year, A. D. 55, for the epistle was written in A. D. 54, the year before the jubilee. As soon as Paul learned that they understood him to mean "that the day of Christ is at hand," or that his appearing would be on the 10th day of the seventh month of the next year, he immediately wrote to them another epistle to correct the error into which they had fallen, by informing them that the "man of sin" must first be revealed before Christ would come. 2 Thess. 2: 3. But since they were correct in understanding him to mean that Christ would come at the sounding of "the trump of God," in the jubilee, in this they must "stand fast and hold the traditions which ye have been taught, whether by word or our epistle" (2 Thess. 2: 15); for it is true that God "hath appointed a day in the which he will judge the world."—Acts 17: 3.

Notice, Paul does not say that God knew the day, but that he "HATH APPOINTED," or, as the Diaglott renders it, "he hath established a day." And if it be true that "the Lord God will do nothing but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets" (Amos 3: 7), that day must be revealed, whether we know it or not. But from the expression, "as ye see the day approaching" (Heb. 10: 25), we learn that Paul, at least, thought that some would "see" it; and when we notice the subject on which he was here treating, I am unable to see how he could have meant any other than the tenth day of the seventh month; for, according to the general rule of understanding the meaning of authors, the definite article "the" would restrict us to the one given day before mentioned; and the only day that he had before mentioned was the one on which "the high priest" (9: 25) was "to make an atonement for the children of Israel . . . once a year" (Lev. 16: 34); and since he was here offering this "figure," and no other, to prove that Christ "shall appear the second time" (Heb. 9: 28), it would be a digression from all rule of understanding authors to suppose that he could have meant any other day.

To make this clear, let the reader call to mind that Paul had just been examining those "patterns of things in the heavens" (9: 23) which mirror forth the glorious appearing of Christ. The particular "figure" to which his attention was drawn was that of "the high priest" entering "into the holy place within the vail." Lev. 16: 2. Then turning from "the patterns of things in the heavens" to "the heavenly things themselves" (Heb. 9: 23), he discovered in the antitype that "Christ is not entered into the holy place made with hands, WHICH ARE THE FIGURES OF THE TRUE; but into heaven itself" (9: 24); and in the same "figures of the true" Paul discovered that our high priest must "come out" again (Lev. 16: 17); hence with great confidence adds, "And to them that look for him shall he appear the second time."—Heb. 9: 28. And why? "FOR THE LAW HAVING A SHADOW OF GOOD THINGS TO COME" (10: 1), "was a figure for the time then present" (9: 9); and having the word of Christ declaring, "Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law till all be fulfilled" (Matt. 5: 18); he, "in full assurance of faith, began to strengthen his brethren, saying, "Let us draw near with a true heart" (Heb. 10: 22); "exhorting one another, and so much the more as ye see the day approaching" (Heb. 10: 25); "for yet a little while, and He that shall come will come and will not tarry" (10: 37).

Now I wish, in the first place, to call the attention of the reader to that which no man can deny, which is that Paul has here certainly offered that which he saw mirrored forth in "the figures of the true" (9: 24), as his only reason for believing in the second coming of Christ. "FOR THE LAW HAVING A SHADOW OF GOOD THINGS TO COME" (Heb. 10: 1), is the only evidence that he here pretends to offer in proof that Christ "shall" even "appear the second time" (9: 28); and how can "the figures of the true" (9: 24) exhibit the appearing of Christ on another day not seen in that "which was a figure for the time then present"? 9: 9. Paul certainly understood that God had "appointed a day in the which he will judge the world" (Acts 17: 31); and in direct allusion to what he saw exhibited in "the figures of the true" (Heb. 9: 24), he speaks of seeing "THE DAY" (10: 26) on which "he that shall come will come" (10: 37); and we all know the day that he saw there.

And now I appeal to the wisdom of the wise, if, according to that clear and positive law, which Paul at least thought was "a shadow of good things to come" (10: 1), the high priest could "COME OUT" on but one given day, so clearly fixed, how can this exhibit the appearing of Christ on another day not given there? This is an important question. For if it is impossible for a day, clearly and positively fixed in "the figures of the true," to exhibit another day, unknown there, then we cannot be mistaken; for it is thus reduced to absolute certainty that Paul has in substance taught the appearing of Christ on the same day in which the high priest came out of the holy place.

Suppose, for example, that you could strike out and erase from the law the tenth day of the seventh month; then, where can Paul's proof of the second coming of Christ be found? Thus it will be discovered that the only reason that Paul here offers for believing that Christ "shall appear the second time" (9: 28), is what he found in "the figures of the true" (9: 24); restricted to the "tenth day of the seventh month." This makes the evidence clear that Christ's appearing must be on that day. I am not aware of having ever heard but one objection raised against it, which is, that Christ did not on that day enter into heaven.

But a second thought will convince the reader that, instead of a real difficulty, this becomes an additional evidence that Christ shall indeed come on the tenth day. For a closer attention to those "patterns of things in the heavens" (9: 23) will satisfy all that, according to that law "which was a figure for the time then present" (9: 9), it was as necessary for Christ to enter heaven before the tenth day of the seventh month; as, according to the "figure of the true" (9: 23), he must "appear the second time" (9: 28) on that given day. For the first law is not that "the high priest" should "enter into the holy place" on the tenth day of the seventh month; but only that "he come not at all times into the holy place within the vail." And "THUS SHALL Aaron come into the holy place" (Lev. 16: 2, 3); that is, he must come in according to this law, which was given before the law that restricts him to the tenth day of the seventh month. Therefore, according to "the patterns of things in the heavens" (9: 23), Christ, our high priest, must enter into the most holy before the tenth day of the seventh month. "For, see, saith he, that thou make all things according to the pattern showed thee in the mount" (8: 5).

Indeed, had there been but one law concerning the matter, it would have been necessary for Christ to have returned on the same day in which he entered heaven; but since there are two, he could, according to the first, enter "the holiest of all" on the twenty-seventh of the second month, A. D. 30; and, according to the second return, on the tenth day of the seventh month, 1868. The first law, without giving anything definite as to time, only says, "Come not at all times into the holy place within the vail"; in strict accordance to which Christ, on the twenty-seventh of the second month—a day unknown in the law, "entered in once into the holy place."—Heb. 9: 12. And if it is certain that he did not enter in on the tenth day of the seventh month, then it is certain that the antitype, as to that day, is not reached; therefore remains to be reached in the appearing of Christ, on that day; at least, according the "figure of the true" (Heb. 9: 24), I am unable to see how he can appear on any other. WM. C. THURMAN.

JERUSALEM THE GOLDEN.

Jerusalem the golden, I languish for one dream
Of all thy glory folden in distance and in dream:
My thoughts, like palms in exile, climb up to look and pray
For a glimpse of that dear country, that lies not far away.

Jerusalem the golden, methinks each flower that blows
And every bird a-singing, of thee some secret knows.
I know not what the flowers can feel, or singers see;
But all the summer raptures are prophecies of thee.

Jerusalem the golden, when sunset's in the west,
It seems thy gate of glory, thou city of the blest!
And midnight's starry torches thro' intermediate gloom,
Are waving with their welcome to thy eternal home.

Jerusalem the golden, where loftily we'll sing,
O'er pain and sorrows olden forever triumphing,—
We're nearing now thy portal where sorrows come no more;
The mansion is immortal, God's palace for his poor.

Jerusalem the golden, thy gates we soon shall view,
Where flowers here half unfolden, where pearls all turned to dew,
And all the glad life-music, now heard no longer here,
Shall in thy glory greet us, as we assemble there.

Jerusalem the golden, I toil on day by day;
Heart-sore each night with longing, I stretch my hands and pray,
That midst thy leaves of healing my soul may find its nest
Where the wicked cease from troubling, and the weary are at rest.

Jerusalem the golden, how long ere thou wilt come?
Thy streets, thy gates so pearly, shine clearer than the sun;
Thy tree of life—thy river—how peacefully 'twill roll
Along thy street so golden, for every weary soul!

Jerusalem the golden, thy King we want to see,
To love, and be his subjects, through all eternity:
Jerusalem the golden! come down, bright city, come!
And let thy wandering children find their eternal home!

MAN THE IMAGE OF GOD.

"And God said, let us make man in our image, after our likeness."
"So God created man in his own image; in the image of God created he him."—GEN. 1: 26, 27.

Before giving an exposition of the text, I will give a compend of the prevalent theory, from the commentaries of three distinguished exponents of "orthodox" faith.

Dr. Adam Clarke comments thus: "What is here said refers to his—man's—soul. This was made in the image and likeness of God." "On Gen. 2: 7 thus: The body derives its origin from the earth or the dust. Of the soul it is said, God breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, nishmath chayim, the breath of lives, that is, animal and intellectual."

Thomas Scott thus: "This image and likeness of God cannot be in the body; for God is a Spirit, which no bodily shape can in any respect resemble. . . . We may therefore look for it in the rational soul." Commenting on Gen. 9: 4–6, he says: "Though the moral image of God in which man was first created be defaced, yet the natural image remains."

Richard Watson discourses in this manner: "The image or likeness of God in which man was made, has, by some, been assigned to the body; by others, to the soul; others again have found it in the circumstance of having dominion over the creatures. As to the body, it is not necessary to take up any large space to prove that in no sense can that bear the image of God, that is, be like God. Descant ever so much, or ever so poetically upon man's upright and noble form, an upright form has no more likeness to God than a prone or reptile one; God is incorporeal, and has no bodily shape to be the antitype of any thing material.

. . . "To me there appears a manifest allusion to man's immortality, as being included in the image of God, in the reason which is given in Genesis for the law which inflicts death on the murderer. 'Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed; for in the image of God made he man.' The essence of the crime of homicide can not be the putting to death the mere animal part of man; and must, therefore, lie in the peculiar value of life to an immortal being, accountable in another state for the actions done in this, and whose life ought to be specially guarded for this very reason, that death introduces him into changeless and eternal relations, which were not to lie at the sport or mercy of human passions. . . . . This natural image of God in which man was created was the foundation of that moral image by which also he was distinguished. Unless he had been a spiritual, knowing and willing being, he would have been wholly incapable of moral qualities. That he had such qualities, eminently, and that in them consisted the image of God, as well as in the natural attributes just stated, we have also the express testimony of Scripture. 'Lo, this only have I found, that God made man upright, but they have sought out many inventions.'—Eccl. 7: 29. . . . In spirituality, and consequently immateriality, this image of God in man, then, in the first existence consists."—Theological Institutes, Part II., pp. 326–7.

These are the words of representative men. They furnish a fair exhibition of the prevalent understanding of the text. The prestige of a name is, with some people, all-powerful. On the first summons, powerless to resist, they surrender their independence of thought to some magnate of their church, and are content to become, and henceforth to remain, mere intellectual automata. Some Professor of Divinity touches a spring in their mental organism, and they respond, obedient to his slightest nod.

That Messrs. Clarke, Scott, and Watson, have written some good things, embodied in their works many fine sentiments, and enriched to a considerable extent their department of human knowledge, I cheerfully admit. Because they made the study of the Scriptures a speciality, it does not follow that they committed no errors, and that we ought to accept their conclusions as final. So far as we know, they laid no claim to infallibility. Speaking of the power of church authority in moulding religious opinion, who can estimate the influence of the Nicene Creed, the Synod of Dort, or the Westminster Confession?

"The evil that men do lives after them,
The good is oft interred with their bones."

On reading the above extracts, one is forcibly reminded of the truth of the adage, "There is but one step from the sublime to the ridiculous," and that great men more frequently take this step than any other. The expositions of Gen. 1: 26, 27, as given above, afford an excellent illustration of this truth. This talk about a "natural" image being the foundation of a "moral" image, and that the image of a "being" consists of immateriality, is as luminous as "Egypt," and as clear as the Stygian pool.

"To the law and to the testimony; if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them." "So God created man in his own image; in the image of God created he him." "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground." The Lord had a model when he formed this image of dust, and named it man. That model was his own form. Dr. Webster defines an image to be, (1) A representation or similitude of any person or thing formed of a material substance. (2) A statue. (3) An idol. (4) Likeness of any thing on canvass. (5) Any copy, representation, or likeness; as the child is the image of its mother.

The word image occurs fourty-four times in the Bible, and is nowhere used to represent an "immaterial" original. . . . "And breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul." The phrase "living soul" does not distinctively belong to man, but is repeatedly applied to the inferior animals. Is it not reasonable to suppose, then, that as the expression is applied indiscriminately to all living animals, and to them only, that it never has any other meaning than to denote a creature endowed with life, an animated being?

But it is said that the possession of a rational soul and intellectual faculties by man, although not expressly declared in the Scriptures, may be implied from the greater prominence given to the circumstances of his creation. The fact that man was created in the image of God, would be a sufficient reason for giving a distinct and separate account of his creation. He was the last as well as the noblest of God's creatures. He had a superior body and a superior mind, and without entering on the discussion of materialistic views, it will be sufficient to say here, that his superiority was evident from his Creator commanding him to have "dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth." His erect form, assured demeanor, and native dignity, give him a presence that yields him the instinctive homage of every living creature.

This presence is the image of God. The reception of the breath of life imparted animation and gave vitality to man's physical organism. We are not warranted in inferring that this breath of life gave any other virtue, or imparted any other quality, than the power to live. Dr. Clarke and Mr. Scott teach, that by the expression "breathed into his nostrils the breath of life," we are to understand that God immediately communicated from himself the rational soul. They assume that God is incorporeal, "without body or parts," therefore his image must consist in the soul, which is described to be immaterial and immortal. Allowing this assumption to be true, the argument if it proved anything would prove too much. For all living creatures were made of dust, and when they received the "breath of life" they became "living souls." Gen. 7: 22–3,—"And all flesh died that moved upon the earth, both of fowl, and of cattle, and of beast, and of every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth, and every man; all in whose nostrils was the breath of life [margin—the breath of the spirit of life], of all that was in the dry land died." "In whose hand is the soul [or life] of every living thing, and the breath of all mankind." "That which befalleth the sons of men, befalleth beasts; even one thing befalleth them: as the one dieth so dieth the other; yea, they all have one breath; so that a man hath no preeminence above a beast; for all is vanity. All go unto one place; all are of the dust, and all turn to dust again."—Job 12: 10; Eccl. 3: 19, 20.

These scriptures prove that all creatures were of the dust; that they received the breath of life from a common source; that men and beasts have one breath; that they die alike, and turn to dust again. Will anybody claim that the soul of any beast was made in the image or likeness of its Creator?

Mr. Watson says: "In no sense can the body bear the image of God, that is, be 'like' God." No one supposes that the image necessarily partakes of the quality of the original. Ps. 106: 19, 20,—"They made a calf in Horeb, and worshiped the molten image. Thus they changed their glory into the similitude of an ox that eateth grass." Was there any quality in this "image" that was possessed by the original? If not, wherein did the likeness consist? Obviously in the form or shape.

The prevalent idea in regard to the image of God is founded on the assumption that God is without form or shape. Therefore no shape can resemble him. In arguing this theory Mr. Watson says, "Man's upright form has no more resemblance to God than a prone or reptile one." This assertion, though a logical conclusion from the premises assumed, is one that but few Spiritualists of note care to make. I would abridge the usual argument from Scripture showing that God has a form in this way: The face, hands, and feet of the Lord are repeatedly mentioned in the Scriptures. The finger of the Lord wrote on the tables of stone. Again, wherever any of his members are spoken of they are used relatively for the same purposes as those of men. The possession of one member in a perfect being proves the possession of all the members necessary to a perfect form. To this it may be objected that these members are spoken of in a figurative sense, or that He assumed the human form for particular purposes. But it may be urged in reply, that He uniformly is thus represented in Scripture, and that Gabriel and other angels are represented as having forms like men. Then again, our Savior (Heb. 1: 3), who was "the express image of his Father's person," declared (John 14: 9) that "he that hath seen me, hath seen the Father."

The Transfiguration may perhaps have been for the purpose of exhibiting the REDEEMER, as he will appear in his glory at the last day with his translated and resurrected saints. His personal appearance was changed, by his being invested with a supernatural glory. "His face did shine as the sun, and his raiment was white as the light." His figure was not changed in SHAPE. This description singularly corresponds with that of the Ancient of days in Dan. 7: 9. "The Ancient of days did sit, whose garment was white as snow, and the hair of his head was like the pure wool; his throne was like the fiery flame, and his wheels as burning fire." How can any one, who believes in the plenary or verbal inspiration of the Holy Scriptures, deny that they teach that God has a form?

CHANGES.

Changes in temporals are anticipated,—in the future yet counted evident; and where is the excuse for refusing the non-prospective? And how can Adventists be silent? Was there ever a period when the world at large were anticipating changes as at present? Look where we will, some great change, physical or moral, is expected, desired, or deprecated; and whether the public eye is directed to the political or religious horizon, fancy or reality gives indications and developments.

Something momentous is considered as about to emerge from the shades of the future, as nearly ready to strike forth in eventful manifestation; and the passing days are eagerly and anxiously met for their reports. Why all this? and whence? Evidence responds, because the change of changes is at hand, when change will be in the past!

The world-wide, varied, national forebodings may be the very finger-pointings of Omniscience to "those things that are coming upon the earth,"—intimations through or akin to prophecy, leading to the unwelcome fact that the last times of Earth's history are before us. And how do they read but that the nations, having passed by things terrestrial on the railway of Time, are fast nearing the termious of the track, and now at midnight are about dashing forward into the unknown depths of vast Eternity! How should we ever scatter present truth, freely giving as we have freely received. We should "walk even as He walked," be examples, "conformed to the image of" Christ; having his Spirit within us "the hope of glory," awaiting his coming in humble love and entire consecration.

Let us truly die to sin, the world, and self, living to God alone, making him the great centre around which all our thoughts revolve, and where all our desires meet. Let us in every way be wise in winning souls, "save with fear, pulling them out of the fire," urging them to the extinguishing blood, and to the sweet Spirit that still sanctifies. Let us remember that half of the "virgins" are to be rejected! Let us enter into the feelings of the apostles at the last supper when told that one of them should betray their Lord; when, with all their love, "began every one of them to say unto him, Lord, is it I?"

BRING THEM TO JESUS.

Very frequently we hear words like these:—"It is so difficult to talk to our nearest friends about their or our own salvation."

Andrew, the disciple of Jesus, seems to have found this no difficult task, for we read that after the good tidings of the Messiah had reached him "he first findeth his own brother," and with his heart full of joy "brought him to Jesus." Thus would we, who have found the Savior, do by our kindred. We have known them so long and loved them so well it seems hard to have any separate interests. Our joys have been theirs, and theirs have been ours.

Now our eyes are attracted toward eternal things. Will they not look in the same direction? With eager longings we wait and watch and listen to hear them say, "I will arise and go my Father."

But time passes on and our hearts grow sad as we feel that they are less and less likely to become christians, and it may be that they will perish. Will the gracious invitations of Him who has died for them be always unheeded? Will the light of those eyes, that have ever looked kindly on us, go out forever? Will their presence be known no more throughout eternity? Will the music of the renewed earth be full of ecstasy, sweetly rolling on through blissful ages, and they know it not? Will the holy ones of all ages meet and greet each other, and these lie in forgetfulness? Will He who is the Light of that world, smile on his redeemed ones, while the wrath of God abides on these who are now so precious to us?

Alas! alas! Is there no remedy? Perhaps it were well to look at our own lives and within our own hearts, and see if all in our power has been done to win them. Sighs and groans and tears have gone out for them, but do we not faint and despair too easily? Does unfeigned love show itself in all our intercourse with them? Is our earnestness suited to the danger of their case? In such an important matter as the life of those so dear to us, shall there be any lack of devotedness and consecration on our part? If fasting and much earnest thought can help us to act with wisdom, and to pray aright, there must be no self-indulgence.

And if by any effort, with the blessing of Him who bids us to work faithfully, we succeed in bringing any to Jesus, we shall be glad when among the sanctified, resurrected, we behold them and distinguish their voices among those who praise and adore Jesus.

DO GOOD.

"But to do good and to communicate, forget not; for with such sacrifices God is well pleased."—HEB. 13: 16.

By studying the Scriptures, we learn many valuable lessons; and among the many is the great lesson which teaches us "to do good."

There are various ways to accomplish good to mankind. Peter, when going into the temple through the gate where stood the lame man begging, could not give him money, but he could do him good in another direction; hence he says to him, "Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee. In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, rise up and walk." Thus it is with mankind. They have the power to do good in various ways, if they have the disposition to do so. You need not think because you are poor in this world's goods that you can do no good. No, no; you can do something by speaking an encouraging word to some brother or sister, or friend, in times of trial, or distress; or by giving some counsel, perhaps, to the weak and erring sons and daughters of Adam.

You can do good oftentimes by visiting the sick, speaking words of comfort to them, and may be point them to a risen Savior. Although many can do much good, by distributing their money and goods to the poor and destitute; yet the means of doing good are not confined to these. You may do good by scattering books and tracts, and speaking to those out of Christ of their condition as it is, and of what it might be by their turning to him.

We should ever be ready to do good every opportunity; for we learn that God is well pleased with such as do follow out this great command. Men were not created to live altogether for themselves, but to live in a measure for each other. When we see a person in distress, let us do all in our power to relieve him, not pass by on the other side. Let us do all the good we can in the cause of our blessed Redeemer. Let us do all we can to bring sinners to a saving knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus. He should be our pattern and example; for his life was filled up in doing good. May God help us as people to be active till Jesus comes.

Gilmanton, N. H. N. B. MC MURPHY.

A SOLEMN MONITION.

Our readers are aware of the remarkabl Pan Anglican Conference of high functionarie and representatives of the Episcopal churches held at Lambeth, England, the latter part of last year. It numbered among its members such biblical scholars as Archbishop Trench and Bishop Ellicott, such defenders of the faith against the infidelity of the day as Bishops Wilberforce and Harold Browne, such zealous missionaries as Bishops Selwyn and Talbot, Lay and Quintard. The results of its deliverances have not been regarded as of much account, and many of the communion in whose interest it was assembled, have expressed themselves not very respectfully with reference to it. Our attention, however, has been called to an item in the Synodical Letter given out by this conference, which is of interest to all those who are battling for the doctrine of the speedy coming of the Lord. In a passage, near the close of the letter, we have the following allusion to the character of our times, and the subject of the Savior's return:

"Brethren beloved, with one voice we warn you: the time is short; the Lord cometh; watch and be sober."

This is altogether more significant than a mere adaptation of words from Holy Writ, as appears from its position in the letter, and from the phrase with which it is introduced. It clearly expresses the doctrine of the nearness of the Lord's coming, and so near as to be a proper subject for particular admonition by the assembled conference. Indeed, it is the only topic in the Letter introduced with such particular solemnity, and in reference to which it is asserted that all were so united as to be able to say: "With one voice we warn you, the time is short." The sign manual of each of the bishops was given to this document. It is the only place in the letter where the phrase "with one voice" occurs. It appears as the only really decided thing in the deliverances of the grand convention. And thus, from one of the rarest assemblies of modern times, there has been sent forth in Greek, Latin, and English, throughout the world, the official and solemn note of warning to a vast portion of Christendom, which may serve at least to vindicate those members and ministers of the church of England and its affiliated communions, who have felt themselves called on to preach and testify to the nearness of the Lord's coming. If the highest assembly of the heads of those churches that has ever been held, "with one voice" so declare and admonish, surely no scorn or censure should attach to their members and rectors any more for taking up the strain, and bestirring themselves on the momentous subject. On this point, at least, we can heartily indorse the great convention and say: "Brethren beloved, with one voice we warn you: the time is short; the Lord cometh; watch and be sober."—Prophetic Times.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, April 22, 1868.

☞ Take Notice!

All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

☞ Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank-checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ MONEY ORDERS.

Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given.

Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too.

Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us YOUR NAME AND POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

INFORMATION.—OUR CHANGE.

We now have our new mailing list completed, and paste the name of each subscriber on his paper with the date when his subscription ends, instead of acknowledging in the Crisis as heretofore.

Some of our subscribers are troubled to ascertain their indebtedness by the date opposite their names. The names of the months are abbreviated thus:—Jan., Feb., Mar., Apr., May, Jun., Jul., Aug., Sept., Oct., Nov., Dec. And the year is given thus: 67, 68, etc. The figures preceding the month indicate the day of the month.

We have tried to be very careful in revising our large list of names, but for all our care there may be some names spelled wrong, and some dates wrong. We shall be very glad to be notified of all such mistakes, and will cheerfully rectify them. When you send us money, look for the date to be changed on the slip, and if you do not see any change in two or three weeks, write to us plainly. We have been to a very heavy expense in making this change, but it has been for the benefit of our subscribers. Hereafter, if any do not get their papers regularly, we mean that it shall not be our fault.

NAMES.

We are often very much perplexed to make out names sent us in communications on business matters. Some seem to think that because they can read their own signature, every body else can. After puzzling our own eyes and brains for a long time in order to make out a name, we then ask others to decipher the hieroglyphics; and when all fail, we then have to guess at it; and, very likely, guess wrong. The next thing in order is a scolding from the writer for our carelessness, and for not attending to our business in a proper manner. A little experience in the business of editing would, no doubt, make radical changes in some minds. We are doing the best we know how, and hope for mercy.

If all who write to the office will take special pains to write all proper names very plainly, they will confer upon us a great favor.

SIGN YOUR NAMES.—Do not fail to sign your names to articles designed for the Crisis. Let us throw away that false modesty that would lead us to be ashamed of our names, when placed under our own contributions. Nameless articles are not read with half the interest they would be if the name of the writer was known; especially is this true in relation to his acquaintance; and where the writer is unknown, his name will not injure his reputation.

THE KIND SPIRIT.

We are often cheered by the kind spirit expressed by our contributors. None but those who have experienced it know the value of kind words and good wishes. They are doubly sweet when we have experienced the opposite. Would that every one felt like the one who sent us the following. It would remove some heavy burdens, even the most painful we have to bear. In connection with a good article he says:—

"I send this article to you to use as you deem best. Alter, cut down, or throw aside, as you think best. Don't think I will be hurt in any measure if my writings are not published; for I think I can realize a little of your trials as editor."

Another writes:—"You can best judge. Only please don't ever give me an inch of space in your valuable sheet, unless you deem it to the honor of the blessed Jesus."

"MILLERITE."

It not unfrequently happens, when we begin meetings in a new place, some one, whose caution is not over large, and whose knowledge of human nature not very extensive, takes occasion to tell the people that he is a "Millerite," and believed the Lord would come in 1843, and he also believed he would come in 1854, and other times, etc. Now this may be all well enough when those around us have had a similar experience; but when said in a promiscuous audience, before which we wish to present the evidence of the speedy coming of Christ, the effect is any thing but good. Many conclude at once that what we are about to present is off the same piece and is no more worthy of their attention than a last year's almanac. It does no good to go about publishing our mistakes and faults, unless we wish to make a confession. People reason like this: if you are the ones who were mistaken in 1843, or 1854, you are probably mistaken again; consequently turn a deaf ear to all we have to say. Our enemies will take sufficient pains to publish our mistakes without receiving our aid. Let them do it, but let us be wise, and present the unmistakable evidences of the immediate coming of Christ, instead of parading before them our mistakes in the past. Thousands would believe the evidence now presented to show our Savior is soon coming, were it not for the fact that they are acquainted with our past disappointments. They think if we were wrong then, that we are now; and the more we dwell on the past failures, the more prominent we make their objections. Let us be wise, and not hedge up the way of truth by unnecessary obstructions.

HOW REACH THEM?

In the great cities, the common people do not have the gospel preached to them. It is now apparent to all that, unless popular churches take a different course from the one pursued for some years in the past, they will accomplish but little for the common people,—the very class to whom the Savior usually preached. When he came the first time, the Pharisees were making but little or no provision for the poor. They wished to make their worship respectable in the sight of the honored ones. Jesus pursued the opposite course; hence when John the Baptist sent to him to know if he was the Messiah, he sent back word as follows;—"Go and show John again those things which ye do hear and see; the blind receive ther sight, and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear, the dead are raised up, and the poor have the gospel preached to them."

A New York correspondent of the Boston Journal writes:—

"It is becoming more and more a question here, how the masses are to be reached and worship on the Sabbath brought to the doors of the middling classes. The poor are well provided for and mission stations are abundant. The rich and fashionable have more churches than they can fill. But young mechanics, clerks in our stores, young families and persons in moderate circumstances, have really no religious home. The destruction of down town churches and the building of costly ones in the upper part of the city, has left this mass houseless. A young man on a moderate salary can no more hire a pew in a fashionable church than he can hire a house on Fifth Avenue. The young men, active, enterprising, rising, who are to fill the professions and be the merchants of this city, dwell below Fourteenth street. The principal churches are above."

THE SECOND COMING OF CHRIST.

There are many who claim Christ came the second time in the first century; that is, at the destruction of Jerusalem. We do not see how any one who has any confidence in the Scriptures, can possibly entertain such a view for one moment. No doctrine is more clearly taught in the Bible than the personal literal second coming of Christ.

The following inquiries from one of our exchanges are to the point. They are put to one who held the view that Christ came the second time at the destruction of Jerusalem:—

I take the liberty to call your attention to some difficulties that may be raised against your theory. Christ says that at his second coming, "all nations shall be gathered before him." Were all nations thus gathered before him at the time of the destruction of Jerusalem?

He likens his second advent to a snare. In what sense was his coming "a snare upon all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth," if it was a judgment of the Jews only, and of so private a nature" as you represent it to have been?

Did the "restitution of all things" take place at that time, as stated in Acts 3: 21? and if so, how?

Did that class of people spoken of in 1 Timothy, as seducers, hypocrites and ascetics, "forbidding to marry," etc., exist previous to his second coming?

If the last enemy, death, was overcome at that time, why do Christ's true followers still continue to die?

If Christ was seen only in his spiritual nature after his resurrection, what means the passage (Luke 24: 39) where he invited the disciples to see and handle him as one having a material body?

If all his true disciples were received by him at his second coming, and taken from the earth, was it not a great blessing to the world, that there were apostates at that time? Otherwise we could have known nothing of the gospel; as the enemies of christianity would doubtless have destroyed the writings of the apostles. Was not God forced to accept a condemned church for the transmission of the gospel to future ages? and that which he denounced became a necessity of the greatest importance. Have we not great reason to be truly thankful for the apostasy of the apostolic age?

HUMAN NATURE.

Human nature is the same in the man as in the child. It may be concealed in the man, while the child would act it out, not having the cunning and experience to keep its workings out of sight. Human nature is peculiarly selfish; whereas, the divine nature, implanted in the heart of the christian, by the Holy Spirit, subdues the old man, and gives the unselfish nature of Jesus; hence the necessity of possessing the Spirit of Christ, in order to love our neighbors as ourselves.

The following shows the workings of the natural heart:—

"A plate of apples was being passed round to a group of children. There was a fine red one at the top, which a little girl took. 'How greedy you are,' said her next neighbor, 'to take the largest! I meant to take that myself.'"

The Spirit of Christ would have reversed the saying. That says, Give my neighbor the best. That blessed Spirit produces in the christian a feeling in harmony with Paul, when he said,—"In honor preferring one another," causing us to "condescend to men of low estate."—Rom. 12: 10, 16. Of course it will be the aim of Satan to make us all as selfish as possible, because selfishness makes us unchristian.

REVIVAL IN WESTERLY.

There has been a great revival in Westerly, R. I. When speaking of a union prayer meeting in the place, the correspondent of the Boston Journal says:—

"In the great armory hall the Union Prayer Meeting is held. It is usually crowded. A pastor presides. Old and young, female and males, black and white, speak and pray. Over one hundred persons have spoken in a single meeting. Fifty persons rise in an evening for prayers and the work still goes on. When one considers the long time this work continues—the number and character of the conversions and the great union of sects—the revival at Westerly must be placed among the most remarkable on record."

THE KU-KLUX-KLAN.

The Ku-Klux-Klan is a secret order in the South, formed for the purpose of putting down whatever is opposed to southern interests. Of course, it is directly opposed to the Union men of the North. The following from the Boston Journal sets forth the policy of this Klan:—

"The Ku-Klux-Klan is extending the sphere of its operations, and soon will embrace the whole of the South in its arms. It appears to be a regular murdering concern, like the Assassins of the Orient. No Union man's life is safe where the 'Order' exists, and it is likely to exist every where that slavery once lived, being the legitimate child of that vile institution and closely resembling its disreputable parent. General Sheppard is operating against the 'Klan' in Alabama,—and as he is a good administrator and an energetic soldier, and as his measures are effectively taken, we expect much good from his exertions. General Meade is acting against the 'Klan' in Georgia."

SPRINGFIELD NATIONAL ADVENT CAMPMEETING.

At a meeting of the Campmeeting Committee, held April 3d, it was voted that Monday, August 24th, be appointed as the time for the commencement of the General Campmeeting at Springfield, Mass. It was voted that the lots for Tents on the new ground be free. Those who desire lots in the first or second circle, will all have an equal chance by sending in their names (within a given time) to the building committee, who will, when ready, publish due notice in the Crisis, calling for the names, etc.

GEO. T. ADAMS, SECRETARY.

"THE CHURCH UNION" is said to be the largest religious paper in the world. It advocates the unity of the church of Christ, opposes ritualism, close communion, apostolic succession, church caste, exclusiveness, and sectarian bigotry. It will sustain equal rights and suffrage for every man and woman of whatsoever nationality, all ideas of progress, and social advancement. It claims to be the organ of no sect, but will aim to represent every branch of the church of Christ, as well as every society organized for the purpose of evangelizing the world.

It is Trinitarian in creed, but favors free discussion of all subjects not already settled by the universal consent of the church of all ages. It will oppose ritualism and infidelity, and advocate a free pulpit for Christ's ministers and a free communion table for all the Lord's people.

It is published weekly at No. 9 Beekman St., New York. Terms $2.50 per year.

THE LAWS OF LIFE for April has come to hand. It is a very interesting and instructive number. Hereafter it is to be devoted to the discussion of temperance and the best means for its promotion, as well as to the great question of health. We cordially commend it to all our readers. They can satisfy themselves by inclosing a postage stamp, and asking for specimen copies, which the publishers say they will gladly send them. AUSTIN, JACKSON & CO., Dansville, Livingston Co., N. Y.

ADVENTISM.—We have read the first part of "Adventism," by Bro. Sheldon, and we are delighted with it. The points are clear, and well put. The book should have a very wide circulation. It is just what was needed for the present time. It is an excellent work to lend to your neighbors, who are not acquainted with the reasons of our blessed hope. Every family should have a copy. Price 50 cts. For sale at the Crisis office.

HEALTH PAPERS.—We are receiving three valuable hygienic papers: "The Health Reformer," published at Battle Creek, Mich., "The Herald of Health," published by Miller and Wood. 15 Laight St., New York, and "The Laws of Life," published by Dr. J. C. Jackson and Dr. H. N. Austin, at "Our Home on the Hill Side," Dansville, N. Y. Every family should have one of these papers.

GLAD TIDINGS.—We have received the April number of the "Glad Tidings," edited and published by Bro. W. H. Spencer, Brockport, N. Y. It is full of good things. Price $1. per year, 50 cts. for six months, payable in advance. It is an octavo monthly. Bro. Spencer needs aid and sympathy. His heart is in the work, but he is crippled for lack of means.

GREAT PEACE.

BRO. GRANT:—Will you please inform me in the Crisis the meaning of a passage of Scripture found in Psalms 119: 165, which reads as follows:—"Great peace have they that love thy law, and nothing shall offend them." A SUBSCRIBER.

We believe the passage should be taken in a literal sense, and that it means just what it says. The true christian has "great peace"—peace like a river. It continually grows wider and deeper. At first is but a bubbling spring, easily disturbed; then like a small rivulet which the school boy may stop by his mud dam, thus roiling its waters; but at length it becomes like the noble river that moves with deep and silent majesty, flowing undisturbed to the bosom of the boundless ocean.

DEATH OF JUDAS.

"And he cast down the pieces of silver in the temple, and departed and went and hanged himself."—MATT. 27: 5.

"Now this man purchased a field with the reward of iniquity; and falling headlong, he burst asunder in the midst, and all his bowels gushed out."—ACTS 1: 18.

BRO. GRANT:—These two verses speak of two different deaths. Will you be so kind as to give an explanation? Yours in hope of eternal life, CHARLES E. WILLIAMSON.

We do not understand that two deaths are named by the two writers, but two events in the same death. In the first place, as recorded by Matthew, Judas "hanged himself." After that, he fell from where he was hung, and his bowels gushed out.

ST. LOUIS MISSION.

Since my last letter of March 9th, I have received from kind friends of our Mission the following donations of money:—Bro. L. H. Davis, St. Clair, Ill., $5.00; Sr. G. L. Stanwood $3.00, Sr. M. G. Stanwood, $2.00, of Gorhem, Me.; Bro. H. F. Carpenter, Danielsonville, Ct., $10.00; Bro. John Russell and wife, Natick, Mass., $15.00. Total, $35.00.

I have received for the poor since the first of January, one small box of clothing, from Bro. G. T. Adams, Boston. Feb. 19th, I received a barrel of clothing, also from Bro. Adams. Mar. 1st, a large sack of clothing from L. H. Davis, St. Clair, Ill. April 2nd, a lot of clothing contained in two boxes, and $2.50, from the church in Dansville, N. Y., by Wm. Brown, Jr., via Boston, through Bro. Adams. Also a barrel of clothing from friends in Lowell, Mass., and $3.00 by W. Dodge. Apr. 11th, one large box of nice clothing from the church in Buchanan, Mich.

We all feel very grateful indeed for the liberal donations made to us of such articles of clothing as are needed here very much. I have been giving them out to the poor of our different churches here; also the church at Lowell, Compton Hill, and Cahokie. We now have four churches, embracing over three hundred Sunday School children, many of whom are very poor. Some of our Sunday School children come to church on Sunday dressed very neatly; others come, some without shirts, some without coats or spencers, but in shirt sleeves; others come even in the coldest of weather with their toes protruding from their shoes. But we are making good use of the articles sent us, in clothing up the poor and destitute just as fast as we can.

Dear brethren and sisters, will you remember us at the throne of grace? We are striving to do our Master's will. We are all looking with very deep interest for the coming of our Lord next seventh month; believing the Lord told the truth when he said, it was easier for heaven and earth to pass, than one jot or tittle of the law to fail. The types in the law have been fulfilled in the spring to the very letter. The types of the seventh month have not been fulfilled. As sure as God lives they will be, in every particular, and also in regard to time. Others may look for old types to be fulfilled the second time, in the spring; but Jesus, I believe, will come in the fall, in the month and year of Jubilee. And from all I can see and hear and learn from God's word, I am fully satisfied that this year is the Jubilee. I do believe it with all my heart. Nevertheless, by the grace of God I intend to live and work so that if it comes, as I earnestly hope and believe it will this fall, I can hail the day with joy; and on the other hand, if I should be disappointed, that I can meet it with meekness and resignation, no less determined than now to hold on and hold out faithful till he does come. "For yet a little while and he that shall come, will come, and will not tarry." Praise the Lord for ever. Amen. Your Bro., striving to meet the Lord in peace, H. K. FLAGG.

For the World's Crisis.

MISSION LETTERS FROM SWITZERLAND.

NUMBER TWENTY-ONE.

DEAR BRO. GRANT:—Through the mercy of God, I am again in Switzerland, after an absence of three months, during which time I have been permitted to labor for the salvation of souls. The 22nd of last Dec., after sending you my last report. I left the city of Milano for Bergamo, where I stopped several days, and where one family received with joy the announcement of the second coming of Christ. From there, I continued my route to Brescia, where I stopped ten days with a dear Neapolitan family residing there.

During this time I was especially blessed of the Lord. My soul was filled with joy in having such visible manifestations that God was working with me. The head of this noble family had been prepared, by a special revelation from God, for my visit to that city; and they looked for my coming as Cornelius of old looked for Peter. During these ten days of the most generous hospitality on his part, my heart was filled with joy in seeing that I was a worker with God, and I did what was in my power to instruct him and his dear family in the truths of the Scriptures; and the happy result was that he was converted, as also his wife, and his father and mother who had been Catholics. All embraced the message of the soon coming of our Savior with joyful hearts. Notwithstanding their desire to be baptized, I judged it prudent to wait till they should be more fully prepared by the grace of God to be added to the church of God as living stones, "made ready," cut, hewed, etc. 1 Kings 6: 7.

I also had the privilege of delivering three public lectures in the city, which were attended by many of the principal citizens; and I praise God that these and this interesting city were solemnly warned of the things that are soon coming on the earth, and that the lamp on a golden candlestick has been lighted in the city of Brescia. But the glorious truths which we proclaim were not in accordance with the taste of the priests and the ultramontanes; and these last, pushed by the first, manifested their rage and hatred by cries, screams, yells, and also by the discharge of a pistol in the hall of assembly. God be praised! no accident resulted. Afterwards I thought it prudent to leave the city, and not long after visited Padua.

This city, so celebrated for its schools of Dante and Copernicus, which I visited in 1844 with great enthusiasm, and where I celebrated mass, seemed to me, oh, how changed! The splendid cathedral, the rich sepulchre of St. Anthony, etc., etc., caused me profound emotion, making me feel how God is patient towards his rebel creatures, in tolerating false doctrine and crimes committed in his name, daring to call their infamous apostasy from the truth of God "European civilization"! My labors here were limited to private conversations. There are however in Padua, as well as in other Italian cities, many intelligent persons who love Bible truth. It is an extensive field for the mission, but there much cultivation is necessary, and also means, that those who labor there may live comfortably and suitably. The present poverty of this European Mission makes it impossible to labor there with much advantage. There are those also in the environs of Mestra, which I visited, who are disposed to examine Bible truth.

At last the Queen of the Adriatic, beautiful Venice, was again before my eyes; after twenty-four years of absence, I passed again its ancient walls, not as a priest to deliver souls from purgatory for a franc; but now as a true disciple of Christ, bringing the gospel of the kingdom. I went at once to the old renowned cathedral of St. Mark, which I found the same as twenty-four years ago; but I saw it now in different colors. The mumbling of priests produced a sad impression on my spirit. I prayed God to have pity on their ignorance, and to grant them the same grace as he has granted me a poor sinner.

I conversed with many persons, and desired to open public assemblies; but unfortunately there were two insurmountable obstacles. First, the Carnival, which occupied all the public halls; and second, the lack of means to hire a private one, which would have cost me from ten to fifty francs for one evening, according to its size, to say nothing of notices necessary. After a short visit to this interesting field, I received letters from my family which called for my immediate return. My heart was torn in leaving the city of Venice, thinking that I had not been able to do more there for our dear Master, and especially that it was not in my power to cross the Adriatic, and visit my dear Slavonian nation, which weighs heavily upon my heart; and I hope that the Almighty Ruler will permit me soon to accomplish my strong desire, better armed for the combat in the field where Satan has so long reigned.

I returned to Switzerland by the same route that I passed, and watered in nearly all the places where I had sowed, especially in the valley of Piedmont, around our Vaudois brethren. It took me three days to pass Mont-Cenis on foot, owing to the freshness of the atmosphere. I was obliged to stop at St. Michel (France), at the foot of the mountain, five days, in order to find the means necessary to return home by cars, as it was impossible to continue my way on foot in the very bad weather. My journey during three months in Italy cost me over four hundred francs, and I have sold tracts only for thirty francs. There is no money at the present time in Italy. At last, and with great difficulty, I reached home, and was glad to find on my arrival two letters from Bro. Adams, with drafts; one from Dec. last for 379 francs, and the second from Feb. 13th for 357 francs, (and two prophetical charts by dear Bro. Cunningham, for which I am very thankful), with which my son Ludomir paid a part of our debts, having been obliged to live since last August, when Bro. Adams sent us 154 francs, entirely on credit. We have debts of 3000 francs, for publications and the printing office, that must be paid during the month of May next, without any excuse or delay; and we are much crippled for lack of money to prosecute the great work on our hands.

We feel that we must publish at once tracts in Italian upon the coming of Christ, especially upon Spiritualism, Daniel, Baptism, Masses, Purgatory, etc., etc. We have already much excellent matter translated, and no means to pay 200 francs for the work. Our brethren in Switzerland have already aided us beyond their means, and cannot do more at present.

Dear brethren and sisters, and all fellow laborers with me in the vineyard of our Master, I am forced to appeal to you once more for special aid, to carry on the great work so well commenced through the grace of God and your kind benevolence in the heart of Europe, which is terribly exposed for lack of money. I have labored entirely beyond my strength, and must have immediate help from you all, or succumb. I await your kind brotherly decision at once. Dear brethren and sisters, may God put it into your hearts to raise me immediately the sum of $1000 in gold, and send it to me before the end of May next, that the Mission may be cleared of debt and the necessary publications prepared and circulated through all Europe in different languages, by those who have hearts to labor with me in this great cause. I have very pressing need immediately of 1000 francs. Will you send me this without delay, and the rest as soon as possible? Will our beloved Bro. L. Reimer send us his "new German Tract, on the second coming of Christ, and his reign on the earth, with an appendix," etc., that we may republish it here?

Permit me now to give your readers an idea as near as possible of the present state of Italy, commencing with the illustrious citizen and general, GUISEPPO GARIBALDI, whose portrait in all styles and sizes is seen beside that of Victor Emanuel, in all the cities and villages, in all public places, in all hotels, cafes, shops, as also public buildings, many of which are called by his name: "Piazza Garibaldi," "Corso Garibaldi," "Strada Garibaldi," etc.; and woe to him who dare pronounce his name without the respect due him. The king and his ministers alike respect and fear him.

As to the Italian people, they are divided into four distinct classes:

1. The old Patricians and the Catholics, men and women, who pass much of their time in the churches, kneeling before the altars, counting their beads, and invoking the holy Virgin in favor of the maintenance of the Papacy; and if they encounter a priest carrying the (so called) bon Dieu to some sick person, it is nothing for them to kneel in the street or any public place. All those are in favor of Napoleon III., considering him as the only protector of the Pope and the Catholic church, having no suspicion either of his politics or his design. Napoleon III., after the fall of the Mexican Empire, or "European Civilization," and after the battle of Sadowa, having lost his European equilibrium, it only remained for him to make himself the "Cæsar of Rome," under the pretext of protecting the Pope, his prefect, and the universal Catholic church, an empire of a hundred and thirty millions! For this reason he guards the city of Rome, and woe to him who tries to take it from him; for he well knows that losing it he would be reduced low, and France would become, like Austria, a second-class power.

The second class of the Italians is composed of citizens and young men, who are in favor of Italian unity, who dream of nothing but having the city of Rome for the capital of Italy. But in order to be consistent in their revolutionary policy against Napoleon III. (who, as we have said, holds the city of Rome under pretext of protecting the Pope), they have ceased to be Catholics. And naturally, in passing from Romanism, they have unfortunately become Materialists, Spiritualists, and Atheists, with a strong tendency to favor revolution and give the dynasty of Napoleon to the guillotine, as also the priests, and proclaim the renowned capital of Rome "Caput," the head of Italy. The fermentation in all Italy is so great that France can no longer count logically upon his dear Italian alliance. This revolutionary party, who believe in no God, is closely united with the materialists and Spiritualists of Prussia and the United States, who are able to resist France.

The third class comprehend the poor priests, who promenade the streets in the midst of numerous caricatures, which compare them and the Pope to the most filthy animals, such as swine, upon the belly of which are written in large letters—"The temporal power,"—The famous "Non possumus"—"Indulgences," etc., etc. It is really pitiful to see these poor priests, who are certainly reserved for the most frightful butchery of the atheistic revolution.

The fourth class comprehend the poor ignorant people, the most of whom are impelled by indolence to steal and commit other crimes the most degrading, often to murder, which the journals publish daily. This class may be justly compared to a cancer, which is eating the life of Italy. The finances of this kingdom are in the saddest condition, its debt amounting to $5,287,582,451 francs. Poor Italy, having wished to imitate the United States in circulating only paper money, has done much injury to commerce. In the East, the prophetic complications which concern the "Times of the Gentiles" (Luke 21: 24) are now so great as to take a character most menacing. The young King George, recently married to the Princess Olga, daughter of the Grand Duke Constantine, and neice of the Emperor Alexander II., has just entered her capital. The Queen is accompanied by a Russian Secretary. It is said that a treaty has been concluded between Russia and Greece. Greece naturally engages to favor the plans of the Muscovite policy. What are these plans? To deliver Europe from the Turks, and give St. Sophia of Constantinople to orthodox worship. The Christians of the East say, they restored to their rights will enjoy their autonomy, and, in the plenitude of their independence, conclude with Russia a treaty analogous to that between Prussia and the south of Germany.

Europe is in great agitation. Let us hasten our work of preparation for the fifth universal kingdom. Your faithful Bro. in the vineyard of the Lord, M. B. CZECHOWSKI.

NOTE.—Not having received any information from Bro. C. for some months, we did not know that he had received our last two remittances until this letter was received; hence had not remitted what was on hand. Since the reception of this letter we have sent him a draft for 868 francs and 60 centimes. G. T. A.

"ADVENTISM."

ITS RELATION TO THEOLOGY.

Our world is flooded with "isms," and in the long catalogue we find what is denominated "Adventism;" and this is in conflict with all other "isms" on many points.

The term "Adventism" is a new term, not a half century old; but is applied to an old theory, which, whether true or untrue, is unchanged by the application of the new name. Some of its friends say, we repudiate the term "Adventism," as it is an unscriptural one, and prefer the term Bibleism: but this is equally unscriptural; for this term is not once found in the Bible. But as it is the thing indicated by the name that we wish to examine, we will not pause to argue whether or no Adventism is a correct term. It is a term well understood by friends and foes, and not of the derisive order: so as a matter of convenience, and without scruples, we use it. Without asking, Is the name right, we pass to ask, Is the theory indicated by the name right?

Is Adventism merely a modern delusion, or is it a Bible theory? Preparatory to a correct answer to this inquiry, another question arises: What is Adventism? It is simply the theory of the second advent of Christ, as the "hub" in the "wheel" of Bible theology, together with its spokes, fellies, and tire—all other truths depending on this. Blot out the second coming of Christ, and the resurrection is obliterated, the judgment-day is repudiated, and the restitution is set aside; for not until Christ comes are the dead to be raised, or is the judgment to arrive, or the restitution to dawn.

Thus the advent of Christ is an event of mighty magnitude, for the consummation of the grand plan of salvation is suspended on this single event, for if Christ never comes, the dead will never be raised, and if the dead are never raised, they can never be judged; and if never judged, they can never be rewarded, and never inherit the kingdom: for Christ is not only designated as the future Judge, but the time when he shall officiate in this capacity is said to be "at his appearing." Nor is this a new item of theology; for Enoch, the seventh from Adam, connected the judgment scene with the coming of Christ, saying, "Behold, the Lord cometh with ten thousand of his saints, to execute judgment." Not only did Enoch preach the advent of Christ, but he connected that event with the judgment.—Wm. Sheldon.

AN INQUIRY RENEWED.

BRO. GRANT:—Permit me to correct a mistake you made in replying to my inquiry in the Crisis of April 8th. I did not ask if it was proper to admit to the Lord's table christians who had only been sprinkled? My question was this: "If a brother who had been sprinkled wished to join one of our churches, but could not see it is duty to be immersed, should we receive him as a member in full fellowship, by simply advising him to search for more light on this subject?" You reply that "such brethren have a right to the sacrament of the Lord's supper."

I will state a case to make my question more plain. Our Freewill Baptist brethren invite brethren of other churches to commune with them, who have only been sprinkled; but if such brethren wished to become members of their church, they would decline receiving them, unless they consented to be immersed. I understand this to be their rule or practice. My question is, should we practice in the same way? My belief is, that coming to the Lord's supper is simply to "show the Lord's death till he comes," and is not a test of church fellowship; that test is voting to receive a brother as a member of the church.

As I have been a Baptist, and am sometimes asked if I hold to "close communion," I will here state my views. When I fully laid aside creeds as a guide, and re-examined my doctrine, I could find no "thus saith the Lord" that a converted man must be baptized before coming to the Lord's table. Both are plain, positive commands; yet a christian may obey one, and by being wrongly taught, may err in not attending to the other as the Bible directs. With these views, I have freely communed with different denominations, and advised others to do so.

As to the question asked above, my opinion is, that where good brethren wish to unite with us in church order, and cannot see it to be duty to be immersed, after having been sprinkled they should be received, but be kindly told that they do not fully understand the Bible as to the design of baptism, as being a figure or symbol of Christ's burial and resurrection; and be requested to keep searching for more light on this subject, as they have on others, and found themselves in error. Paul's rule should be attended to,—"Him that is weak in the faith receive ye, but not to doubtful disputations." Rom. 14: 1. See the whole chapter, and also 1 Cor. 8th. Having just come out of different denominations, and it being hard and often slow work to throw off long cherished explanations of Scripture, we need uncommon patience and forbearance to "dwell together in love and unity," and so secure prosperity.

Having thus frankly, but briefly, given my opinion," I should be happy to hear from any who may feel free to give theirs.

REPORT OF THE NEW YORK CHRIS. CONFERENCE,

HELD AT HEMLOCK LAKE, LIVINGSTON CO., N. Y., APRIL 2ND, 3RD, 4TH AND 5TH, 1868.

Conference assembled Thursday evening, April 2nd, and opened by prayer by Eld. M. R. Miles, after which the writer preached from 2 Tim. 2: 15. Conference assembled again Friday afternoon for prayer and conference, and in the evening at seven, when Eld J. K. Bellows, of New York City, preached from 1 Thess. 1: 9, 10. Conference re-assembled on Saturday morning for prayer and conference, which was a very profitable meeting to all present.

In the afternoon, at two o'clock, the writer preached from Acts 4: 11, 12, after which the conference assembled for business, with Elder B. P. Stevens in the chair, at which meeting it was resolved that the conference invite Eld. Jonas Wendell to take charge of the conference tent the ensuing season, subject to the action of the annual conference.

Resolved, That Eld. Wendell be authorized to solicit aid, by contribution, for the discharge of the debt against the tent of one hundred and thirty dollars ($130.00), and to solicit this aid through the Crisis.

Conference assembled in the evening, and listened to a sermon on the christian's hope, by Elder C. F. Sweet, from 1 Pet. 3: 15. Sunday, conference at 10½ o'clock. Sermon by Sr. E. S. Jennings, from Rev. 22: 3. Assembled at 2 o'clock to celebrate the Lord's Supper. About seventy-five of the dear children of the Lord partook of the emblems of his broken body and spilled blood. All felt it was good to be there. Assembled in the evening for the closing sermon by Eld. Jonas Wendell, from John 14: 3.

Of the preaching brethren there were present: Elds. J. K. Bellows, C. F. Sweet, B. P. Stevens, M. R. Miles, H. H. Brown, Ira Allen, Jonas Wendell, E. T. Himes, W. Marlatt, and Sister E. S. Jennings.

If the members of any church desire the Annual Conference to be held in connection with their church, they will please confer with Elds. D. Cogswell of Dansville, B. P. Stevens of So. Butler, Wayne Co., or W. Marlatt of Woodhull, Steuben Co., N. Y.

In behalf of the brethren, I would return our sincere thanks to the people of Hemlock Lake for the kind and christian manner in which they entertained us while at the conference. May the Lord bless you all. Amen.

NEW YORK STATE MISSION TENT.

This tent was purchased of Bro. Field, of Rochester, one year ago, for $400.00, and there remains $170.00 due Bro. Field on the tent. At the last conference I was requested to make a statement to the brethren and sisters of this State, through the Crisis, in regard to the matter, and call upon them to liquidate this debt. If the Lord will, I shall soon start out again with the tent, and I want it free from debt; and as Bro. J. Naramore resides in the city of Rochester, send your contributions to him, and he will credit you in the Crisis, and pay it over to Bro. Field.

Now, brethren, it hath been said, "What is everybody's business is nobody's business"; this is not of that kind; it is your business. Attend to it. Direct to Dr. J. Naramore, Rochester, N. Y. J. WENDELL.

Correspondence.

From Bro. P. S. W. Deyo.

BRO. GRANT:—As my labors are now published in the Voice of the West, many readers of the Crisis may wonder what has become of Bro. Deyo. I would say, by the blessing of God I still continue proclaiming the gospel of Christ. I was sick awhile in last November. I started out to labor in January. The Lord has blessed my labors at New Hartford and Strawberry Point, in connection with Bro. and Sr. Janes, at Boylen Grove, and at Floyd. Over one hundred have been baptized into Jesus Christ by my hands, since the last of January, while a number of others have obeyed at other ministers' hands. I came to Boylen Grove the 5th of March, and was taken sick, and my soul drew near the grave. I was a number of days so I was turned in bed; but the Lord heard the prayers of the church, and on the 15th I was carried in a large chair and sat in it, and spoke to the people. There were four meetings afterward, when I went to Floyd, Mar. 21st, where I staid three days. There were six ministers present. We had a blessed time. There were forty-three baptized, and some fifteen to twenty that will soon go forward.

March 25th, we returned to Boylen Grove, from whence I now write; and up to this date there have been eighty-three baptized. O what a powerful time we are having. Praise the Lord for his goodness to the children of men. Much of this powerful work in this place and Floyd is owing to the power of God to heal the sick. Bro. Reuben Buck, who is now with me, was called a little over a year ago, by a vision, to go and heal the sick by the laying on of hands and prayer. He has been wandering until some time this winter, when he came to Floyd, among our people; and a number of wonderful cures have been done. I would like to tell you what my eyes have seen for the last two weeks. I will speak of a few. J. W. Johnson had a scrofulous sore on his ancle, turning into a fever-sore. At the time he was prayed for, he had four running sores, and had been so for sixteen years. He was cured last September, and is now sound and well. His address is Chickasaw Co., Iowa. Another case: Miss Malinda Jenson, who had walked on crutches for eight years. I saw her myself. She can walk as well as any one. Her address is Watertown, Floyd Co., Iowa. J. Whitesell (address Boylen Grove, Iowa), came March 25th, and we administered to him. At the time, he could not shut his hand, and had not for ten years, and in ten minutes his hand was as good as any other. His toes were stiff also, and to his surprise, when he took off his boots they were as limber as any one's. Now, brethren, we have got to a new era in our history. Praise God. Lord, give us more faith.

PETER S. W. DEYO.

Boylen Grove, Mar. 31st, 1868.

From Bro. P. A. Smith.

BRO. GRANT:—We came from Lake City to this place last Monday night, one week ago, and closed our labors in this place last Sunday evening for the present; and start for home this afternoon. We part with the dear ones here with heavy hearts, after having such glorious times with them through the past few months. With tears and God bless yous, we have to take the parting hand with the promise that, if the Lord will, I will come out here again next fall. They promise to meet together in their covenant and prayer meetings and Sunday School until I return. We had the Lord's Supper last Sunday, and it was a heavenly season, and a very solemn time. We were reminded of the night when Jesus and his disciples were gathered together for the last time on this sin-cursed earth, and partook of those symbols of which we can discern the Lord's body.

The little church numbers twenty-five, together with others that are favorable. They have elected an Elder, Secretary, and Treasurer, and S. School superintendent. Twenty-two have been baptized, and six others ought to go forward and perhaps will. A large number that have been brought to see the truth have left for other parts. This Mission has proved a success. The Lord has given us all that we could have asked for to assure us of his approbation, and I trust that the church here, and at Lake City, will prove themselves to be the true, humble disciples of Jesus, and be the means of saving others. Pray for us and them, ye who love God, that we may so live that when Jesus comes we may meet at the marriage supper of the Lamb. Yours in the blessed hope,

P. A. SMITH.

Jacksonville, Fla.

BRO. WM. RAYMOND, Brothertown, Wis., writes:—"This is the first time that I have written to let the children of God know where I stand. It is upon the rock Christ Jesus, for he has taken me out of the pit of despair, and a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation, into the glorious liberty of the sons of God. It is seven years since Jesus set me free, but trusting in my own strength too much, and having besetting sins and the Devil to contend with, I fell to the lowest depths of despair. I thought that I was for ever lost; but, bless the Lord, he showed me my error. Now I can say, the Lord will save to the uttermost those that believe on him. I desire the prayers of all christians that the Lord would bless and keep me in his love. There have been many brought to the Lord here. I desire the forgiveness of all against whom I have sinned."

CHEERING TESTIMONY.—"The thoughts of the coming of the Lord are most sweet and joyful to me, so that if I were but sure that I should live to see it, and that the trumpet should sound, and the dead should arise, and the Lord appear before the period of my age, it would be the most joyful tidings to me in the world. Oh, that I might see his kingdom come!—Baxter.

SUCCESSFUL PASTORS.

Every minister will be successful, we believe, who has one member in his church given to constant prayer for his success. We would that every pastor had just one friend who never ceased to bear him and his work to the throne of grace, and to supplicate for the gifts of the Holy Spirit following his labor, and giving his preaching power! Let facts such as the following speak.

"Mr. Finney tells of a pastor who was constantly successful—enjoyed a revival every year for twelve years, and could not account for it—till one evening at a prayer meeting a brother confessed that for a number of years past he had been in the habit of 'spending every Saturday night, until midnight, in prayer for his pastor the next day.' That explained the secret, in part, at least. Such a man praying would make any ministry successful. The great John Livingston, of Scotland, once preached an ordinary sermon with such power and success that five hundred were converted under it. But it was after a large company of Christians had spent the whole previous night in prayer for that object."

NAPOLEON FOR POPE.—The last move of this astutest of princes is to the papal chair; not in his own person, but in that of his family. Lucien Bonaparte is made a cardinal. From the cardinals come the popes. If a vacancy should occur, the dictator will leave no stone unturned to put his protege into the chair. Bismarck has sold Prussia to him for the mastership of the armies of Southern Germany. It may have to pay for this crime by seeing the Pope, whom its own bayonets have kept in place, a Bonaparte in blood as he will certainly be in policy.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable Dispatches.

PARIS, April 13. The Journal des Debats, in an editorial article to-day, scouts the apprehensions which have been raised of an approaching war, and particularly denies that there is any reason to apprehend trouble in Germany. In proof of this the Journal says France has already refused to enter into a close alliance with England and Austria unless Prussia is included.

LONDON, April 14. After the parting interview with the Queen, this morning, the Prince and Princess of Wales, accompanied by their respective suites, left London on their visit to Ireland. They took the special train for Holyhead, where they will embark on the fleet which is to convey them across the Irish sea. It is expected that they will land in Dublin at noon to-morrow.

DUBLIN, April 14. The great preparations which have been made here to give all possible eclat to the visit of the Prince of Wales are about completed. The castle has been changed into a royal palace for his accommodation. St. Patrick's Cathedral has been most superbly decorated for the coming ceremonies attending the initiation of His Royal Highness as a Knight of St. Patrick. The quays and public buildings are lavishly ornamented with flags and streamers, mottoes and other decorations, and beautiful triumphal arches have been erected in the principal streets through which the Royal visitor will pass. The people of the surrounding country are pouring into the city, and crowds of visitors are hourly arriving from England to witness the ceremonies and participate in the festivities of the reception.

COPENHAGEN, April 14. It is understood here that the Emperor of Russia has declined to interpose his good offices as mediator between Denmark and Prussia for the settlement of the controversy concerning the Schleswig Provinces.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 15. The Journal de St. Petersburg, organ of the Imperial Government, says the Emperor of Russia has consented to grant a delay in the payment by the United States of the sum stipulated in the treaty for the transfer of the territory of Alaska, and the time now assigned for payment is May 1st. The Journal feels confident that the American Congress will vote a necessary appropriation.

PARIS, April 15. The Moniteur, in its issue of to-day, publishes a speech made at Rambonville by M. Ernst Baroche, Minister of Justice, in which he endeavors to allay the excitement produced by the frequent rumors of impending war.

The Minister says it is well known that the Government is now engaged in actively prosecuting extensive works for the improvement of the entire system of interior and connecting roads of France, in which large sums of money are expended.

This fact, he argues, is utterly inconsistent with the idea that the government apprehends or is making preparations for an approaching warlike conflict, and should be conclusive evidence to all that France earnestly desires peace.

The reorganization of the military forces of the Empire, which had excited so much needless apprehension, was a pledge for the maintenance of peace, which, he assured his hearers with joy, no European power now threatened to disturb.

LONDON, April 15. The Journal de St. Petersburg to-day has a pacific article on the state of Europe, in which it says a general disarmament of the European Powers is probable.

FLORENCE, Italy, April 16. Violent riots broke out in Bologna early this week, in consequence of a strike of the workmen. Some injury was done to the property, but no lives lost. The disturbances have been suppressed and the city is now quiet.

LONDON, April 16. A great political mass meeting of the Liberal party was held at St. James Hall to-night. Every available portion of the hall was crowded to repletion. The platform was occupied by a large number of the Liberal members of Parliament and other prominent gentlemen of the party. Earl Russell was chairman of the meeting. Addresses were made by Henry Fawcet, M. P.; Sir John Gray, M. P.; Mr. Miall and others.

Resolves were proposed, declaring that the disendowment of all religious sects in Ireland is right and is imperatively demanded, and that the Tories, in keeping office after the recent vote of the House of Commons against them, violate the Constitutional usage, and that they should give place to Mr. Gladstone and the leaders of the majority in Parliament. The resolves were adopted by acclamation, amidst great enthusiasm.

NEWS FROM ABYSSINIA.

It was widely rumored to-day that advices had been received from Abyssinia to the effect that the British captives at Magdala had been released by King Theodorus, and that the object of the invading force having been attained, the war was over. Dispatches from General Napier were received at the India office late this afternoon, but though the news is favorable to the hopes of the expedition, the above mentioned rumors are not confirmed. Gen. Napier reports in his last dispatch that he left late on the 23d ult., and is pushing on in a southwesterly direction. The advance column was within 60 miles of Magdala, and 20 miles of that distance had been successfully reconnoitred. The troops of the expedition were in good spirits and eager for a fight.

Accounts from Magdala had reached camp, which represented that the king was uneasy, and evidently alarmed at the steady approach of the British troops. He appeared to be hesitating as to what course to pursue, and nothing was known as to what plan of action he would adopt.

The British Post Office Department is about to send out to the United States Mr. A. Trollope, to arrange the first details of the Postal Convention with that country.

ATHENS, April 11. Dispatches and news reports from Crete, received in this city (Athens,) state that several fights have taken place lately between the insurgents and the Turkish soldiery. The Cretan revolutionary forces were, it is said, victorious in most of them.

Two steamers, sailing from Greek and other Christian ports, still land food, gunpowder, arms and other supplies and munitions of war at the island, and embark and take away refugee patriot families.

BOLOGNA, April 17. The labor riots, by which the peace of this city has been fearfully disturbed during the past few days, are apparently at an end and quiet prevails. A Government order has been published, which forbids further meeting of the printers' associations and the Democratic Union Working Men's Association. Their headquarters and places of assemblage have been seized by the police.

FLORENCE, April 17. It is reported here that Gen. Garibaldi has left Caprera and gone to Naples. The rumor causes some uneasiness as to the objects of the General's movements.

LONDON, 17. Later despatches from Japan state that the Mikado had declared war against the Tycoon.

DOMESTIC.

New York, April 15. The Post has the following details of the Erie Railroad disaster;

One of the most terrible railroad disasters on record occurred early this morning at Carl's Rock, on the line of the Erie Railroad, ten miles above Port Jervis.

At the scene of the accident the bed of the road is cut in the side of the bluff overhanging the river. The ledge on which the track runs is very narrow, and the consequence was that the cars were thrown off the track by the breaking of a rail and down an embankment of twenty feet, thereby greatly increasing the loss of life.

To add to the horror of the scenes which ensued, one of the cars took fire, and it is said that several passengers were burned to death.

A London telegram says dispatches received from Barcelona report that the entire kingdom of Spain is agitated by a revolutionary spirit, and that the country is much excited. Martial law has been proclaimed by a Royal order in the province of Catalonia.

Guadaloupe dates of March 24th state that a great wave filled the harbor of Lemoule on the 10th of March, similar to the one that rushed into St. Thomas harbor last fall, but larger. It lasted twenty-four hours. The sea receded thirty miles, and left all the ships aground, when the gigantic wave returned, threatening general destruction. A British vessel, deeply laden, was smashed to pieces.

A Montreal special says all the correspondence which has passed between the Fenian lodges in New York and Montreal has been seized by the Government, and a grand exodus of prominent Irishmen from Canada to the United States commenced this afternoon in consequence. Over four hundred persons are implicated in the correspondence with O'Neill and O Mahoney, and the entire affair will be brought before the Court in Ottawa. It is reported that an international case will be made of it, and documents have been discovered which tend to show that the murder of Mr. McGee was plotted in New York and approved of before a committee in Montreal.

The St. Lawrence river is opened to Quebec.

TO BE CLOSED.—Dr. Dio Lewis' Seminary for Young Ladies at Lexington, which was established four years ago, will be discontinued at the close of the present year. The one hundred thousand dollars necessary to rebuild it seems, in the present general depression, impossible to raise. Dr. Lewis will, however, resume his Training School for Teachers of the New Gymnastics in this city.

THE ROMAN QUESTION.—Recent advices from Florence say that the Italian Government, under the pressure of France and Prussia, has renounced the project of making Rome the capital of Italy, though it will not abjure the vote of the Italian Parliament; and the design is to make Rome a free city under the Presidency of the Pope. France stipulates, however, that no change is to take place during the life of Pius IX.

A MINISTER RESTORED.—Twelve years ago, Rev. R. G. C. Hempie, a Presbyterian minister, was suspended on the charge of intemperance. His wife, unable longer to live with him, obtained a legal separation. Some time ago Mr. Hemple reformed. After a long probation, he was re-united to his wife, and his scattered family were gathered together. Last week, the Third Presbytery assembled in New York and restored him to the christian ministry.

A SPIRITUALIST ON THE WATERS.—Just before noon yesterday a man over sixty years of age left the mouth of the Genessee for Oswego in a little boat not more than fourteen feet long and having a flat bottom. He put up his little sail and stood away to the eastward, his craft bounding over the billows, which were rolling pretty high under a strong westerly gale. He could be seen for six or eight miles from Charlotte and going all right. This foolish and adventurous navigator says he is acting under the direction of a spirit. He, with this craft, was to go the Atlantic, but directed to make a trial trip to Oswego.—Rochester N. Y. Union.

PRESBYTERIAN REUNION.—For thirty-one years the Presbyterians of the United States have been divided and known respectively as the New and Old School, but a general Convention of delegates from the various divisions adopted, last year, a basis for reunion, and it is now being discussed and acted upon in the subordinate synods and presbyteries whose ratification is necessary. The Presbyterians of Western New York recently met at Buffalo, and unanimously agreed to the proposed plan. Their example will probably be generally followed throughout the country, and as the leading clergymen on both sides are in favor of the measure, a great breach af thirty years' standing will at last be healed. The abrogation of slavery and the prevalence of more liberal views respecting abstract questions of theology have materially paved the way for the unity of the denomination.

SPIRITUALISM.—Horace Greeley sums up as the result of a number of years' investigation and observation of Spiritualism, that the thing itself is inexplicable; that men and women have not been made better by it, on the contrary have grown lax in their notions of marriage, divorce and moral purity; and that the aggregate of insanity and suicide has been increased by Spiritualism. A good many others will agree with him.

☞ The present is the greatest maple sugar season Vermont has experienced within the memory of the oldest inhabitant. Sylvanus Morse of East Montpelier is the maple sugar king of the State. He has 2750 trees tapped, and thus far has made 700 to 1000 pounds. His total product this year will probably be from five to six tons. The sugar product is equally great throughout the whole State.

☞ The ruins of a town, canals, etc., have been discovered in Utah, a few miles above the mouth of Salt river. The canals are from thirty-five to fifty feet in width, and the walls, which are from five to eight feet high, have been traced ten or fifteen miles from the river. The ruins are at intervals the length of the valley.

☞ A well ninety-five feet deep at Marshall, Me., has struck water which ebbs and flows like the ocean tides. There is an abundance of water twelve hours out of twenty-four, it appearing and disappearing once in every period of that length.

☞ A fountain, composed of four waterfalls, eight lions spouting water, and an immense candlebra, to light up the whole at night, is to be erected at Paris on the site of the Chateau d'Eau. It will surpass every fountain ever before seen.

☞ A contemporary published in the Western part of the State says that the continued spring snows have been very fatal to the birds, and that thousands of them have been picked up dead from starvation.

☞ The agricultural press of America is equal in ability, circulation and capital, to what the newspaper press in the whole world was at the commencement of the century.

☞ The last recipe for keeping eggs is to place them in boiling water twelve seconds. This thickens the inside skin and keeps out the air.

☞ A young Indian girl, perfectly wild, was recently purchased in Terra del Fuego, for a bag of biscuits.

☞ Sheep manure and soot, a peck of each well stirred in thirty gallons of rain water, is good for watering potted plants.

☞ There are ten thousand private schools in England.

☞ By feeding tomatoes to cows, it is said, the milk, cream and butter will be much improved.

TRUTH.—Some one has beautifully said: "Truth is immortal, the sword cannot pierce it, fire cannot consume it, prisons cannot incarcerate it, famine cannot starve it."

☞ Men wrangle in assertion and argument; and quiet truth disappears amid the noise and confusion.

☞ The best way to do good to ourselves is to do good to others, the right way to gather is to scatter.

To the Preaching Brethren.

Preaching brethren are requested to make no appointments for Guilford until they find out whether they conflict with others.

S. ROBINSON, Cor. Sec.

Bro. Leonard S. Rand is chosen corresponding secretary of the church in Dover, N. H. Brethren wishing to go there to preach, will please correspond with him.

Preaching brethren intending to visit Lewiston, Me., before sending their appointments, will please consult the committee through Albert Burgess, corresponding secretary, to save confusion.

Preaching brethren, intending to visit East Canaan, N. H., before sending their appointments, will please correspond with E. Whittier or J. B. Eastman. E. S. BALLARD, Clerk.

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

A Word of Explanation.

To the Readers of the Crisis:—Respecting our pamphlet, I stated that it would contain about 70 pp., and it only contains 60. Just before the printer began his work, by his suggestion we enlarged the size a good deal, making a larger page. Therefore, while the matter is there, the pages are less. We doubt not but you will all think that the valuable quotations it contains from eminent men, profound scholars, and devout ministers, are well worth 15 cts. We intend having two thousand copies, and we trust that our debt, which is considerable, will be soon lessened by orders received.

Those who responded to our former call, have our thanks for the aid thus afforded. One brother sent in the names of nine ministers, of different denominations, to whom he wished the pamphlet sent. This is what we want. Circulate it among those who think "the good time coming" is before our Lord's return. We will say to all who will order copies for this purpose, we will send ten for a dollar. MARY D. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me.

Tent Meetings.

To the brethren and sisters scattered throughout Massachusetts and New Hampshire, Greeting: Whereas the time for preaching the gospel is short, and what is done for the salvation of sinners must be done quickly, I address these lines to you. Brn. Kingsbury of Chelsea, and Ford of Concord, and others, have provided a suitable tent for the business, and placed it in the field—a free tent—and given me charge of the same. Now I want all who desire tent meetings in their vicinity the coming season, to write me at once. Bro. S. W. Thurber and other efficient preachers will assist in the work. Our first meeting will be held in Charlestown, Mass., commencing Thursday evening, May 14th, and hold over Sunday. We shall expect the brethren and sisters to co-operate with us in the work. Let prayer go up to God, that his blessing may attend. Per order,

D. M. LEAVITT.

Tent and Campmeetings in Wisconsin.

A tent meeting will commence in Brodhead, Green Co., Wis., May 15th. Elder J. V. Himes will help us.

A tent meeting will begin at Fairfield, Sauk Co., Wis., May 30th. Elder Miles Grant will help us. At the same place a campmeeting will begin June 1st.

A tent meeting will begin at Fenimore, Grant Co., Wis., June 12th. Eld. N. A. Hitchcock will assist us. WM. SHELDON.

Notice.

The Advent church now worshiping in Cooper Institute will, after the 1st of May, remove to Botanic Hall, 68 East Broadway, where the church will be pleased to have calls from the brethren who love the Lord and his appearing (for that is the only test we have ever had), whether they believe in the non-resurrection of the wicked, or in an orthodox devil, or not. They will receive a cordial reception, as they have done for these last years, as all will testify who have ever preached for us. There is no change of feeling in the church in our liberality, to think and let think as the dear brethren choose, who love the Lord and his appearing. M. E. GREEN, for the church.

Conference.

There will be a quarterly conference in Bridgewater, Vt., Saturday and Sunday, May 9th and 10th, services beginning with prayer, Friday, 7 P. M. Business and conference Saturday, 10 A. M., preaching 2 P. M., and Sunday 10.30 A. M. and 2 P. M. Lord's supper after morning service.

G. W. STETSON.

Tent Meeting.

I want all that desire a tent meeting during the season in their locality to write me at once, so I can make my arrangements not to travel over the ground more than once, as I had to do last season. Write at once. My address is Edenboro, Erie Co., Pa. J. WENDELL.

Notice.

The Conn. Second Advent Christian Conference will hold its second quarterly session at Bristol, commencing Wednesday, April 22d, at 7½ P. M. Come, brethren and sisters, from the North, East, South and West. Come praying. Come prepared to work for the Lord. Will all the preachers come? We want to see you all. Will the churches send delegates? See to it immediately. Let those who want the missionary to come and labor in their vicinity, come and state their case. Let us make a united effort to get the present truth preached in every school district in Connecticut.

B. ST. JOHN, Sec.

The Maine Tract Fund.

WM. H. MITCHELL, R. R. YORK, S. K. PARTRIDGE, } Society Officers.

It was resolved at the last annual conference that our ministers in the State raise, by subscription or otherwise, ten dollars each for the Maine Tract Fund for 1868. We hope the brethren and sisters will take hold of this matter with the ministry and do their part. All remittances and orders for tracts will be sent to the Agent,

J. A. LIBBY, West Poland, Maine.

Conference.

If the Lord will, a conference will be held at East Rochester, N. H., commencing April 23d, 1868, at 7½ o'clock P. M., and holding over the following Sunday. Whoever will let him come. DEDICATION of the Lord's house Saturday, April 25th. Bro. Grant and others will be present to preach the word. J. C. SHOREY, for the Church.

Conference at West Poland.

There will be a conference held at West Poland, Me., (Free Chapel), commencing Thursday evening, April 30th, to continue over the following Lord's day. Elder John Couch will be with the brethren to preach the word. All are invited.

J. A. LIBBY.

For the World's Crisis.

IMPROMPTU.

"Patience is a heavenly virtue."
Blest are the lips that thus can speak,
From a true heart these words sublime,
No truer ever written were,
In records of all passing time.

"Patience a heavenly virtue is,"
A jewel of the rarest worth;
Though it may dwell in heart of man,
It claims a high and holy birth.

"Patience a heavenly virtue is";
Thus write it fair on mem'ry's scroll,
And hide it in the deep recess,
The inner temple of the soul;

And let it bud and blossom there,
And bring forth fruit that shall abide,
Perfected by this rarest grace,
We to the Highest are allied.

And when upon life's weary way,
I sicken with the toil of strife,
That press the soul to wild dismay
In this vain, transient, mortal life;

When the tried spirit sinks all faint,
From ever drinking sorrow's cup,
These precious words shall come a balm,
To strengthen, cheer, and lift me up.

Coldwater, Mich. CARRIE HILL.

For the World's Crisis.

THE SPIRIT OF ANTICHRIST.

"And every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come [en sarki] in the flesh is not of God: and this is that spirit of antichrist, whereof ye have heard that it should come; and even now already is it in the world."—1 JOHN 4: 3.

There were those in the church in John's day who denied that Christ was human save in appearance only. But why did they deny this? They could not dispute the fact that he was born of his mother Mary; and to deny he was human, they would have to deny his conception, the blood connection between him and his mother. And this it seems they did deny, from the very emphatic manner in which John asserts to the contrary, when he said, "Who is he that overcometh the world, but he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God? This is he that came by water and blood, even Jesus Christ; not by water only, but by water and blood." Chap. 5: 5–6.

The word "came" here relates to the generation of the Son of God. He came by generation from the divine Being, by being conceived in water and blood; and, therefore, partook of a flesh and blood personality. And what could have induced any of those ancient heretics to affirm the contrary? Did they believe, or claim, that he was God in his own nature, and the Son of God in name only, and, therefore, in no wise human? If they did, their belief has been somewhat modified since, and made a little more orthodox, by the admission that he came into, not "in the flesh." But it is the same spirit of antichrist after all. For when we confess that Jesus Christ came in the flesh, the word came can have no reference to coming down from the celestial regions to be born; since, in that case, he could not have had flesh till after he came. To say he came in flesh, is to claim that he came into being, in the flesh as the Son of God.

The contradictory of this is to claim that he came, not in, but into the flesh. And this is not a confession, but an evasion of the text given by the apostle to try professors of christianity. For that this text was given to try those who believed professedly in Christ, is evident from the fact that those who did not abide the text were said to be of "that spirit of antichrist, whereof ye have heard that it should come, and even now already is it in the world," referring right back to chap. 2: 18–19, where he says, "Little children, it is the last time; and as ye have heard that antichrists shall come, even now are there many antichrists, whereby we know it is the last time. They went out from us, but they were not of us; for if they had been of us, they would no doubt have continued with us; but they went out, that they might be made manifest that they were not all of us."

This proves, therefore, that the antichrist he spoke of was a false christianity. And he continues right on, plainly intimating that some of them denied that Jesus was the Christ, referring to some of them (as Cerinthus) who "separated Jesus from Christ as two persons, and denied him to be the Son of God," and then says, "He is antichrist, that denieth the Father and Son." Verse 22. The terms, Father and Son, have a fixed signification derived from common usage, implying the generations of one being from another, and so clearly teaches that the Father and Son are two distinct beings. This Trinitarians deny, and claim that he and the Father are one being, and quote as proof, "I and my Father are one;" "meaning," they say, "one divine Being—one God."

But this is a false interpretation of the Savior's words, as is manifest from his prayer, where he prayed to the Father for his disciples, "that they may be one, even as we are one." John 17: 22. Can any suppose for a moment that his disciples are to become one being? How, then, can they be one, even as he and the Father are one, if he and the Father were "one divine Being—one God?" Both ideas are absolutely absurd. To say he and the Father are one being, is to deny the Father and Son. And this theory does not agree with Christ's teachings, and is, therefore, against him, and inspired by the spirit of antichrist. Christ is the Son of God as man; for he asked his disciples, Whom do men say that I the Son of man am? And they said, some say that thou art John the Baptist; some Elias; and others, Jeremias, or one of the prophets. He saith unto them, But whom say ye that I am? And Simon Peter answered and said, Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God. And Jesus answered and said unto him, Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-jona; for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven. And I say also unto thee, that thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." Matt. 16: 13, 18.

The declaration of Christ to Simon, "Thou art Peter," was made in consequence of his conversion, and, therefore, denotes the faith confessed to by him, so the rock on which he was to build his church was Peter's faith, and not on him as a man. And the faith confessed to, was that Jesus as the Son of man was "the Christ, the Son of the living God." And the living God includes the whole Godhead, and thus excludes the Christ from any other relation to God than that of sonship. And the Scriptures nowhere assert that Christ was God manifest in the flesh; but rather, "God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto himself;" and, "In him dwelleth all the fullness of the Godhead bodily;" or, in other words, God was manifest in his Son.

"He that is not for me, said Christ, "is against me; and he that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad." To be against him is to cherish the spirit of antichrist. And to entertain any theory which denies Christ's real sonship, is to entertain the spirit of antichrist. This spirit is simply an unbelieving evasion of the truth, as it respects Christ, and may and does take different forms. But the most dangerous is that which claims to be the most orthodox, because more are liable to be deceived thereby.

A christian may be infected partially with this spirit, but not wholly, without destroying christianity out of his nature. A christian may be afflicted with doubts, or unbelief, the same as some may entertain a theory through fear which practically denies the Father and Son, without its being any part of their real faith.

WM. HOBBS.

For the World's Crisis.

WORLDLY MINDEDNESS AND RELIGIOUS AMUSEMENTS.

The church of Christ is denominated "a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people," names which are given them to mark a distinction between the church and the world. The children of God are also called "pilgrims and strangers" in this present evil world. Their citizenship (conversation) is in heaven; they have no "continuing city," but are "seeking one to come."

In all the teachings of Christ and the apostles, there is a distinction made between the two classes—the church and the world. Said Christ,—"I have chosen you out of the world." And Paul, "Be not conformed to the world"; also, "Come out from the world, and be ye separate." "Be not unequally yoked together with unbelievers." "Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them." These and other commands are strictly enjoined upon the church, and a full separation is ordered of the Lord.

The primitive church and all true hearted christians have obeyed these injunctions, and lived up to the spirit of God's word. Upon their conversion to christianity they renounced the world, the flesh, and the devil. Soldiers and men of war threw aside their instruments of death and their military vocations to follow the Prince of peace; with the pleasure of the world, carnal gratification, the ease and comforts of life, and lived a life of cross-bearing and self-denial. Men who were honored by their nation, and cast aside honor, pomp, pride, took upon themselves the reproach of Christ, and were willing to be called fools that they might gain Christ.

But how is it now? Do we now see the same spirit in the church? We do not. Let us look into the churches and see some of the principles of which man's religion is made up at the present time.

In the first place, instead of the devotion to God once manifested in the church, there appears to be a union, heart and hand, with the world. Members of the church buckle on the sword, shoulder the musket, and march to battle in bloody conflict. Ministers of the gospel leave their high calling to go forth and kill those for whom Christ died. They preach war from the pulpit, from which in times past "Christ and him crucified" has been preached to humble souls. They talk war, war, bitter war. Politics also receive their share of attention. Ministers preach political sermons, and make political stump speeches. They are to be found in Congress, and the legislators and law-makers, and others of the same stamp, are, to a great extent, composed of ministers. They are among the wire-pullers and office-seekers. The leading church men are the leading politicians. The church is full of clerical speculators and religious money-makers.

Then there are the religious pleasure-seekers united with the world. It was not long since I heard a professed christian say while exhorting sinners to come to Christ, "Do not think that in becoming christians you will have to throw aside or forsake the world; you have not. The religion of Christ will sweeten the pleasures of this world and make them better."

And the world has a hand with the church. A church was built last year by a society in the M. E. connection in N. H., the corner stone of which was laid with very appropriate masonic ceremonies! The only thing with which the church had any thing to do, was the oration by the presiding elder, and he had that privilege because he was one of the Order!

But I wish to say something in regard to religious amusement. If we say any thing about these things, there will be a host of Rev. Mr's. and D. D.'s standing ready to justify them; but we care nothing about what worldly professors may say, or what they will think in regard to us; we must speak the truth, let man hear or forbear.

The church must keep up various sorts of amusements in these days. Sometimes they wish to raise money to pay a debt on the "meeting house," or to cushion the pews, or to carpet the floor, or to buy a S. S. Library or to pay the minister's salary, or some such thing. Churches go to work in various ways to accomplish their ends. In the first place they try to show that such things are all right, and to quiet any doubt that may arise in the minds of any old-fashioned person and then go on with their would be "good (?) work." There are many ways in which to accomplish this. In some instances the ladies give the preacher a quarter to allow them to kiss him, and the prettiest of them set themselves up to be kissed for a fee. This may seem absurd, but it is true. The former was done in S——, N. H., a few years ago, and the latter has been done in other places. But these are extreme cases, and not much in vogue.

Sometimes they will get up a petty lottery, selling lots of tickets, all of which are warranted to draw the prize; or if not, the purpose is good, and that is enough! And then they have their ring-cakes and gambling table, raffles, and grab-bags, post offices and shooting matches, fishing-pond, and other such things. And there must be something to amuse the young and the gay; so they get up a Christmas-tree, upon which they place gifts for one and all (if their friends are wealthy,) in a great variety, the choice of various minds. The exercises of the evening are introduced by prayer, and then Santa Claus enters to give away the presents, dressed up in the most comical manner possible, and almost a wonder if the thing does not close with a dance.

These things are patronized by the church, carried on by the church. No wonder the world stand back aghast, astonished! Said a young lady in W——, not long since, after attending one of the church frolics (an unconverted person,) "I do not believe that there was a single christian there!" Why not? Because if they had been, they would not have been there. We do not say that those words are just so, but we do say that they were deceived and allured astray. The shepherds go astray, and the sheep follow.

And then there are the donation parties, which have been known to close with a dance. Then there are the wooden, tin, silver, and golden weddings. These may all be called refined sins. The more open sins, such as an attendance upon the circus, the theatre, and other such things, are all patronized by the church.

The heart sickens at the thought; the soul sinks down in sorrow before the advancing tide of iniquity that is sweeping in upon the church. But the warnings of faithful souls are all unheard, their entreaties all unheeded; the sighs and cries uttered in secret places over the sins committed in the land are all unnoticed by the cold, formal church. How many are there who like Jeremiah are saying, "Oh! that my head were waters, and mine eyes a fountain of tears; that I might weep day and night for the slain of the daughter of my people"? But if we say anything of this kind now we are called old fogies. But what of that? We must lift up our voice "like a trumpet, cry aloud and spare not." We must declare the whole counsel of God, and not wink at sin or keep back a part of the price.

Are the Advent people, those who are called out from the world in the last days of time, embracing those things they once rejected? Are we, my brethren, within a few months of an eternal judgment, and are we coming down to the plains of Ono? Are we stopping by the way to pluck earthly flowers? Are we like Nero, who fiddled while Rome was burning? are we like him playing with earthly toys, and trifling and idling away the few golden hours that remain in probation, while the elements are gathering for the final conflict, and the clouds for the coming storm?

The Lord is soon coming, and let us be ready to meet him in peace. Let us be separate from the world, and live for God and right. Let our example and deeds, as well as our words and precepts, tell for God; and when Jesus comes may he say, "Come, ye blessed of my Father." EDMUND S. MOULTON.

A SHORT SERMON.

"He was there in the prison."—GEN. 39: 20.

Yes, Joseph was in prison, but not for any crimes that he had committed; but because he was falsely accused by a corrupt person. Joseph was a faithful servant of the Most High God; and we all know that he can cause the wrath of man to praise him. "All things work together for good to them that love God; to them who are the called according to his purpose"; or to them who love and obey the Lord. But let us look at the condition of Joseph in prison, suffering in a loathsome dungeon; when, in fact, he was innocent of doing the wrong that was laid to his charge. How many there are who are cruelly abused and falsely accused, just because they stand firm in the truth of God, and will not be driven from the path of righteousness by the wicked powers that the devil can bring to bear upon them. O how excellent it is to be true and faithful to the Lord.

Think for a moment how it turned out with Joseph. Although he passed through severe afflictions and persecutions, yet God's wonderful mercy and kind providence raised Joseph out of all his afflictions, and exalted him to dignity and honor, and placed him in a position to save the lives of thousands who must have fallen a prey to cruel famine had it not been for Joseph, who was conducted by the wisdom of God.

In the case of Joseph, we see the kind care of God over those who are humble and faithful, and put their trust in him; and how God will humble and punish those who do his dear children wrong, even if it is their near connection, who would sell them into bondage. O how true it is, as saith the Lord, "he that toucheth mine anointed, toucheth the apple of mine eye."

But how did Joseph become so familiar with God? We answer, by faith and prayer. We know that God hears prayer when offered up in humble faith; and I feel very sure that our heavenly Father will always hear the prayers of his saints, and deliver them out of their afflictions, or make use of those afflictions to their great benefit, when they pray to him in the way and manner as we are taught in his blessed word. I fear there is a great lack of faith in us when we try to pray; and sometimes I think the question that is recorded in the Bible,—"When the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?" must receive almost or quite a negative answer. In the days of the prophets and martyrs, there were men and women mighty in faith and prayer, and it was a positive fact that their prayers would move the hand that moves the world.

How was it with good old Daniel, the prophet of the Lord? How much faith did he have, when the lions could not open their jaws to devour him while in their den? And how came the lion's jaws to open so quick, when Daniel's enemies were thrown into their den? We answer, the God of heaven was there by his mighty power, in answer to prayer, to protect his servant, and to punish those who had plotted the destruction of that holy man of God. Look for a moment at the deliverance of the Jews from destruction, by the overruling hand of God, when Haman and his associates tried to get Mordecai hung and his people put to death. See how God delivered his people in answer to prayer; for Queen Esther and Mordecai held a prayer meeting, and God heard their prayers; and I verily believe that God is the same almighty being now that he was then.

When the bitter enemies of God erect a gallows to hang his saints on, he is able to take care of those enemies, and punish them, and deliver his dear children. But, look at the case of Paul and Silas, in prison; what did they do? They sang praises to the God of heaven. And was this all they did? No, indeed; they held a prayer-meeting at midnight in the prison, and the prisoners heard them. A good time for holding prayer-meetings; for it was self-evident that their midnight prayer-meeting was not to be seen of men, but to be seen of God; and God could see and hear, and answer too. Yes, glory to his precious name; he could send an earthquake at midnight, and shake the old heathen prison all to pieces; and break the fetters or bands that bound the apostles. At another time, when Peter was thrust into prison, the dear brethren and sisters could hold a prayer-meeting in the night, and pray to the Lord, to deliver Peter from his bondage; and God had plenty of angels that could fly swiftly through the darkness of night, and find the way into the prison where Peter was. What kind of keys did the angel have to enable him to unlock those big doors and iron gates? If I can understand the book that tells us so much about faith, I must believe that the prayer of faith is a key that will unlock the great store-house of blessings and mercies, and cause them to descend upon the dear saints in copious showers of peace, light, and love.

Now, dear brethren and sisters, if we should have to pass through great afflictions and persecutions before Christ comes, let us never take the vengeance into our own hands, and undertake to punish our enemies; but let God punish them in his own way. Let us ever cherish the loving and tender spirit of Christ, and manifest it in all our deliberations among our fellow beings; and try to be as near like our blessed Master as possible.

THE BLESSED HOPE.

It is no wonder the apostle calls our hope a "blessed hope." What is there to be compared with it? O, how it cheers and comforts us, while wandering up and down this vale of tears. The sights and sounds that greet our eyes and ears, from time to time, would indeed cause our hearts to sink within us, were it not for the hope that this state of things will not always exist; that soon the King of kings will come and banish all suffering and pain.

"O hail, happy day,
That ends our tears and sorrows."

But few have an idea of the suffering and misery there is in large cities. I have seen more in going from garret to cellar, since I have been in the city of New York (which is now about six weeks), than in all my life-time before. One could hardly believe that human beings could live as many do. We sometimes find a family of six or eight living in a cellar, so dark that we could hardly see, and very damp. There they live away from daylight, sometimes having nothing to eat, living without hope and without God in the world. Some in old garrets, which could only be reached by climbing up rickety old stairs, with the assistance of a rope. On reaching the top, we find a small room, with but little furniture except a stove, a bunch of straw on the floor, with a few old rags spread over it for a bed, and one or two sick persons living there; sometimes with hardly clothing enough to cover their nakedness. Rents here are enormous. Two very small and uncomfortable rooms rent from eight to twelve dollars per month; and in these times it is about all the poor creatures can do, when well, to get enough together to pay their rent, and enough food to keep them from starving. It is discouraging to visit such places, and not have the means to relieve their wants; in some measure, at least.

Since Sr. Smith started this mission, means have been sent, so that she has been able to help a great many; but, from some cause or other, for the last month there has been but very little sent, either in money, clothing, or provisions; consequently, it has been impossible to do much for the poor. She has not received enough to pay the last month's rent for the Mission house. Now, brethren and sisters, what is to be done? Must this mission go down, after all the toil and hard labor, both of body and mind, which it has cost to bring it where it is? Must this great work stop here? It must unless the means come to carry it on. Some may say, If the Lord is in it, if it is in the hands of the Lord, he will sustain it. But the Lord works by means. May the Lord direct, and help each one to do their whole duty in this matter, give as the Lord prospers them; and those who are engaged in this great work will try and do their part, and thus the work may go on, and souls be gathered in to the fold of Christ. Time is short. The harvest is great. May the Lord help us to be faithful, and prepare us for the soon coming kingdom, is the prayer of your sister, hoping for deliverance when Jesus comes, M. E. DOW.

THANK THE LORD!

For that blessed interview with the dear children at Mechanic Falls, and for the privilege of hearing Bro. Grant preach and converse of the things pertaining to the kingdom and the pilgrim's pathway here in this vale of tears. It is cheering to meet with one who is happy and cheerful amid all the trials of life; who has conquered self, and is ready to reach out the helping hand to others who are contending with the infirmities of the flesh, the temptations of the devil, and the bitter trials and sorrows incident to a life in this sin-cursed earth.

Bro. G. used the line and plummet faithfully and hewed close. We felt the axe, for it hit some sharp corners, but we thank God that there was life enough in us to feel the blows when we were hit. The smart was soon over and we've felt better ever since.

It is an awful thing to be so dead we can feel neither axe or chisel. We should be thankful for the rod that whips us into a line.

There is a little band of faithful laborers at the Falls: then there were good soldiers gathered in from the different stations round about, of all classes. Recruiting officers, standard-bearers, musicians and privates, and plenty of good honest sutlers who furnished food without money and without price. There were old veterans who served in the war of '43, and have kept the colors flying through all the darkness and discouragements of the tarrying time. There were robust soldiers in the prime of life, who have fought in more than one "battle in the wilderness." Then there were fresh volunteers who have just got a taste of the "manna," but they seemed to be armed from the King's armory, for their weapons had the true ring. Some had just learned the rather humbling fact that they were mortal! Others had made the discovery that their Bible education had all been wrong, and have entered upon a course of study.

Well, the hardest part of the task is accomplished when they have unlearned what they have learned wrong. Light and truth come fast when people are willing to receive it. How many have gone through the difficult process of unlearning the hard task of pulling up traditional weeds which have taken deep root. Some people have been trying for years to straighten out and mend up the old tangled theological web. Because it has two or three good threads, they hang to it and endure all the contrary-twisted, and no-twisted ones, and try to weave good works on to the worthless warp, hoping to make good cloth. They had better throw away the old snarl, and weave on to the good, sound, warranted gospel warp, and then their labor will amount to something.

But we are wandering from Mechanic Falls. There were two good souls who had lately been scourged from the Baptist church. The flesh was weak and seemed to be a little bit sore, but in spirit they were willing to suffer all things and endure all things for Christ. When they escaped from the old ship (or wreck), they jumped on board the life boat, "God's Truth," and are now in the light, rejoicing in hope, and expecting soon to see the glory of God revealed. We can afford to bear the malice of the churches and the scorn of the world, when we get the glorious, harmonious chain of jewels revealed in the word of God. How bright they shine with celestial lustre. By these the poor of this world are made rich in faith and heirs of the kingdom.

There are some bitter enemies to "the faith" in that place; but they have adopted an Indian mode of warfare, skulking around out of sight, and firing from ambush. We think the reason they are unwilling to come out into the open field with their colors, and fight like true soldiers, must be because their flag is so soiled and tattered they are ashamed to display it. Perhaps it is policy to keep it carefully folded and concealed, for a few rounds of shot and shell from the battery of God's truth would utterly demolish the old rag.

There is one Goliath who has flourished his spear, and defied the army of Israel for a long time, but when little David appears he hides in the trenches. His church looks a little like a fortress, but the "embrasures" are so small, we should not think they could use very big guns in there, or get much light. No doubt they need "light" more than they do great guns. Lord, send the light!

The leaven is working beautifully now; may it work still more. May the little band be instrumental in bringing many from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God. B. P. FRENCH.

THE MINIMUM CHRISTIAN.

The minimum christian! And who is he? The christian who is going to heaven at the cheapest rate possible. The christian who intends to get all of the world he can and not meet the worldling's doom. The christian who aims to have as little religion as he can without lacking it all together.

The minimum christian goes to church in the morning and in the afternoon also, unless it rains, or is too warm, or too cold, or he is sleepy, or has a headache from eating too much at dinner. He listens most respectfully to the preacher, and joins in prayer and praise. He applies the truth very sensibly sometimes to himself, often to his neighbors.

The minimum christian is very friendly to all good works. He wishes them well, but it is not in his power to do much for them. The Sabbath school he looks upon as an admirable institution, especially for the neglected and ignorant. It is not convenient however for him to take a class. His business engagements are so pressing during the week that he needs Sabbath as a day of rest, nor does he think himself qualified to act as teacher. There are so many persons better prepared for this important duty that he must beg to be excused; still he will do it if he must. He is in favor of visiting the poor; but he has no time to take part in those labors of love. He is very friendly to home and foreign missions, and gives his mite. He thinks there are "too many appeals;" but he gives, if not enough to save his reputation, pretty near it; at all events, he aims at it.

The minimum christian is not clear on a number of points. The opera and dancing, perhaps the theatre and card playing, large fashionable parties, give him much trouble. He cannot see the harm in this, or that, or the other popular amusement. There is nothing in the Bible against it. He does not see but a man may be a christian, and dance, or go to the opera. He knows several excellent persons who do. Why should not he?

In short, the minimum christian knows that he cannot serve God and Mammon. He would if he could; but he will come just as near doing so as he can. He will give to himself and the world all that he may, and to God as little as he can, and yet not lose his soul. He stands so close to the dividing line between the people of God and the people of the world, that it is hard to say on which side of it he actually is found.

Ah, my brother, are you making this attempt? Beware, lest you find at last that in trying to get to heaven with as little religion as possible, you have missed it altogether; lest, without gaining the whole world, you lose your own soul. The true child of God does not say "How little," but "How much may I do for God?" They thus judge, that as one died for all, he died that they which live should no more live for themselves, but for him that died for them. Leaving the things that are behind, they reach forward toward those that are before, ever exclaiming, "What shall I render unto the Lord for all his benefits?"

Reader, are you a minimum christian? There is reason to fear that such are no christians at all. "Not every one that saith, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven."—The Church Union.

For the World's Crisis.

A LETTER FROM A SICK ROOM.

BRO. GRANT:—How thankful and glad we are to see the Crisis, while imprisoned in earth, and bound with disease. It comes filled with good things,—short sermons, warm exhortations, loving epistles from the dear saints, good news from far countries, and from the different missions, telling what the Lord is doing for the freedmen and others; so blessed to see the care he has for his little ones, and for the orphans. They are his special care. He has promised to be a Father to the fatherless, and he will do it. He will have his servants, for they are his hands in carrying on the work of taking care of them. That is the reason Mr. Muller of England prospered. He had the Father of the fatherless to help him. It was not at his expense, but the God of heaven and earth takes good care of his children, without any danger of his banks failing; he has them so arranged, the more they pay out the more comes in. He is so rich, there is no danger in trusting him with much or little. All that give to him will be well paid. His banks are always full.

Many who profess to serve the Lord are walking in darkness, and are in bondage, but have a plenty of this world's goods around them, yet find no real peace or pleasure. They do not live near enough to the Lord for him to tell or show them what he wants of them, or what to do to get light and salvation. But the prophet Isaiah (58: 10) tells the whole story: "If thou draw out thy soul to the hungry, and satisfy the afflicted soul, then shall thy light rise in obscurity, and thy darkness be as the noonday; and the Lord shall guide thee continually, and satisfy thy soul in drouth; and thou shalt be like a spring of water, whose waters fail not." What rich promises, and so true!

The Crisis comforts much my dear aged mother, eighty-three years old, who attends no meetings, and hears no preaching but that and the Bible. Many thanks to you and the Lord for the Crisis; and while you are feeding the flock with meat in due season, with the signs of the Lord's coming and the preparation, the Lord feed you with the bread from heaven, refresh you from salvation's well, and fill you with his free Spirit.

Many thanks to the dear saints for their kindness and goodness to me in my afflictions. The Lord will bless and reward them abundantly. Thank his glorious name.

"He doeth all things well," and no good thing will he withhold from us. Yours in the Lord, CATHERINE DAGGETT.

FAMILY FILTERS.

We have called attention to Kedzie's excellent filters for rain or river water; but was not then able to give the prices of the different sizes, which are as follows:—

No. 1	holds	1	gallon,	$9.00
No. 2	"	1½	"	10.50
No. 3	"	2	"	12.00
No. 4	"	3	"	13.50
No. 5	"	4	"	15.00

We should recommend Nos. 4 or 5. They are manufactured in Rochester, N. Y., and should be in every family where they must otherwise use hard water. They can be sent safely by express to any part of the country. Address Messrs. Kedzie and Bunnell, Rochester, N. Y.—EDITOR.

AIR BATH, ROCHESTER, N. Y.

BRO. GRANT:—For the benefit of the afflicted I would say, Bro. Taylor of this city took a severe cold, and was threatened with a fever; after some proper remedies he was restored, but going to work too soon in the cold weather, he was taken down with the inflammatory rheumatism, and for ten days was unable to move hand or foot. Our brethren that took care of him became exhausted, and he was moved to the city hospital. Here he was improving for a few days, but in consequence of exposure, after sweating, he took cold again, and when we saw him he was in much worse condition than before. By entreaties from his wife, through the solicitation of Bro. Lawson, who runs the engine in the "air bath" institution, under the direction of Dr. Stone, we removed him there for treatment.

Saturday, at half-past two o'clock, I entered the bath with him and the Doctor. He had a raging fever, useless limbs, and swollen joints. He sat like a skeleton, with pulse at one hundred and twenty-five per minute. In thirty minutes he began to be moistened with sweat. His pulse was reduced to one hundred and fourteen. In sixty minutes he could use his hands. His perspiration was continued for about two hours. He was then removed, in no wise debilitated. His fever was much abated. Monday, at ten o'clock, we again attended him in the bath. After he began to sweat, we encouraged him to stand up, which he did with considerable strength, and lifted up his feet with ease. This effectually broke up the fever. The next morning we found him with a good appetite, but a slight pain in the shoulders. One more bath and the cure is perfect. This is unprecedented in all my observations. We deem it due to the institution, and to the afflicted, to speak of the things we know, and to testify of things we have seen. H. PRATT.

THE FOOT.—It may be doubted whether there exists throughout the whole civilized world a well-formed foot. Many exquisites of both sexes claim admiration for their pedal extremities, but it is the boots and shoes which cover them which we are called on to admire. Their feet, if bared, would present a very great divergence from the classical idea of beauty. The firmly-planted foot, neither too large nor too small, but justly proportioned to the height and weight it sustains, the smooth surface and regular curved lines, the distinctness of the divisions, and the perfect formation of each toe, with its well-marked separateness, and its gradation of size and regularity of detail, to the very tip of the nail, are now to be seen only in art.

In Greek nature they were found, for the ancient sandal, which left the foot unfettered, gave freedom to the development of its natural grace and proportions. The modern boot or shoe, with the prevalent notion that everything must be sacrificed to smallness, has squeezed the foot into a lump as knotty and irregular as a bit of pudding stone, where the distorted toes are so imbedded in the mass, and mutilated by the pressure, that it is impossible to pick them out in the individuality and the completeness of their original forms.

As our coarse climate forbids the sandal and renders the shoe necessary, care should be taken to adapt it as perfectly as possible to the natural conformation of the foot. It should be long and wide enough to admit of a free play of the toes; the space between the heel and sole of the shoe should be firm and of a curve the same height as the natural curve of the foot, while no part of the artificial covering should be so binding as to prevent the free action of the muscles and the circulation of the blood.

EFFECT OF DARKNESS AND SILENCE.—Dr. Kane, and other Arctic voyagers, have testified that in those icy regions where external silence reigns supreme, the effect upon the brain and ear from the absence of sonorous impulses in the atmosphere is exceedingly annoying, and absolutely injurious to the auditory nerves. As the organs of hearing are destroyed by loud and continued noise, and an intense light will ultimately weaken and destroy the power of sight, so it would appear that the auditory, or optic nerves become impaired by the partial or total deprivation of their natural stimulus, sound or light.

Dr. H. Ralls Smith, of Chicago, wishing experimentally to investigate this subject, recently spent a considerable length of time in the Kentucky Mammoth Cave, where silence and impenetrable darkness reigned supreme. The effect was very distressing, and almost insurmountable, resulting in temporary defection of hearing and aberration of mind. From his own experience, this gentleman is firmly convinced that the blindness of the finny denizens of this cave has been gradually brought about through successive generations, and from his observations he is confident that the sense of hearing in these creatures, although originally existing in the species when first immersed in their living tomb, is also wanting.

PURE WATER.—For many years (says the Journal of Chemistry) we have urged upon the attention of heads of families, owners of stock, etc., the importance of a supply of pure water. A vast amount of injury results from the use of impure water, both in dwellings and farm yards; and the instances of unusual or mysterious disease are often explained by a chemical examination of the water.

We have recently received, from a gentleman in Vermont, a sample of water supplied to the horses and other animals connected with his farm: and, upon analysis, we found it heavily loaded with organic matter and lime in the form of sulphate. Upon standing, this water underwent spontaneous change; and by the peculiar action of the sulphate upon vegetable matter, sulph-hydric acid was liberated in considerable quantites. The water was thus rendered poisonous; and the gentleman informed us by letter that he had lost four valuable horses by the use of this water. The importance of the use of pure water cannot be over-estimated.

KILLED BY TIGHT LACING.—A terrible warning is conveyed in the sudden death of Emma A. Jones, in New York, on Sunday, 12th inst. She was a well-known Sunday school teacher, and on the day mentioned, she accompanied several members of her church to witness the dedication of a chapel. While returning home, she dropped suddenly in the street, without a sigh or groan, and died in ten minutes after. The medical attendant pronounced it a case of apoplexy of the lungs, superinduced by unusual tight corset lacing. It was found, in making a post mortem examination, that Miss Jones was quite plethoric in habit, and her body being so tightly bound by steel corsets, the blood had no chance for proper circulation, and rendered her subject to congestion of the brain, which in time led to apoplexy of the lungs.

FEATHER BEDS.—Feather beds are highly injurious, because the whole external skin of the human body is continually exhaling vapor loaded with various excrementitious matters, and held in an aeriform state by the heat which passes with it from the body. Feathers, being non-conductors, not only retain much of this heat about the body, but also retain so much of the gaseous and other perspired substances, as to keep the body surrounded by a very impure atmosphere penetrates into every part of the bed; and besides this, there is always more or less of dead animal matter belonging to the feathers, which is continually undergoing decomposition and forming unwholesome gaseous and offensive odors.

HOW TO WOO MORPHEUS.—The following advice is given in Binns' Anatomy of Sleep, or the art of procuring sound and refreshing slumber at will, published in London in 1842. The principal feature of Binns' system is for the patient to fix his attention on his own breathing. "He must depict to himself that he sees the breath passing from his nostrils in a continuous stream, and the very instant that he brings his mind to conceive this, apart from all other ideas, consciousness and memory depart; imagination slumbers; fancy becomes dormant; thought subdued, the sentient faculties lose their susceptibility; the vital or ganglionic system assumes the sovereignty, and he no longer wakes, but sleeps."

EFFICACY OF ONIONS.—A writer says: "We are troubled often with severe coughs, the results of colds of long standing, which may turn to consumption or premature death. Hard coughs cause sleepless nights by constant irritation of the throat, and a strong effort to throw off offensive matter from the lungs. The remedy I propose has been tried and recommended by me with good results, which is simply to take in the stomach, before retiring for the night, a piece of raw onion, after chewing. This esculent in an uncooked state is very heating, and collects the water from the lungs and throat, causing immediate relief to the patient."

THE SECRET OF HEALTH:—First, keep warm. Second, eat regularly and slowly. Third, maintain regular bodily habits. Fourth, take early and very light suppers; or better still, none at all. Fifth, keep a clean skin. Sixth, get plenty of sleep at night. Seventh, keep cheerful and respectable company. Eighth, keep out of debt. Ninth, don't set your mind on things you don't need. Tenth, mind your own business. Eleventh, don't set up to be a sharp of any kind. Twelfth, subdue curiosity. Thirteenth, avoid drugs."

CORNS.—After bathing the feet twenty minutes in hot water, rub a few drops of sweet oil on the corn with the finger for two or three minutes. Do this every night, and protect the corn from the pressure of a tight shoe or the chafing of a loose one, and the corn can be easily picked out with the finger-nail in a few days, not to return for months, if ever, when renew the treatment.

DRINK LESS WITH YOUR MEALS.—Many men have relieved themselves of dyspepsia by not drinking, even water during meals. No animal, except man, ever drinks in connection with his food. Man ought not to. Try this, dyspeptics, and you will not wash down mechanically what ought to be masticated and insalivated before it is swallowed.

A CRY FROM MACEDONIA.

A cry comes over the ocean,—
A cry from foreign lands,—
To the God of heaven; Ethiopia
Is stretching out her hands,
And the Lord, to those who bear his name
Says, Go and feed my lambs.

But one is immersed in business,
Another has married a wife,—
"I cannot go," with one accord
They answer the Lord of life,
As louder still resounds the cry
From lands with darkness rife.

"We have thrown away our idols,
They are nothing but wood and stone,
Now who will show us the way of life?"
Is our dusky brother's moan,—
"Does the white man across the sea desire
To enjoy his heaven alone?"

O, dwellers in costly mansions,
Is the cry unheard by you?
The fields are white to the harvest,
But the laborers are few;
O, sisters, clad in robes of silk,
Is there nothing that ye can do?

Ye are your brother's keepers,
For God hath made you so,
Will you heed his cry, or still reply,
"It is not for me to go?"
God's pillar of cloud moves on, but ye follow
With tardy steps and slow.

IS CHRIST LITERALLY TO COME FROM HEAVEN AGAIN?

"Adventism" sets up this claim. Is it a revealed truth, or is it an error? Is the coming of Christ to be a literal or spiritual event? What say the Scriptures? Paul thus speaks to his Thessalonian brethren: "Ye turned to God from idols, to serve the living and true God, and to wait for his Son from heaven, whom he raised from the dead, even Jesus." (1 Thess. 1: 9, 10.) Who were they waiting for? God's Son. Where from? "From heaven." What Son of God were they waiting for from heaven? The very one "whom he raised from the dead." Then God has a Son in heaven, has he not? Yes. And that Son was once dead, was he not? Yes. And God raised him from the dead, did he not? Yes. And that is the very personage we are to wait for from heaven, is it not? Certainly.

This agrees with the Savior's own testimony to the seer of Patmos, after his ascension: "I am he that liveth, and was dead; and behold, I am alive for evermore." (Rev. 1: 18.) This is the very personage of whom the heavenly messengers declared, "This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." (Acts 1: 11.) The "same Je-Jesus" who once died, and was resurrected, went up to heaven, and is still in heaven; this "same Jesus" is to come from heaven, not spiritually, but "in like manner as" the disciples saw him ascend. Before taking his departure from earth, Jesus affirmed, "I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself." (John 14: 3.) Christ literally went away, and he will literally return: "Behold he cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him, and they also that pierced him: and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him." (Rev. 1: 7.) This event cannot be counterfeited; "all will "see the Savior come in the "clouds" of heaven, and sinners will "wail."

It will be no spiritual affair, like coming in the "clouds of events," as some explain the matter; "for the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise." (1 Thess. 4: 16.) Thus the coming of Christ is connected with the sounding of the trump of God, which arouses the slumbering dead from their tombs; and moreover, the apostle adds, "Then we which are alive and remain, shall be caught up together with them [with the resurrected saints] in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air." This cannot be spiritualized. Christ will return literally, and the resurrected saints, together with the living saints, changed to an immortal state, will rise to "meet him" in the air, and thenceforward "forever be with the Lord." With this fact in mind, well might Paul affirm, "Unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time, without sin [or a "sin offering"] unto salvation." (Heb. 9: 28.)

Not only is this event designated the "second" coming of Christ, (thus proving it as truly literal as the first; as a second is a repetition of the first, and of the same order, else it would simply be the first of one order, and the first of another, instead of being a "second" of any one order; and as all admit that the first was the advent of a literal personage, it must be conceded that the second must also be:) but, moreover, this second advent is to bring "salvation" to the saints. And while this event shall bring salvation to God's people, it will, at the same time, bring destruction to the impenitent; thus it will be like the "pillar" that cast light on Israel and darkness on the Egyptians; for "the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ: who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power; when he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe." (2 Thess. 1: 7–10.)

Since the "salvation" of saints, and the "destruction" and "punishment" of sinners is connected with Christ's coming, if we spiritualize a part, we must the whole; thus we must either deny a literal salvation to the saint and a literal punishment to the sinner, or admit a literal coming of Christ in the future. He once came in a humble garb, but now he comes in the glory of all heaven—the same person in different clothing—once appearing in "swaddling clothes," but now in a cloud of glory. Once he came to be numbered with the dead, but now to end death's long reign. Once he came to weep, but now to wipe away all tears. Once he came as the "Man of sorrows," but now to make an end of sorrow among his people. How changed the scene! Then he was ridiculed, scourged, bound, and crucified by wicked men; but now "shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. And he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds." (Matt. 24: 30, 31.) This is one feature of the doctrine styled "Adventism." It proclaims a "second" personal mission of Jesus Christ to our globe.

All who have carefully perused the Scriptures concede the fact that there are numerous declarations pertaining to a coming kingdom, or predictions concerning the establishment of the kingdom of God on earth. There is no dispute among theologians concerning this fact. But with regard to its nature, and the time of its establishment, there are diversities of opinion—some maintaining that it is a spiritual kingdom, instead of being literal, and that it was set up 1800 years ago. The only ground for this theory is the fact that the component elements of this kingdom—such as the king, territory, and subjects—are sometimes denominated the kingdom, on the principle of putting a part for the whole, as in the following instances: "For the kingdom of heaven is as a man traveling into a far country." (Matt. 25: 11.) Here Christ, one component element of the kingdom, is spoken of as the "kingdom." Again: "They shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend." (Matt. 13: 14.) Here another element—the territory—is spoken of as the kingdom. Also, we read: "Then shall the kingdom of heaven be likened to ten virgins." (Matt. 25: 1.) Still another element—the church, or prospective subjects—are spoken of as the kingdom, on the same principle of putting a part for the whole. But these component elements are in an unorganized state at present, and must be organized in order to be a kingdom complete. Without the organization of these elements, there can be no setting up of the kingdom. The prospective King is now in a far country, and must return. The territory is now in a dilapidated state, and must be cleansed. The prospective subjects, in part, are dead, and must be raised; and a part are living in a mortal state, and must be changed to immortality. All this is requisite to the organization of these component elements of the kingdom, which work involves the advent of Christ, and the resurrection of the dead: hence, the setting up of the kingdom cannot precede the coming of Christ—no matter how often these unfinished parts may be called by the name of the whole. All of the parts, in their perfected state, are requisite to the formation of the glorious whole. But we inquire:

I. What is the nature of his kingdom?

Our negative answer is, It is not spiritual.

1. We may be met with the declaration that the kingdom of God is "righteousness, peace, and joy in the Holy Spirit." This is characteristic of that kingdom, and consequently, we must be recipients of this element in order to dwell there, as counter-elements can never enter it: but to insist that this element alone constitutes the kingdom, would be to exclude both the King and the subjects, and make man the territory: and instead of allowing it to be true that man is to "enter into the kingdom," it would so change the arrangement as to have the kingdom enter into man: besides, if this element constitutes a kingdom, its inauguration could not have been future when the prophet Daniel said—"In the days of these dings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom" (Dan. 2: 44,) for this element dwelt in the hearts of saints before Daniel's time, because "holy men of old spake as they were moved upon by the Holy Spirit." When we read, "God is love," no one thinks of coming to the conclusion that love is God. Why then should men conclude, when they read that the kingdom of God is "righteousness, peace, and joy in the Holy Spirit," that therefore "righteousness, peace, and joy" is the kingdom of God? The first text gives the prominent characteristic of the Deity, and the second gives the characteristic of the celestial kingdom. If the first text does not prove that love is God, neither does the second prove that "righteousness, peace, and joy" is a kingdom. One conclusion is as logical as the other.

2. We may be reminded that Christ said, "The kingdom of God is within you." So he said to the Pharisees, but not to his disciples; therefore he could not have meant within the heart, but, as in the margin, "within your midst," or "among you," which was true of one element of the kingdom—the prospective King—a part being put for the whole, as in other instances. But the subjects still remained in their mortal state, and the territory, also, continued under the curse, and even he soon took his departure "into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom" (Luke 19; 12,) all of which proves the organization of the kingdom then future.

3. We may be told that Jesus affirmed, "The kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force." So he did: and while this could never be true of a spiritual kingdom in the heart, it was true of Christ, one element of the future kingdom. Christ suffered violence in this world, and was taken by force. So it has often been with his saints. The theological idea of holy violence is simply ridiculous.

To the question, What is the nature of this kingdom? we reply affirmatively, It is literal.

1. Its component elements are all literal. Jesus, the prospective King, is a literal being. The resurrected saints, who are destined to be the subjects, are literal beings. The territorial "kingdom prepared from the foundation of the world" is, also, literal. With a literal King, literal subjects, and a literal territory, we must have a literal kingdom. Yet it will be unlike literal earthly kingdoms in one essential particular—it will be established on the basis of immortality: the king and subjects will live eternally, devoid of pain or sickness, "and the kingdom shall not be left to other people," and it shall have "no end."

2. It is presented as the fifth of a series of universal kingdoms on earth, in the second and seventh chapters of Daniel—four of which kingdoms have been literal, leaving the principle upon which the greater part of the prophecy has already been fulfilled as a guarantee of the literal fulfillment of the balance. When God foretells the rise of five universal kingdoms, and we see four of them rise as literal kingdoms, can we query whether the fifth will be literal?

II. Its chronological location.

Its establishment cannot be in the past.

1. Because it was not to exist cotemporary with the kingdoms of earth, but to succeed them: the "stone," representing the kingdom of God, was not to "fill the whole earth" till the image was "broken to pieces," and "carried away" as by an irresistible tornado, "that no place was found for them." This is not in the past.

2. It is still a matter of "promise" and not of actual possession; and the saints are yet only heirs to it, and not possessors: "Hearken, my beloved brethren, hath not God chosen the poor of this world, rich in faith, heirs of the kingdom which he hath promised to them that love him?" As long as the saints are "heirs" to it, it cannot be in their possession—cannot be in the past.

It is still future.

1. Because after Christ had enumerated a long chain of events to precede his second coming, he adds: "When ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand." (Luke 21: 31.) These events span the gospel age, reaching nearly to the revelation of the Savior: hence, the establishment of the kingdom is subsequent to this age—agreeing with Christ's statement at his trial, "My kingdom is not from hence"—not from that time onward.

2. The seer of Patmos locates it after the sounding of the seventh angel: "And the seventh angel sounded; . . . . . the kingdoms of this world are become the kingdom of our Lord and his Christ, and he shall reign forever and ever." (Rev. 11: 15.) The resurrection of the dead being connected with the sounding of this trumpet, shows it a future scene, and, consequently, proves the ushering in of the kingdom still future.

3. Daniel locates it not only after the ten divisions of the "fourth kingdom," but, also, subsequent to the history of the Papal horn, which was to rise after these divisions, and continue to exist till the coming of the Ancient of days. (Dan. 7: 21.) These conspicuous facts cannot be obliterated.

III. Its geographical location.

Is it to be in heaven, or on earth? Not in heaven, for there has been order there for ages past, and it does not need to be superseded by a better arrangement; indeed, such a claim would virtually cast reflections on the former government of Jehovah. But this long foretold kingdom is to be inaugurated in a realm where disorder and evil have long predominated, and where such a change would be a blessing, namely: in the earth, when renovated. The proof is abundant.

1. Daniel informs us that it shall be "under the whole heaven." (Dan. 7: 27.) This is explicit.

2. The Revelator informs us that it will be composed of the "kingdoms of this world," minus their unholy inhabitants, whom God will "destroy."

3. Christ informs us that it is to include the territorial "kingdom prepared from the foundation of the world." (Matt. 25: 34)

4. At the "end of this world" Christ "shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend." (Matt. 13: 40.) The wicked are to be disinherited preparatory to giving it to the resurrected saints. "Then the meek shall inherit," and forever "reign on the earth."

Formation of Character.—If you ever watched an icicle as it formed, you would have noticed how it froze one drop at a time, until it was a foot long or more. If the water was clean, the icicle remained clear, and sparkled brightly in the sun; but if the water was slightly muddy, the icicle looked foul, and its beauty was spoiled. Just so our characters are formed. One little thought or feeling at a time adds its influence. If every thought be pure and right, the soul will be bright and lovely, and will sparkle with happiness; but if there be many thoughts, and feelings impure and wrong, the mind will be soiled, the character depraved and darkened, and there will be final deformity and wretchedness. How important, then, that we all guard against every evil impulse and desire, and keep our thoughts fixed on God alone, striving always to do his will.

IS THERE ANY NECESSITY FOR CHRIST'S COMING?

Is Christ's second coming to the earth again a random errand? Was his first coming, his suffering and death a useless thing? These are questions of vital importance. We are slow to believe that God would permit his only Son to suffer and die, raise him from the dead, and promise his return, if we could obtain the eternal felicity of heaven, of his presence, and of the angels, without it.

Very many believe in the second coming in person of the Lord of life and glory, and in the resurrection of the dead, but in doctrine deny such a thing. They have imbibed a theory which does away with the necessity of his coming, the resurrection of the dead, and the general judgment. If the body is merely a tenement which the "immaterial," "indivisible" soul (called the "man proper") inhabits and enters immediately upon its reward at death, what necessity is there for His second coming? If the reward can be obtained prior to his coming and the judgment, what need have we of a judgment? If we can obtain the immortal joys of Paradise, and know the "fulness there is in God" before his coming, why bring us out of that beautiful home to participate in the awful judgment scene, and to be "judged according to the deeds done in the body?" If these are facts, there is no necessity for his coming, the resurrection of the dead, or the general judgment. But these theories are absurdities in the light of God's word.

Many of our popular theologians claim that man is judged at death, and enters immediately upon his reward, or punishment, and is judged again at Christ's coming. This theology would make out two judgments. Where has God promised to judge men twice? It certainly is not in the Bible.

In these absurd theories we see the cause of the sleepy condition of the church in regard to his coming; why infidels mock, theologians deride—they do not want it. They see no necessity for it. And here we see why so many deny the resurrection of the dead, and the literal coming of Christ. Here is the reason why more are not waiting, watching, and longing for his coming.

But God's plan makes Christ's coming necessary to the future life and happiness of his people. Although men's theories are subversive of his plan, it will stand.

1. Are men created immortal? What does God's word say? "The blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords; who only hath immortality."—1 Tim. 1: 16. If God "only hath" immortality we do not possess it except from God. Hence God holds it out as an object to seek after, "by patient continuance in well doing."—Rom. 2: 7.

2. Is the soul immortal? "He made a way to his anger; he spared not their soul from death, but gave their life over to the pestilence."—Ps. 22: 29. "Behold, all souls are mine; as the soul of the father, so also the soul of the son is mine; the soul that sinneth, it shall die."—Ezek. 18: 46. "And they took it on that day, and smote it with the edge of the sword; and all the souls that were therein he utterly destroyed."—Josh. 10: 35. "Thou hast delivered my soul from death."—Psa. 56: 13. "Let my soul live and it shall praise thee."—Ps. 119: 175.

3. The dead are unconscious. "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish."—Ps. 146: 4. "For the living know that they shall die; but the dead know not anything, neither have they any more a reward; for the memory of them is forgotten."—Eccl. 9: 5. "The dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence."—Ps. 115: 17. "Also their love and their hatred, and their envy, is now perished; neither have they any more a portion forever in anything that is done under the sun."—Eccl. 9: 6. "For in death there is no remembrance of thee; in the grave who shall give thee thanks?"—Psa. 6: 5.

4. They receive no reward till Jesus comes to raise the dead. "And thou shalt be blessed; for they cannot recompense thee; for thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just."—Luke 14: 14. "We shall all be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump; for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality."—1 Cor. 15: 52, 53. "For the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father, with his angels, and then he shall reward every man according to his works."—Matt. 17: 27. "Behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me to give every man according as his work shall be." Rev. 22: 12. "When the Chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away."—1 Pet. 5: 4.

5. The righteous will not be rewarded in heaven, but upon the earth. "Behold the righteous shall be recompensed in the earth."—Prov. 11: 31. "And the seventh angel sounded; and there were great voices in heaven, saying: The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ; and he shall reign for ever."—Rev. 11: 15. "And the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him."—Dan. 7: 27. "Blessed are the meek; for they shall inherit the earth."—Matt. 5: 5. "But the meek shall inherit the earth, and shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace."—Ps. 37: 11.

6. Without a resurrection of the dead our faith is vain. "But if there be no resurrection of the dead, then is Christ not risen; and if Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain. Yea, and we are found false witnesses of God; because we have testified of God that he raised up Christ; whom he raised not up, if so be that the dead rise not. For if the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised; and if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins. Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ, are perished."—1 Cor. 15: 18.

7. Eternal existence in misery—not the punishment of the wicked. "The wages of sin is death."—Rom. 6: 23. "The wicked are reserved to the day of destruction; they shall be brought forth to the day of wrath."—Job 21: 30. "The Lord . . . knoweth how to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished."—2 Pet. 2: 9. "And shall utterly perish in their own corruption."—2 Pet. 2: 12. "Who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power."—2 Thess. 1: 9. "For yet a little while, and the wicked shall not be; yea, thou shalt diligently consider his place, and it shall not be."—Ps. 37: 10. "The heavens and the earth which are now . . . are kept in store; reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men."—2 Pet. 3: 7. "Behold the day cometh that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly shall be stubble; and the day that cometh shall burn them up; saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch."—Mal. 4: 1.

This is simply God's arrangement which we have submitted. The future life of the righteous depends upon the coming of Christ and the resurrection of the dead. Therefore, we long and pray for his coming, that this mortal may put on immortality, and that we may "appear with him in glory."—Glad Tidings.

For the World's Crisis.

WHAT CONSTITUTES AN IMMORTAL SOUL?

An attempt to answer the above question has resulted in volumes of unpublished works, and barrels of manuscript sermons; and still to the masses no satisfactory answer has been given. Why all this labor with no better results? The cause is obvious, which lies in the fact that a wrong conclusion forms the basis of past arguments. The majority of mankind are burdened with the conviction that man possesses an entity denominated immortal soul; but its origin, its capacity, its locality, and its future destiny, are and ever have been questions of dispute among heathen philosophers and christian divines, from the simple fact that no higher authority than human reason has constituted their text book. But when we turn to the inspired volume, a solution of the question is readily attained. The man who supposes innate knowledge to be sufficient authority to decide such a question, may see the absurdity of his conclusions by glancing at the monstrosities of Pythagoreans, or the superstitions of Roman Catholicism, or the more modern delusions of Spiritualism.

That the wisdom of man is foolishness with God, is not manifest alone in the divine assertion, but is developed also in the strange and inconsistent range of human thought, when left to follow its own uninspired conceptions. No basis of reasoning relative to man's immortality, aside from the Scriptures, should be countenanced for a moment, from the simple fact that it is a matter pertaining to the future state, and a correct knowledge of it is wholly dependent upon revelation, which positively asserts that "life and immortality" are brought "to light through the gospel." 2 Tim. 1: 10. Now there can be no force to this language unless the gospel is the only reliable source of information relative to this subject; consequently heathen philosophy has no place in the evidence requisite to show what constitutes an immortal soul.

At the dawn of creation, when man is produced, he is called "a living soul" (Gen. 2: 7). "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul." We see by this text that it was the man that was made of the dust of the ground, that constitutes the soul; and was made to live (or a living soul) by "the breath of life." This is the primary definition of soul. We conclude, however, that this soul was and is mortal. But when we pursue the history of this mortal soul, we see that it was placed under circumstances which would have resulted in immortality, if an obedient character had been developed. And as the first Adam was the first human soul, and was mortal at the outset, and failed to gain immortality, and as we are the legitimate descendants of him, we must be mortal souls also. And as the second Adam (Christ) was raised, or made an immortal soul, and has assured us that our vile bodies (or mortal bodies) shall be changed, and fashioned like unto his glorious body; it follows that we shall then become immortal souls; inasmuch as a mortal man is an mortal soul, an immortal man must be an immortal soul. From the foregoing, we see that we are believers in the immortality of the human soul, according to the Bible, instead of heathen philosophy.

The soul thus defined is the only one to whom God has ever promised immortality; hence, there is no scriptural proof for the immortality of an abstract soul or spirit; though there may be a thousand texts produced to show that soul or spirit can exist abstract from the body, they afford no proof in favor of their immortality, as the Bible nowhere asserts that abstract soul or spirit is now immortal, or ever will be; and human reason is by far too limited in its range to presume upon any correct idea of the nature of abstract soul or spirit. If we attempt to give its dimensions, we fail, because there is no form or parts that will admit of measurement. If we attempt to weigh it, we meet with the same difficulty, as it does not tend toward the earth, or any other particular body; hence its gravity is unknown. If we attempt to try its elasticity, we are equally unsuccessful, as we know of no way by which we can apply force to it. If we attempt to try its density, we find ourselves bereft of comparison. And how absurd to establish a theory on such a thing. No wonder that heathen philosophers and D. D.'s have always been at loggerheads about its nature and origin. All the philosophic arguments adduced by the advocates of abstract immortal souls, give to the higher order of animals the same in kind that they claim for man; as it is manifest, from the best authority extant on physiology, that thought and reasoning powers are enjoyed by animals; which faculties are the essential qualities of soul or spirit, and cannot be enjoyed where spirit does not predominate. We here give an extract from Dalton's Treatise on Human Physiology, page 428:

"The third kind of reflex action requires the co-operation of the hemispheres. Here, the nervous impression is not only converted to the tuberanular and conveyed into a sensation, but, still following upward the course of the fibres to the cerebrum, it there gives rise to a special train of ideas.

We understand then, the external source of the sensation, the manner in which it is calculated to affect us, and how, by our actions, we may turn it to our advantage or otherwise. The action which follows, therefore, in these cases, is not simply voluntary, but reasonable. It does not depend directly upon the external sensation, but upon an intellectual process, which intervenes between sensation and volition. These actions are distinguished accordingly, by a character of definite contrivance, and a conscious adaptation of means to ends; characteristics which do not belong to any other operation of the nervous system.

The possession of this kind of intelligence and reasoning power, is not confined to the human species. We have already seen that there are many instinctive actions in man as well as in animals. It is no less true, that in the higher animals, there is often the same exercise of reasoning power as in man. The degree of this power is much less in them than him, but its nature is the same. Whenever, in an animal, we see any action performed, with the evident intention of accomplishing a particular object, such an act is plainly the result of reasoning power, not essentially different from your own.

The establishment of sentinels by gregarious animals to warn the herd of the approach of danger, the recollection of punishment, inflicted for a particular action, and the subsequent avoidance or concealment of that action, the teachability of many animals, and their capacity of forming new habits, or improving the old ones, are instances of the same kind of intellectual power, and are quite different from instinct, strictly speaking. It is this faculty which especially predominates over the other in the higher classes of animals, and which finally attains its maximum of development in the human species."

We leave the candid reader to judge who has the most correct theory of immortal souls, God or man. Wm. A. Fenn.

For the World's Crisis.

THE JUBILEE.

(Concluded.)

The tenth day of the seventh month was the great day of "atonement" (Lev. 16: 30), a figure of that great and glorious day when "there shall come out of Sion the Deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob" (Rom. 11: 26), "to present you faultless before the presence of his glory with exceeding joy." Jude 24. It was the time of that "holy convocation" (Lev. 23: 27), a figure of that great and solemn assembly, "when the Son of man shall come in his glory, . . . and before him shall be gathered all nations."—Matt. 25: 31. On that same day "the trumpet of the jubilee" was "to sound." Lev. 25: 9. "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven, with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and with the trump of God" (1 Thess. 4: 4); and "in the year of this jubilee, ye shall return every man unto his possession" (Lev. 25: 13); that is, to "our inheritance," "the purchased possession, unto the praise of his glory."—Eph. 1: 14.

All admit that the jubilee mirrors forth the great and glorious release under the gospel dispensation, but fail to notice that without definite time there was no jubilee; and if without definite time there was no jubilee, without definite time there can be no antitype of the jubilee. If the jubilee was "a shadow of good things to come" (Heb. 10: 1), each part of the antitype must be duly represented in that "which was a figure for the time then present" Heb. 9: 9); otherwise, "the pattern" (9: 23) would be imperfect. But that there are no such imperfections in the "figures of the true" (9: 24) from that which, having already reached its antitype, has become a historical matter of fact. For example, each particular concerning the passover has in "Christ our passover" reached its antitype; not only to the day, but the very hour; by which "he hath given assurance unto all men" (Acts 17: 31), that one jot or tittle shall in no wise pass from the law till all be fulfilled." Matt. 5: 18.

In that most sublime type of the "restitution of all things" (Acts 3: 21), we find that at the sounding of the trumpet of the jubilee, Israel returned "every man unto his possession," and the Lord gave them rest round about (Josh. 21: 44); insomuch that Paul found it necessary to enter into an argument with his Hebrew brethren, to satisfy them that the real object of the law was not there reached; and I think that he reasoned well: "For if Joshua had given them rest, then would David not afterwards have spoken of another day" (Heb. 4: 8); hence I conclude with Paul, that though it is true that in the year of the first jubilee Israel did "return every man unto his possession," this was only "the figure of the true" (Heb. 9: 24); "there remaineth therefore a rest to the people of God." 4: 9.

But what kind of a rest? Clearly that which Joshua failed to give. And what kind did Joshua fail to give? That which he came so near giving. Paul found it necessary to appeal to Scripture to satisfy the Hebrews that he did not give the real, true rest that was promised to Abraham; that is, the great antitype of the law—"In the year of this jubilee ye shall return every man unto his possession." Hence I conclude that the Thessalonians were not mistaken when by the "trump of God" (1 Thess. 4: 16) they understood Paul to mean the great antitype of the trump of the jubilee, which, according to "the figures of the true," must be proclaimed "on the tenth day of the seventh month." "God having provided some better things for us, that they without us should not be made perfect" (Heb. 11: 40), gave a law that can be fulfilled by none but Christ himself. For example, the law requiring them "on the tenth day of the seventh month" to "make the trumpet sound throughout all your land" (Lev. 25: 9), could not be fulfilled under the law, for it could not be heard throughout all the land; hence there must be another trumpet called "the last trump" (1 Cor. 15: 52), the first trumpet having failed to "sound throughout all the land." The object of "the last trumpet" must be to fulfill "the law," which can be done on no other but "the tenth day of the seventh month" (Lev. 25: 9). Hence Paul, with great confidence, declares that "THE TRUMPET SHALL sound" (1 Cor. 15: 52); "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and THE TRUMP OF GOD" (1 Thess. 4: 16); and "in the year of this jubilee ye shall return every man unto his possession" (Lev. 25: 13); for "He shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other" (Matt. 24: 31); that they may return to their possession, which is "an inheritance incorruptible and undefiled, and that passeth not away; reserved in heaven for you, who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time" (1 Pet. 1: 4), at the "restoration of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." Acts 3: 21.

That the real object of the Jubilee could never have been for the benefit of the Jews, would appear from the word of the Lord at the time he gave the law; for he then told the Jews that the time, at which the land would "rest and enjoy her sabbaths," would not be during the time "when they dwelt upon it," but "as long as it lieth desolate and ye be in your enemies' land, even then shall the land rest and enjoy her sabbaths." Lev. 26: 34. From this, it is clear that the time at which the land was to enjoy her sabbatical rest was not during the time the Jews lived in it; for, saith the Lord, it "shall enjoy her sabbath while she lieth desolate, without them" (26: 43); and from sacred history we learn that this is literally true, "for as long as she lay desolate, she kept sabbath to fulfill threescore and ten years." 2 Chron. 36: 21. But if the time during which the land was to enjoy sabbatical rest was while the Jews were in another land, how could the real object of either the sabbatical year or jubilee have ever been intended for the benefit of that people? yet there is a law, both as to time and manner, and God does nothing in vain. Therefore I must conclude, with Paul, that the real object was this: "The law, having a shadow of good things to come" (Heb. 10: 1), was a figure for the time then present (9: 9); but if in the figure there is a law both as to time and manner, why may we not in "the figure of the true" (9: 14) discover the antitype, both time and manner.

According to that law "which was a figure for the time then present" (9: 9), "thou shalt number seven sabbaths of years unto thee" (Lev. 25: 8); and this sabbath of sabbaths was the interval between Egyptian bondage and the time when Israel returned "every man unto his possession" (25: 13); which being but "a shadow of good things to come" (Heb. 10: 1), the antitype must be a greater sabbath of sabbaths for the "restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began."—Acts 3: 21. The greater sabbath of sabbaths is a jubilee of jubilees, which, being fixed by law, can be reckoned only from "the tenth day of the seventh month" of the seventh sabbatical year "of rest unto the land" (Lev. 25: 49); "for see, saith he, that thou make all things according to the pattern showed to thee in the mount" (Heb. 8: 5). And since the only sabbatical rest to the land found in all the Bible was that of the seventy years' captivity (2 Chron. 36: 21), we cannot be mistaken as to the particular heathen bondage from which this jubilee of jubilees is to be reckoned; for, saith the Lord to the Jews, "It did not rest in your sabbaths, when ye dwelt upon it" (Lev. 26: 35); and since the only "tenth day of the seventh month" of the seventh sabbatical year, that occurred during this seventy years "of rest unto the land," was, according to Ezekiel, "in the five and twentieth year of our captivity, in the beginning of the year (of jubilee), in the tenth day of the (seventh) month, in the fourteenth year after the city was smitten" (Ezek. 40: 1), B. C. 534; we are restricted to this as the one only day from which the jubilee of jubilees is to be reckoned. A jubilee of jubilees is 2401 years; and if to 534 we add 1868 diminished by one, we have 2401, which gives us the tenth day of the seventh month, 1868, for the time of the great antitype of the jubilee, when the redeemed of the Lord shall return home.

In conclusion, we might prove, independently of the antitype, that the appearing of Christ must be in a jubilee, for "thus saith the Lord God, If the prince give a gift, ... of his inheritance to one of his servants, then it shall be his to the year of liberty; after it shall return to the prince" (Ezek. 46: 17); "and now have I (saith the prince) given all these lands into the hand of . . . my servant" (Jer. 27: 6), hence the land must remain in the hands of the great metallic image until "the year of liberty, after it shall return to the prince" of peace.

That the reader may know for certain that this law has never been fulfilled, call to mind that it was given on the first day of that jubilee, which occurred in the twenty-fifth year of the captivity; since which time the Jews have never observed a jubilee; hence if "one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled," this remains to be fulfilled by that Prince who came "to fulfill" "the law." Matt. 5: 17, 18.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, April 29, 1868.

☞ Take Notice!

All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

☞ Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank-checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ MONEY ORDERS.

Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given.

Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too.

Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us YOUR NAME AND POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

INFORMATION.—OUR CHANGE.

We now have our new mailing list completed, and paste the name of each subscriber on his paper with the date when his subscription ends, instead of acknowledging in the Crisis as heretofore.

Some of our subscribers are troubled to ascertain their indebtedness by the date opposite their names. The names of the months are abbreviated thus:—Jan., Feb., Mar., Apr., May, Jun., Jul., Aug., Sept., Oct., Nov., Dec. And the year is given thus: 67, 68, etc. The figures preceding the month indicate the day of the month.

We have tried to be very careful in revising our large list of names, but for all our care there may be some names spelled wrong, and some dates wrong. We shall be very glad to be notified of all such mistakes, and will cheerfully rectify them. When you send us money, look for the date to be changed on the slip, and if you do not see any change in two or three weeks, write to us plainly. We have been to a very heavy expense in making this change, but it has been for the benefit of our subscribers. Hereafter, if any do not get their papers regularly, we mean that it shall not be our fault.

THE MISSIONS.

The friends of the various missions, now in active operation, will remember that they are in special need of help at the present time; as there is but very little in the treasury. Shall those noble, self-sacrificing men and women be obliged to leave their interesting fields of labor for want of means to continue their work, just at the time when the brightest prospects are opening before them? Let all say, no, and send their offerings at once. This is the time for action. The Lord is at hand, and thousands in the South are calling for light on the glorious subject. Shall we send it to them? Those who cannot preach, and wish to do good with what the Lord has intrusted to their keeping, have now such an opportunity as has never before been offered, and cannot again be expected before the coming of Christ. This is the time for noble deeds. The hour of victorious triumph to the faithful cannot be far in the future. Let us be ready, and hear Jesus say "well done."

"THE GOD KINGDOM."

he spos the demons know, from the fulfillment of Scripture, that we are near the time when the kingdom of God is to be set up, as foretold by the prophet Daniel, they are making great efforts to persuade the people that Spiritualism is "the God kingdom," as they call it; and that whoever embraces Spiritualism enteres into the kingdom; and that to all such Christ has made his second advent. It is astonishing to see how many are being seduced from the truth of the Bible by these spirits, and what strange doctrines they are teaching; all of which are directly opposed to those of Christ and the apostles. The demons are very ingenious in applying scripture in a manner to deceive the careless, who are not familiar with what the Bible teaches. They talk very well about the coming of Christ, the kingdom God, now at hand, the resurrectian of the dead, etc., but when we learn what they mean by these expressions, we find their views as unlike the Bible teaching as are the doctrines of the Koran or the Zend Avesta.

The demons take much pains to make each medium believe that he or she has some special work to do in establishing "The God Kingdom." There are hundreds of mediums, each one of whom has been taught by the spirits that he or she is to be the leading one in the "New Divine Order," now about to be established on the earth.

Those who have read the interesting work entitled "The Powers of the Air," will recollect that the spirits tried to make Mr. Jennings believe that the millennium was about to begin, and that he, in company with H. W. Beecher, were the ones to introduce the long-looked-for blessed era. With this bait they seduced him, and led him on, his familiar spirit claiming to be Jesus himself, who had selected Mr. J. as his chosen instrument, to introduce the conversion of the world. He followed their instruction, and believed what the demons told him, till he detected them in so many contradictory sayings, and found they did not keep their promises, that he began to doubt most seriously that Jesus was the one who was his spirit-guide. His eyes were finally opened, after four years' experience, to see that he had been led all the while by lying demons, who claim to be Jesus, or the spirits of our friends. A similar spirit conducts the Shaker societies, and we have no doubt but that Ellen White's visions proceed from the same source as those given to Milton Jennings; but she has not yet become satisfied that it is a demon transformed into an angel of light, who is making an effort in that way to divide the flock of God. Whenever these spirits can get the control of a christian medium, or one who wishes to do right, they try to keep the confidence of such by giving some good advice concerning dress, food, or moral precepts; while at the same time they will introduce some false doctrine as a test of fellowship, and cause them to be very rigid on that point, so as to make a division among the humble followers of Jesus. These are indeed "perilous times."

A monthly paper is published in Chicago, called "News from the Spirit World," in which we find many strange things. It is "devoted to spirit communications, dreams, visions, prophecies and clairvoyance." In this paper much is said about the "God Kingdom," "The Coming Man," "The New Divine Order," the "Theocratic Government," "The Grand Deific Lodge," "The Deific Mother," etc. An association claiming to be composed of the spirits of "Robert Rantoul, Daniel Webster, John Quincy Adams, Martin Luther, Socrates and Benjamin Franklin," is called the "Association of Govermentizers." Their business is to influence people to overturn all the present systems of government, and establish a new one, unlike any that has been, which they call a "Theocratic Democracy," "wherein distinctions of clime, of color, and of sex, will be no bar to equality; and in which "every man will be his own ruler, and his natural demands his HIGHEST LAW."

In the March number of "News from the Spirit World, is a "SPECIAL CALL" from the "Association of Govermentizers," addressed "unto every soul upon the habitable globe," requesting them to aid in making provision for "the new church and state."

Another proclamation in the April number of "News from the Spirit World," begins as follows:—"To all nations, peoples, tongues and kindreds, and unto every church, sect, creed, party of every name and denomination under the whole heavens, to whom the testimony shall come. Hear ye! hear ye!! hear ye!!! for it is the last moment of the eleventh hour of the midnight cry. Thus saith the spirit of the Infinite and the everlasting; even him that was, and is, and is to come. Jesus of Nazareth, the Christ of the past, present and the future. Behold I have come down in the midst of the people, and will dwell with Man, in fulfillment of prophecy, so soon as a place is prepared to receive me, for it is the last moment of the eleventh hour of the midnight cry."

The "Spirit World" is now very anxious and much in haste to have a proper place prepared in Chicago, Ill., for the reception of Jesus. As expressed by the "Association of Govermentizers," "a place where meetings may be held continually, without interruption; a spiritual head-quarters, to be under the control of the SPIRIT WORLD."

In another column of "News from the Spirit World," we find the following:—

"All advanced Spiritualists are entering a new school, having through philosophy, phenomena and fact, paved the way, and earned the right. They are now looking for Deific manifestations and communications. A place for this purpose must be had, that will correspond in its use to the Jewish Tabernacle. There and there only, can the very God Power be made manifest. This fact is perceived by thousands of advanced Spiritualists. They commenced with a Tabernacle and ended with a Temple. The work now going on, purports to be the Christ work, the God work. The Tabernacle will correspond to a celestial magnet, and the Temple to a natural magnet. That is the core of the whole thing."

The spirits have issued an earnest call for money to provide a suitable "temple" in which Christ shall appear spiritually through his mediums, and the spirits have selected Chicago as the place, and Miss Eliza J. Kenny as the favored medium, whom they call "Justitia." She is addressed as follows:

"It is for thee, Justitia, to organize the true Theocratic Government, as the same shall be given thee by the Deific Mother, whose prerogative it is to lead thee forth, upward and onward, in the gigantic work before thee; calling to thy aid such persons as from time to time shall be designated by me, through the invisible Prince, Jesus Christ, my executor, and connecting link between thee and me."

Said Jesus, when referring to his second and personal coming, and what should take place in the last days just before his advent: "Then if any man shall say unto you, Lo, here is Christ, or there; believe it not; for there shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, and shall show great signs and wonders; insomuch that, if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect. . . . Wherefore, if they shall say unto you, Behold, he is in the desert; go not forth; behold, he is in the secret chambers; believe it not."—Matt. 24: 23–26. Let us remember and follow his instruction.

In "News from the Spirit World," we find the following:—

"It is perfectly astonishing, the number of mediums, male and female, who by spirits are made to declare themselves THE CHRIST. Mediums unfolded to that extent, claiming to be The Christ, are denominated 'Celestial,' to distinguish them from trance, or lesser mediums. It seems that mediums are positively and negatively controlled, until they become somewhat balanced; then they are made, by a still higher power, to declare that they are The Christ."

When speaking of the present state of things in the world, and the new government which the spirits propose to establish, they say:—

"The last great drama, of said scheme has come, viz., the incarnation of absolute good, truth, perfection, justice, which are never to be destroyed, and was prospectively named the Kingdom of God. All the past has been arranged in reference to this last named result, the God Kingdom and everything which has been framed, made, produced, whether of a material nature, or for a spiritual purpose, not suitable to be incorporated into this permanent kingdom, will be demolished, or transformed, as the case may require. It matters not how hoary-headed any institution may be, how ancient its doctrines, rites and ceremonies, all, all, are to give place to the incoming, perfect, true religion, based upon the truths of christianity, unto which are now to be added those things which are for this present age; the fresh manna, adapted to the higher wants, needs, of a higher development. Said kingdom will also, as a matter of course, cause all governmental structures to pass away, that a true and perfect Divine Government of Justice may be established, broad enough to bless and care for every human being upon the habitable globe."

"This movement comes from the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. . . . Spiritualism is the first dawning of that condition so long foretold by all. The same God that was recognized in the beginning in, by and through mediums, is now to be set up in, by and through mediums."

DISCUSSION IN DOVER.

Monday evening, May 20th, we commenced a discussion with Moses Hull, in the Unitarian meeting-house, Dover, N. H., and continued it five evenings, before very intelligent audiences. We have seldom found people more anxious to hear, or who listened with more candor. We enjoyed the discussion very much, on account of the good results. We discussed the following resolution:

RESOLVED, That the spirit of man exists in a conscious state after the death of the body, and can, under favorable circumstances return and communicate with the inhabitants of the earth.

As at the discussion with Mr. Hull in Milford, N. H., last March, he took the position that because "we are the offspring of God" [Acts 17: 29,] therefore we must be immortal because he is. We replied, if the argument was sound, it would prove that we had all the attributes of our Creator; and must therefore be omniscient, omnipotent, omnipresent, having the power to create. When pressed on this point, rather than admit man is not naturally immortal, because he is the "offspring of God," he assumed that he is omnipotent, omniscient, etc., in short, that "man is God." We then inquired, if man is God, and omniscient, why he had to be sent to school, and learn his alphabet, then to spell words of two letters, and so on till he learned to read in easy reading? To us it seemed strange that any sane man should advance such sentiments as were advocated by Mr. Hull; the legitimate result of departing from the Lord, and "giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils." 1 Tim. 4: 1.

He assumed that there is no evil or sin in the world, and then talked about reforming sinners. His positions reminded one of the harmony of confusion confounded. It was mystery mystified, fables turned to nonsense; while the Bible, reason, philosophy and common sense were trampled under foot by the vagaries taught by the infernal demons.

He said he thanked the Devil for leading Adam and Eve astray, because of the good results. So it seems that Satan has some men who will defend his cause openly and boldly. We never hear the Spiritualists finding fault with the works of the Devil; but almost invariably with the Lord and his word. All are at war with the Bible, and the God of the Bible. They have no praises for him, but often speak about the "good Devil;" and even go so far as to pray to him.

THE BEST SEWING MACHINE.

As many of our readers have occasion to purchase sewing machines, and wish to get the best if any, it is often quite difficult to decide which is best among so many patterns as are now in market, when each dealer claims his machine excels all others, in some important particular. We have taken some pains to ascertain which is practically the best for family use, and have become fully satisfied in favor of the machine manfactured by Wilcox and Gibbs. In saying this, we think we speak the sentiments of all who have tried it. We would say nothing against other machines, but this, we think, is the best.

EXPOSITION OF COL. 1: 13.

BRO. GRANT:—Will you please give an exposition of Col. 1: 13, and oblige a seeker after truth? W. VREELAND.

The passage reads as follows:—"Who hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of his dear Son."

By some, the passage is supposed to teach that the kingdom of Christ is already set up, and has been upon earth for eighteen hundred years. This passage in Col. is the only one of any weight on which to base such an opinion. It is singular that the King should leave his kingdom in Satan's hands for so long a time. But Jesus does not promise that any one shall have the kingdom till he returns. In Matt. 25: 31, 34, we read, "The Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory; . . . . then shall the king say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." The kingdom is not to be given to the Son of God till at the time of his return, at the end of the reigns of the kings symbolized by the wild beasts of Daniel and John.

The word rendered "hath translated," in this passage, is properly rendered in the Emphatic Diaglott—"hath changed us for the kingdom." The idea in the original is, that the saints are those who have reformed, changed their mode of living, by the help of the Lord, and are thus made fit for the coming kingdom, which is to be set up when Christ comes the second time.

A few examples of the use of the word rendered into, in Col. 1: 13, may help some to understand the passage better. In the following examples the word rendered into in Col. 1; 13, is rendered for, which we put in italics. Launch out into the deep, and let down your nets, for a draught."—Luke 5: 4. "No man, having put his hand to the plough, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God."—Luke 9: 62. Any one can see that it would not make sense to put into in the place of for. The same is true of Col. 1: 13, when we endeavor to make out the doctrine that the kingdom is now set up, and that the good are already translated into it. The whole Bible, we think, is opposed to such an idea.

Let us look at a few other examples of the use of this same preposition:—"The same came for a witness."—John 1: 7. "I have set thee to be a light of the Gentiles, that thou shouldst be for salvation unto the ends of the earth."—Acts 13: 47. "Whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning."—Rom. 15: 4. "I am set for the defense of the gospel."—Phil. 1: 17. "Take Mark, and bring him with thee; for he is profitable to me for the ministry."—2 Tim. 4: 11. "By faith Abraham, when he was called to go out into a place which he should after receive for an inheritance, obeyed."—Heb. 11: 8. "And the four angels were loosed which were prepared for an hour, and a day, and a month and a year."—Rev. 9: 15. "And the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations." Rev. 22: 2.

In all the foregoing examples, it will be seen that the word rendered into, in Col. 1: 13, should be translated FOR; and if the word be thus translated in Col., it will be in harmony with all the rest of the Bible.

THE UNPARDONABLE SIN.

I would ask you to give your opinion of what the unpardonable sin is. I have a friend who is troubled with all the horrors and torments that ever ought to be in the lower regions, where the rich man lifted up his eyes in torment. He is afraid that he has committed the unpardonable sin, and thinks that if he dies he shall be in everlasting torment. H. B. DUNLAP.

The passage relating to blasphemy against the Holy Ghost occurs in Matt. 12: 31–32, as follows:—

"Wherefore I say unto you, All manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men; but the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven unto men.

And whosoever speaketh a word against the Son of man, it shall be forgiven him: but whosoever speaketh against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven him, neither in this world, neither in the world to come."

Judging from the context, we conclude that blasphemy against the Holy Ghost consists in attributing to the Devil the works of the Holy Spirit.

THE LORD'S SUPPER.

BRO. GRANT:—Please give your views upon the following questions:—

1. Is there any command to meet on any particular day to eat the Lord's Supper?
2. What was the custom in the days of the apostolic fathers?
3. How often should we meet to break bread? Yours in search of truth,

Winchester, Ill. I. G. BUSH.

1. We do not know of any command to meet on any particular day.

2. It is believed by many that the early christians met on the first day of the week to break bread.

As there is no command to meet on any particular day, of course it is left for the church of Christ to have the Lord's supper as often as they think best. Says Paul, "As often as ye eat this bread and drink this cup, ye do show the Lord's death till he come."—1 Cor. 11: 26.

RADICAL RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

This is an age of new things, and an abundance of theological fables. The people seem very anxious to contrive some means by which to be saved without traveling by way of the cross. They desire to obtain salvation without being dependent on the Lord. All these things are but variations of Spiritualism, which transforms itself into every thing unchristian, that will be received by the people. Men have become disgusted with popular church worship, because they see no heart in it; consequently are seeking something else as a substitute. As the mass of professors of religion have become conformed to this world, and, consequently, have lost their peace in believing in Christ, they are just in a coudition to take hold of Satan's substitute for the pure, self-denying religion of Jesus.

A new organization has been recently formed in Boston, called the "South End Free religious Fellowship." The following report of their meeting is from the Boston Journal.

"RADICAL RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.—This Association met last evening, at Concord Hall, for the purpose of hearing the report of the committee appointed at a previous meeting relative to a plan for organization. The chair was occupied by Mr. Henry Damon, who called upon Mr. A. B. Orcutt, chairman of the committee, to offer his report. The denomination is to be called the 'South End Free Religious Fellowship.' Recognizing an Infinite Intelligence as pervading the universe, but leaving all forms of its expression or conception to each person's own conviction, and conceiving it the inborn right and duty of every person to think, speak and act without restraint from any; and moreover, that the common welfare is best promoted and secured by the freest expression of every individual, the adherents form themselves into a free fellowship for the purpose of furthering these aims and ends by such measures and instrumentalities as from time to time they shall judge best, and welcome all sincere persons to their meetings and discussions, desirous of holding themselves in readiness to accept light and guidance according to their several capacities and needs, deeming all subjects open to consideration and progress in life and light, their privilege.

The report was unanimously adopted as the basis of the organization, after which the subject "How does the mind receive light?" was presented by Mr. Orcutt, and discussed rather metaphpsically by that gentleman, John Wetherbee, S. H. Morse, Rev. S. T. Sargent and others, and at 9 o'clock the meeting adjourned."

THE CHRIST OF SPIRITUALISM.

The Christ of Spiritualism is not the Christ of the Bible and Christianity. The Christ about whom the Spiritualists talk so prettily, is only a false Christ, unknown to the true disciples of Jesus. The whole system of Spiritualism is the Devil's counterfeit of christianity. In the Banner of Light, Feb. 29th, 1868, when speaking of Jesus, the writer says:—"He was finely and superiorly organized (1st) by virtue of parental conditions, and (2nd) spirit operations, and take him, all in all, the most pure, loving and perfect man the world had produced up to his time. His miracles—such as are accepted as genuine—were results of his mediumship, precisely as the like, and even greater works are done today through mediums in our midst. . . . The Spiritual-Rational view regards Jesus as a naturally begotten man, a medium, a moral-spiritual teacher, a reformer and a martyr."

In conclusion, the writer says:—"Finally looking hopefully forward to his second advent through some chosen medium, when he shall as the triune Christ of love, wisdom, and all truth, and as the head organizer of a new dispensation, now largely opening."

For the World's Crisis.

NEW HAMPSHIRE QUARTERLY CONFERENCE.

The second quarterly session of the Advent Christian State Conference of New Hampshire for the year 1868 was held with the church in Manchester. A business session of the conference was called by the President, Eld. J. Couch, and held Friday, April 10th, commencing at one o'clock P. M. Meeting opened with prayer by Bro. J. W. White. The following members were present:—John Couch, T. W. Piper, N. Glidden, J. W. White, D. M. Leavitt, B. P. Manning, Z. Ford, and A. W. Sibley.

Bro. Couch gave a verbal request of the church in Sutton, N. H., for the ordination of Bro. Frank Nelson to the work of the gospel ministry. This request was referred to the Ministerial Committee. Voted, That Bro. Wm. H. Shaw of Holderness, N. H., be a member of this Conference. Adjourned till after the public service.

Met according to adjournment, Bro. Couch in the chair. Prayer offered by Bro. S. W. Thurber of Lowell, Mass. The time was occupied during this session in talking over matters pertaining to the interest of the cause in Manchester. Adjourned till Saturday, eight o'clock A. M. Met as adjourned. Prayer by Bro. T. W. Piper.

Voted, That a committee of three be appointed by the Chair to investigate and make such a disposition of difficulties in the church at Manchester as in their judgment shall be for the glory of God, and report at our next quarterly session. The Chair appointed for the above committee Elders J. G. Smith, T. W. Piper, and J. Knowles. The following Brn. by vote became members of the Conference: Willard McDaniels, Moses Richardson, and Daniel Eastman.

Voted, That the next quarterly session be held at Sutton, N. H., to commence May 28th. By vote, Bro. Samuel W. Thurber of Lowell, Mass., became a member of the conference.

Voted, That Bro. Caleb Richardson be a member of this conference. On motion, it was Voted, That we extend our thanks to the church and friends in Manchester for inviting this conference with them, and also for their courtesy and hospitable acts manifested to us during its session. Voted to adjourn till May 20th. A. W. SIBLEY, Secretary.

P. S.—This conference, in its social and public meetings, was excellent. The Spirit of the Master was indeed with us, and we think the efforts made during this session will be productive of much good. May God's divine blessing be with the church in Manchester. A. W. S.

For the World's Crisis.

NOW IS THE TIME.

Now is the time to introduce The Young Pilgrim to your friends and acquaintances. The little paper is doing good, and it wants to enlarge its circle of influence that it may do more good. Its friends have sent in over a thousand new subscribers since the 1st of January, and still they come. Will you, dear reader, be a helper in the good work?

Is there a family of children in your neighborhood, or among your acquaintance, where The Young Pilgrim is not taken? Show them a copy, and ask them if they will subscribe.

Is a new Sunday School about to be started in your place? Introduce The Young Pilgrim. Send for specimen copies, and see if you can raise a club.

Is your school, which was frozen up during the winter, getting thawed out, now that warm weather has come; and are you trying to breathe into it the breath of life again? Don't forget The Young Pilgrim. Make the children happy, and the Editor, too, by renewing your subscriptions.

Have you young friends whom you would be happy to see walking in the right way—pilgrims of Jesus to the Better Land? Put your hand in your purse, and send them The Young Pilgrim. Are there any poor among you, who would be glad to read it, but are not able to pay? "Bear one another's burdens, brethren, and so fulfill the law of Christ." Are you a minister of Christ,—a teacher, superintendent, parent,—specially admonished and commissioned by him to 'feed his lambs,' and provide them with the right kind of food? We invite your attention to The Young Pilgrim, and shall be pleased to send you specimen copies and receive from you, in return, one, two, five, ten, twenty, fifty, or a hundred subscribers.

☞ I do not desire to know when people were awakened, nor how they were awakened, unless they were awakened to go on living for God. I go not by instantaneous impulses, but by the permanent effects of the holy mind of God created in the regenerate.—R. Hill.

CONFESSION.

"Are any weak? So am I."

It is not often that I speak of my own experience, for I have not received so great manifestations, nor acquired such high attainments, as to make it interesting to those who live on milk and honey. But I feel just now like talking a little to the weak ones, my especial companions, and telling them some of my doubts and fears, my temptations and trials. I have said before that I do not write for the great, or the strong ones. My message is to the poor, trembling children of my Father's family, who wish to do the Lord's will, but are perplexed in regard to duty. And if there are any who are tried as I am, I should like to hear from them. Come, let us commune together, and by speaking of our own weaknesses we may help each other, and so gain strength. I always had a desire to be of some use in some way to some body in this world of sin and sorrow, especially since I got hold of the great chain of gospel truth. But notwithstanding this desire, this earnest longing for usefulness, my life has nearly passed, and I fear the world is no better for my having lived in it. Shall I tell you some of my failings, and some of my wanderings to and fro?

Sometimes I look out into the white harvest field; I see the world rushing madly on to destruction; I see the storm-clouds gathering; I hear the roar of the breakers that line the shore of time, and I feel that eternity is near. I see the sword coming, and long to sound the note of warning. But oh, who is sufficient for these things? If I attempt to warn the wicked of a coming judgment, then comes the thought, Who am I, that I should speak to sinners? Ah! Lord God; send by the hand of whom thou wilt, but as for me, I too am a sinner. If I speak, I suffer for my presumption; if I forbear, I am chastised. At times I pray earnestly that God will use me as an instrument for good. Well, an instrument must be tempered, so he lays me on the anvil; the fire is lighted, and the blows begin to fall. Then I cry out, O spare me, Lord! I can not endure it. O, stay thy hand, and deliver me from this fierce heat. The fire is suffered to go out. I am glad to escape, but find I have not got the edge I should have had if I had patiently endured the fire and hammer.

I pray, Lord, give me a place in thy vineyard. O let me be useful. Well, I get a bit of ground, and begin in much weakness to pull at the weeds. They are rooted deep, and before I get one fairly started, a company comes along and begin to criticise.

"I wonder what she'll accomplish there." "O, she thinks she is doing something now." "She likes amazing well to show her strength, and thinks she is somebody, and a great deal better than common people. Does n't she want to preach?"

O dear! if they knew how weak and unworthy I feel, they would not say it. I let go of the weed, and run away and hide, and in anguish cry, O, my Lord! let me serve thee quietly in a corner the rest of my days; I can not work in thy vineyard. I rest awhile, weeping over my weakness, my inabilities, my failures, and the cruel thrusts of professed friends; then comes again the stern inquiry,—"Why sit ye here all the day idle?" I look around and see God's children weeping and toiling under heavy burdens; my heart aches for them, and I long to lighten their burdens and cheer them on the way. Perhaps I write a few words to them through "our paper," then comes the cruel taunt from the great adversary, "You have magnified your office; who are you, that you should undertake to feed the flock of God? Who made you cup-bearer to the Royal family? Why do you presume to handle the King's bread and deal it out to his children? Then I feel so mean. "Get thee behind me, Satan! thou art an offence unto me."

Sometimes people with strong faith, who can leap from the bottom of the ravine to the top of the mountain at one bound, look back at me, and because I am lower down wrestling with the obstacles which are thrust in my way to keep me from "Him whom my soul loveth," or because, weary and heartsick with the cares and sorrows of life, I get down on the bank of the river, among the willows, and look with tearful eyes over into the land of rest, they tell me I have no religion at all.

Well, I never dared to say I knew I was a christian; it is a great thing to be one in a true sense; but this I do know, I love the faith once delivered to the saints. I rejoice in the glorious hope brought to light in the gospel. I feast on the blessed truths which have been dug out from under the rubbish of ages in these last days. This faith is the great sheet-anchor and the only one that will hold us in the coming storm. For this I resigned the pleasant associations of a church that I loved, and turned a deaf ear to all her pretty lullabies. For this I gave up the friendship and pleasures of the world, and I chose this way expecting to meet with something worse than cold shoulders, hard words, and false accusations. I expected the path led through Gethsemane, and up Mount Calvary; what then?

When our Savior reached Mount Calvary, his earthly trials were ended. That last scene of suffering brought deliverance. So if we are called to follow that path, we know the cross will bring the crown, and just beyond lies the land of light and glory. I am not tired of this way, nor of the fare. The flesh-pots of Egypt have for me no savory smell; give me angel's food. I'd rather suffer affliction with the people of God, than have the most "prominent place" in Pharaoh's house. The path grows brighter. O how the light shines! This hope is joy in sorrow, light in darkness, riches in poverty, and life in death. Rather than deny "the faith" I love so well, I would lay my head upon the chopping-block, and bid the executioner strike.

Come, ye weak ones, let us no longer live in doubt and fear, or wander in the dark mazes of unbelief. Let us trust in the Lord, for in the Lord Jehovah is everlasting strength.

We will place ourselves in his hands, let him use us as he will. If he has no work for us abroad, we will stay at home and try to attend patiently to the every-day duties of life. If he bids us go we will go, though the errand may be small and the work humble. We will be anything or nothing. But if we make a mistake and go when the Lord does not call, it is none of the devil's business. No doubt he would be glad to make us run when we have no errand from God, but he will be gladder still if we die over our mistakes. We are not accountable to him nor to men, thank God. Perhaps it will be better to offer our services when they are not wanted, than to refuse to obey one of the Lord's calls.

We must live near the Savior, so that we can hear plainly the whispers of the Spirit, and not give room for Satan to get in between with his false messages. We want no spasmodic faith, which places us in the slough of Despond the next. We want a steady, growing, shining faith, which leads on to certain victory. Let us no more vascillate, praying one day for work, and the next to be excused from work; but be passive, ever saying, "Lord, not my will, but thine be done." With our eyes fixed on Jesus, we will drink in his loveliness, and become more and more like him; and finally, when He who is our life appears, we shall appear with him in glory. B. P. FRENCH.

FROM BRO. J. T. DIXON.

The following is an extract from a letter written to a friend, by Bro. John T. Dixon, in 1860. We think it worthy of a general reading.

"O I am willing to wait patiently our day of deliverance and triumph; and thank the good Lord we shall not have to wait long. There is one thing settled in my mind (notwithstanding all the mistakes that Adventists have made on time), and that is this; if we can find out when the 6000 years end, since the creation of man, then we may know that the year of jubilee commences immediately after. According to the best information from the best historians and critics, our Savior was born in the year 4132 from the creation. Add to that number 1868, and we have 6000; about eight years between us and the Sabbatism that remains for God's people.

Just look and see how everything is moving in Europe towards the final consummation. Look at Napoleon, of France. Is not the whole world wondering after that beast? how he startles and surprises the wisest statesmen and the most sagacious politicians by his bold strokes of state policy, and general political diplomacy. Then look at the Papacy, tottering on the verge of ruin. The madness and imbecility of his prototype in old Babylon (Belshazzar), seems to mark every move of the poor old doomed Pontiff.

Again, turn your eyes to the East. Look at the eastern leg of the metallic image. Turkey is expiring. The western powers in the Crimean war took up arms to save her from the death embrace of the northern bear, and they turned him back; but what does it avail? Turkey is dying. God has decreed it, and man can't alter it. Look at Hungary, panting for an opportunity to close with her imperial oppressor in a final death grapple. Every part of Italy is in a ferment, seething and boiling like her own Vesuvius.

Look at this country. That Harper's Ferry tragedy meant more than many are aware of. Look at the angry debates in our national councils on the subject of slavery. What do all these things forebode? Together with the murders, suicides, rapes, robberies, divorces, drunkenness, etc., in fact crimes of all kinds, general and local, by individuals and by nations; the departure from primitive purity in practice and faith, in doctrine, by the churches;—all speak in thunder tones that the end is near. The nations are angry. God's wrath is coming, 'and the time of the dead that they should be judged.'"

AN APOLOGY.

Hearing that in advocating the '67 time argument, I was sometimes too severe, or judged too harshly, I humbly ask pardon of all wherein I have erred in this respect. I believe the Lord was in the movement, and I am looking, at present, for his coming with much interest about the season of the Passover, which, I think, occurs this year in May. DR. A. DECKER.

Correspondence.

From Bro. A. G. Bartlette.

BRO. GRANT:—It is with a sense of great weakness and unworthiness that I attempt to write for our much loved paper; but feeling a deep interest in the cause of truth, and knowing that the dear saints scattered abroad are always glad to hear of the welfare of Zion, I will venture to do so, desiring to do the will of the Lord in all things.

By the direction of kind Providence, I trust, we have been favored in this place with the labors of Bro. A. W. Sibley, a part of the time, for nearly two years. The Lord has been pleased to bless us in a good degree, and we have evidence that his labor has not been in vain. Since Bro. Sibley came among us, there has been considerable interest manifest from the first. Old professors have renewed their covenant, some wanderers have returned, and nearly a score of the dear youth have professed faith in Christ. Bro. Sibley has baptized nine, and organized a little church consisting of eighteen members. We feel that it is good to be united by the bonds of christian love and fellowship, under the church covenant, and to observe the ordinances pertaining to the Lord's house. May the Lord own and bless us, add to our numbers, and our names be found written in the Lamb's book of life when the Master comes. We now have prayer-meetings once and twice a week, which are well attended and quite interesting. There are some still who are inquiring the way to Zion. May they find him of whom Moses and the prophets did write, even Jesus, to be precious to their souls.

Bro. Sibley is highly esteemed by the people here. We feel very thankful for grace received, and sincerely hope that the good seed sown may yet take root in good and honest hearts, spring up, and bear fruit, some thirty, some sixty, and some an hundred fold. May the Lord abundantly bless his dear servants who have labored here and elsewhere, give them many souls for their hire, and when the Chief Shepherd shall appear, may they receive a starry crown, and an abundant entrance into his everlasting kingdom.

How safe and secure are they who have Christ for their friend and refuge in every time of trouble. Let my life be hid with Christ in God, when the last great storm of wrath shall sweep over the earth. How blessed it is to know that he is abundantly able to succor us then. How cheering the thought that we shall then be free from sorrow and pain; our vile bodies being made like unto Christ's most glorious body; having been washed and made white in his own precious blood. Let us struggle on yet a little longer, dark and thorny though the way may be, it is very short. Our longing eyes shall see the King in his beauty; our tears shall be wiped away, and our conflicts cease. Then can the tired soldier throw off his armor, and shout in the joy of his heart, The battle is ended, and the victory won. Meanwhile, let us strive to do all we can for the Master; inspire the fainting ones to new life, by pointing them to the prize at the end of the race; entreat the sinner to "Behold the Lamb of God"; lead the little ones to that Savior who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me"; point the aged to the Rock that is higher than they; speak words of comfort to the sorrowing, and implore the blessing of heaven on all.

How sweet it is to be permitted to do little services for Jesus, who has suffered so much for us. The path of obedience is the only safe path; and if we love God, we shall ever find his service delightful. May we ever keep in lively exercise that faith that works by love, that purifies the heart, and that overcomes the world; and finally meet all the dear saints in the paradise of God. A. G. BARTLETTE.

East Landaff, N. H., Mar. 26th.

From Bro. I. B. Harris.

BRO. GRANT:—Dear Sir,—I have for a long time been wanting to take the Crisis; being poor, I have not had the means to pay for it. Not long since I came to this conclusion, that if I could lay out twenty cents per week for tobacco, I could deny myself of that stuff which is and always has been an injury to me, and perhaps you would let me take the Crisis and pay you the amount quarterly, until the whole amount is paid. I receive it now and then through others; but as times are hard, I have been unable to take it, unless you will confer the favor as above requested. I am striving to live and walk out upon the promises, looking unto God, who is able and willing to save all that will come. It is my meat and drink, and whatsoever I do I strive to do for him.

Dear brother, you cannot imagine how different I felt when I was willing to give up tobacco. I have long felt it a duty to give it up, and how good the Lord has been in sparing me to give it up before I was cut off. I prayed often that he might let me use it under pretences, when I knew it was wrong. I have often tried to persuade myself that it was for my benefit, owing to weak lungs; but glory to God for the victory! I am delivered.

Now if you know any brother is using tobacco contrary to the word, tell him for me that when he is willing to give up, God will own and bless and deliver him, just as he has promised to do. How true the Lord is to his word. He has delivered me, and he will all. O, may we all take him at his word and prove him. May God help us to see all our faults, and the little sins, which kill the spirit. Many are falling out by the way and complaining right here in the last days, perhaps the last year. It is only a little while, and having food and raiment let us be contented, doing the will of God, knowing that he has promised to deliver all those whose names are found written in the Lamb's book of life. Yours in Christ, ISAAC B. HARRIS.

From Bro. J. B. Morgan.

BRO. GRANT:—The call in the Crisis of the 15th, for missionary work, is a good one, and should be attended to now. I think it would be a good plan for all who have a spirit to work, to send their names to the Treasurer, Bro. G. T. Adams, stating how much they will give monthly, and be prompt in sending the amount, so he would know how much he could rely upon. You may put me down $2.00 per month. God bless the work, and the workers. Yours truly, J. B. MORGAN.

WHEELOCK. Died in East Calais, Vt., April 14th, after a long and distressing illness, Bro. Briton Wheelock, aged seventy-two years.

The deceased embraced the christian religion in early life, and joined the Christian Church, in which he was a bright and shining light, maintaining a close walk with God, putting to silence the tongue of the gainsayer. He was one of the first who received and believed the message of Christ's personal and speedy advent to this earth, to raise the dead and restore the promised inheritance. In this faith and with this hope he has lived and died. He sometimes walked six miles to meet with the church in Cabot, ever faithfully discharging his duty, "steadfast in the faith." He remarked to the writer while visiting him, "I had hoped to see the Lord in the land of the living, but I must go down to the grave. It will be but a little while. Jesus will soon come and raise the dead."

He leaves a companion, four children, a brother, the church, and numerous friends, to mourn their loss. Funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Bro. Orrin Davis. Text, 2 Tim. 4: 6-8. N. WHEELER.

SMALL. Died in Augusta, Me., April 7th, 1868, of canker-rash, Freddie, only child of C. O. and M. F. Small, aged three years and six months.

Lovely and beautiful, death spared him not, but when we loved him most, suddenly tore him from our embrace. We laid him away in the cold tomb, by the river side; yet in our grief we are comforted with the glorious hope of seeing the same darling Freddie, in that bright land where death can never come. M. A. SMALL.

HILL. Died in Guilford, Ct., April 14th, 1868, our Sister, the wife of Bro. Geo. Hill, aged fifty-three years.

An illness of long weary months magnified the grace of God in her, by her complete and joyful resignation to his will, even in intense suffering. The occasion was improved by request of friends, and a full house listened attentively to a discourse by the writer from Rev. 14: 13.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable Dispatches.

PARIS, April 22. The Moniteur du Soir, in an editorial article to-day, says that through the good sense of the people, the baseless apprehension of an approaching war was subdued, and that the public mind is now tranquil. The result is part due to efforts made by foreign powers to sustain the pacific policy of France.

FLORENCE, 22. The marriage of Prince Humbert, the heir presumptive of the King of Italy, with the Princess Margaret, his cousin, took place to-day at the Chapel Royal, in Turin.

King Victor Emmanuel, the Crown Prince Frederick William of Prussia, Prince Napoleon, and the Princess Marie Clothilde, and many Italian notables, were present. Great preparations are making in this city for the reception of the Prince and his wife.

LONDON, April 25. Further particulars of the attempted assassination of Prince Alfred have been received. The culprit was an Irishman, named Farrell, who is known to be connected with the Fenian organization.

Farrell shot the Prince in the back on the 12th of March at Sydney, Australia. The ball was not extracted from the wound until two days afterwards. The wound is dangerous and painful, but the Prince is doing well, beyond even the hopes of his physicians.

His recovery will necessarily be slow. According to the advice of his medical attendants the Prince sailed for England.

Paris, April 26. In consequence of the recent troubles in Japan, and the outrages committed there on French seamen, the French fleet in the Japanese waters is to be augmented, and orders to that effect have been issued from the Ministry of Marine.

LONDON, April 26. Dispatches have just been received from Abyssinia, which give the following highly important and gratifying intelligence: A battle was fought on Good Friday, before Magdala, between the British troops, commanded by Gen. Napier, and the Abyssinian forces, under the command of their King in person. The latter were defeated, and retreated into the town. Their loss in killed and wounded was very heavy. On Monday following, all his preparations having been completed, Gen. Napier ordered an assault upon Magdala, and the town and citadel were carried by storm. King Theodorus was slain. A large number of his warriors were killed, wounded and taken prisoners, and the entire capital remained in possession of the British forces. The loss of the British in killed and wounded was small. All the British captives were found in the city alive and well, and were set free. Gen. Napier's instant return to the sea-coast is expected.

DOMESTIC.

San Francisco, April 22. A telegram from Virginia City states that a horrible slaughter of the whites had been committed by the Pitt River or Pente Indians at Red Rock ranche, along the valley of Nevada, April 17th or 18th. The Indians had been committing depredations for some time, stealing stock, etc., but made no threats against the lives of the whites.

The savages took a party by surprise, they not suspecting any hostile intentions. W. H. Pierson, wife and daughter, were murdered. John Sutherland, another man and a boy about twelve years of age, made their escape, but were pursued a long distance by the Indians.

Arizona advices to April 4th have been received, and state that the mail rider on the Mohave road had been attacked by a large party of Indians. Two of the escort were killed by the first fire, but the remainder defended themselves until assistance was received. Two Indians were killed.

St. Louis, April 22. A dispatch from Fort McPherson, dated February 22, says four men were killed by the Indians yesterday, and two were brought in alive, but they were scalped. The Indians attempted to capture S. A. Slosnson's stock, but were repulsed by the ranchmen. These Indians are supposed to come from Republican River.

Omaha, April 23. Late news from Cheyenne, Dacotah, announces that on the night of the 8th inst., the Sioux Indians ran off all the stock at Big Springs station, on the Union Pacific Railroad. On the following night they swept off all the stock at Ogallala, just east of Big Springs. During the evening of the 10th a party of red skins came boldly into Sidney, a military post and railroad station, and ran off a number of cattle. On the same day the same party cleaned out Louis' ranch at Laramie crossing, seven miles east of Sidney. The night previous they stole all the stock at Julesburg. On the 11th another party paid Sidney a visit and carried away seven horses. On the 12th they encountered two travelers who had been put off the Union Pacific Railroad cars near Antelope station, both of whom they killed and scalped.

A NEW PLANET.—Last Saturday night a new planet belonging to the group of the asteriods, and the ninety-eighth of them, was discovered at the Litchfield Observatory of Hamilton College, New York, by Dr. E. H. F. Peters, in 11 hours, 17 minutes, 51 seconds of right ascension, and 1 degree. 38 minutes, 13 seconds of southern declination. It has the brightness of a star of the twelfth magnitude, with a slow retrograde motion, about 22 seconds of time per day, in right ascension, and a motion of six minutes toward the south.

Recently the parish authorities gave orders for the pump to be repaired, when no fewer than twenty letters were found inside it. As they bore no date stamp, the authorities are unable to tell how long they may have remained in this strange recepticle.

☞ Hotel rents in New York are decidedly large. The Astor House when re-opened, is to rent for $55,000; the St. Nicholas is rented for $78,000, the Metropolitan for $75,000, and the Fifth Avenue somewhere near $80,000.

☞ The present is the greatest maple sugar season Vermont has experienced "within the memory of the oldest inhabitant." Sylvanus Morse of East Montpelier is the maple sugar king of the State. He has 2750 trees tapped, and thus far has made 700 to 1000 pounds. His total product this year will probably be from five to six tons. The sugar product is equally great throughout the whole State.

☞ By a railroad accident in Alabama, recently, the wild animals in a menagerie were let loose, their cages being broken. They took to the woods, but were caught again without much difficulty.

☞ It is stated that the recent survey of Portland harbor revealed two dangerous rocks not laid down on any chart. One of them is near the buoy, below the break-water and the other is in the Upper Harbor.

☞ A contemporary states that, owing to high rents, the larger cities are fast losing the bone and sinew, the conservative element of their populations—the steady, prudent, temperate working men being obliged to flee from extortion to the suburbs, where they can be more comfortably and cheaply accommodated.

☞ It is said that the gamblers of New York win ten millions of dollars annually.

☞ Everybody who writes for the press should be careful to make proper names specially legible.

☞ An old negro named Bacchus, who was purchased from an African ship sixty-three years ago, died in Charleston a few days since. He never had but one owner, the merchant who bought him from the ship, and he lived in that merchant's family till he died, and was then buried, with many marks of respect, by that gentleman's sons.

☞ It seems that the spirits have forsaken the Davenport brothers, who are now in England. They cannot get a single manifestation, and when bound remain so, greatly to their mortification.

☞ The Hawaiian Evangelical Board have issued a call for a convention of all the missions in the Pacific, to be held in Honolulu in the month of June, 1870. The occasion will be the semi-centennial anniversary of the establish of missions on the Hawaiian Islands.

☞ The Pope is reported to have written a letter of entreaty and expostulation to the Emperor of Austria, trying to win him back from the liberal ground he has lately taken in regard to religious matters.

☞ The fruit crop at the West, so far, is substantially safe. The late flurry of snow and frost was supposed to have destroyed the germs, but as a general thing they escaped, because not far enough advanced to be nipped.

☞ No fewer than six women have recently been elected on parochial boards in various parts of England. In the neighborhood of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, there are accounts of a religious movement which is almost entirely in the hands of women. They go about among the laboring people, read the Bible to them, and converse on religious topics with great enthusiasm. Several of them preach on Sundays.

☞ An earthquake was felt in the centre and north of France on the 4th instant. It occurred between one and two in the morning. The furniture was rocked about in the houses, and the startled cattle, awakened from their sleep, bellowed loudly. It was equally felt in the Island of Jersey, in the British Channel.

☞ The recent avalanche near Cisco, Cal., it is asserted, was five or six miles long, and must have carried with it a mass of snow ten feet deep and half a mile wide, weighing over five million tons. Three avalanches occurred in California on March 4th and 5th, killing thirteen men and destroying $100,000 worth of property.

STARTING TOMATOES IN THE HOUSE.—Most people plant the seed too soon. Have some light, rich soil in a box, sow the seed about the first of April, water thoroughly with warm water, and set the box in a warm place near the stove until the plants begin to come up. Then place the box in a sunny window, in a room where you can keep a fire all day, and at night if it should be cold. Turn the box every day, and thin out the young plants, leaving them two or three inches apart. When they begin to crowd one another transplant them singly into pots or small boxes. Boxes four inches deep and four inches square, with bottoms lightly tacked on, are best. The last of May make a hole where you want each plant to grow, take off the bottom of the box carefully, set the plant in the hole and draw off the rest of the box neatly, as you would take off a shirt. The plants will then grow without check. It is best, however, to shade them for a few days with a broad shingle stuck on the southwest side of each plant.

GROWING GRAPES.—The more we look at it, the more we become convinced that a soil enriched with manure is hurtful to flavor, and lessens the fruit. There seems also a defect in ripening. Natural soil, with a fair proportion of clay and lime, and deep tillage, we are convinced is the most successful way with grapes. Deep culture gives the roots a chance; moderate growth ripens, increases fruit, both in soundness and flavor. Hence, elevated soil, which is generally dry, airy and less rich, containing more lime, with less vegetable matter—is selected for grapes. We grow more wood in the rich soil of the valley; but grapes, not wood, is what we want. It is pretty certain, too, that we plant too close generally. The vine wants to be up in the air; that is its nature.—Rural World.

RELIGIOUS DISCUSSION.

During the week the Unitarian church has been the great centre of attraction, where, in presence of large and interested audiences, Rev. Moses Hull, Spiritual, and Eld. Miles Grant, Adventist, have been discussing the following resolution:

Resolved, That the spirit of man exists in a conscious state after the death of the body, and can, under favorable circumstances, return and communicate with the inhabitants of earth."

Hull in the affirmative and Grant in the negative. Rev. Jesse Meader, Ward 4, acts as umpire, and limits these intellectual giants to twenty minutes. Rev. Mr. Hull is a rapid talker, a quick thinker, keen as a Turkish scimetar, and a perfect walking Scriptural Encyclopædia. Grant is not less posted in matters of sacred writ, but, as Rev. Mr. H. says, sees through a "glass darkly." The discussion, which has been carried on thus far in an excellent spirit of good humor and fair play, will be productive of great good, as it will lead men not to take too much for granted. It will teach the people to think for themselves, and although both gentlemen thus far have thrust the lance to the hilt into each other several times, neither is inclined to cry "hold, enough."

Wednesday night, Grant made the bold assertion that the spirit of no man that ever lived on the earth, after his death had ever returned, and that he could prove the assertion. He admitted there were spiritual communications and intelligence, but demoniacal in their character. Hull cited the case of Moses and Elias appearing to Christ, and the angel of the Lord, who appeared to John on the Isle of Patmos. Grant charges Hull with a general outspoken disbelief of the Bible, and endeavors to prejudice his hearers by making the assertion. Hull replies that he has the right to reject what is irrational to his mind in the Bible, and only believe what is rational. He did not believe that a son two years older than his father once reigned, and it was also hard to think that God shaves with borrowed razors. (Isaiah 7: 20.) Hull believes in a perfect God—that everything is perfect in its sphere—no imperfection anywhere. Man is omnipotent, and has never reached his ultimatum, nor found any limit to his power. Onward and upward is his motto.

The discussion closes to-night, and we hope to give a full resume of the argument on both sides.—Dover Gazette.

GENTLENESS.—"Thy gentleness," said the Psalmist, "has made me great." There is true greatness in gentleness. Little minds, with little grace, cannot bear contradiction. But he whose heart is filled with love to God and love to man can bear with the weaknesses, the imperfections, and even the perverseness of others. If you find yourself tried with everybody, rest assured of one thing, that however much out of the way they may be, you are not right yourself. Glass imparts its own color to every object that is seen through it; so do the passions and prejudices of our own souls color the actions of others. To one absolutely deaf there are no sounds; and to one filled with the love of God and his neighbor, there are no provocations that disturb the equanimity of the soul.

Tent Meetings.

To the brethren and sisters scattered throughout Massachusetts and New Hampshire, Greeting: Whereas the time for preaching the gospel is short, and what is done for the salvation of sinners must be done quickly, I address these lines to you. Brn. Kingsbury of Chelsea, and Ford of Concord, and others, have provided a suitable tent for the business, and placed it in the field—a free tent—and given me charge of the same. Now I want all who desire tent meetings in their vicinity the coming season, to write me at once. Bro. S. W. Thurber and other efficient preachers will assist in the work. Our first meeting will be held in Charlestown, Mass., commencing Thursday evening, May 14th, and hold over Sunday. We shall expect the brethren and sisters to co-operate with us in the work. Let prayer go up to God, that his blessing may attend. Per order,

D. M. LEAVITT.

A Word of Explanation.

To the Readers of the Crisis:—Respecting our pamphlet, I stated that it would contain about 70 pp., and it only contains 60. Just before the printer began his work, by his suggestion we enlarged the size a good deal, making a larger page. Therefore, while the matter is there, the pages are less. We doubt not but you will all think that the valuable quotations it contains from eminent men, profound scholars, and devout ministers, are well worth 15 cts. We intend having two thousand copies, and we trust that our debt, which is considerable, will be soon lessened by orders received.

Those who responded to our former call, have our thanks for the aid afforded. One brother sent in the names of nine ministers, of different denominations, to whom he wished the pamphlet sent. This is what we want. Circulate it among those who think "the good time coming" is before our Lord's return. We will say to all who will order copies for this purpose, we will send ten for a dollar.

MARY D. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me.

For sale at this office. Price 15c; postage 2c.

Conference.

A conference of brethren believing in the personal coming of Jesus Christ nigh at hand, in Mecosta, Isabella and adjoining counties, will convene at Millbrook, Mich., on Thursday evening before the first Sunday in June, to hold over Sunday. The object of this conference will be to unite the means of the scattered brethren, and employ an evangelist to proclaim the coming of Christ and kindred doctrines in this northern field. We hope to see a general attendance of preachers and people. We expect some preachers from other parts of the State. Millbrook is situated on the county line, between Mecosta and Isabella counties, and forty-five miles north of Ionia station, on the Detroit and Milwaukie Railroad. Provisions for the entertainment of all will be made.

JOHN BOWER,
PETER S. DECKER,
LEVI W. KING,
RICHARD S. DECKER, } Committee.

Quarterly Conference.

The third quarterly session of the Advent Christian State Conference of New Hampshire will be held in Sutton, N. H., commencing on Thursday, at five o'clock P. M., May 28th, and hold over the following Lord's day.

A. W. SIBLEY, Secretary.

Conference.

There will be a conference held at Lowell, Mass., commencing Tuesday evening, May 5th, and continuing every evening through the week, and over Lord's day, May 10th. Brethren J. Couch, J. G. Smith, and D. M. Leavitt are expected to be present. For the church, JOB MOODY.

Has Any One Seen It?

A book of private letters was bound and left in the Crisis Office last fall, for Bro. Rufus Wendell. It was left in care of Bro. Woodward, but he cannot find it. Can any one give any information in regard to it?

Tent and Campmeetings in Wisconsin.

A tent meeting will commence in Brodhead, Green Co., Wis., May 15th. Elder J. V. Himes will help us.

A tent meeting will begin at Fairfield, Sauk Co., Wis., May 30th. Elder Miles Grant will help us. At the same place a campmeeting will begin June 1st.

A tent meeting will begin at Fenimore, Grant Co., Wis., June 12th. Eld. N. A. Hitchcock will help us. WM. SHELDON.

Conference.

There will be a quarterly conference in Bridgewater, Vt., Saturday and Sunday, May 9th and 10th, services beginning with prayer, Friday, 7 P. M. Business and conference Saturday, 10 A. M., preaching 2 P. M., and Sunday 10.30 A. M. and 2 P. M. Lord's supper after morning service.

G. W. STETSON.

Tent Meeting.

I want all that desire a tent meeting during the season in their locality to write me at once, so I can make my arrangements not to travel over the ground more than once, as I had to do last season. Write at once. My address is Edenboro, Erie Co., Pa. J. WENDELL.

Conference at West Poland.

There will be a conference held at West Poland, Me., (Free Chapel), commencing Thursday evening, April 30th, to continue over the following Lord's day. Elder John Couch will be with the brethren to preach the word. All are invited.

J. A. LIBBY.

Notice.

Those at the west wishing books, tracts or charts, can be supplied at Rochester, N. Y., by addressing Dr. J. Naramore, (Eagle Block) Rochester, N. Y.

THE COMPLAINER.

I set myself against the Lord,
Despised his Spirit and his word,
And wished to take his place;
It vexed me so that I must die,
And perish, too, eternally,
Or else be saved by grace.

Of every preacher I'd complain;
One spoke through pride, and one for gain,
Another's learning small;
One spoke too fast, and one too slow,
One prayed too loud, and one too low,
Another had no call.

Some walk too straight, to make a show,
Whilst others far too crooked go,
And both of these I scorn;
Some, odd fantastic motions make,
Some stoop too low, some stand too straight,
No one is faultless born.

With no professor I could join,
Some dressed too mean, and some too fine,
And some would talk too long;
Some had a tone, some had no gift,
Some talked too slow, and some too swift,
And all of them were wrong.

I thought they'd better keep at home
Than to exhort where'er they come,
And tell us of their joys.
They'd better keep their gardens free
From weeds, than to examine me,
And vex me with their noise.

Kindred and neighbors too were bad,
And no true f lend was to be had,
My rulers are too vile;
At length kind Heaven gave me to see
The fault did mostly lie in me,
And had done all the while.

I now can hear a child proclaim
The joyful news, and praise the name
Of Jesus Christ my King;
I know no sect; the saints are one;
With my complaints I now have done,
And God's free grace I sing.

MAN THE IMAGE OF GOD.

"And God said, let us make man in our image, after our likeness."
"So God created man in his own image; in the image of God created he him."—GEN. 1: 26, 27.

(Concluded.)

Mr. Watson, in asserting that man's form has no more resemblance to God's form than the figure of a reptile, differed somewhat from St. Paul, who said, "A man indeed ought not to cover his head, forasmuch as he is the image and glory of God." The apostle here uses no circumlocution, but says directly and explicitly that man is the image of God. This passage would seem to be conclusive of the meaning of the phrase, "image of God." Strangely enough it is not so considered by all. A recent writer in a pretentious theological work, thus ventilates his "orthodox" sentiments on the "compound" being, yclept man. "Within this bodily organization there is a being which observes, reasons, feels, resolves and acts. This is the 'inner man,' the self of our existence, the man of the man. It is the mover and manager of this machine, the tenant of this house, the ruler of this temple." Thus do the refinements of modern theology envelop with a mystic vail the plainest passages of Holy Writ. Such writers as the above would do well to give heed to Solomon's injunction (Prov. 30: 6), "Add thou not unto his words, lest he reprove thee, and thou be found a liar." Turn we now to the simplicity of the Scripture narrative, and we find this plain and intelligible language: "And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness." "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground." In other words, God formed his own image of the dust of the ground, and named it man.

"A man indeed ought not to cover his head." It may be remarked here, by way of noting a distinction, that man is the only animal that prepares and wears artificial clothing; and having an upright form, covering the head would be to cover the person. This would not be true of any other creature. Besides, the head contains the brain power, which immeasurably elevates man above the beasts in knowledge.

Men, since Adam, have received this image by traduction. "Adam . . . begat a son in his own likeness, after his image, and called his name Seth." The reason assigned for the death penalty in the case of murder, furnishes a cogent argument for supposing that the effacement of God's image in man is the result of the destruction of animal life. "Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed; for in the image of God made he man." Man's blood (which is the life of the flesh) being shed, the dust of which the image was made returns to the earth as it was. I can not conceive how the "essence of homicide" can consist in setting at liberty an immaterial prisoner by destroying his "prison-house" of clay. Men who profess to be christians are quite too apt, nowadays, to speak contemptuously and disparagingly of the "human form divine." They delight to call it a "prison," a "tenement," a "shell," a "poor cottage," etc., etc. In modern theology Death is said to be a "Liberator," and the "Prince of Peace." David declared that God made man a little lower than the angels, and crowned him with glory and honor. Dr. Watts, in comparing men to angels, says of men:

"But how much meaner things are they
Who spring from dust, and dwell in clay."

These lines read as though the author were a "Materialist"; but he doubtless used the words in a "Pickwickian" sense; for in another hymn he sings—

"All ye who laugh and sport with death,
And say, there is no hell;
The gasp of your expiring breath
Will send you there to dwell."

The mysterious has ever possessed a potent influence over man. The real conflict is between Materialism and Spiritualism. At a recent convention of Spiritualists, a resolution was passed declaratory of what constituted a Spiritualist, embracing, as I think, the true definition, viz., "Any person who believes in the immortality of the soul." On this broad but mystical platform, immaterialists and modern Spiritualists are content to occupy common ground. I confess that I can see little difference between the Pantheism of Spinoza, and the Spiritualism of Andrew Jackson Davis.

An indefinable sense of grossness is attached to the popular conception of materialism. A materialist is thought to be an infidel, or something worse. An odium attaches to the name from its being applied to a school of French and German infidels. False and unmeaning definitions have done much in casting reproach on the name. A materialist may be defined to be: One who believes the mind of man to be the result of a peculiar organization of matter when animated by the breath of life; one who denies the existence of immaterial beings, entities, or intelligences. We know as little of the ultimate relations of matter as we do of spirit. Immaterialists like Mr. Scott, quoting from John 4: 24, declare that they have divine authority for saying that God is without shape or form. This passage furnishes the warp and woof of the baseless fabric of immaterialism. They say, "'God is a spirit,' hence no bodily shape can in any respect resemble him." This conclusion, so far as it has reference to form, is premature and unwarranted. The word spirit, when used to represent a being, is never applied to a bodiless or formless intelligence. It was a favorite truism of Fichte, that "we know nothing but by consciousness."

The Lord has not required us to believe unintelligible mysteries. There can be no faith without some evidence on which to base it, and evidence is only received through consciousness. The Lord founded a belief in the children of Israel by means of visible works, glories, and wonders. They saw his glory, and witnessed his power. "Then went up Moses and Aaron, Nadab and Abihu, and seventy of the elders of Israel; and there was under his feet as it were a paved work of sapphire stone, and as it were the body of heaven in his clearness."—Ex. 24: 9, 10. "And the Lord spake unto Moses face to face, as a man speaketh unto his friend."—33: 11. "And there arose not a prophet since in Israel like unto Moses, whom the Lord knew face to face."—Deut. 34: 10. And Moses said unto the Lord, "I beseech thee show me thy glory. . . . And he said, Thou canst not see my face; for there shall no man see me and live. And the Lord said, Behold, there is a place by me, and thou shalt stand upon a rock; and it shall come to pass while my glory passeth by, that I will put thee in a cleft of the rock, and will cover thee with my hand while I pass by; and I will take away mine hand, and thou shalt see my back parts; but my face shall not be seen."—Ex. 33: 18–23. Micaiah to the king of Israel—"Hear the word of the Lord: I saw the Lord sitting on his throne, and all the host of heaven standing by him on his right hand and on his left."—Ps. 4: 6; 89: 15; Num. 6: 25–6.

There is an indescribable glory in the countenance of the Lord. Mortals are not permitted to see his face; but Jesus said of humble believers, Take heed that ye despise not one of these little ones; for I say unto you, that in heaven their angels do always behold the face of my Father which is in heaven." The glory of man, too, shines from the face. In this respect he resembles his Maker and the angels. The glory and beauty of a countenance do not depend upon "Grecian features and classic profiles." "Man's wisdom maketh his face to shine." When Moses came down from Mount Sinai with the two tables of testimony in his hand, his face shone so brightly that the children of Israel were afraid to come nigh him. And Luke describes the Transfiguration thus: "And as he prayed the fashion of his countenance was altered, and his raiment was white and glistering; and behold, there talked with him two men, which were Moses and Elias; who appeared in glory, and spake of his decease which he should accomplish at Jerusalem."—Luke 9: 29, 30.

The three angels that visited Abraham, and the two that visited Lot are called men. They were entertained by their hosts, "and they did eat." The wife of Manaoh to her husband thus: "A man of God came unto me, and his countenance was like the countenance of an angel of God, very terrible." The appearance of the angels at the Savior's sepulchre, as described by Matthew, Mark, Luke and John, proves that angels have the form of men. "And entering into the sepulchre, they saw a young man sitting on the right side, clothed in a long, white garment." Mark 16: 5, vide Matt. 28: 2, 3; Luke 24: 4; John 20: 12; Acts 1: 10. It was wisdom that caused Stephen's countenance to shine so "all that sat in the council, looking steadfastly on him, saw his face as it had been the face of an angel." Five hundred years before the first advent, it is recorded that Nebuchadnezzar the king said unto his counsellors, "Did not we cast three men bound into the midst of the fire? They answered and said unto the king, True, O king. He answered and said, Lo, I see four men walking in the midst of the fire; and the form of the fourth is like the Son of God."

St. Paul, in his masterly argument on the resurrection, says: "There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body. And so it is written, The first man Adam was made a living soul; the last Adam was made a quickening spirit. . . . The first man is of the earth, earthy; the second man is the Lord from heaven." The language here used is significant. The first man was made a "living soul" (Gen. 2: 7); the second man was made a "quickening spirit." As Christ was the first fruits of them that slept, he must have risen with a spiritual body. Judging from his language to Thomas (John 20: 17), as well as from his eating broiled fish and honey-comb (Luke 24: 42), the conclusion would seem to be legitimate that his resurrected body was tangible and real. It appears that he took this body with him to heaven. "And it came to pass, while he blessed them, he was parted from them, and carried up into heaven." The angels told his disciples, "This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner, as ye have seen him go into heaven." After this, Stephen, "being full of the Holy Spirit, looked up steadfastly into heaven, and saw the glory of God, and Jesus standing on the right hand of God."

The proposition that "the soul is an immaterial substance," conveys no intelligible idea to the mind of any human being. We can form a faint conception of the existence of animalculæ, a million of which, it is said, may inhabit a drop of water; but beyond a monad, which Leibnitz defines to be an ultimate atom, human comprehension can not go. A recent writer says, "Philosophy never has been, and probably never will be able to explain the mysterious union of mind and matter." There are many, very many things that philosophy has ever been unable to explain. The simplest phenomena of nature baffle human learning to make intelligible. Who can tell how grass grows, or what gives it its color? What botanist is able to explain how the rose folds and unfolds its petals, or exhales its fragrance? We receive through our consciousness certain degrees of knowledge concerning these familiar objects; but a knowledge of ultimates and causes belongs to the Absolute alone.

It is certainly a consolation to think that the time is soon coming when mystery will give place to certainty. "For now we see through a glass, darkly; but then face to face. Now I know in part; but then shall I know even as I am known." We shall then more fully realize the peerless honor conferred on man, when he was made in God's glorious image. "It doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is." J. H. WHITMORE.

OPENING OF THE MEMPHIS CHAPEL.

To the Secretary of the A. A. Mission Society:

DEAR BRO.:—After parting with you at Boston, I came nearly direct to this place, and arrived in safety, with Sr. Martha Steere, on Friday, April 10th. We found the Mission family well, and in good cheer, and all in readiness for the dedication. The house was opened on the Sabbath, April 12th. The following notice from the Memphis Post may not be uninteresting to the friends of the Mission:—

"DEDICATION.—The Advent Mission Chapel, on the corner of Fourth and Saffarans Streets, North Memphis, was dedicated yesterday, April 12. This chapel has been built by the American Advent Mission Society, at the North, for the freedmen, and is arranged both for schools and meetings of public worship. The house is sixty by forty feet. Rooms are also fitted up for the Mission family and teachers, and altogether, it is one of the best buildings that has been put up in the State for the freedmen. It is a creditable work to the Society. They have expended some five thousand dollars including fifteen hundred received from the Freedman's Bureau.

They have a church, and congregation which fills the house, and a large school. They have a Band of Hope, consisting of two hundred and thirty children, pledged to the temperance cause. The school is under the charge of Dr. I. I. Leslie and Mrs. F. C. Northup, and is among the best of schools among the freedmen.

The mission now consists of Dr. Leslie, the chief in the school department; Mrs. Northup, Miss Martha Steere, Elder D. D. Reed, and Mr. John Wadsworth. These are all engaged either in teaching or preaching and visiting, and distributing tracts for the elevation of the freedmen.

There is also a branch of this mission at La-Grange, Tenn., of which Elder B. W. Wilkins has the charge. They have a large society, and a school of eighty scholars. They have purchased a lot, and think to build soon.

Rev. J. V. Himes, the President of the society, has taken great interest in these missions, and has done much by his frequent visits to promote their prosperity. He was present yesterday and preached on the occasion of the dedication. The services were of deep interest. The society and school is in a high state of prosperity and with their new house begins a new era in their history, and with the accustomed diligence and faithfulness of Dr. Leslie, with his associates, the mission and school will prosper. We take great interest in all these efforts to promote the welfare of our colored population."

A more full account may be seen in the Voice of the West.

The charts you sent are greatly appreciated, and are used; one in Memphis, and one in La Grange. They are making a deep impression on the minds of the freedmen. They have the image of Daniel 2: all clear; and last night, April 13th, I explained in full Dan. 8;—vision and time, and made it clear. It was the first meeting in the new chapel since the dedication. We had about four times as many people as we used to have. It was a large and appreciative audience. Elder B. W. Wilkins was present, and followed in interesting remarks. The truth is spreading, and many are looking for Christ's immediate coming, and some look for it this year.

I shall give you a more full report of the Mission soon, and of my visit here. I may add, just here, that the clothing sent, with other help for the freedmen, has been wisely and faithfully appropriated. A thousand thanks go back to the North for these gifts for the poor. They are really a grateful people.

The school begins to-morrow, under the most encouraging auspices. Bro. Leslie is well, cheerful and hopeful. He loves the children, and they think every thing of him. He is the man for them. Bro. Reed is well worked down. He has not ceased to work both night and day from the time he came out. But now he will have rest. He is highly prized by the freedmen, and, like Bro. Leslie, loves them, and is trying to do them good. Sister Northrup is well, and still faithful at her post to do all she can for this poor people. Sister Martha Steere has come to help her. Brethren and sisters all abroad will remember and pray for the toiling ones here. Truly yours,

JOSHUA V. HIMES.

JOURNAL.

DORCAS MISSION.

Sept. 3d. During the past week have made various repairs, and papered the school-room of the Home.

Sept. 11th. Have just returned from the Alton Bay campmeeting, which, like the meeting at Wilbraham, was made a blessing to me spiritually, physically, and pecuniarily. My cup of joy was filled a good while before my purse was. It was an unspeakable privilege to meet with those of like precious faith, and hear their testimonies concerning the coming kingdom.

Three sisters were, without my knowledge, collecting money for our mission at this gathering, and I was quite surprised as each brought their collections to me. The church at New Durham sent an offering of $20.00 by the hand of Sr. Proctor. May the Lord abundantly reward them. Sr. Harriet Dennett brought $60.20, the total amount collected by her. Then Srs. Wood and Proctor handed me $80.00 as the result of their solicitations for aid. Emma Black gave 50 cents, which she received for good scholarship and deportment. There were given me by forty-four other brethren and sisters, $71.00; also, one brother gave 50 cts. in silver, and a sister gave me 25 cts. in the same precious metal. Bro. B. Young gave $3.93 in silver. All this coin was sold for $6.17. A sister gave a lot of jewelry, which we still have on hand with the exception of the pencil. (This lot consisted of a fine gold chain, pencil, locket, small cameo pin, breastpin without the stone, small ear-ring, and two small chains. It is extremely difficult to obtain a fair price for old jewelry. The gold pencil brought $2.00 into our treasury.)

Thus, after we have endured many trials, the Lord has been pleased to deliver us, and we have been richly blessed. May his abundant blessing rest upon all these saints who have so generously administered to our wants. Truly the Lord is a merciful and loving Father.

Dec. 1st. Through the abundance of means received in the past, all our needs have been supplied. All glory to our Father in heaven.

Dec. 2nd. After breakfast, not one penny in the funds, but we have provision enough on hand for dinner. Evening. The Lord sent us $5.00 toward evening. A gentleman passing by the Home was attracted by the noise of the children who were playing in the school-room. After looking at them for awhile, he made some inquiries about the Home, finally asked to see me, was shown to my room, when he gave me $5.00, and left right away without giving his name. I knew nothing of his being near the house until he knocked at the door of my room. Thus the Lord helped in our time of need.

Dec. 3d. To-day received $17.00 from three persons. Thus again the Lord has bountifully supplied our need. Praise his name.

Dec. 6th. To-day received $10.00 through the post-office, and $100.00 from the former managers of the Home as a donation for repairs that had been made.

Dec. 30th. After breakfast this morning, but five cents in the treasury. Received $3.09 through the day. Had to pay $2.09 freight on a barrel that was received, which left $1.00, which was expended for bread for dinner. On opening the barrel found amongst other things half a bushel of beans and a few dried apples. Our grocer made us a present of a dozen lbs. of pork. Thus wonderfully the Lord supplied our needs at this time. We still feel that the Lord will take care of us, and by his grace we shall continue to trust in him.

Your Bro. in Christ, F. H. BURBANK.

SPEAK NO ILL.

Nay, speak no ill, a kindly word
Can never leave a sting behind;
And, oh, to breathe each tale we've heard,
Is far beneath a noble mind.
Full oft a better seed is sown,
By choosing thus a kinder plan;
For if but little good we know,
Let's speak of all the good we can.

Give me the heart that fain would hide,
Would fain another's faults efface;
How can it pleasure human pride
To prove humanity but base?
No, let it reach a higher mode,
A nobler estimate of man;
Be earnest in the search of good,
And speak of all the best we can.

Then speak no ill, but lenient be
To others' failings as your own;
If you're the first a fault to see,
Be not the first to make it known.
For life is but a passing day,
No lips may tell how brief the span;
Be earnest in the search of good,
And speak of all the best we can.

STAR OF HOPE MISSION.

BRO. GRANT:—In my visits to-day, I met with one of the Lord's colored children, in whom I feel very much interested. I would like to speak of some of the Lord's dealings with her. She has truly come up the rough side of the mountain (as the colored people say), a child of affliction and trouble; but in the midst of it all such patience and childlike trust as we do not often witness. She is the mother of fourteen children, eight of whom are now living. Her husband is a Catholic, does but very little for the support of the family, and opposes her very much. She often has to throw her shawl and bonnet out of the window, and steal away to get to meeting.

A short time since she had a fall, which injured her so that she was confined to her bed for some weeks, during which time her rent became due, and her landlord had threatened to turn them into the street. She took the matter to the Lord, and the rent came.

Last Saturday evening, a brother called at the Mission, and after talking awhile inquired if there were any very needy among us. Sr. Boide told him of this sister, and he thought he would call and see her before he left the city, but on going out he felt a very strong impression to go that night. It was then between nine and ten o'clock. He hesitated, it being so late, but the impression was so strong, he took the cars for that part of the city where she lived. On arriving, he found the family without a mouthful of anything to eat in the house; they had used the last handful of flour that day to make a few cakes, so that the children each had one. The dear sister felt well about the matter. She had concluded, if the Lord did not send anything, they would spend the Sabbath in singing and praying, so that they would forget their hunger; but Father's eye was over them.

As soon as the brother entered the door, she felt the Lord had sent him. He talked with her awhile, inquired into her circumstances, then took a large basket, went out, and filled it with needful articles of food, enough to last the family a week, and before he left gave her ten dollars to pay her rent. The poor woman's heart was filled with gratitude to overflowing. She wept and praised the Lord, and while relating the circumstances to us tears flowed down her cheeks.

"Oh!" she said, "I never can doubt Jesus. Let me be situated as I may, I feel rich."

She has unwavering faith in the promises of God. If she is in trouble or want, she goes with child-like confidence to Father, asks and believes, and deliverance comes.

It does my heart good to visit this dear child, and converse with her, and read the Bible to her (as she cannot read herself), and hear her talk of the goodness of God and his dealings with her. Oh, that the Lord will help me to have that living faith in exercise continually, that will take him at his word, a faith

"That will not tremble on the brink Of poverty or woe,"

is the prayer of your Sister in Christ,

New York City. M. E. DOW.

THE TWO BODIES: WHAT BECOMES OF THEM.

As Paul's expressions in regard to "this earthly house," and "our house from heaven," have been perverted to mean, the first the human body, and the latter a spiritual body assumed by the soul at death; it has been a query with us—What is to be done with the extra body at the resurrection? We have never yet seen a satisfactory solution of this difficulty. But we were not a little amused by an explanation of the matter in a story told by the Bishop of Tennessee at a recent Church Congress in England, as published in the Pall Mall Gazette. We commend it to the candid consideration of the advocates of two-body theology.

"The Bishop fell into conversation with 'Uncle Tony,' a plantation preacher, on various christian doctrines, and finally said:

'And what about the resurrection?'

With a very solemn face he replied: 'You see, massa, 'intment is 'intment.'

'Yes.'

'Well, you see, when the angel Gabriel comes down from heaben, and goin' up and down de ribber Jordan, a blowin' ob his trumpet, and de bells ob heaben ringin,' and de milk and honey rainin' down on all de hills ob heaben, he will bring de spiritual body wid him down from heaben, and take dis yer body up out ob de dus', and take de 'intment and rub it on; den stick 'em togedder—AND DAR DEY IS!'" THE PEACE OF EUROPE.

Public opinion in Paris is waiting breathlessly for the issue of an imperial manifesto, in the form of a letter of Napoleon III. to his Minister of State, to appear on or about the 15th inst., in which the policy of the empire is to be unfolded. Indications are not wanting that the empire is meditating some decisive action, and the European world stands still to hear its fate.

The official organs of the French government have had much to say of late about peace, and the means of preserving it; and have endeavored to emphasize yet more sharply than in past years the declaration that "the empire is peace." But the fact is that the peace now prevailing in Europe is felt by the people to be not worth keeping; the means adopted to preserve it involving the permanent endurance of evils which are looked on as temporary in time of war.

So active is rumor in talking about general disaffection of the French people towards the government, in consequence of the new army levy, that Napoleon has ordered an official inquiry and report by the Minister of the Interior, on the true feeling of the country in relation to it. Perhaps the result will convince the world that the late serious riots in Bordeaux, Toulouse and Rennes mean nothing—and perhaps not. But it is hardly likely, however enthusiastic all the provincial Frenchmen may be reported to be in their desire to serve in the "Garde Mobile," that the report will introduce this enthusiasm into Paris, where the government, with the great army of France at its back, has not yet dared attempt to enforce the army bill at all.

Within a very few weeks, however, the organization of the new force of five hundred and fifty thousand will be complete; and, of the regular army no less than four hundred thousand will be armed with the terrible Chassepot rifles, the most deadly small arm yet invented. By these changes and the reforms in the recruiting laws, Napoleon becomes stronger for offensive or defensive war than any monarch of Europe has ever been before. This prodigious strength is supported by a drain upon the resources of France such as no people can long endure; and yet the work has been conducted throughout as if it were intended for a permanent peace establishment, though nobody believes it to be so.

The Emperor is said to be growing prematurely old, less perhaps from the present burdens of state, than from the "fast" life he has always led. He is not likely to live long; and his frivolous Spanish wife as regent, and his sickly boy as heir, are, even in prospect, far from agreeable to France. The growing energy and unity of the opposition in the Legislative Assembly, and in the press, and the multiplying signs of discontent with military rule among the people, must weigh heavily on Napoleon's mind; and there is a wide-spread feeling of apprehension lest he should determine, in the height of his power, upon a foreign war, which, by stirring the patriotism and personal allegiance of his subjects, and by bringing to him the prestige of some great success, might do much to quiet his enemies and to establish his dynasty.

The increasing confidence reposed by the Emperor of late in his cousin Prince Napoleon, and the recent visit of the latter to Germany, play a great part in the political speculations of the day. The general belief is that the Prince went to Berlin to ascertain what would be the attitude of Prussia if France should set herself in decided antagonism to Russia. The Emperor Alexander has lately suppressed all that was left of Poland, blotting out the very name of the ancient kingdom, and merging it in the department of the Vistula; and this sentimental grievance is accompanied apparently by increased severity in administering Russian law. His intrigues on the Turkish frontier are also actively carried on; and his attitude toward the Sublime Porte, in case of a general European war, might prove to be that of a very patient but prompt and active cat toward a mouse.

Thus France is not restrained from war with Russia by any want of a plausible and popular cause to fight for. The cabinets of Europe would approve an effort to destroy Alexander's hopes of getting Constantinople; and the French people would rally earnestly to the cry of Poland. Austria, too, would probably aid such a movement, in a very different spirit from the provoking and half unfriendly neutrality she showed to the western powers during the early days of the Crimean war. But Prussia seemed to be in doubt. Which danger would Bismarck consider the greatest, the growing power of Russia in the east, or a threatening and overshadowing alliance between France and Austria in the South and West?

Bismarck seems to have no doubt on the question. The general rumor is that Prince "Plon-Plon" has reported to his cousin the family plans as quite in need of modification. Prussia is more inclined to accept the friendship of Russia than that of France; evidently believing that to the true civilization she aims at, no Cossack can be so dangerous an enemy as Napoleon III. Will the Emperor trust his chassepots, joined with the routed battalions of Koniggratz, against Russia and North Germany united?

This seems unlikely. The cable reports, to-day, that France has refused to enter a close alliance with Austria and England combined, unless Prussia will join it. It would seem that Napoleon is unwilling to fight, unless at the head of an alliance strong enough to organize victory in advance. But all is uncertainty in France, and the public mind of Paris is described as in that peculiar state of undefined dread and expectation which has so often preceded social earthquakes. Were the Government in feeble hands there would be reason to apprehend a revolution; but it is in the hands of a strong, unscrupulous, and able ruler, who will leave no means untried to secure himself against the natural and usual effects of such weariness and discontent with his ascendency as are now so widely exhibited. The pamphlet on the titles of his dynasty, which he has just sent forth from the imperial closet, showed, indeed, that many millions of Frenchmen had in other years voted for his uncle and for himself; but if their minds have changed on fuller experience of imperialism, or if the younger generation now taking their places should not approve the vote, some much more decided action than printing pamphlets will be needed to fix his throne. It will not surprise us to hear startling news from Paris at no distant day.—N. Y. Evening Post.

RELIGION SUPREME.

The general tone and spirit of some religious families is such as to neutralize the influence of the parents' piety, and counteract their efforts to cultivate piety in their children. There is always some interest or excitement more prevalent and intense than religion. In some families it is the pursuit of wealth; in some vanity, or pride, or petty rivalries; a desire to outdo, or outdress, or outshine a neighbor—envy, or irritation, or hostility provoked by the fair name and prosperity of others—a striving to lower or supplant them—a silly ambition to be intimate with the rich or fashionable, and to introduce the young people into what is called, often preposterously enough, good society, and so secure for them advantageous alliances. It makes little difference what may for the time be the dominant interest; every child in the house understands it, and learns to sympathize with it, for childhood comprehends the parents' sentiments, passions, and antipathies, long before it can comprehend their moral teachings. Every one perceives and feels what is most thought of, most felt by the parent, and that, whatever that something is, it is not religion.

Now it is in accordance with a well known law of the human mind that the stronger emotion, excitement, or interest rules, and expels the weaker. Two powerful sentiments cannot exist and operate upon the mind at the same time. We cannot serve two masters. We cannot serve God and mammon, just because the stronger will soon subjugate the weaker; and if God does not reign, then mammon will be God. Now this actual predominance of another interest over the religious interest, renders null and void all attempts at christian trainings in so far as the conversion and consecration of children are contemplated. These spiritual achievements require that the atmosphere of domestic piety be pure, and genial, and fervid—radiant with heavenly hopes—instinct with benevolence—redolent with charity. Religion must dwell serene and supreme in the bosom of the domestic empire.

It must subordinate all other interests and aspirations, and have authority to say to every passion, "Be still." Then may it be able to come into the heart of childhood and youth with a grateful welcome.—Dr. Olin.

KNOCKING AWAY PROPS.

"See, father," said a lad who was walking with his father, "they are knocking away the props from under the bridge; what are they doing that for? Won't the bridge fall?"

"They are knocking them away," said the father, "that the timbers may rest more firmly upon the stone piers, which are finished."

God often takes away our earthly props that we may rest more firmly upon him. God sometimes takes away a man's health, that he may rest upon him for his daily bread. Before his health failed, though he perhaps repeated daily the words "Give us this day our daily bread," he looked to his own industry for that which he asked of God. That prop being taken away, he rests wholly upon God's bounty. When he receives his bread he receives it as the gift of God.

God takes away our friends that he may look to him for sympathy. When our affections were exercised upon objects around us, when we rejoiced in their abundant sympathy, we did not feel the need of divine sympathy. But when they were taken away, we felt our need of God's sympathy and support. We were brought to realize that he alone could give support, and form an adequate portion for the soul. Thus are our earthly props removed, that we may rest firmly and wholly upon God.

PRAYING FOR THE POOR.

We are taught in the Bible to pray for the poor, but in the Scriptures a great deal more is said about giving to the poor than about praying for them. Probably no class of people are more frequently remembered in prayer than the congregation of the Lord's poor, and yet it is to be feared that most of those who pray for the poor do but little if anything to supply their wants.

A farmer, whose cribs were full of corn, was accustomed to pray that the wants of the needy might be supplied; but when any one in needy circumstances asked for a little of his corn, he said he had none to spare. One day, after hearing his father pray for the poor and needy, his little son said to him: "Father, I wish I had your corn."

"Why, my son, what would you do with it?" asked the father.

The child replied: "I would answer your prayers."

We can answer our own prayers oftener than we think. With regard to the poor, Jesus says: "Ye have the poor with you always, and whensoever ye will ye may do them good." How many answers to prayer depend on our willingness to do good!—Sunday School Times.

THE INDIAN AND HIS DOG.

In the county of Ulster, near the line of the State of Pennsylvania, lived a man whose name was Le Fevre. He was the grandson of a Frenchman who was obliged to fly from his country at the revocation of the edict of Nantes.

He possessed a plantation on the very verge of the valley towards the Blue Mountains, which was a place of refuge for animals of the deer kind.

This man, who had a family of eleven children, was greatly alarmed one morning at missing the youngest, who was about four years of age. He disappeared about ten o'clock. The distressed family sought after him in the river and in the fields, but to no purpose. Terrified to an extreme degree, they united with their neighbors in quest of him. They entered the woods, which they beat over with the most scrupulous attention. A thousand times they called him by name, and were answered only by the echoes of the wilds. They then assembled themselves at the foot of the mountain of Chatagniers (or chestnut trees,) without being able to gain the least intelligence of the child. After reposing themselves for some minutes, they formed into different bands, and night coming on, the parents in despair refused to return home.

"Derrick, my child! Derrick, my poor little Derrick! where art thou?" frequently exclaimed the mother, in language of the deepest distress; but all was of no avail. As soon as daylight appeared, they renewed their search, but as unsuccessfully as on the preceding day. Fortunately an Indian, laden with furs, coming from an adjacent village, called at the house of Le Fevre, intending to repose himself there, as he usually did when traveling through that part of the country.

He was much surprised to find no one at home but an old negress, kept there by her infirmities. "Where is my brother?" said the Indian.

"Alas!" replied the negro woman, "he has lost his little Derrick, and all the neighborhood are employed in looking after him in the woods."

It was then three o'clock in the afternoon.

"Sound the horn," replied the Indian, "and try and call thy master home. I will find his child."

The horn was sounded, and as soon as the father returned, the Indian asked him for the shoes and stockings that little Derrick had worn last. He then ordered the dog, which he brought with him, to smell them, and then, taking the house for his centre, he described a circle of a quarter of a mile, semi-diameter, ordering his dog to smell the earth wherever he led him. The circle was not completed when the sagacious animal began to bark. This sound brought some feeble ray of hope to the disconsolate parents.

The dog followed the scent, and barked again, the party pursued him with all their speed, but soon lost sight of him in the woods. Half an hour afterwards they heard him again, and soon saw him return. The countenance of the poor dog was visibly altered; an air of joy seemed to animate him, and his gestures indicated that his search had not been in vain. "I am sure he has found the child," exclaimed the Indian, but whether dead or alive was at present the cruel state of suspense. The Indian then followed his dog, who led him to the foot of a large tree, where lay the child in an enfeebled state, nearly approaching death. He took it tenderly in his arms, and hastily carried it to the disconsolate parents.

Happily the father and mother were in some measure prepared to receive their child. Their joy was so great, that it was more than a quarter of an hour before they could express their gratitude to the kind restorer of their child.

Words cannot express the affecting scene. After they had bathed the face of their child with their tears, they threw themselves on the neck of the Indian, whose heart melted in unison with theirs. Their gratitude was then extended to the dog; they caressed him with inexpressible delight as the animal which, by means of his sagacity, had found their beloved offspring; and conceiving that, like the rest of the group, he must now stand in need of refreshment, a plentiful repast was prepared for him, after which he and his master pursued their journey; and the company, mutually pleased at the happy event, returned to their respective habitations, highly delighted with the kind Indian and his wonderful dog.

GOOD FOR NOTHING.

A gentleman, while addressing some children, took out his watch, and asked them what it was for.

"To keep time," the children answered.

"Well, suppose it won't keep time, and can't be made to keep time, what is it good for?"

"It's good for nothing," they replied.

He then took out a lead pencil, and asked what it was for.

"It is to mark with," was the answer.

"But suppose the lead is out, and it won't mark, what is it good for?"

"It is good for nothing."

He then took out a pocket-knife, and asked what was its use.

"To whittle with," said one. "To cut," said others.

"Suppose that it has no blade, then what is it good for?"

"Good for nothing."

"Then a watch, or pencil, or knife, is good for nothing, unless it can do the thing for which it was made?"

"Yes, sir, it is useless."

Well, children, what is a boy or girl made for?"

The children hesitated.

"What is the answer to the question, 'What is the chief end of man?'" asked the gentleman.

"To glorify God and enjoy him forever."

"Now, then, if a boy or girl does not do what he or she is made for, and glorify God, what is he or she good for?"

And the children all answered, without seeming to think how it would sound,—

"Good for nothing."

Well, if children are made to glorify God, and they don't do it, are they good for anything? that is, it is so much more important that they glorify God, and become prepared to enjoy him forever, than any thing else, that if they fail to do this, it is as though they failed in everything. Without love to God, all other things are as nothing.

IS IT SAFE?

Is it safe to use tobacco? I asked some boys that question, they looked at each other from the corners of their eyes, and some of them blushed, and some laughed. Only one manly little fellow spoke up and said, "No, ma'am."

"Why not, Georgie?"

"Because, ma'am, it is poison."

"Do you consider that a sufficient reason, my boy?"

"Well, I should if it was any thing else. If I am told a thing is poison, I do not put it into my mouth, of course not."

"Well, Georgie, I wish all boys were as sensible. But can you tell me how it happens that men do use it, and still live on to advanced age without ever being hurt by it?"

"I don't know, indeed; but if they do that, I suppose it gives me no reason for taking a poison into my own mouth."

"Very well put, indeed, Georgie; 'if they do that.' Medical men say that no one uses tobacco without being hurt by it. Some of it will pass into the stomach, and like all other poisons, it will do harm. It is the poison in tobacco that makes the boy sick when he takes it. The stomach feels the poison, and tries to throw it off. If it cannot do that, the poison may kill, and sometimes does. But if it is thrown off, or if only a little reaches the stomach, it may not kill all at once. If it it is taken again and again, the stomach becomes less and less able to resist it. It passes into the blood, and after working various mischiefs, is partially thrown off through the lungs and the pores of the skin, giving that odor which is peculiar to tobacco users."—S. S. Advocate.

THE POOR BOY.—Do not be ashamed, my lad, if you have a patch on your elbow. It is no mark of disgrace. It speaks well for your industrious mother. For our part, we would rather see a dozen patches on your clothes than hear one profane or vulgar word escape from your lips. No good boy will shun you because you cannot dress as well as your companions; and if a boy sometimes laughs at your appearance, say nothing, my good lad, but work on. We know many rich and good men who were once poor and friendless boys; and if you are poor and upright, you will be respected a great deal more than if you were the son of a rich man, and addicted to bad habits.

THE CLEAR VISION.

I did but dream. I never knew
  What charms our sternest season wore;
Was never yet the sky so blue,
  Was never earth so white before.
Till now I never saw the glow
Of sunset on yon hills of snow,
And never learned the bough's designs
Of beauty in its leafless lines.

Did ever such a morning break
  As that my eastern windows see?
Did ever such a moonlight take
  Weird photographs of shrub and tree?
Rang ever bells so wild and fleet
The music of the winter street?
Was ever yet a sound by half
So merry as yon school-boy's laugh?

O Earth! with gladness overfraught,
  No added charm thy face hath found;
Within my heart the change is wrought,
  My footsteps make enchanted ground.
From couch of pain and curtained room
Forth to thy light and air I come,
To find in all that meets my eyes
The freshness of a glad surprise.

Fair seem these winter days, and soon
  Shall blow the warm west winds of spring,
To set the unbound rills in tune,
  And hither urge the bluebird's wing.
The vales shall laugh in flowers, the woods
Grow misty green with leafing buds,
And violets and windflowers sway
Against the throbbing heart of May.

Break forth, my lips, in praise, and own
  The wiser love severely kind;
Since, richer for its chastening grown,
  I see, whereas I once was blind.
The world, O Father! hath not wronged
With loss the life by thee prolonged;
But still, with every added year,
More beautiful thy works appear!

As thou hast made the world without,
  Make thou more fair my world within;
Shine through its lingering clouds of doubt,
  Rebuke its haunting shapes of sin;
Fill, brief or long, my granted span
Of life with love to thee and man;
Strike when thou wilt the hour of rest,
But let my last days be my best!

ANOTHER GOSPEL.

The inspired Apostle declares:—"But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed." He also repeats, "As we said before, so say I now again, If any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed."—Gal. 1: 8, 9. Did the Apostle preach that man has an immortal soul? He did not. A never-dying soul? No. A deathless spirit? Never. Did he preach about a "death that never, never dies"? No, no.

What did he preach about in regard to immortality? "The King of kings and Lord of lords; who only hath immortality." Did Paul preach that both good and bad persons, or their souls, are ushered into the Lord's presence to be judged when they die? No, never. What does Paul declare of him who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light? He says,—"Which no man can approach unto; whom no man hath seen, nor can see." Furthermore, did Paul preach that the wicked, or souls of the wicked, went to hell at death? No. That vengeance was executed on the wicked, or their souls, at death? No. When did Paul say vengeance was to take place? "When the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ."—2 Thess. 1: 7–9.

Did Paul preach that the wicked shall be preserved, or kept alive in everlasting hell torments? No. What does he say of them? "Who shall be punished with everlasting destruction [not preservation] from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power." Did Paul preach that death was the gate to endless life, or joy to the righteous? Never. Did he preach a doctrine superseding the necessity of a resurrection? Never. Did not Paul say that "if the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised"? etc.; "then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished"? He did. Did Paul preach that christians get the victory over death when they die? No. When did he say they had the victory? "So when this corruptible shall put on incorruption, and this mortal shall put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory." 1 Cor. 15: 54.

Did Paul preach that when christians die they, or their souls, have gone home to glory? No. What then? "When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory."—Col. 3: 4.

Did Paul preach we were to comfort one another with the idea that our friends go to heaven at death? He did not. What did he say on this point? "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain, shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words."—1 Thess. 4: 13–18.

Does the gospel which Paul preached, or the gospel we have received, contain one promise that we shall ascend to heaven at death, or at any other time, or inherit it for an everlasting possession? No, not one. Christ plainly declared to his disciples—"And as I said unto the Jews, whither I go ye cannot come; so now I say to you."—John 13: 33. He also declared, "And no man hath ascended up to heaven."—John 3: 13. When are we promised to be with Christ? When he comes again, as he says, "I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also."—John 14: 3. When are we promised a crown? "And when the Chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away."—1 Pet. 5: 4. Did Paul preach of receiving his crown at the day of Christ's appearing, together with all those who love his appearing? He did.

When and where has the gospel promised to us our reward, and our everlasting inheritance? at death? No. "For the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father, with his angels; and then he shall reward every man according to his works." "Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

Did Paul preach of our entering or receiving a kingdom before the heavens and earth were shaken? He did not. Heb. 12: 26. Did he preach a gradual extension of the Redeemer's kingdom? No. What events precede, or are connected with, the coming of Christ and the establishment of his everlasting kingdom upon the earth? A long time of peace and safety, or gradual dawn of a long millennial day? No, never. "The second woe is past; and behold the third woe cometh quickly. And the seventh angel sounded; and there were great voices in heaven, saying, The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ; and he shall reign for ever and ever."—Rev. 11: 14, 15. Now do the saints reign in heaven? No. Where then? "And hast redeemed us to God by thy blood, out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation; and hast made us unto our God kings and priests; and we shall reign on the earth."—Rev. 5: 9, 10. How long? "And they shall reign for ever and ever."—Rev. 22: 5. "And their inheritance shall be for ever."—Ps. 37: 18.

Now if these are the truths of inspiration, and are in connection and harmony with the gospel Paul preached, then what shall we think of those who scarcely mention them, or turn away from the same, and continue to preach Papal traditions and fables, intermixing truths with errors; or who are preaching and basing their hopes on the belief that their immortal souls go to heaven when they die? Are they not thus perverting the Scriptures, and preaching another gospel?

Again. Paul preached our entire separation from worldly affairs, and that the weapons of our warfare were not carnal; and we are not to avenge ourselves. Now do not preachers, and others, who sanction or engage in worldly schemes, or worldly enterprises, or join political parties, or advocate carnal warfare, or take vengeance on their enemies, sanction, sustain, or preach another gospel? Again, do not preachers, and others, who sanction the wearing of gold, pearls, and costly attire, or fairs, or festivals, tableaux exhibitions, or pleasure gatherings of whatever name, or building and adorning costly edifices, with rented slips (virtually excluding the poor), emphatically sanction or preach another gospel?

Furthermore, do not preachers and professors of religion, who are laying up earthly treasures, or are holding on to the same, sanction another gospel than what Jesus or Paul preached? Jesus plainly said, "Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth." And Paul said, "But thou, O man of God, flee these things." Now, in view of all these plain declarations and requirements, and of existing facts on every hand, have we not reason sadly to fear that the great mass of professors at the present day are turned away from the gospel Paul preached unto another gospel?

Far be it from me to judge, or say, or even think, that all in the nominal churches will be lost. I believe that all who have been truly converted to Christ, and had their sins forgiven them, whether in the churches or not; who, in all honesty of purpose, are trying to live up to the light they have received from the inspired word, will be saved in "the day of the Lord Jesus"; although it may be "so as by fire." And others, who may have a correct Bible theory, who are not living in all honesty of purpose, according to the light they have had, will at last be found among the lost.

Dear brethren and sisters, and all who profess to believe and follow the true gospel, let us examine into these things, and not flatter ourselves in any wise; for eternal destinies soon await us. The Judge is waiting at the door, and we shall very soon receive our reward. In love to all, and to the truth as it is written in God's word, sincerely,

WHAT WILL YOU DO?

The judgment is before us. Sooner or later we shall behold the parted heavens, the great white throne, and more than that, Jesus coming through the parted skies, bringing the reward of the saints with him. The very same Jesus Herod sought to destroy; who taught as never man taught all who came unto him; who became poor that we might be rich; who was meek; when reviled, reviled not again; who was pure; who was a peacemaker; who lived among the children of men; bore all their scoffs and frowns; suffered their reproach, permitted the wicked rabble to nail his innocent hands to the cross; in his agony drank vinegar and died; was buried; rose again the third day; ascended to the Father; is now interceding at the throne of grace for you. He is knocking at the door of your heart for admittance, that he may lead you in the path to heaven; that you may be a sharer in the joys of the blessed; that you may be delivered from the evils of this life and enjoy the pleasures of an endless life; that you may meet those loved ones rudely torn from your embrace by the cruel enemy death, and with them enjoy the presence of the Father and the Son through eternity.

This same Jesus will be seen by you in the clouds of heaven. Think not to escape; for even if death claims you for its victim ere that day dawn, the trump will sound, the earth tremble, the old graveyard burst its cold sods of earth, and you be commanded to come forth, and your eyes behold him who sweat great drops of blood in the garden, when left alone to plead his case with his Father. Yes, those eyes that wept over your sins, will look upon you in that day; and what will you do? Man of wealth, you must leave your hoarded treasures; they can not buy an entrance to the golden city; that is for those who have secured an entrance through the blood of the Lamb.

Man of power, lay down thy shield; thy strength—be it in wealth, authority, intellect, or what not—is perfect weakness; no longer can it serve you; come to judgment. Man of intellect and thought, cease to study; lay the pen, mighty in its influence, aside; listen to the result of thy labor; receive thy reward. Toil-worn and weary one, lay down thy implement of labor. You must take time, and learn if the past has been well spent. Sluggard, awake! No time for sleep; rouse thee, come! Jesus wants thee.

Reader, stop and consider thy ways. Art thou ready to behold the opening heavens? If not, what will you do? Call for the rocks and mountains to fall on you, that you may be hidden? They will flee, and you will stand alone, all unsheltered before the wrath of an offended Judge. Thou canst not shrink away from his piercing eye. Flee to Jesus while he stands with outstretched arms to receive all who come to him. Wash in his blood, and be made clean; then you may be of the number who make up the "bride of the Lamb," and partake of the marriage supper. Will you not come?

Come to the fount, that's filled
  With blood from Jesus' veins;
Wash thou, for you 'twas spilled,
  To cleanse thee from guilty stains.

THE SEVEN LAST PLAGUES.

In Rev. 15: 1, John sees a great wonder in heaven, "seven angels having the seven ast plagues; for in them is filled up the wrath of God." These seven vials are symbols of seven distinct judgments that either have been, are now, or will be, poured out upon the earth. The seals and trumpets have each their several localities assigned them, covering more or less space in the history of Adam's fallen family. The vials also have their destination and work pointed out, and perhaps more distinct than any other class of symbols in Revelations.

The great question at this moment is, Have any of these vials of God's wrath been poured out upon any people or nation of any age in the past or present? I unhesitatingly answer. No. It has been the opinion of some that we have already passed under five of them, and that the sixth has been lately poured out. Well, on this I shall only say that if the seventh be only as harmless, a wicked world will not have much to fear.

For the last twenty-three years it has been a settled point with me that not one solitary vial has yet been touched by the finger of any angel. What a thought! All the wrath of God poured out in this dispensation of his mercy! The incongruity must be apparent to every reflecting mind. We are not yet in the day of judgment, but the day of God's long-suffering; and these vials are treasured up for the day of wrath and revelation of the righteous judgment of God. When these plagues shall be executed upon our planet, our lecturing brethren will be spared the labor of wading through thousands of pages of secular history to find out when and where each vial was poured out. As soon would God have opened the windows of heaven, or broken up the fountains of the great deep, before the antediluvian church was secured, as one of these vials be poured out before the saints are gathered from land and ocean.

From this standpoint, let us again look at Rev. 15: 1. The angels are seen furnished with the "seven last plagues." But what is seen next? (verse 2nd) a transparent "sea of glass," "as it were" "mingled with fire," and upon this divinely spread platform in mid air, the victorious company stand around their heaven-descended Lord. These angels could do nothing until the church of the first born were gathered, the tabernacle opened, a new dispensation commenced, and now, but not until now, a great voice comes out of the temple (Rev. 16: 1) saying, "Go your ways, and pour out the vials of the wrath of God upon the earth." The saints will stand upon this sea of glass until the indignation be overpast, the battle of the great day be fought, the wicked nations destroyed, and the sanctuary cleansed. Under these vials, God's prime ministers of vengeance will be let loose—war, famine, pestilence, and fire, to take by storm this poor terrestrial citadel of man. All the fearful calamities, foretold by prophets and apostles, fall out under these vials after the saints are gone. The slain of the Lord lie from one end of the earth to the other (Jer. 25, Ezek. 39), and the angel will be standing in the sun, calling to all the feathered fowls that fly in the midst of heaven to gather themselves together to the supper of the great God. Rev. 19.

The seventh trumpet and seventh vial both reach the second resurrection. It is not the seventh trumpet, but the trump of God, that wakes the dead saints. Matt. 25: 31, 1 Thess. 5: 16. But in the days of the seventh angel, when he shall begin to sound, the Lord will come, the voice of the archangel and the trump of God will be heard, and the righteous dead raised. But the seventh trumpet will continue to sound throughout the thousand years, beginning with the angry nations, and the time of God's wrath, and the giving of rewards to his servants the prophets, and to the saints, and them that fear his name, and finishing with the destruction of them that corrupt the earth (Rev. 11: 15, and to the end of the chapter).

The seventh vial must also in like manner reach the subjects of the second resurrection, for the following reasons: 1st. They are the seven last plagues, and if they do not include the wicked dead, an eighth will be required, and so they are not the seven last. And (2nd) "In them is filled up the wrath of God,"—all that God designs for the unredeemed of the fallen family of Adam. 3d. This vial brings a loud voice from the throne of the Eternal—"It is done." Again, under this last vial there is the great physical convulsion (Rev. 16: 17–21), preparatory to a new earth and heaven; an unparalleled earthquake, the great city split into three parts, the cities of the nations fall, and great Babylon, after her long slumber of more than a thousand years, is not to be overlooked, or forgotten. Every island is moved out of its place, and the mountains are not found. This seventh vial brings us unto the threshold of the new creation. Alas! who shall live when God doeth this? All that are in Christ Jesus. Amen.

SIN AND SUFFERING.

Sin is the primal cause of all suffering; but men sometimes err in special cases, supposing that the greatest sufferers are sinners exceeding all others in guilt. This view has been held to such an extent that it may be almost entitled a popular belief. Possibly the reader has seen a case of extreme suffering, and heard the question asked, "what dreadful thing has this person done, that he must be punished like that?" We may refer to the ninth chaptes of John for a case in point. "Master, who did sin, this man, or his parents, that he was born blind?" The disciples evidently thought that this was a special punishment for individual sin; but the answer shows that they were in error. "Neither hath this man sinned nor his parents." That is, it is not on account of their peculiar guilt that this man was born blind. And in the 13th chapter of Luke, we read of some who seemed to be special objects of wrath. But Jesus answering saidunto them, "Suppose ye that these Galileans were sinners above all the Galileans, because they suffered such things? I tell you nay, but except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish. Or those eighteen upon whom the tower in Siloam fell and slew them, think ye that they were sinners above all men that dwelt in Jerusalem? I tell you nay, but except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish."

This is enough to refute the popular error; but there is another view which is doubtless correct in the abstract, but which, as applied indiscriminately, is scarcely less wrong than the first mentioned. Sickness arises from violation of natural law. This is a general rule to be modified by circumstances. Individuals are not often responsible for the state of the atmosphere, whether it be too hot or too cold, too wet or too dry. And sickness is often caused by atmospheric changes. But says one, "health is a duty." We agree to that; and can in some cases say "physician, heal thyself;" for some who thus preach become themselves invalids.

Again, another puts the case still more strongly, and says "it is a sin to be sick." And "whoever is sick, and is not guilty, ought to be able to show it, that we may make his case a special exception." Now it may often happen that the individual who is suffering innocently (if such a case can be imagined,) is utterly unable to prove his innocence, knowing neither the remote or evident cause of his disease. In some cases all must admit that there has been a flagrant violation of law, resulting in disease, perhaps death. Delirium tremens, produced by drunkenness; insanity caused by abuse of the sexual function; consumption caused by tight lacing; and many other diseases arising from gluttony, want of attention to personal cleanliness, eating unwholesome food, and, in short, any and all habits which the person knows to be injurious, yet persists in; in all these cases, and possibly some others, we admit that it is a sin to be sick. But those who suffer innocently need now an advocate to plead their cause. Upon such, in their weak state, with nerves unstrung, strength gone, and hope growing dim, this accusation falls with crushing weight.

Ah! is it a sin to be sick? Yes, under certain circumstances. But in common law no man is obliged to criminate himself, and every man is supposed to be innocent until proved guilty. Just put the burden of proof where it belongs, not upon the accused, but upon the accuser. This is not written to provoke discussion, and if it were it would not be allowed in the columns of this paper. It is rather my aim to plead the cause of such as have no helper, to defend the right, and do justice to all.

PRAISE.

Sing praises to the Lord,
  His faithfulness make known;
His name will ever be adored
  By all who seek his throne.

O Lord, the heavens are thine,
  The earth, and all therein;
To thee our willful hearts incline,
  Help us to cease from sin.

In thine arm is great might,
  And high is thy right hand;
Help us to walk in thine own light,
  And follow thy command.

To thee all praise we give,
  And in thy name rejoice;
In holy fear, oh, may we live,
  And love thy cheerful voice.

Joyously we are bound
  To gain that land of peace;
We hail with joy the trumpet's sound,
  When all our sorrows cease.

When in that land of rest,
  And all our toils are o'er,
We'll shout glad praises with the blest,
  And sing forevermore.

SUNDAY—SABBATH.

Why will intelligent christian men call the Lord's holy Sabbath by the heathen name—"Sunday"! Why not follow the New Testament, and call the day by its appropriate name—Sabbath? "Sunday" is a bad name for christians to use, to designate our "rest-day"—the Sabbath. It gives great advantage to our opponents. In looking over the "appointments" in the last Crisis (Feb. 26th), I notice our preaching brethren use the name "Sunday" about eighty times! Brn. M. Grant, H. Munger, and W. H. McDaniels, each call it the "Sabbath." This I am glad to see. Hope more will soon call it the Sabbath. Once I called this holy day by the name Sunday? But it is a painful thought to me now, and, therefore, I wish to say a few words on this point to the readers of the Crisis, as found in my work, entitled "The First-day Sabbath," in proof that the first-day of the week should be called the Sabbath. On pp. 44–6, are found the following facts:—

"The original Greek words for Sabbath, as found in the New Testament, in their singular and plural form, are Sabbaton and Sabbata. The number of times these words occur in the New Testament is sixty-eight. They are found in different books, as follows: in Matt. eleven times; in Mark, twelve times; in Luke, twenty times; in John, thirteen times; in Acts, ten times; in 1 Cor., once; and in Col., once. These words are transferred (not translated) into our English version, in all fifty-nine times; and thus called Sabbath, or Sabbath-days, etc. But the translators saw fit to render the word Sabbaton, by the word "week," in nine cases out of the whole number sixty-eight, and these nine cases are found in the following places: in Matt. 28: 1; Mark 16: 2, 9; Luke 18: 12; 24: 1; John 20: 1, 19; Acts 20: 7; 1 Cor. 16: 2. Now it is evident that if the translators had transferred the word Sabbaton, in these nine cases just examined, as they did in the other fifty-nine instances above referred to, then we should have had less difficulty than we now have, and we should see that at the END of the seventh-day Sabbaths, THERE would be the BEGINNING of the LORD JESUS CHRIST'S DAY, or SABBATH. Or, in other words, where one series of days ended, there another series of days began."

Also on p. 261, may be found the following, from the pen of Dr. Josiah Litch:—

"The truth is—and Sabbatarians either do or ought to know it—the Evangelists never in the language in which the gospels are found (the Greek) called the first day of the week any thing else but Sabbath. For the information of those who are shaken in their minds on this subject, I will transcribe the Greek text in italics, containing the words rendered by our translators first day of the week, and also the word rendered by them Sabbath, meaning the seventh day.

"Matthew 28: 1—English translation: 'In the end of the Sabbath, as it began to dawn toward the first day of the week.' Greek—Opse de Sabbatoon te epiphooskuse eis mian Sabbatoon. There the identical word in the same case, genitive plural rendered Sabbath when referring to the seventh day, is rendered first day of the week in the very next clause of the verse. A literal rendering would be, if we adopt the principle of our translators of Anglicising instead of translating the word: 'And in the end of Sabbaths, as it began to dawn toward one of Sabbaths.' Does not this indicate that one series of Sabbaths there ended, so far as obligation to observe it was concerned, and a new series was introduced? At any rate, the first is as positively called Sabbath as the seventh day.... Thus the four Evangelists do agree in calling the first by the same name they do the seventh day of the week, and that word as certainly signifies rest in the one case as in the other. Let no one, therefore, hereafter contend that the writers of the New Testament never call the first day, Sabbath, or rest, for no New Testament writer has called it any thing else, except John (Rev. 1: 10), where it is called the 'Lord's day.'"

To the foregoing from J. Litch, the late Sylvester Bliss appended the following:

"REMARKS.—Lest any should gather from the above that the word Sabbath is represented by the phrase, 'first day of the week,' we add that Sabbath is simply translated week in those texts, other words indicating the day of the week. The word Sabbath is originally a Hebrew word, and signifies rest; but occurring at regular intervals, by a metohymy it became significant of the periods separated by these rests. So that we have the seventh day of the rest, and the first of the rest, week, or Sabbath."

Will not our dear brethren examine this subject, and be sure and not dishonor our Lord Jesus Christ, who is "Lord also of the Sabbath," and who declared that "The Sabbath was made for man"? (Mark 2: 27, 28.)

TRUE COURAGE.

There are two kinds of courage, the one mere physical, as it is called, and the other moral courage. The former is the unconsciousness of danger, no matter how threatening it may be; the latter a determined purpose to do right, fearless of consequences, and even at the sacrifice of friends. This is the courage every one should have. It often requires more true courage to do right under certain circumstances, than to face the cannon; and the man who will face the world's opinions and prejudices in doing what he knows to be right, will not only have the approbation of his Maker, but secure to himself eternal life.

The most exalted courage is, therefore, to fear God and keep his commandments, though opposed by a proud and gainsaying world. The times in which we live demand earnestness, zeal, activity and courage. We are passing beyond the period in which scoffs and sneers will be the boast of the wicked. The Bible plainly teaches us that we soon shall be where jests will cease, and mocking tongues hushed to silence. What manner of persons ought we to be? Shall we worship idols when the Son of God is so soon coming? Shall we strive to get to ourselves names great in the world, which shall perish in the day of wrath? Or shall we who are of the day lay up for ourselves treasures in heaven, where moth and rust doth not corrupt?

Have we not all work to do? Let us do it with our might. Let us awake and stand with the armor on, for the Bridegroom soon cometh. The signs of the times speak plainly the dawning of eternal day. We have no time to waste. The Judge of all standeth at the door. It is no time to seek honor and wealth. Is it not rather a time to watch and be faithful, lest another take our crown? Is it not rather a time to gird on the whole armor, and be found waiting?

May God prepare us all for that great day when Christ shall come, and may we so live that we can say, "Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him, and he will save us."

CASTING DOWN OF THE THRONES.

Daniel, in tracing the strange history of the world in visions, which God gave him, represented by wild beasts, says: "I beheld till the thrones were cast down, and the Ancient of days did sit." This is the judgment scene, for in the next verse it says: "The judgment was set and the books were opened."—Dan. 7: 9, 10. This must be the general judgment at the coming of Christ, for it is said "One like the Son of Man came with the clouds of heaven and came to the "Ancient of Days," and "ten thousand times ten thousand stood before him.

But what "thrones" are here spoken of? Whatever thrones are meant we think it cannot mean a temporary casting down, for the "kingdom which shall never be destroyed" succeeds it. In Dan. 2d, we obtain the needed information. He interprets the great image—Dan. 2: 32, 33—to represent the changes in the Gentile power, until the coming of the Son of God. He declared that four universal monarchies should arise, and the fourth (representing the Roman empire) should be strong as iron; but the kingdom should be "divided," and "in the days of these kings the God of heaven shall set up a kingdom." What "kings" are these? In the 7th chapter, Daniel interprets the fourth beast to represent the Roman kingdom; and this beast had "ten horns;" and the interpreting angel says: "the ten horns out of this kingdom are ten kings that shall arise." And the divine statement is that "in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom." Now we can understand what thrones are to be cast down. They run their whole time, and come to a violent end, and the Ancient of days will give the kingdom to his Son.

In the seventh of Revelation is presented a symbol of four angels, standing on the four corners, or four quarters of the earth, "holding the four winds of the earth."

"Winds" are always symbols of wars and commotions. Daniel, in vision, saw the four winds of heaven strive upon the great sea, and "four great beasts came up from the sea, diverse one from the other." These four beasts were four universal monarchies which have arisen. These monarchies arose through bloody wars and commotion among the people of earth. With the idea that the blowing of the winds bring a universal kingdom, it would be reasonable to suppose that when the four winds are loosed again another universal kingdom would arise. Is this so? Yes; for when the four winds are loosed, it will produce "the casting down of the thrones," and the kingdom of God will succeed it. This, we think, is both reasonable and scriptural. The loosing of the four winds will produce universal war and commotion, and revolutions; the nations being angry, the thrones will be cast down, and the Ancient of Days will give the kingdom to his Son, and at that time the kingdoms of this world become "the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ, and he shall reign forever."

Is there any evidence that the loosing of those four winds will soon take place? We think there can be no doubt that the winds will soon be let loose in all their wild commotion. Evidence is multiplying daily. The whole world is arming in such a manner as was never known, and we may daily look for the rushing of the nations to the conflict. This we are inclined to believe will be the time of trouble spoken of by Daniel. He says: "There shall be a time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation, even to that same time, and at that time thy people shall be delivered, every one that shall be found written in the book."—Dan. 12: 1. This is a time of trouble with the nations, and a time of deliverance to the saints. Therefore, when we see the one approaching, we see both; for they are inseparably connected. Noted politicians, statesmen, and Bible students, both in this country and in Europe, agree that the conflict of the nations cannot be deferred but a very brief time. The "spirits of devils" have done their work successfully. They have gone "forth to the kings of the earth and of the whole world, to gather them to the battle of that great day of God Almighty," and hovering behind the thrones of monarchs they urge them on to the conflict.

Oh, what thrilling and momentous times to be living in! Reader, do you fully realize that the very events which immediately connect with the judgment are being fulfilled before your eyes? I warn you to awake, and be sure that your vessel is filled with oil. Already the effects of these destructive elements—the winds—are becoming visible. Soon the storm will break forth in all its latent fury, and we shall be ushered into the presence of the Lamb. We speak on the authority of God's word. All the evidence we can derive on the subject points right here for the coming of Christ. We are not in darkness; but we have a sure word of prophecy that we do well to take heed unto.—Glad Tidings.

For the World's Crisis.

"KNOWETH NO MAN."

A CRITICISM BY DR. MACKNIGHT.

BRO. GRANT:—Quite a good deal has been written upon the declaration of our Lord, as to his knowledge of the time of his return. He declared, as related by the two evangelists, "But of that day, and that hour, knoweth no man, no, not the angels which are in heaven, neither the Son, but my Father only." Nearly all have concluded, by following the common version, as I suppose, that the Master, being himself destitute of the knowledge of the time, could not impart it to his disciples. Thus Dr. Seiss:—"There was a degree of concealment, mystery, and lack of certain knowledge drawn over the question of the precise time of the Savior's coming to judgment, which rendered it impossible for any one, in heaven or earth, save God alone, to tell when it was to take place.... He says he did not know the day and hour. Now, I believe he meant exactly what he said. He did not know."

But he and others argue that light afterwards broke in upon his mind; that he was further instructed into the times and seasons; so that we may hope by this time, or at least before the period arrives for his return, he will have full knowledge of the time. Now to me, since I have thought at all upon the subject, this has not seemed right. When Brn. Miller and Himes came to this city in the fall of 1842, to preach the time of the Lord's coming, they were met with the above texts, of course, and they replied, "The word 'knoweth' is the same as where Paul says, 'know nothing among you,' which Dr. Macknight translates 'to make known.'" This seemed reasonable and satisfactory, and believing the words would bear this rendering, I have not been under the necessity of supposing that our divine Lord was quite so ignorant as many have tried to make out. And I still believe that he who could predict so clearly the events to transpire until his coming; he who knew all things, and "in whom are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge," when he undertook the work of human redemption, knew when to commence it, how to carry it on, and just when to complete it; but that the Father would point out or make known the time for its completion to his people, just as he already had the time for the incarnation. But I was not aware that Macknight had ever written upon the "day and hour," until I saw in his "Harmony" a few days since the following, which I transcribe:

"It may seem strange that the Son, who declared that he would come, and who in the prophecy had been pointing out the various signs by which his disciples might foresee his approach, should not have known the day and the hour, or the particular time of his own coming. This difficulty some endeavor to obviate by supposing that our Lord spake of himself here only as a man. But the name Father following that of Son, shows that he spake of himself as the Son of God, and not as the son of man. Besides, the gradation of the sentence seems to forbid this solution. For the Son being mentioned after the angels, and immediately before the Father, is thereby declared to be more excellent than the angels, which he is not in respect to his human nature, and therefore cannot be supposed to speak of himself in that nature.

"The proper translation of the passage, I think, affords a better solution. The Greek word here seems to have the force of the Hebrew conjugation, hiphil, which in verbs denoting action, makes that action, whatever it is, pass to another. Wherefore the word, which properly signifies I know, used in the sense of the subjugation hiphil, signifies I make another to know, I declare. The word has this meaning without dispute in 1 Cor. 2: 2: I determined to know nothing among you, that is, I determined to make known, to declare nothing among you but Jesus Christ. So likewise in the text, 'But of that day and that hour none maketh you to know, no, not the angels, neither the Son, but the Father only.'"

Of Macknight Dr. Kidd says:—"His abilities as a critic are conspicuous; and Dr. Clarke says he was a thorough scholar and an honest man." Just the persons we like to consult, if any, on the correctness of a translation. On 1 Cor. 2: 2, the Dr. quotes Locke and Whitby, as giving the same sense. I see that Dr. Clarke gives to proclaim. Dr. M. refers us to one more passage, (2 Tim. 2: 19), which reads, "Nevertheless the foundation of God standeth firm, having this seal, The Lord will make known them who are his." These are nearly the words which Moses spake to Korah and his company, who endeavored to overturn his authority. Num. 16: 5. The Lord will show who are his, which the LXX have translated as the apostle hath done. "The Lord will make known them who are his."

I confess I can see no force in the apostle's reasoning, unless it be so understood; and I feel perfect liberty in receiving these various texts according to the above version.

The World's Crisis
AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

Boston, Wednesday, May 6, 1868.

☞ Take Notice!

All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

☞ Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank-checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ MONEY ORDERS.

Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given.

Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too.

Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us YOUR NAME AND POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

INFORMATION,—OUR CHANGE.

We now have our new mailing list completed, and paste the name of each subscriber on his paper with the date when his subscription ends, instead of acknowledging in the Crisis as heretofore.

Some of our subscribers are troubled to ascertain their indebtedness by the date opposite their names. The names of the months are abbreviated thus:—Jan., Feb., Mar., Apr., May, Jun., Jul., Aug., Sept., Oct., Nov., Dec. And the year is given thus: 67, 68, etc. The figures preceding the month indicate the day of the month.

We have tried to be very careful in revising our large list of names, but for all our care there may be some names spelled wrong, and some dates wrong. We shall be very glad to be notified of all such mistakes, and will cheerfully rectify them. When you send us money, look for the date to be changed on the slip, and if you do not see any change in two or three weeks, write to us plainly. We have been to a very heavy expense in making this change, but it has been for the benefit of our subscribers. Hereafter, if any do not get their papers regularly, we mean that it shall not be our fault.

CHELSEA.

Very interesting meetings are being held every Sabbath in Library Hall, Chelsea, Mass. The Hall is good size, well situated, pleasant, and in the heart of the city. Bro. E. G. Kingsbury, who makes the Excelsior Washing Soap (the best in the market, we think,) has made noble sacrifices to establish meetings in Chelsea. They now have large, intelligent, and attentive congregations; and the interest continues to increase. We had the privilege of spending last Sabbath (May 3d) with the congregation worshiping at Library Hall. A church was organized of thirty members, and the proper officers were appointed. The following covenant was adopted:—

OUR COVENANT.

"We whose names are subjoined, do hereby covenant and agree, by the help of the Lord, to walk together as a church of Christ, faithfully maintaining its ordinances, taking the Bible as our only rule of faith and practice, church order and discipline; making christian character the only test of fellowship and communion.

We further agree, with christian fidelity and meekness, to exercise mutual watch-care, to counsel, admonish or reprove, as duty may require; and to receive the same from each other as becometh the household of faith."

At the close of the meeting, four requested prayers. The prospect is encouraging.

We learn that Brn. C. Goodrich and W. S. Thurber intend to reside in Chelsea. Brn. L. Boutell and A. P. Moore also reside in C.

EAST ROCHESTER.

The church in East Rochester, N. Y., has built a neat chapel for the worship of the Lord. It was dedicated Saturday April 25th. It was our privilege to be present, and enjoy a heavenly season with the Brn. and Srs. who are united in strong christian love and sympathy. The cause of Christ is prospering in that place. The church is a living one. Their chapel was packed full of very attentive hearers during the Sabbath, April 26th. One new one started in the service of the Lord, and others were almost persuaded to be christians. The prospect looked bright. Brn. Simpson, Varney, and Rhines, were present to assist in the exercises. The truth found a welcome in the hearts of the people. Many begin to see the consistency of the "blessed hope" we love so well; and are anxious to hear more about it, that they may understand it better. We trust they will not be disappointed.

THE DOVER DISCUSSION.

In our discussion with Mr. Hull, in Dover, April 20th, 21st, 22nd, 23d, and 24th, some startling declarations were made, showing the positions of Spiritualists, relative to the doctrine taught in the Bible. He most boldly affirmed that the man hid in the grave will never rise from the dead, and that Jesus was not raised from the dead. He denied that Jesus raised Lazarus from the dead, or any one else. He also affirmed that no prophecy of the Scripture was ever fulfilled, including those relating to Christ.

We do not see how Satan could possibly devise a system more directly opposed to Christ, christianity, God and the Bible, than is Spiritualism; and still thousands and millions are embracing this "strong delusion," and they are so far seduced by the spirits of demons, as to believe that they have really got hold of ancient christianity, which Jesus taught eighteen hundred years ago; while at the same time their position, and what they teach make our Savior to be the greatest deceiver the world ever had. If we did know it to be a fact, we could not believe that intelligent men and women could become so blinded by Satan as to believe what is now received by millions in the most civilized part of the world. But when men and women turn from Christ and his word, and seek some other way to be saved than by denying themselves and bearing the cross after Jesus; there is no doctrine so unscriptural but they may be left to believe it. Intelligence, if unsanctified, is no security against false doctrine. Some of the most wild theories ever believed by human beings have originated from very intelligent persons. So now, we find many among the most intellectual in the world, who have embraced the infidel doctrines of Spiritualism, and now sneer at the whole plan of salvation, as revealed in the Bible. In this class are reckoned Emperors, Queens, lords, members of Congress, judges, lawyers, doctors, ministers, and other professional and distinguished men by the thousand. The Scriptures affirm that this false system of religion, would be a "strong delusion." None other could accomplish such great results in so short a time, as we see produced by Spiritualism. We are more and more convinced that it is Satan's crowning work. It is, in short, the Devil's last grand effort to convert the world to his religion, and destroy, if possible, all confidence in God, Christ, and the Bible. No effort will be spared to make it popular and general. To accomplish this, special effort will be made to secure the influence of the rich, the fashionable, the beautiful, the accomplished, and educated people, in all parts of the world. In this direction, his success is wonderful. Those who do not give attention to facts on this subject have but a very faint idea of what Spiritualism is doing, and of what it will soon accomplish, if the Lord does not come very soon. We look upon it as a certain precursor of the immediate coming of Christ.

Satan knows that Jesus is about to come; and is making an effort to turn the minds of the people from the real, literal, personal coming of Christ, to a spiritual advent of "Christ-principles," all of which, when understood, will be found entirely opposed to what Christ taught; but in perfect harmony with the doctrines of demons. The spirits do not differ with us as to the time of Christ's coming, but in relation to the manner. Whoever lives from the present time till the second coming of Christ may expect to see a very rapid increase of infidelity and crime. Men are fast throwing off all moral restraint, as taught to do by the demons; and are following their own propensities, claiming, as did Mr. Hull, in our late discussion with him, that there is no absolute evil in the world."

Let the friends of Jesus take a bold stand for him, and be willing to bear all the reproach that can be heaped upon them by the enemies of the cross of Christ.

Dear Brn. and Srs., this is an hour of peril. Do not sleep now. Jesus says "Watch." The enemy is laying snares for us. We need on "the whole armor of God," in order to meet him successfully. The last days have come. The closing scenes of earth's last great drama are at hand. Our Deliverer is at the door. The Bride is making herself ready, and is crying "come, Lord Jesus. Dear reader, is this the language of your heart? If not, do not rest till it is. We have had timely warning, and if we are not ready, we shall be without excuse. If, with all the evidences now before us, we have not made due preparation to meet the coming King, what will move us? Let us be in earnest. Our eternal destiny is soon to be decided. What a solemn hour is this in which wh are living! The great day of the Lord is at hand.

SON OLDER THAN HIS FATHER.

Infidels have tried hard to bring a charge against the truthfulness of the Bible by quotits a passage in 2 Chron. 22: 2, where it appears, from that record, that when Ahaziah began to reign he was two years older than his father Jehoram who had just died. It is absurd to suppose that any writer should believe that a son can be two years older than his father. Jehoram was forty years of age when he died, (2 Chron. 21: 20,) and "forty and two years old was Ahaziah [his son] when he began to reign."—2 Chron. 22: 2. In the corresponding record in 2 Kings 8: 26, it reads, "twenty and two years old was Ahaziah when he began to reign."

The mistake must be in the one who transcribed 2 Chronicles 22: 2. The Syriac and Arabic have twenty-two. The Hebrews expressed numbers by letters. Mem, which stood for forty, was very much like caph which represented twenty. And if the transcriber used the ancient Hebrew letters, known as the Samaratan, the mistake would be made still easier.

Dr. Clarke says: "Of all the Mss. which have been collated, and they amount to several hundred, not one confirms the reading of forty-two years. And to it all the ancient versions are equally unfriendly."

We would inquire if any reasonable man can say that such an objection against the Bible as the foregoing, has any weight in it? Yet this is produced by infidels as a very strong argument against the Scriptures.

WHO WAS MELCHISEDEC?

ELDER GRANT:—Will you please explain to me through the Crisis who Melchisedec was, mentioned in Heb. 7: 1?

J. B. REYNOLDS.

In the Book of Jasher, chapter 16: 11, of Melchisedec (there called Adonizedek) it is said, "the same was Shem." He was the son of Noah, who lived both sides of the flood. The Jews were particular to preserve the genealogy of their priesthood; but in the case of Shem, or Melchisedec, as he is called, it appears that his genealogy was not written; hence he is said to be "without father, without mother, without descent, having neither beginning of days, nor end of life." Those who made him priest, this side of the flood, knew nothing of him before the flood. He was ninety-eight years old at the time of the flood, and begat Arphaxad two years after the flood, and lived five hundred years after the birth of his first born.

THE VILE PERSON.

I have been a reader of the Crisis the last year and a half, and must say that I have been very much interested in the prophecies; but one part of them has not been explained satisfactorily to me. Please let me ask some questions, to be answered through your paper. If Louis Napoleon is the "vile person," spoken of in the 11th chapter of Daniel, has he planted his palace between the seas in the most holy mountain? and must not that be accomplished before Michael, the great prince, shall stand up for the deliverance of God's people? and is the leopard beast in the 13th chapter of Revelation, 2d verse, the same person as the "vile person"? and is Popery the dragon that is to give up his power and seat and authority into his hands? If so, must he not become the antichrist of the Jews, and reign with them forty and two months, or three years and a half, before Christ comes to reign? I am somewhat puzzled with this question, to reconcile it with Christ's appearance this year; and others here are puzzled in the same way. Will you please answer through the Crisis, for our benefit?

STEPHEN BUSH.

Monmouth, Ill.

We do not think the "vile person," of Dan. 11: 21, has any reference to Louis Napoleon; or that the "vile person" is the one to "plant the tabernacles of his palaces between the seas in the glorious holy mountain." Napoleon may fulfill the last named scripture, and yet not be the "vile person" mentioned in the 21st verse. We understand that the one who is to "plant the tabernacles of palaces between the seas in the glorious holy mountain" must do that work before Michael stands up; and that the holy mountain means Mt. Zion in Palestine. We have not seen evidence strong enough to make us believe that the event is in the past.

We believe the leopard beast of Rev. 13th chap. symbolizes the same as the little horn, with eyes and a mouth, in Dan. 7th chap. We think the great red dragon represents Rome in its pagan form, and the Leopard beast the same power after it became Papal, when church and state were united.

ELECTION.

BRO. GRANT:—Will you please write an article on the doctrine of election, explaining Rom. 8: 28 to 33, and kindred Scriptures? There are one or two friends here, who are not yet fully convinced of the error of particular election, as held in past days.

B. S. JACKSON.

Dodge's Corner, Waukesha Co., Wis.

The passage in Romans reads as follows:—"And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose. For whom he did foreknow, he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son, that he might be the firstborn among many brethren. Moreover, whom he did predestinate, them he also called; and whom he called, them he also justified; and whom he justified, them he also glorified. What shall we then say to these things? If God be for us, who can be against us? He that spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all, how shall he not with him also freely give us all things? Who shall lay any thing to the charge of God's elect? It is God that justifieth.

Let it be noticed that this scripture was fulfilled in order that Christ "might be the first born AMONG many brethren." This class was predestinated to be "called," "justified" and glorified." Called from where? From the grave. When? "And the graves were opened; and many bodies of the saints which slept arose; and came out of the graves after his resurrection, and went into the holy city, and appeared unto many." Matt. 27: 52–53. Christ is said to be "the first-born from the dead." Col. 1: 18. And he is declared to "be the first-born among many brethren." And those brethren, among whom he is "born from the dead," are the ones "whom he did foreknow," "whom he did predestinate" to be "called," "justified," and "also glorified." As we understand the Scriptures, these constituted "the wave sheaf," preceding the general harvest, which was promised the Savior by the Father, before he was offered as a sacrifice on the cross. In Eph. 4: 8, we read, "When he ascended up on high, he led captivity captive;" or, as in the margin, he led "a multitude of captives."

We find nothing in Rom. 8: 28–33 to prove the doctrine of election, "as held in past days;" that is, that the Lord decided from the beginning what particular individuals should be saved, and decreed that all the rest should be lost.

He has decided to save those of a certain character, and to destroy all others. He has invited all to come; but we are to "give diligence to make" our "calling and election sure." 2 Pet. 1: 10. Why are we called on to make our "election sure," if the Lord has previously fixed it himself?

FROM SR. ANN E. BRAY.

The following is an extract from a letter written by his sister to Bro. John Bray, pastor of the church in Washington, D. C., who is proclaiming the glad tidings that Jesus is soon coming to raise the dead and destroy the wicked. He has been turned away as pastor of the Baptist church, where he formerly preached, but the Lord has set before him an open door, that no man can shut. He is an intelligent and earnest preacher. His sister, from whose letter, by his permission, we make the following extract, is in England; and has become interested in the same blessed hope, in consequence of the faithful efforts of her brother in Washington. She writes:—

"CITY OF LINCOLN, ENG., FEB. 18, 1868.

My Dear Brother:—You will wonder what I think after reading some of the tracts, etc., which you sent me. Well, I certainly see things very differently from what I once did. I think the natural immortality of the soul must be found written on the same page of the Bible as is infant baptism. I can now accept of your views of the destruction of the wicked, because I can see in that case how there will be (as I have long felt sure there must be) a universal song of praise from all living created beings. See the last Psalm, Rom. 8, and Revelations. As I had never thought on destruction, I felt constrained to hope that God in some way would save all. (Is not this really the origin and secret of UNIVERSALISM? J. B.) As touching the dead, I see that the glory of the resurrection has been eclipsed by fiction or romance. For the future, I will speak in Bible language to the sick and dying, and will point them to the gospel hope. After all, the real is far more glorious than the imaginary. Our dear father (an aged pilgrim in his eighty-second year—J. B.) could not bear to view this subject in the new light; so I kept silent, and he kept looking at the books. One evening he surprised me by saying, 'When I die, I do not expect to be carried at once to heaven, to wear my crown, but I must sleep in Jesus till the resurrection.' I said to him, 'But, father, what has so changed your opinion?' He got the book and read to me. It was 'THE BIBLE VS. TRADITION?' I am quite surprised how clear he is, and he is as firm as a rock. At present, he keeps silent about the end of the wicked, but I can tell his faith is shaken....

Our pastor has left us, and we are much exercised on the subject of a new one. I must not expect a minister to see things exactly as I do, but I do pray that God will send us a man who, if he is blind, may be willing to have his eyes opened. Somehow the light is oozing out among us, and lately our deacons were startled by hearing two or three say of a certain sermon, which had charmed the majority, that it was the greater part of it 'fiction.' For myself, I don't expect to be suited. I want a man who will preach the whole truth, and nothing else; but I can wait.' I have my Bible, and I have need to study it more. I am glad to say that the students from college have not half so much of the old song as the older ministers, and I think not unlikely we shall have a young Scotchman, who last Sabbath won many hearts. Throughout the day I heard no word that I wished unsaid. All seem anxious to hear him again. We got the 'World's Crisis,' which you sent us, and we like it much.

Miss P. would like to have sent her the following tracts, two copies of each: 'Reasons for my Hope,' 'Wicked not Immortal,' 'What is the Soul?' 'The Spirit?' 'Man's Nature and Destiny." I also should like a few more of 'John Foster's Letter,' 'Bible or Tradition?' 'Dr. Finley's Letter to a Clergyman,' and some more of the 'Scripture Searchers,' to give away. We like them because they are the pure word of God, and not the words of men. Who dare deny the word of God? Alas! how many do."

This letter from the other side the wide ocean, shows the usefulness of your excellent tract system. I wish I had the means, I would help you to send colporters and whole cargo of tracts "FOR A WITNESS TO ALL NATIONS."

JOHN BRAY.

SCATTER TRACTS.

Bro. F. S. Ransom, Danbury, N. H., writes: "The bundle of tracts that you sent me about a year ago are doing their work. They are like bread cast upon the waters. As the Lord has prospered me, I send you —— to pay for them, or put it in the tract fund, as you think best. I am always glad to receive tracts or papers for free distribution, but cannot always pay for them, as I should be glad to do; but whatever my circumstances are, I have learned to be content. Thank the Lord for the school."

Now is the time to do good by scattering tracts. It is a favored time, because the people are anxious to read. We are receiving many reports of glorious results arising from scattering tracts. We are acquainted with no other way of accomplishing so much good with so little means.

"WITHOUT REPENTANCE."

BRO. GRANT:—Will you please give some explanation in the Crisis on Rom. 11: 29, and oblige your Brother, E. E. COOLIDGE.

The passage reads as follows:—"For the gifts and calling of God are without repentance." We understand the expression, "without repentance," to mean simply on the part of God in relation to his covenant with his people. He has promised, and he will keep his promise; not that he will save sinners without repentance on their part. That would be universal salvation with a vengeance.

TRACTS FOR CHILDREN.—We have received from the Scriptural Tract Repository, 19 Lindall Street, Boston, four interesting tracts for children, by Sr. E. A. Annable, entitled as follows:—"Little Teachings for Little Folks"; "Samuel'; "Incidents in the Lives of Good Men"; "Anecdotes of Animals." These are all excellent for the Little Folks.

HERALD OF HEALTH.—If our readers wish a good monthly, containing valuable information relative to the laws of health, we think they will be much pleased with the Herald of Health, published by Miller, Wood & Co., 15 Laight Street, New York. Price $2.00 per year. It is worth the money.

The Care, Education, and Training of Children.—There will be commenced in "The Herald of Health" for June, 1868, a series of articles entitled, The Care, Education, and Rearing of Children, written by Mrs. Horace Mann, Miss Elizabeth P. Peabody, Mrs. Dio Lewis, Mrs. Isabella B. Hooker, Frances Dana Gage, Grace Greenwood, Elizabeth Oakes Smith, Sarah Jane Hale, Mrs. C. M. Severance, etc., and they will be continued through the volume. The first paper will be by Mrs. Horace Mann, on "The Care of Young Children. "The second paper will be by Grace Greenwood, entitled, "The Physical Education of Girls." Miss Peabody, who has devoted so much of her life to the education of very young children, has prepared a paper on the Kindergarten Schools of Germany. Other papers will follow in succession, and the series will be exceedingly valuable to all who are interested in the improvement of the race. To secure the full series, subscriptions should be sent in at once. Price, $2 a year; sample numbers, 20 cents. Address MILLER WOOD & Co., 15 Laight Street, New York.

The Young Pilgrim for May 1st.

The number for May 1st is out, and contains the following excellent reading for the young:—

A beautiful piece of poetry, "The Paradise over the River"; an interesting and instructive "Talk about the Resurrection"; a sweet story, how we may have "Stars in our Crown"; an interesting report of "The Pleasant Valley Band of Hope"; a beautiful picture of "Spring," with poetry; a column of "Love-Feast" testimonies for Jesus, from the young pilgrims; a column of good reading for the "Wee Ones," with a lovely picture of "Merry, Merry May," and what she says, and the story of "Little Sunny Face"; a curious "Bible Puzzle"; "The Cross of Christ"; "The Swearer Reproved"; "Don't Tattle"; "Conquer them in the Beginning"; "Chuck full of Bible," etc., etc.

Now is the time to subscribe. For terms see last page. Specimen numbers sent without charge. Address all orders, remittances, or letters on business, to THE YOUNG PILGRIM, Boston, Mass.; and all communications designed for publication, to the Editor, WM. B. HERRON, Boston, Mass.

ADDRESS.

To the faithful in Christ Jesus, "looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ," residing in the State of Massachusetts, Greeting:

Being invited by your State Conference to address you upon the subject of missionary effort, under the direction and within the bounds of said conference; I therefore most heartily and cheerfully attend to the duty assigned me. Beloved in the Lord, I need not use long and labored arguments to prove that Jesus is soon coming; that the dark and tragical scenes of human sorrows and woes are soon to end; that the cheerless and stormy night through which Immanuel's bride has passed is closing its seasons of toil, persecution, and watching; and that the golden moments of probationary time, in which unnumbered millions of the human family pass the stage upon which they voluntarily fix their eternal state, either to enjoy the fadeless glory of Messiah's kingdom, or sink beneath the dark and cheerless wave of "the second death," will soon close for ever. Your faith in the divine testimony concerning these days has guided your feet up the mountain of human experiences and responsibilities to a dizzy height, where the soil was never marked by human footprint before. It is above that occupied by Noah, Job, or Daniel; for they saw dimly in the distance what you see face to face. Your surroundings are more glorious and awful than those of Moses and Joshua, or Peter and Paul. They looked out upon types and shadows, but you upon antitypes and realities. They were called to witness a change of temporal government, and the establishment of Christ's glorious and eternal kingdom. They lived at a time when a few were raised from the dead to manifest the Savior's power; but you when "all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth." They were upon the stage when a little of the earth was illuminated with the glory of God; but you when it shall be filled with his glory as the waters cover the sea.

O then, dear brethren, look at the elevation of your position, and the awfulness of your responsibilities; for you are truly standing upon the summit of the highest mountain upon which humanity has been elevated, so that no cloud-capped summit rises between you and the objects of your love and glory. As you put the long glass of inspiration to the eye, and sweep it over the scenes of earthly story, and view the unrolled parchment of past history laying at your feet, extending its unbroken lines back to the laying of the foundations of the earth; on the other hand lies the beautiful map of the coming kingdom, penciled by a heavenly artist, throwing its radiance through the illimitable ages of coming glory. God has chosen you to occupy a prominent place among his honored ones of this generation, to whom he has committed the most glorious and awful truth ever revealed to man. It is the last edition of divine revelation—the last judgment message in which the eternal King has made his last proclamation of pardon for repenting rebels.

Do you realize, my brethren, the magnitude and responsibility of the work you are called to do? Have you comprehended the idea that the court of heaven has imposed that trust and confidencce in you, which has caused it to elect you to assist in serving its notice upon the governments of earth, that the lease under which they have held the territory of their kingdoms, through the dark and bloody ages of their reign, will end during the period of your generation? Does your faith firmly hold the all-inspiring truth that earth's bright era of prophetic story has come, when God shall fold up the dark curtain which through the blighting ages of the curse has draped it in perpetual sadness, and shall roll down a flood of heavenly effulgence upon it, paling the sun into the dimmest star, annihilating the curse, driving death forever from its fair fields, restoring its loyal citizens to their predetermined Eden, and shall establish a glorious and eternal kingdom worthy of the great Immanuel, and his redeemed bride? If so, then has the painted bauble of earthly greatness and glory burst at your feet, and the sweetest music and brightest prospects ceased to charm you. O how elevated and wonderful is your position!

"It is an age on ages telling;
To be living is sublime."

While majestic and thrilling events are crowding around you, portentous of coming wrath upon the guilty nations, who are made, Haman-like, to prepare the instrumentalities for their own destruction; while on the other hand the prophetic calendar shows that this is the time for the countless host of heavenly birth, now sleeping in the blinded chambers of death, to come forth; when suddenly, in a moment, they will surround you as a cloud at the appointed meeting place in mid-air; when lo! what greetings, what re-unions, what thrilling joy, shall gladden the hearts of the white-robed throng as they meet the loved One, now the joy and salvation of all his people!

Is it possible that we are correctly describing the present time? If so, then who can tell the importance of present faithfulness to Christ? for the eternal interests of this generation are hinged upon the acts and events crowded into this hour. Then HELP! HELP! for the staging is falling! Save, if possible, from destruction some for whom Christ died. CRY, CRY aloud, and spare not; for the boat is going over the falls. Throw out the line; there is not a moment to lose in saving your loved ones from the engulphing abyss below. Awake! AWAKE! from your slumbers, and look out from the lee-shore where you stand; see the mighty ship freighted with humanity strike the hidden rock; while the maddened waters, white-capped and armed for quick and terrible ruin, rush upon the parting craft, roaring with the fearfulness of coming judgment. Shoot out the life-boat, fear not the wild confusion, rush to the rescue of those who, in a brief period, will have passed under the wave of eternal death. Lift up the voice! lift it above the deafening storm-roar, and tell the perishing there is for them salvation.

In view of these things, which I can only feebly and imperfectly describe, I exhort you to make united and persevering effort to send the gospel of the kingdom to the sleeping and slumbering thousands of your State who are perishing for lack of knowledge, unconscious of coming judgment and the devices of Satan for their destruction. It is not enough to enjoy the rich blessings of the gospel quietly under our own vine and fig-tree; but Christ calls you to carry it quickly to the regions beyond. Carry it by bidding the servants of Christ go to the highways and hedges; carry the compelling message to the poor and outcast; carry it under tents, and into groves and barns, and all available places, high and low, where the people will congregate to hear it. Pour out the truth constantly from tongue, pen, pulpit, and press. Use the means that Christ has given you in this great work,—time, talents, and wealth. It is your last opportunity to use them for the salvation of the perishing, and the glory of God. Work, WORK, for the sun is setting, and the evening tide is ebbing out; and the great Conqueror is coming,—is coming speedily. Amen.

To assist you in this great missionary work, and unite and make more efficient your labors, the State Conference appointed a Protracted-meeting Committee, and instructed them to make this work a speciality in their labors the present year. And now, dear brethren and sisters, you have the means and willingness to do all your duty in this glorious cause. I therefore counsel you to act promptly, unitedly, and prayerfully in this great work; and when the Chief Shepherd shall appear, you shall receive a crown of life. J. COUCH.

To the churches scattered abroad:

Greeting: Read attentively the stirring appeal of our dear Bro. Couch, and may it awaken us all to immediate action. Let us arouse ourselves, and with all our mental and material power "come up to the help of the Lord," and put means into the hands of the Treasurer to keep five, ten, or twenty good strong men in the missionary field from now until harvest. Up, brethren, "the King's business requires haste." Send in your offerings in small or large sums,—50 cents, or $500. The money may be sent to me as Treasurer, Lock Box No. 81, Springfield, or to George T. Adams, 167 Hanover St.; and every week shall witness report of funds received for the cause of Christ, to spread the news of his coming kingdom. O brethren, hear and heed the call.

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The Mass. A. C. Conference commenced its first annual session on Thursday, April 2nd, at 8½ A. M. It was called to order by the President. Eld. J. Couch offered prayer. The Clerk read the minutes of previous meeting. The usual committees on membership and order of business were chosen. Voted, That all brethren and sisters present be invited to participate in our deliberations.

The following names of members were reported present: Brn. Rufus Wendell, Luther Boutell, J. Hemenway, C. Goodrich, L. C. McKinstry, A. M. Higgins, I. B. Potter, J. Couch, S. G. Mathewson, E. Owen, L. T. Cunningham, D. O. Hopkins, M. Batchelor, H. Munger, G. A. Streeter, R. E. Ladd.

DELEGATES. From Springfield, Brn. Chas. Newell, Benj. Ellenwood, Levi Allen, T. R. Weaver; Worcester, S. Ayers, W. T. Collyer, J. S. Giddings, W. G. Ruggles, R. Curtis; Boston, J. G. Hamblin, M. H. Piper, G. T. Adams; Brimfield, J. C. Burnham; Lawrence, Jos. Churchill; New Bedford, Brn. Harding and Irish; Fairhaven, Jos. Stetson, Burgess Wilcox; Lowell, Danl. Churchill, G. W. Rix, C. P. Whitten; Chelsea, E. G. Kingsbury; Westfield, B. D. Reed; South Boston, Orion Green.

VISITORS. Brn. J. W. Thomas, Rufus Baker, T. M. Preble, S. W. Thurber, Daniel Churchill, Elam Burnham, Wm. Shaw, Henry Pratt. B. Woodside, C. H. Leverton, Daniel Hutchinson, J. W. Brittain, M. Grant, Wm. C. Thurman, S. S. Brewer, all from Massachusetts. I. C. Wellcome, J. C. Libby, I. K. Lombard, Maine. A. W. Sibley, J. Knowles, T. H. Piper, D. M. Leavitt, J. G. Smith, A. Simpson, J. W. White, A. Ross, New Hampshire. G. W. Stetson, J. B. Cook, Vermont. E. Bellows, Rhode Island. H. F. Carpenter, O. D. Woodruff, Connecticut. W. A. Fenn, James Ferris, New York. J. V. and W. G. Himes, Michigan.

The names from Massachusetts were accepted by the Ministerial Committee as members, and ordered to be recorded by the Clerk. Brn. Goodrich, Adams and Boutell were chosen a committee to report names of officers.

The following persons were elected: President, Elder L. Boutell. Vice President, A. M. Higgins. Secretary, E. Owen. Treasurer, R. E. Ladd.

MINISTERIAL COMMITTEE. Elds. M. Batchelor, E. McCulloch, M. Grant, T. M. Preble.

PROTRACTED MEETING COMMITTEE. Elds. S. W. Thurber, H. Munger, L. T. Cunningham, P. S. Butler.

QUAR. CONF. COMMITTEE. Elds. J. Hemenway, G. A. Streeter, J. W. Thomas, Danl. Churchill.

Reports being next in order, Brn. Ladd and Munger were called upon. Their reports were substantially the same as previously submitted. Bro. Hemenway reported progress from Athol. Persons who five years ago when he went there predicted he would starve, now come to hear him preach, and help sustain meetings in the village, where a hall has been recently hired. Their meetings were usually held in a school-house, two miles out. He follows his business, and preaches as is able. Bro. C. Goodrich had been out of health; desired prayers from the church that he might be enabled to finish his course. Bro. G. A. Streeter alluded again to the good work in Charlton, also in other places where he had labored. Felt we had but "an hour to fight." Bro. McKinstry spoke of his labors in Ohio. Felt they had not been wholly in vain in the Lord. Was ready and willing to obey him until he comes.

Leave was granted Bro. Boutell to introduce the report of the council chosen at Worcester, in August last, who were to investigate the case of Eld. R. Williams, of Bristol, Ct. The report was adopted, and fellowship with him as a christian minister was voted withdrawn.

Bro. Higgins reported his labors; also Bro. I. B. Potter, who had seen a good band raised up in Somers, Conn., also one in Woodstock. At the latter place the Congregational minister invited him, pretending sympathy with our views. It proved mere pretense; but God helped in the battle against Universalism, Spiritualism, etc.; and a glorious victory had been gained for truth. Many conversions had followed. Bro. Couch spoke of his labors the past year, east and west. God had been with him. Advised prudence in presenting the truth. Give men wheat, and not blow chaff in their eyes. Bro. S. G. Mathewson had been confined the past year in Castleton, Vt. Church was in good condition. A year ago last winter a goodly number were converted and joined them. Some additions the past year. The Clerk testified to the goodness of God in his case. Bro. P. S. Butler had preached nearly every Sunday the past year. Was doing what he could, by the grace of God. Bro. L. T. Cunningham labored mainly at home, doing what he could to remove prejudice, and bring before dying men this last crowning message of the gospel. Bro. D. O. Hopkins tarried with others awhile in Worcester, after our quarterly session there. Several conversions resulted from the efforts put forth. Had also seen a small band raised up in Oakdale, Mass., though he had been mainly in Rhode Island, where good had resulted from his labors.

This report closes with Friday's proceedings. The Clerk was obliged to leave by first train Saturday. The session has thus far been very harmonious. God has been with us by his Spirit. It has seemed almost like campmeeting, so large a number have been present. The future of our conference looks brighter. Blessed be God. E. OWEN, Clerk.

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The East Maine Christian Conference assembled at Frankfort Mills, Thursday, March 5th, and continued its session over the Sabbath. Good interest during the meeting. Preachers present were Brn. T. Smith of Bangor, F. A. Baker of Levant, Bro. Hall of No. Bucksport, and Bro. I. K. Lombard. At the business meeting, Bro. Thos. Smith presided.

Voted, To appoint Moses Young, of Lincolnville, Secretary.

Voted, That the next conference be held in Lincolnville, to commence June 18th, and continue over the Sabbath.

Voted, To appoint M. Young agent to correspond with the Mission-Tent Committee, relative to procuring another Mission tent for the State of Maine, and ascertain what per cent. discount would be allowed on the present mission tent property.

For the satisfaction of friends interested in the proposed additional Mission tent, your agent corresponded with the chairman of the Mission tent committee, and through him determined that about twenty per cent. discount would be the basis of settlement; so that in case a new tent be purchased, those holding the old tent would aid in that proportion. Our final conclusion was to abandon, for the present, the purpose of providing an additional Mission tent, for the reason that we should not be able to procure the missionary labor for the supply of two tent missions.

M. YOUNG, Agent.

"THE GLAD TIDINGS."

NEW SERIAL.

Since issuing the April number of "The Glad Tidings," we have felt moved of God, and also compelled by circumstances, to commence a new series, at reduced price. We shall put the price at seventy cents per annum, of twelve numbers, 35 cts. for six months, that "The Glad Tidings" may reach all. Our reasons for making this change may be summed up briefly:

1. Our only object in the publication of the "The Glad Tidings" was to do good to this generation (which we felt, and do feel will soon stand at the judgment bar,) by sending forth the judgment message, the glad tidings of Jesus' return. To accomplish this, we spared neither labor nor health; and we can say that with feeble health we have done what we could.

From various sources we hear the good fruits of this effort. Praise the Lord! Though our circulation reached nearly all the States, cheering many a homeward-bound pilgrim, and finding a welcome in honest hearts of other churches, yet in numbers it did not meet our expectation, nor was sufficient to make it self-supporting, thus we were deprived of spreading the news as we desired. 2. To accomplish our original object, we have put "The Glad Tidings" at 70 cts. per annum, thus placing it within the means of all, that the poor may have the gospel preached to them, and that we may assist in sending the "Gospel of the Kingdom" into all the world, and thus arouse people to look for the coming of the Messiah. The Lord seems to have hedged up our way to this one course, and as we are to work for the Lord, we are content to work as he may direct.

3. In order to get the new serial on a self-supporting basis, and in working order, we shall be compelled to defer its issue till about the middle of the coming June. We hope to then be able to scatter it wherever the door may open. We feel confident that our friends will like the change. We shall issue it in book form, octavo pages, neatly bound in colored paper covers, and each number will contain nearly as much reading matter as at the former price; and we shall strive to make it meet the demand for a sound Advent Monthly, which shall set forth our faith, and the doctrine which makes us a distinct people, with christian boldness and love.

What we want. We want all who read this to let us know how much they are interested in the "blessed hope," by sending us their names, and making an effort in its behalf. Those who have not already subscribed, we wish to have subscribe immediately. It is not designed to run opposition, or to supersede any publication, but to co-operate in warning this generation.

A special inducement. To those who will send us clubs from five and upwards, with the money, we will send it for sixty cents per annum. Sent to all preachers free, who will notify us of their desire to have it. Now, friends and brethren, help in this matter. We intend to publish "The Glad Tidings" till Jesus comes; and we want five hundred new subscribers to commence the new series with. Shall we have them? Address all communications to WM. H. SPENCER.

A LITTLE GIRL.

ELDER GRANT:—Dear Sir,—I have a little girl between four and five years of age, a bright, healthy child, which I would like to have some respectable people adopt as their own; as I am a cripple, and unable to support her. For further information, please correspond with L. D. Harrington, Castleton, Vt., care of Newell Hooker.

Yours respectfully, L. D. HARRINGTON.

A CONTRITE SPIRIT.

The definition of the word contrite is "broken-hearted on account of sin." In Psalm 34: 18, we read, "the Lord is nigh unto them that are of a broken heart, and saveth such as be of a contrite spirit." Also in another place it is written, "the sacrifices of God are a broken spirit; a broken and a contrite heart, O God, thou wilt not despise." A contrite spirit is the opposite of a proud spirit; and while the Lord abhors the proud, he will abide with the humble and contrite heart. The severe chastisements and heavy crosses often borne by those who are seeking for immortality, directly tend to break the spirit and wean the affections from earth and its vanities. We thus become trained and accustomed to submission and obedience. The circumstances of those of us who are down low in the valley of poverty and humiliation, seem to favor the exhibition and development of a contrite spirit. Yet we must guard against murmuring or complaining of our lot, for this is one of the temptations to which the severely tried are exposed. We will close this brief article with the words of Jesus, "Blessed are the poor in spirit, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven."

Correspondence.

From Sr. A. E. Smith.

DEAR BRN. AND SRS.:—No doubt you are all waiting to hear from me, as I have been all work and no writing lately, and have been all run down with excessive labor, and could not write. My nervous system is all run down, and the Dr. says I must stop right off this great amount of mental labor, or else be an invalid as long as I live. But I feel a little better this morning, and want to tell you how good the Lord is to us here in the highways and hedges. How true the word of the Lord is, that those who put their trust in him shall be as Mount Zion that cannot be removed.

When I left home for the conference at Boston, it was with much perplexity. I did not know whether to go or not. I was all tired out with constant labor, and felt I might get two or three days' rest. But I was worried about the rent. It was due when I left home, and after leaving money at home for household expenses, when arrived at the conference I had very little left towards the rent. I knew the laws of New York,—if your rent is not paid the day it is due, and that in advance, you must go out in the street. So I worried some about it; but I found I had too much to do to worry and fret about temporal matters. It made me unfit to attend to spiritual things. So I made up my mind to cast all my care on the Lord, for the work was his, and he could take care of it better than I could. While I was in Boston, our friends in the Mission made it a subject of prayer; and some—who knew what it was to pray for the Lord to take away a hungry feeling, because they had nothing to eat—prayed that the Lord might send the rent, for they did not want to lose the Mission. So before I got home, the Lord sent a brother all the way from Boston, and he visited round among the poor, and assisted some of them in paying their rents, and bought food for them, and before he left he gave the money to pay this month's rent for our Mission. Praise the Lord for deliverance. I felt the Lord had the money, and if I could stop thinking about the rent, and fill my appointments, and work for God, he would attend to the matter; and so he did. Bless his holy name. So this left me, with what I received in other directions, enough to pay up my missionaries. I owed them for the months of March and April. So I divided it among them, and paid them all up till the first of May, besides keeping the table and other expenses; and paid up all debts.

The Mission to-day is free from debt, all but $9.00, that we owe Bro. G. for twenty gallons of oil, which we intend to try to pay this week, and then we shall owe no man anything till the first of May. Then we shall have to pay our rent, and we can trust the Lord. Our confidence gets stronger all the time in the Lord. I would say just here, the landlord has told me that owing to the law that has been passed, that all tenement houses must have fire escapes attached to them, which he says has cost $270 each, he cannot let me have this house for less than fifteen hundred dollars per year, or $125.00 per month, which will come due the first of May. Now the question is, Is it best to pay that much rent? True, this is the right place for a mission; it is among the vilest of the vile, and among a class that none can reach but missionaries. But shall we yield to Cæsar in high rents, and pay his demand because we want souls saved? I don't feel just right about it myself, and would like to hear from those who help sustain this work.

The hatred towards the colored people in this city is intense, and no matter which way you turn, you will find no sympathy from the whites if you labor amongst them. Now we started this mission to work here just as long as there was work to do, and it could be sustained. But is it wisdom to pay more rent, or not? Those that help pay this rent, and whose hearts are in this work, let me hear how you feel about the matter. True, we have been and still are doing a great work among a class down in the cellars and up in the garrets, whom none but missionaries can reach; and we dare not steady the ark. Write immediately, you that are interested, because the months roll round so fast; and if there was a word said about the rent, the landlord would let it to somebody right over my head.

A word or two to those who have written to me about getting them little girls. In the first place, the girls that I can get and recommend can get places here, to wait on table, door-bell, and run on errands. Those that I can not recommend here, of course, I would not like to send away and give other people trouble. Then again, it is hard work to coax the colored people to give up their children. The separation that slavery has made, with all its horrors, has left a sad impression on their minds, and they would sooner have one meal a day, and their children with them, than to feast and not have them. So you can see, friends, how it is. We would be glad to get them for you if we could.

New York, Apr. 22. ANNA E. SMITH.

From Sr. S. C. Nichols.

BRO. GRANT:—As I sat thinking of the past, present and future, I thought, among many other things, I would try and write a few lines for the dear paper that I prize so highly, and thus speak a word for Jesus and his cause, and let the brethren and sisters know I am still upon the Lord's side, and love the precious truths he taught as well as ever. It seems so strange, now that I see the truth, that I never saw it before, when it is so plain upon almost every page of the sacred Scriptures. And still more strange does it seem that those who have heard will not see and believe.

Since I first heard these doctrines of the soon coming of the Lord, the sleep of the dead, destruction of the wicked, etc., it seems as though the tempter had left no means untried to prevent me from believing the truth, and to turn my feet from the narrow path. But we have the promise of our heavenly guide that we shall not be tempted above what we are able to bear, and I have thus far found his promise good.

"No chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous; nevertheless, afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruit of righteousness unto them which are exercised thereby." How good and true is every word that proceedeth "from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning." When I look at myself, I feel one of the weakest and most unworthy of all God's children, and it is a wonder that Jesus should ever have "Sought me when a stranger,

Wand'ring from the fold of God."

Why did he ever reveal to me the blessed truth that he came into the world and died that I might live?

"O to grace how great a debtor
Daily I'm constrained to be;
Let that grace, Lord, like a fetter,
Bind my wand'ring heart to thee."

With such a friend as Jesus, who would not defy the hosts of sin and hell? May I ever be found faithful, that I may have a right to the tree of life that grows in the midst of the paradise of God. I want to see all the loved of earth there, and join with them in singing praise to him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb forever and ever.

If one should chance to read these lines, who is unreconciled to God, let me invite and entreat him to come to Jesus. Come now, he is waiting to receive you. He will pardon and save you. Do not put it off any longer. To-morrow may be too late. We are in the land of the enemy, and may at any time be cut down, and laid away in the silent tomb; or Jesus may come and find you unprepared. I shall meet you at the judgment. Will you be upon the right hand of the Judge, or upon the left? It is for you to decide. That God may help you to choose that good part, which Mary chose, is the prayer of your sister,

Hopkinton N. H. S. C. NICHOLS.

From Bro. A. N. Seymour.

BRO. GRANT:—Some time has elapsed since I have written anything for the Crisis. But it is not because I have lost my interest in the paper; by no means. I love the Crisis, and could not well do without it. I have ever admired it, while you have conducted its influence. It speaks for itself. It is doing a noble work for the precious cause we so devoutly love and ardently admire. I do feel like bidding it a hearty God speed all over the world. The Voice of the West, published at Buchanan, Mich., by Bro. J. V. Himes, is another very valuable paper, of the same size of the Crisis, which I prize very much indeed. Both these papers go hand in hand with me, and anything I can do to help spread their influence I shall do most cheerfully. I do say unqualifiedly that I fully believe that these papers contain more real genuine truth, and more real genuine Christianity, than can be found elsewhere in the wide world. To some this would seem like boasting; but being quite extensively acquainted with various religious papers and influences, I speak what I do know, and testify to what I have seen. We formerly stood connected with the Freewill Baptist Church, and both of us received license from that church to preach the gospel; but when the light of God's truth shone upon our minds, as expressed in the following resolution: "Resolved, That the doctrines of the immortality of the soul, the consciousness of the dead, going to heaven and hell at death, and endless hell torture, constitute no part of the revelation of God," we were compelled, after a faithful investigation, by the force of testimony, to walk out into open daylight, and acknowledge the precious truth that there is no endless life or immortality except through Jesus Christ alone. Here we stand fully committed before all men; but it was after we had fought against these things for four years, and after enduring a great struggle of mind. At last truth triumphed, our souls received a fresh baptism from heaven, and thanks to heaven's King, we enjoy the liberty of the gospel in the fullest sense.

Since our redemption from the fog and mysticism, into which we had fallen by early impressions and instruction, we can now look back into the pit from which we have been elevated, and thank God with streaming eyes that we were so fortunate as to escape such awful errors, and find a hope so glorious, so blessed, so elevating, and truly heart-cheering, in which to rejoice evermore. Oh could the religious world see what we now see, and enjoy the hope we now enjoy, they could but praise God with an undying love, and rejoice with joy unspeakable, being full of glory.

My dear brother, while we have been so refreshed and thousands beside; and while the cause we so much love is being so signally blessed by a divine hand in various parts, let us never forget the fountain head from which so many rich blessings flow so freely and lovingly to the children of men. Here is our strength now and forever. Here may we drink with pure hearts and clean hands till faith is lost in sight, which can't be long. No, no. I am certain that Gentile times will very soon roll their everlasting rounds; and in view of it my soul responds, amen and amen. Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly.

Your brother in Christ,
A. N. SEYMOUR.

MACEY.—Died at Lynn, Mass., April 25th, 1868, Mrs. Immogene O. Macey, wife of John S. Macey, and daughter of the late Elder D. E. Moulton, aged nineteen years.

In her the prayers of a godly father and a pious mother found an abundant answer, even after that father had ceased to pray, and had left his fatherless children with a covenant keeping God. She was converted in 1866, and adorned the doctrine of God our Savior in her life. Her hope reached within the veil. In her last hours, even when reason tottered on its throne, her thoughts were of the little circle of worshipers with whom she had taken sweet counsel, and her words of exhortation and songs of praise thrilled the hearts of those around her, as with an unearthly power and pathos. And so at last she fell asleep in Jesus. A tender husband mourns his bitter bereavement, and an infant daughter, who can never know a mother's love on earth, is left to the care of him who will never leave nor forsake the sheep of his pasture, nor the lambs of his fold. A mother, sister and other christian friends and kindred, share the common grief and rejoice in the common hope.

The funeral services were conducted by the writer, in the edifice occupied by the Christian Church, and the tearful assembly were comforted by the story of Bethany, and by the words of Him who said to the mourning Martha, "I am the resurrection and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live; And whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die. Believeth thou this?" Jn. 11: 25, 26. May the consolations of God abide with the afflicted ones, and may they meet in glory in the gathering day.

"There my little ones, I know,
Round me shall be clinging;
There the loved of long ago,
With me shall be singing.
Oh, that land I long to see,
Where the weary-hearted
Shall with Christ in glory be,
Never to be parted."

ESTEY. Died in Jacksontown, N. B., April 1st, 1868, Sister Syretha J. Estey, wife of Bro. Jonathan Estey, aged thirty-two years.

She leaves a husband, one child, three brothers, one sister, and many relatives and friends to mourn her loss. Our sister believed and loved those truths which distinguish us as a people. She loved the coming and reign of Jesus, and expressed the belief that she should sleep but a little while. Bro. Jared M. Tosier preached a good discourse at her funeral, from John 6: 39. We sorrow, but not as those who have no hope.

Her brother, THOMAS G. BURPEE.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

EUROPE.—By special cable telegram from Trieste and London, we learn that the Cretan insurgents are again in active operation against the Turks, and that according to Greek reports many severe battles have been fought, the revolutionists claiming the victory in one protracted engagement. The Turks, it is alleged, committed many barbarities.—New York Herald.

DOMESTIC.

☞ One of the Zouaves who recently went from Canada to join the Papal army, writing from Rome, says, that if the Roman question were settled, the Canadians would not complete their two years' engagement, but would come back immediately. He says they get about twelve cents for five days' service, and manage to increase that to about fifteen pence per week by selling half their allowance of bread; but out of that they have to purchase a good many things, so that they are in no immediate danger of becoming millionaires.

☞ A Dresden letter says that the Queen of Saxony has expressed displeasure at the untidy, dishevelled style of wearing the hair which has lately come into fashion. Having frequently to receive English and American ladies, who sometimes appear with their hair hanging loosely about their shoulders, Her Majesty has established a regulation that all persons with such coiffures shall not be admitted at Court.

☞ A singular freak of nature has occurred in Preston. Abigail Coleman of that town, a lady eighty-five years of age, has a third set of teeth just appearing through the gums. She is hale and hearty, and bids fair to enjoy many years of usefulness yet.

☞ It is stated that an entirely new Fenian organization is to be perfected in this country on the same basis as the political secret societies in Italy, which will absorb those now in the existing circles whose honesty is unquestionable.

ART AND SCIENCE.—If a steel pen is hard and obstinate, refuses to yield when pressed, and annoys by its rigidity, hold it a half minute or less in the flame of a gas light or candle, and stick it into water, oil, or tallow. In most instances it will cure the rigidity. In fact, it is a good practice to pass a steel pen through the flame of a lamp before using it. This burns off the oil used in the tempering and prevents that slipping of the ink, or the refusal to flow, generally noticed in all new steel pens.

Appointments.

☞ We would say to our preaching brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as TUESDAY MORNING, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be inserted till the week following.

Tent Meetings.

To the brethren and sisters scattered throughout Massachusetts and New Hampshire, Greeting: Whereas the time for preaching the gospel is short, and what is done for the salvation of sinners must be done quickly, I address these lines to you. Brn. Kingsbury of Chelsea, and Ford of Concord, and others, have provided a suitable tent for the business, and placed it in the field—a free tent—and given me charge of the same. Now I want all who desire tent meetings in their vicinity the coming season, to write me at once. Bro. S. W. Thurber and other efficient preachers will assist in the work. Our first meeting will be held in Charlestown, Mass., commencing Thursday evening, May 14th, and hold over Sunday. We shall expect the brethren and sisters to co-operate with us in the work. Let prayer go up to God, that his blessing may attend. Per order,

D. M. LEAVITT.

Conference.

A conference of brethren believing in the personal coming of Jesus Christ nigh at hand, in Mecosta, Isabella and adjoining counties, will convene at Millbrook, Mich., on Thursday evening before the first Sunday in June, to hold over Sunday. The object of this conference will be to unite the means of the scattered brethren, and employ an evangelist to proclaim the coming of Christ and kindred doctrines in this northern field. We hope to see a general attendance of preachers and people. We expect some preachers from other parts of the State. Millbrook is situated on the county line, between Mecosta and Isabella counties, and forty-five miles north of Ionia station, on the Detroit and Milwaukie Railroad. Provisions for the entertainment of all will be made.

JOHN BOWER,
PETER S. DECKER,
LEVI W. KING,
RICHARD S. DECKER, } Committee.

Quarterly Conference.

The third quarterly session of the Advent Christian State Conference of New Hampshire will be held in Sutton, N. H., commencing on Thursday, at five o'clock P. M., May 28th, and hold over the following Lord's day.

A. W. SIBLEY, Secretary.

Conference.

There will be a quarterly conference in Bridgewater, Vt., Saturday and Sunday, May 23d and 24th, services beginning with prayer, Friday, 7 P. M. Business and conference Saturday, 10 A. M., preaching 2 P. M., and Sunday 10.30 A. M. and 2 P. M. Lord's supper after morning service.

G. W. STETSON.

Tent Meeting.

I want all that desire a tent meeting during the season in their locality to write me at once, so I can make my arrangements not to travel over the ground more than once, as I had to do last season. Write at once. My address is Edenboro, Erie Co., Pa. J. WENDELL.

Notice.

Elders John T. Dixon and Joseph J. Northup are expected at Clark's Hall, Richmond, R. I., Sunday, May 10th, at which time the Sunday School will be re-organized for the season. A full attendance of the children and all interested is requested at 9½ o'clock, A. M.

German Tracts.

Bro. L. Reimer, 809 Coates St., Philadelphia, has a supply of German tracts on important subjects. He has just translated into German our tract, "What is Man?" Let these tracts be widely scattered.

Notice.

Bridgewater (Vt.) quarterly conference, which was set for 9th and 10th of May, is hereby adjourned to May 23d and 24th, on account of sickness of my brother. Hours for service and business same as already announced. G. W. STETSON.

Conference.

There will be a conference held at Lowell, Mass., commencing Tuesday evening, May 5th, and continuing every evening through the week, and over Lord's day, May 10th. Brethren J. Couch, J. G. Smith, and D. M. Leavitt are expected to be present. For the church, JON MOODY.

Tent and Campmeetings in Wisconsin.

A tent meeting will commence in Brodhead, Green Co., Wis., May 15th. Elder J. V. Himes will help us.

A tent meeting will begin at Fairfield, Sauk Co., Wis., May 30th. Elder Miles Grant will help us. At the same place a campmeeting will begin June 1st.

A tent meeting will begin at Fenimore, Grant Co., Wis June 12th. Eld. N. A. Hitchcock will assist us. WM. SHELDON.

Grove Meeting.

If the Lord will, we will attend a meeting on the camp-ground at Alton Bay, N. H., Sunday, June 7th, 1868.

C. GOODRICH.
D. CHURCHILL.
J. G. SMITH.

Quarterly Conferences.

The State Conference voted to hold not less than a dozen conferences and protracted meetings in the State the coming season. The design is to make more effort to get the truth into new places, and stir up an interest as far as possible to enlighten and save all that can be bought to the Savior, and the love of his appearing. Let all that desire a meeting of the State Conference, or a protracted meeting in their place, make it known immediately, and we will arrange accordingly.

L. BOUTELL.

Quar. Conf. at Addison, Vt.,

On 29th, 30th, and 31st of May, beginning with prayer meeting on Thursday evening, (28th) at 7 o'clock. Services at the chapel on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, at 10.30 A. M., 1.30 P. M., and 7.30. The friends of Hinesburgh, Bristol, Brookville, Vergennes, and other places, are cordially invited to come and aid in making this one of the old-fashioned times of refreshing.

G. W. STETSON, Sup.

N. Y. State Mission Tent.

A meeting will be held, if the Lord will, in the N. Y. S. Mission Tent, at Sardinia, Erie Co., N. Y., commencing June 4th, and continuing as long as it shall seem to be the will of the Lord.

J. WENDELL.

CORRECTION.—The debt on the N. Y. State Mission Tent is $130, instead of $170, as published in the last week's Crisis. J. W.

DEEDS, NOT WORDS.

"Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?"

Not forever on thy knees
 Would Jehovah have thee found:
There are burdens thou canst ease,
There are griefs Jehovah sees:
 Look around.

Work is prayer if done for God,
 Prayer which God delights to hear:
See beside you upturned sod
One bowed 'neath affliction's rod;
 Dry her tears.

Not long prayers, but earnest zeal—
 This is what is wanted more;
Put thy shoulder to the wheel,
Bread unto the famished deal
 From thy store.

Not high-sounding words of praise
 Does God want, 'neath some grand dome;
But that thou the fallen raise,
Bring the poor from life's highways
 To thy home.

Worship God by doing good—
 Works, not words; kind acts, not creeds:
He who loves God as he should,
Makes his heart's love understood
 By kind deeds.

Deeds are powerful, mere words weak,
 Batt'ring at high heaven's door;
Let thy love by actions speak,
Wipe the tear from sorrow's cheek,
 Clothe the poor.

Be it thine life's cares to smother,
 And to brighten eyes now dim;
Kind deeds done to one another,
God accepts as done, my brother,
 Unto him.

For the World's Crisis.

THE DAY OF THE CRUCIFIXION.

DEAR SIR:—I and my colleague, as Editors of the "Marturion," have read and pondered well your work, "Book of Daniel Opened," and have long since concluded that it is the best and most reliable system of chronology extant. We have, from time to time, presented the evidence of the coming of our Lord and the resurrection in 1868; and we are anxious to still further elaborate the argument in coming numbers; but there is one difficulty in the way of harmonizing the resurrection of our Lord, on the morrow after the Sabbath, according to the type of the wave sheaf, with his crucifixion on Thursday. The fourteenth day of the first month, undoubtedly, was the day pointed out by the type of the slaying of the Paschal Lamb; then, if he rose on the 16th, or "the morrow after the Sabbath," he could not have lain in the grave three days and three nights, as you have clearly shown. Then if the Crucifixion be moved back to Thursday, instead of Friday, we destroy the significancy of the type of first fruits. If you can reconcile this apparent discrepancy, you will confer a special favor on Yours looking for redemption in 1868,

W. H. HACKING, Sen. Ed. of Marturion.

ANSWER TO THE FOREGOING.

Dear Brother:—In answering your questions, you will save me the necessity of swelling this article to a size too lengthy, if you will turn to page 94 of the "Book of Daniel Opened," and there notice that having lost "the appointed weeks of harvest," the Jews commenced the fifty days with the 16th of the first month; but in that law, "which was a figure for the time then present" (Heb. 9: 9), there is no authority for this; and on page 91 of "Daniel Opened," we have noticed that it was impossible; for, according to the law, the wave sheaf could not have been brought before the 22nd of the month. I am aware that it is the opinion of many that the resurrection of Christ was the antitype of the wave sheaf. But I may appeal to your better judgment, and ask, If he was the antitype of the paschal lamb, how could he at one and the same time have been the wave sheaf? and who was the priest to whom he, as the wave sheaf, is brought? "We have such an high priest" now (Heb. 8: 1), but not then; "for if he were on earth, he should not be a priest" (8: 4); or, even if his resurrection had made him a priest, how could he be the wave sheaf, and at the same time the priest to whom it was brought? and how can we, according to the law, have a wave sheaf at all, except at the time when that harvest was reaped, of which the sheaf is the first fruits? Christ "has become the first fruits of them that slept"; but how can those that sleep be the antitype of a harvest that is reaped? Indeed, if this had been the antitype, those that sleep should have been raised before Christ; for, according to the law, the harvest must first be reaped, and "then ye shall bring a sheaf of the first fruits." Lev. 23: 10.

Notice, that the first fruits must necessarily be of the same kind with the harvest; hence, if the resurrection of Christ be the first fruits, the general resurrection must have occurred at that time, which could not have been; for fifty days after we find David yet in the grave. Acts 2: 34. It is true there were some raised, but they, like Lazarus, must have fallen asleep again; for Christ, our High Priest, is yet in "the holy place" (Heb. 9: 12); and until he comes out, "and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob" (Rom. 11: 26), "there shall be no man in the tabernacle of the congregation" (Lev. 16: 17); hence Paul did not expect the resurrection until "his coming." 1 Cor. 15: 23.

If I see the shadow of a man, house or tree, I can by the shadow alone know what is represented; and since Paul employs this figure to illustrate what he understood the law to be—"a shadow of good things to come" (Heb. 10: 1); I conclude that he, at least, thought each portion of the antitype duly represented there; and if so, the only safe rule by which the wave sheaf was brought, must also find a place in the antitype; for if the law was only "A SHADOW," it would be as absurd to have the same literal day in the antitype as the same literal sheaf of wheat. After much mature deliberation, I must come to the conclusion that what is given from page 86 to 96 of the "Book of Daniel Opened," cannot be far from the truth of the matter. In order to see the evidence of this, let us lay aside the colored glasses of prepossessed opinion, and examine that shadow thrown back into the Mosaic dispensation, as we would by the shadow of a tree, house, or man, notice what is represented there.

1. The first time we discover this "shadow of good things to come," I see the Paschal Lamb (Ex. 12: 3, 12), but no harvest reaped; no "sheaf of the first fruits"; nor any priest to whom it could be brought; neither are there any weeks of harvest seen there; and if this be the shadow, we can in the substance only expect to find what is represented there. And true it is, for in the antitype "Christ our passover is sacrificed for us"; but no harvest reaped, no wave sheaf brought, nor any priest to whom it could be brought (Heb. 8: 4). Neither is there any antitype of the weeks of harvest found here, for the seven weeks to Pentecost being the same shadow that we saw under the law, it would be as absurd to suppose that they could be the antitype, as to say that a bundle of wheat was the antitype of the wave sheaf.

2. But let us look again. The next time the shadow appears, I see a harvest reaped.—"Ye . . . shall reap the harvest," and a sheaf brought to the priest. "Ye shall bring a sheaf of the first fruits of your harvest unto the priest" (Lev. 23: 10). I here also see the date of the passover—"the fourteenth of the first month"; and in chronological order, the "sheaf of first fruits" is on the morrow after the "seven days" of unleavened bread" (23: 5–10; but I can see no Paschal Lamb* there; and if not, how can I expect to find one in the antitype?

3. A sheaf was a bundle of straw, with a little grain, and that unfit for use until threshed, mashed, and converted into bread; and so in the antitype, there is but "a remnant according to the election of grace," and they must be "thoroughly purged" (Matt. 3: 12), pass through the mill of "much affliction," and converted into that spiritual nature fit for the kingdom of God.

4. "And ye shall count unto you from the morrow after the Sabbath, from the day ye brought the sheaf of the wave offering; seven Sabbaths shall be complete." Notice, that these weeks of harvest fill the interval reaching all the way from the first fruits of wheat harvest" (Ex. 34: 22); and if "the wheat . . . harvest is the end of the world" (Matt. 13: 29, 39), they must in the antitype fill the interval between the day of Josiah and the end of the world; for he, being the first king that ever kept the law, must have been the first fruits of that people; "and like unto him was there no king before him that turned to the Lord with all his heart, and with all his soul, and with all his might, according to all the law of Moses; neither after him arose there any like him." 2 Kings 23: 25. The antitype of the "seven sabbaths" must be that of a larger sabbatical period; and since the jubilee cycle is the largest, a jubilee of jubilees is the longest period of time they can represent; and from what we have said on the subject in the "Book of Daniel Opened," it will be seen that the sabbatical year of B. C. 576 is the latest one which, according to the law—"from the morrow after the sabbath," they can be reckoned. A jubilee of jubilees, including the fiftieth day, is 2450 years; which being placed against B. C. 576, gives 1875 for the end of the fiftieth day; hence before 1875 "the first fruits of wheat harvest" must be brought.

But notice in the figure this is not a sheaf of straw, like that of the barley harvest; but "two wave loaves of two tenth deals . . . of fine flour, . . . baken with leaven," and "they are the first fruits unto the Lord" (Lev. 23: 17); for the "sheaf of the first fruits of" barley harvest, not being yet in a fit condition, was not brought to the Lord. Since "the first fruits of wheat harvest" consist of two loaves, one may be "the dead in Christ," and the other "we which are alive" (1 Thess. 4: 16, 17); at least, the 144,000 are from among the living, for "these were redeemed from among men, being the first fruits unto God and the Lamb" (Rev. 14: 4); and since they sing a song that "no man can learn," I conclude that they are the only people who will never taste death.

Now, brother, in conclusion, if I am correct in my views of the matter, you discover that Father's children will all soon be at home with that royal family, that love each other; therefore, you will consider it a privilege and pleasure to discover to me any error into which I may have fallen; for though I feel my weakness, and know how liable we all are to err, you see from my writings that I am a dear lover of truth, though it has cost me all that was near and dear in this world.

Since, according to the express language of the law, the sabbath of sabbaths cannot be reckoned from a later date than "from such time as thou beginnest to put the sickle to the corn" (Deut. 16: 9), I confess that I am unable to see how it is possible that we can be mistaken as to the date from which they are to be reckoned; hence, after much mature deliberation, I conclude that if those weeks of harvest are a part of that "law" which was a "shadow of good things to come," the antitype of wheat harvest must be reached before 1875.

WM. C. THURMAN.

* Do not understand me to say the Jews did not, under the law, slay a lamb; I only mean that the first time "the figures of the true" (Heb. 9: 24) are seen under the law, there is no lamb mentioned there (Lev. 23: 5); and it is the law that is "a shadow of good things to come" (Heb. 10: 1), not what the Jews did.

For the World's Crisis.

WHAT A LIE! WHAT A LIE!

Awful! What! talk about growing in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, and at the same time disobey God, neglect positive and known duty! Oh! oh! what presumption! heaven daring! Man, how dare you face the Almighty thus? Are you not afraid of his thunderbolts? the lightning's flash of his hot displeasure? Grow in grace with uplifted arm of rebellion, stiff-neckedly! Friend, you are not even in a justified state; every step of yours is retrograde, down, down, down, instead of up and on.

No one can possibly be growing in grace, advancing a single step heavenward, or be in a justified state while disobeying any one of the divine precepts. "The little foxes destroy the tender vines."

"A little theft, a small deceit, Too often leads to more."

"He that is faithful in that which is least, is faithful also in much; and he that is unjust in the least, is unjust also in much."

"Little things—aye, little things,
Make up the sum of life."

Justification presupposes obedience in all things, a walk and conversation strictly gospel, the peace of God passing all understanding. Justification is grace, mighty, superabounding, all conquering. "Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ; by whom also we have access by faith into this grace wherein we stand, and rejoice in hope of the glory of God. And not only so, but we glory in tribulations also; knowing that tribulation worketh patience; and patience, experience; and experience, hope; and hope maketh not ashamed; because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto me." Rom. 5: 1; 2: 3; 4: 5.

Reader, think you that growing in grace is a gradual sanctification? becoming less and less sinful? sinning a little less to-day, a little less to-morrow? Any gospel here? When and where does God palliate sin, or countenance it, in his book of books, from Genesis to Revelation, an instant? Breaking off sin entirely by righteousness is a new business, henceforth and forever. "Cease to do evil, learn to do well." When?

President A. Mahan in his "True Believer" remarks thus: "Growing in grace does not, as is commonly supposed, imply progressive sanctification; that is, that we continually become less and less sinful, and in a corresponding degree more and more holy.

This I infer for the following reasons: We have according to this construction of the command, "grow in grace," a positive precept in the Bible to give up sin gradually, and consequently prohibiting our giving up sin all at once. To become by degrees less and less sinful, is to give up sin gradually. If this is the meaning of the command, "grow in grace," we have a positive precept, requiring a gradual, and of course prohibiting an immediate renunciation of all sin. Who can believe that the Bible contains such a requirement as this?

On this supposition, the precepts of the Bible are directly contradictory the one to the other. For we have many precepts requiring us to renounce all sin at once and forever. Who can suppose that an inspired apostle has been guilty of the absurdity of requiring us to become less and less simple. We must continually grow in the grace and knowledge of Christ, or lose the degree of grace already possessed. Life is a continued growth in holiness with all of its appropriate accompaniments.

We must be more and more blessed in Christ, or we cannot continue to be blessed in him at all. We must abound in love more and more, or lose what we have already attained. The moment we become stationary, the love of God ceases to be shed abroad in the soul by the Holy Spirit that is given us.

To aim to grow in grace in any sense which implies gradual remuneration of sin, is nothing but a growth in sin itself. Thus it is that the doctrine of imperfection has perverted the corruptions of the church in respect to the most important truths and principles of the gospel, and has left her in the snare of the devil. "He that saith, I know him and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him."

Ministers, pastors of the flock, your duties and responsibilities are high as heaven, deeper than hell. "Feed the flock of God" over which God hath made you overseers. Be instant in season, out of season, reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long suffering and doctrine; for the time has come when men will not endure sound doctrine."

NO HOME.

BRO. GRANT:—I have often been perplexed to understand the words of our blessed Savior, recorded in Matt. 8: 20, saying, "The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests, but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head;" for we read in John 1: 3, "All things were made by him, and without him was not anything made that was made." Again in Col. 1: 16, "For by him were all things created that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers; all things were created by him, and for him." If he was the Creator of all things, as his holy word abundantly testifies, why could he not have created a home for himself, or had some place to lay his sacred head? These questions would often come into my mind, but praise his holy name forever, we find a happy solution for this important subject in the parallel given by our Lord, in Matt. 13: 45–46. "The kingdom of heaven is like unto a merchant-man, seeking goodly pearls; who, when he had found one pearl of great price, went and sold all that he had and bought it." Man is the goodly pearl, Jesus Christ is the merchant-man; he came to seek and to save that which was lost. Man, the pearl, was of great value. Jesus himself compares it to that of the whole world when he said, "For what is a man advantaged, if he gain the whole world and lose himself?" Luke 9: 25. Man was without help, destitute, lost, "sold under sin." Rom. 7: 14. Now Christ the merchant-man undertakes for him, and, for the joy that was set before him, went and sold (or parted) with all that he had; laid aside the glory he had with the Father before the world was; humbled himself to be born of a virgin; "made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men." Phil. 2: 7. "For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be rich. 2 Cor. 8: 9. "He is despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief." Isaiah 53: 3. His condition was one of poverty, destitution, and sorrow, because he had parted with all that he had, and could not take it again till he had purchased the pearl (man,) then could he not truly say, "The foxes have holes and the birds of the air have nests, but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head?"

Now let us see what it cost the Son of God to redeem man. "Forasmuch as ye know that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold, from your vain conversation received by tradition from your fathers; but with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot." 1 Pet. 1: 18, 19. Again the apostle Paul exhorts the elders of the church at Ephesus to "take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood." Acts 20: 28. Again, "Walk in love, as Christ also hath loved us, and hath given himself for us, an offering and a sacrifice to God for a sweet-smelling savor." Eph. 5: 2. Again, "And ye are not your own, for ye are bought with a price." 1 Cor. 6: 19–20. Many other passages of Scripture might be quoted to show that Christ has bought us, and we are not our own. He also represents himself as the good Shepherd, who has given his life for his sheep. Then is it not clear that man is a pearl of great value, when it required a merchant-man of so great wealth to redeem him? Such a one we find in Jesus Christ, who is able and willing to save us from all iniquity, and to present us unto God the Father without "spot or wrinkle or any such thing."

When therefore "the ransomed of the Lord shall return and come to Zion, with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads," then will the grand chorus, the new song, be sung by the multitude that no man could number, saying, "Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals thereof; for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood, out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation; and hast made us unto our God kings and priests; and we shall reign on the earth." Rev. 5: 9, 10.

O that man would praise the Lord for the exceeding love wherewith he hath loved us, to give such an inestimable price for us, even the life and blood of the spotless Son of God, that we might be exalted to become sons and daughters of the Lord God Almighty, and to be heirs with him in his exceeding glory that is soon to be revealed. The Lord help us to be ready when he comes. Your brother in Christ,

JOHN M. STEYLER.

THE CRUSE THAT FAILETH NOT.

Is thy cruse of comfort wasting?
 Rise and share it with another,
And through all the years of famine
 It shall serve thee and thy brother.

Love divine will fill thy storehouse,
 Or thy handful still renew;
Scanty fare for one will often
 Make a royal feast for two;

For the heart grows rich in giving,
 All its wealth is living grain;
Seeds, which mildew in the garner,
 Scattered, fill with gold the plain.

Is thy burden hard and heavy?
 Do thy steps drag wearily?
Help to bear thy brother's burden;
 God will bear both it and thee.

Numb and weary on the mountains,
 Wouldst thou sleep amidst the snow?
Chafe that frozen form beside thee,
 And together both shall glow.

Is the heart a well left empty?
 None but God its void can fill?
Nothing but a ceaseless Fountain
 Can its ceaseless longings still.

Is the heart a living power?
 Self entwined, its life sinks low;
It can only live in loving,
 And by serving love will grow.

OBEDIENCE.

In a lecture on home preparation for school, one essential prerequisite was stated to be prompt, unquestioning, cheerful obedience; that the child should possess a confidence in the parent; although not comprehending the reasonableness of the command, yet believing that he did know them, the reasons for it would be perfectly satisfactory. This principle applies in the fullest extent when transferred to the commands of the Creator to us, his responsible creatures. We can repose the most perfect confidence in our divine Lawgiver, knowing him to possess in perfection the attributes of wisdom, justice, and love. By yielding ready, cheerful, obedience, we honor God and manifest our trust in him. "God is love." Love issues the requirement and 'tis best, yea most productive of good and blessing to ourselves and others, that we obey. Though like the child, our vision discovers not the real basis of the requisition; yet we know 'tis scanned by the All-seeing eye, and commands emanating from such a being must be right. Enoch walked with God three hundred years. How can two walk together except they be agreed? All the concession must be on the part of man. His will must tally with the divine will of his gracious Lord.

What an excellent effect would prompt obedience produce in the prayer-meeting. How many more arrows of conviction directed by the Spirit would lodge in the hearts of the people. Practice this principle, and exchange strength for weakness; and for feeble progress, rapid growth in the service of the Lord. "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul." Ps. 19: 7. "The statutes of the Lord are right, rejoicing the heart. The commandment of the Lord is pure, enlightening the eye." Ps. 19: 8. "To obey is better than sacrifice." "The willing and the obedient shall eat the good of the land." "Fear God and keep his commandments; for this is the whole duty of man." Eccl. 12: 13.

Heavenly Father, work within us "both to will and to do of" thy "good pleasure." Let thy Holy Spirit help our infirmities. Teach us in the school of Christ, that we may recognize thy will, and impart thy grace and strength according to our day and weakness, that we may obey, and that concerning us, thy righteous will may be accomplished; that to the world we may be living, practical exponents of the will of God. Grant it for Jesus' sake. Amen.

A BANK FOR LOSINGS.

On the chief thoroughfare of this city I often pass a stately Savings Bank built of freestone, and I see groups of working people going in to deposit their hard earned money. Some are mechanics; some are Irish domestics; some are poor widows laying by a few dollars for their fatherless children.

But on the same street the Tempter has opened more than one Bank for Losings. In some parts of the city there is one on nearly every corner. In almost every rural hamlet, too, is there a similar institution. New York city contains six thousand of them.

In each of these Banks for Losings is a counter on which old men and young, and even some wretched women lay down their deposits in either paper or coin. The only interest that is paid on the deposits is in redness of eyes, and foulness of breath, and remorse of conscience. Every one who makes a deposit, gains a loss. One man goes into the Bank with a full pocket and comes out empty. Another goes in with a good character, and comes out with the word drunk written on his bloated countenance. I have even seen a mechanic enter in a bran new coat, and come away again looking as if the mice had been nibbling at his elbows.

I have known a young clerk to leave his "situation" behind him in one of the Devil's Banks of Losings. Several prosperous tradesmen have lost all their business there. Church-members have been known to reel out from these seductive haunts,—trying to walk straight, but backsliding at every step. What is worst of all, thousands of people go in there and lose their souls!

"BANKS FOR LOSINGS. Open at all hours. Nothing taken in but good money. Nothing paid out but disgrace and disease, and degradation and death. An extra-dividend of delirium tremens will be paid to old depositors. A free pass to Perdition given to those who pay well at the counter; also tickets to Greenwood and other cemeteries entitling the holder to a Drunkard's Grave! All the children of depositors sent without charge to the orphan asylum or the alms-house."

Young men! beware of the Banks for Losings. Some bait their depositors with champagne; some with ale or bourbon; some with a pack of cards, and others with a billiard-table. If you wish to keep character—keep out!

Young ladies! never touch the hand that touches the wine-glass. Never wear the name of a man who is enrolled on the deposit-list of the Devil's bank. Never lean on the arm that leans on the bar-room counter. It will be a rotten support.

The best savings-bank for a young man's money is a total abstinence pledge. The best savings-bank for his time is honest industry and a good book. The best savings-bank for his affections is a true woman's heart. The best savings bank for his soul is a faith in the Lord Jesus Christ.

But if you do not want your greenbacks turned into black eyes and red noses; if you don't want your pocket emptied, and your character worm-eaten, and your soul drugged with the poisons of the pit—then keep outside of the "National Brandy Bank for Losings.—Evangelist.

MRS. BUFFON'S NERVES.

"But my poor nerves, George!"

"Ah, yes, your nerves! Confound your nerves, Mrs. Buffon; you are always throwing your nerves in my face. I say, the wife of a poor man has no business with nerves. There!"

And Mr. Buffon spitefully bit off the end of his cigar, pulled his hat on his head, and strode away to his place of business—pausing at the first corner to strike a match, light his "weed," and then go puffing on, muttering as he went:

"That woman will be the death of me yet, with her nerves. I have made concession after concession to her, on account of those nerves. I sold poor Towzer, because his barking disturbed her; I broke myself of my habit of whistling around the house, because that disturbed her—as if it were a crime for a man to whistle in his own house!—and now she wants me to give up my evening cigar, because that affects her nerves. I won't do it; I conceded enough on that head when I agreed to light my morning cigar at the corner, so as not to leave the odor of tobacco smoke in the house behind me for the day."

But before Mr. Buffon had reached the wholesale store down town where he was employed as a salesman, his temper was gone—and then he was ashamed of himself, as he always was; for George Buffon was a good-hearted fellow, despite his fiery temper.

"Poor girl!" he muttered; "poor Emily! I am too hard on her. She's the mother of my children, and a good wife, if man ever had one. It's not her fault if she has bad nerves; and no woman ever seconded a hard-working husband more lovingly than she, unaccustomed to toiling as she was when I married her."

And the more he thought about that business of the evening cigar, the more he saw that it was his duty to heed the little wife's wish, timidly as she had expressed it. And still thinking, it occurred to him that it might not be a bad idea if he were to give up smoking altogether. He whipped a lead-pencil out of his pocket, and made a calculation:

"Four cigars a day—that's about my average—at ten cents a piece; that's forty cents a day. Three hundred and sixty-five days a year—multiplied by forty—whew!—why, it's a hundred and forty-six dollars a year! Who would have thought it! Hum—hum—must think it over seriously."

And thinking it over seriously, he resolved that, yes, he would give up smoking altogether.

And Mrs. Buffon? No sooner had her husband left the house than she reproached herself for her selfishness.

"Poor George!" said she; "I ought not to ask it of him. He has but few enjoyments, and I suppose it is my duty to endure his cigar. Oh, what a thing it is for a woman to have nerves!"

That night, as the family sat around the fire after supper, Mr. Buffon took to playing with the children, and did not take out his cigar-case.

"Why don't you smoke, dear?" asked Mrs. Buffon.

"Oh, my wife's nerves won't allow it," said Buffon with a good-natured laugh.

"I was to blame, George," said the wife. "Smoke, if you want to, dear. I have made up my mind that, after all, a cigar is not such a dreadful thing. I ought to be thankful for my good husband, who always spends his evenings at home with his family, as you do."

But Mr. Buffon did not smoke; and the evening passed away very pleasantly. No further allusion was made to the subject.

The next morning, Mr. Buffon took out his cigar-case as usual, put a cigar between his lips, and bidding his wife a pleasant good-by, walked away; and when he got to the corner where he usually lit his cigar, he did not light it, but took it carefully from between his lips and put it back in his cigar-case.

The next evening came, and the next, and still no cigar was lighted. Mrs. Buffon was thankful—grateful; and as month after month passed by, and she said that the evening cigar was given up for good, she declared there never was so good a husband in the world, and that she would do something to give him an agreeable surprise.

When a woman makes a resolve of this sort, you may be sure something will certainly come of it.

One night, a year later, as the family sat around the fireside, Mrs. Buffon said:

"George, it is just a year to-night since you gave up your evening cigar."

"Just what I was about to observe, little wife," said Buffon.

"You were so good about that, dear, that I thought it was my duty to make an extra effort to please you. So come into the bed-room, dear, and see what I have got to show you."

They went in, and Mrs. Buffon uncovered an object which had stood hidden in the corner, revealing—a curious little iron and steel concern, in the shape of a big letter G.

"A sewing-machine!" exclaimed Buffon.

"Yes, dear—just what I have been wanting for so long a time, you know. It will save a great deal of expense; for now I can make all the children's clothes myself, just as well as not—to say nothing of your own shirts, George."

"But where did you get the money, Emily?"

"Saved it from the grocer, the butcher, and the baker, George. Ah, you don't know how a few cents a day will count up."

"Don't I!" whispered Buffon.

"I got the machine yesterday, all complete, for fifty-five dollars, and I have six dollars left!"

"But your nerves, Emily? A sewing machine will drive you distracted with its racket."

"It makes no noise at all dear," said Mrs. Buffon, sitting down at the machine and setting it to work. "I can run it close by baby's cradle, when the little fellow is asleep, and it won't wake him. It won't make noise enough to interfere with you in the evening when you are reading aloud to me."

Mr. Buffon kissed the little wife silently, and they returned to the sitting-room.

"Well, dear," said he, after they were seated, "you have given me a pleasant little surprise, and now I think I will give you one."

Mrs. Buffon's face flushed.

"What would you call that, Emily?" said he, drawing a bulky document from his pocket.

She opened it eagerly.

"George, this is an insurance policy."

"An insurance in the New York Life Insurance Company, my dear, for seven thousand five hundred dollars. If I die to-morrow, you will get the money."

"And it costs you a hundred and fifty dollars a year, George?"

"About that."

"Why, where did you get so much money?"

"It is cigar money, dear!"

Tears stood in the wife's eyes. And when the husband told her that, besides giving up his evening cigar, he had given up smoking altogether, she could not help throwing her arms about his neck and kissing him so fervently that the children looked on in astonishment.

"But you went away every morning with your cigar in your mouth," said the wife, a minute later.

"And put it back in the case as soon as I got out of sight," said he. "See, Emily! Here is the old cigar-case, with three cigars in it. They are badly chewed about the ends, you see; but these three cigars have lasted me a year."

"Oh, you rogue!"

"And now I guess I will light all three of them at once."

So saying he threw them into the fire.

Mrs. Buffon declares that that night was the happiest of all her wedded life.—N. Y. News Letter.

THY LIKENESS.

Said David, "As for me, I will behold thy face in righteousness; I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness." Ps. 17: 15. Dear friends and readers of the Crisis, being now confined to the house, I have thought how good it was for me that the Lord led me to seek his face in the lustiness of my youth. True, many times my foot slipped, but an unseen hand seized me, and held me up.

"What a friend we have in Jesus."

It would not be possible for me to draw so much as an outline of the history of my life. I realize the providential care of the Lord so great in dangers unseen, that I could not describe it. All I know is this: that thus far I have been kept by the mighty power of God, whilst many that I have known, who appeared so promising, have fallen. Yes, O yes, they have fallen, and are this day without hope and without God. My soul cries out "How good the Lord has been to me. By his goodness, mercy, and loving-kindness, I am what I am. Ever since I sought his face, it has been the height of my ambition to be make a humble, obedient subject of the heavenly King. If I can only attain that world, and the resurrection from the dead, the lowest capacity will be great enough for unworthy me. But to be there, I must have the likeness of Jesus. It must be stamped not only on my face, but on my character. My life must be hid in him who is the Life-giver.

AUDIENCE WITH VICTORIA.

About six levees are held a year. It takes a hundred men three weeks to prepare the rooms. Everything is measured by the inexorable law of etiquette. The dress is prescribed; the material, the length of the trains, the mode of dressing the hair, and the style of garments.

The Throne Room is a right royal room. There is not a seat in it, except the throne and the gilded chair at the foot. On a platform reached by three steps, on a crimson carpet, spattered with gold, stands a gilt Gothic chair, surmounted by a crown. This is the throne. It is covered with a canopy of crimson velvet, trimmed with heavy gold lace. On the top of the canopy is a golden cushion, on which rests a large gold crown. The Throne Room is very long, nearly two hundred feet. Running the whole length is a heavy iron fence, full five feet high, capped with crimson velvet.

The great throng below, at a given signal, come up the stairway. They enter the great Audience Room that opens into the Throne Room. The Audience Room is very gorgeous with satin hangings, radiant with vermillion and gold. When the signal is given below, the rush commences. Her Majesty is painfully prompt. At the exact moment she comes out of her royal closet and takes her stand on the lower step of the throne. On the signal being given, her Majesty's Ministers, with the Foreign Ambassadors, enter from the private door, file singly before the Queen, bow, and take their station in the centre of the room, where they remain. The crowd is admitted one by one. The party passes up the narrow pathway to the place where the Queen stands, makes a low bow, and then backs down the whole length of the room. The lady cannot turn her back on the Queen, nor take up her train. It is etiquette for the ministers and ambassadors, who occupy the centre of the room, to lift the train and pass it from one to another while the lady backs down to the door.

The presentation lasts about one minute. It costs months of labor and anxiety, and great expense. The finery will be worn on no other occasion. But the party has been "presented at court," and will tell it to her children's children. When the Queen holds court, it lasts just one hour. During the whole time she stands like a statue—as cold, as insensible. She neither bows nor speaks. The mass file before her as if she were hewn out of stone.

"This is for your health."—Paul.

A POOR WAY TO REFORM.

I often see people who have adopted the health reform, as they seem to think, by simply leaving off the use of such things as tea, coffee, meat, etc,, without putting any thing in their place. This makes a very poor and dry living. The children do not like it. Thus they not only injure themselves, but prejudice others against the reform. They should get fruit, berries, vegetables, etc., to take the place of meat and other things which they have been using. With these things they can get up a diet palatable enough for any one.

But some say they are poor and cannot afford it. Yet they did afford to use tea, tobacco, pork, etc. These are the most costly articles of diet they could use. Let us reckon what these things cost them each year: $12.00 per year for those who use tobacco is a moderate estimate; $15.00 for tea is small; $50.00 for meat in an ordinary family is not large; add to this the spices, etc., and we have about $80.00 per year. Now come to leave off all this, cannot that family afford to spend at least half that amount for fruit, vegetables and the like? Let them lay out this amount in dried fruit, berries, etc., and they will be surprised to see what a change it will make in their diet. Besides, where one has only bread and pototoes, and a few such articles to live upon, he must necessarily eat more of them; so that it is no great economy after all to live so. A little effort and a little money spent in the time of fruit and berries will secure enough for the year.

Friends, the health reform does not consist simply in leaving off.—Health Reformer.

DEATH INDOORS.

Multitudes of persons have a great horror of going out of doors for fear of taking cold; if it is a little damp, or a little windy, or a little cold, they wait, and wait, and wait; meanwhile weeks, yea, and even months, pass away, and they never, during that whole time, breathe a single breath of pure air. The result is, they become so enfeebled that their constitutions have no power of resistance; the least thing in the world gives them a cold, even going from one room to another, and before they know it they have a cold all the time, and this is nothing more nor less than consumption; whereas, if an opposite practice had been followed of going out for an hour or two every day, regardless of the weather, so it is not actually falling rain, a very different result would have taken place. The truth is, the more a person is out of doors, the less easily does he take cold. It is a widely known fact that persons who camp out every night, or sleep under a tree for weeks together, seldom take cold at all.

The truth is, many of our ailments, and those of a most fatal form, are taken in the house, and not out of doors; taken by removing parts of clothing too soon after coming into the house, or lying down on a bed or sofa when in a tired or exhausted condition from having engaged too vigorously in domestic employments. Many a pie has cost an industrious man a hundred dollars. A human life has many a time been paid for an apple dumpling. When our wives get to work, they become so interested in it that they find themselves in an utterly exhausted condition—their ambition to complete a thing, to do some work well, sustains them till it is completed. The mental and physical condition is one of exhaustion, when a breath of air will give a cold to settle in the joints, to wake up next day with inflammatory rheumatism, or with a feeling of stiffness or soreness, as if they had been pounded in a bag; or a sore throat to worry and trouble them for months; or lung fever to put them in the grave in less than a week.

Our wives should work by the day, if they must work at all, and not by the job; it is more economical in the end to see how little work they can do in an hour, instead of how much. It is slow, steady, continuous labor which brings health, and strength, and a good digestion. Fitful labor is ruinous to all.—Hall's Journal of Health.

EATING WHEN EXHAUSTED.

When the strength of nerve power is already worn out, or used up, the digestion of food only makes a fresh demand upon it, and if it be unable to meet the demand, the food is only a burden upon it, producing mischief. Our bodies have been compared to steam engines, the food being the fuel and the steam produced the nerve power. The analogy holds good to a certain extent. If, when the steam is low, because the fire is low, you pile in too fast a quantity of coal, you put out your fire, and if you have depended upon steam power to fan your fires, that is also extinguished.

Beyond this the comparison fails. You may clean out your furnaces and begin again, but in the body the consequences of this overloading are dangerous, and sometimes fatal. No cause of cholera is more common than eating freely when exhausted.

The rule should be to rest for a time, and take some simple refreshment, a cup or part of a cup of tea, a little broth, or even a piece of bread, anything simple and in small amount, just to stimulate the stomach slightly, and begin to restore its power. After rest, a moderate quantity will be refreshing.

Never eat a full meal when you are exhausted. Take first a small quantity of anything simple which may be handy, and rest. Then, after a time, proper food will be a blessing, not a burden. The fires will burn, the steam will be up, and you can go on your way safely.

It is not amiss in this connection to say that children would avoid many a feverish night, and many an attack of disease, if mothers would follow this rule.

WATER.

"To the days of the aged it addeth length;
To the might of the strong it addeth strength;
It freshens the heart, it brightens the sight;
'Tis like quaffing a goblet of morning light."

A CURE FOR BALDNESS.

A subscriber from the silver mines of Montana writes us a long and pleasant letter, from which we make the following extract. The hint is a good one, and we have known a similar case in our own observation. No doubt the exposure of the skin to air and sunshine, under proper circumstances, stimulates it to a healthy action, and with it those glands upon which the growth of the hair depends. But to the extract:

"A friend of mine who had the misfortune to be baldheaded, knowing that there is a wonderful invigorating power in the sun's rays, last spring threw away his hat, and worked in the gulch all spring, summer, and fall bareheaded, and also for the first few days at mid-day. For a few days the rays of the hot sun on his head were almost unendurable; after that time he experienced no uneasiness whatever. The result was that in the fall he had a good head of hair. And in this experiment he was not alone—several of his acquaintances who were baldheaded having followed the same plan, they were all fortunate enough to experience the same result—Herald of Health.

WINTER SHOES.—Like the gnarled oak that has withstood the storms and thunderbolts of centuries, man himself begins to die at the extremities. Keep the feet dry and warm, and we may snap our fingers in joyous triumph at disease and the doctors. Put on two pair of thick woolen stockings, but keep this to yourself; go to some honest son of St. Crispin, and have your measure taken for a stout pair of winter boots or shoes; shoes are better for ordinary, every-day use, as they allow the ready escape of the odors, while they strengthen the ankles, accustoming them to depend on themselves. A very slight accident is sufficient to cause a sprained ankle to a habitual boot-wearer. Besides, a shoe compresses less, and hence admits of a more vigorous circulation of blood. But wear boots when you ride or travel. Give directions also to have no cork or India rubber about the shoes, but to place between the layers of the soles, from out to out, a piece of stout hemp or tow-linen, which has been dipped in melted pitch. This is absolutely impervious to water—does not absorb a particle, while we know that cork does, and after a while becomes "soggy" and damp for a week. When you put them on for the first time, they will feel "as easy as an old shoe," and you may stand on damp places for hours with impunity.—Hall's Journal of Health.

HOW TO PREVENT THIRST.—"Be temperate in all things," eat no meat, salt, sugar, spices, condiments, or anything else of a stimulating character, drink no tea, coffee, or alcoholic liquors, use no tobacco, and do not over-eat, but eat freely of ripe fruits as a part of each meal, and you will not only not experience the sensation of thirst, but you will become stronger, healthier, and more active in body and mind. This change will not be effected in a day, but will require some length of time.—Herald of Health.

THE WAR SONG OF THE CHURCH.

Sounds the trumpet from afar!
Soldiers of the holy war,
Rise! for you your Captain waits;
Rise, the foe is at the gates.

Arm! the conflict has begun;
Fight! the battle must be won;
Lift the banner to the sky,
Wave its blazing folds on high.

Banner of the blessed tree,
Round its glory gather ye!
Warriors of the crown and cross,
What is earthly gain or loss?

Life with death, and death with life,
Closes now in deadly strife;
Help us with thy shield and sword,
King and Captain, mighty Lord!

King of glory, thee alone;
King of kings, thy hand we own!
With thy banner overhead,
Not ten thousand foes we dread.

Spare not toil, not blood, nor pain,
Not a stroke descends in vain;
Wounded, still no foot we yield
On this ancient battle field.

More than conquerors even now,
With the war-sweat on our brow,
Onward o'er the well marked road,
March we as the host of God!

Royal is the sword we wield,
Royal is our battle-field,
Royal is our victory,
Royal shall our triumph be.

LIFE, NOT DEATH;
OR,
Is Popular Theology and Universalism True?

BY JAMES E. WELLS, ROCHESTER, N. Y.

"The wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life."—Rom. 6: 23.

In writing these few lines, we wish to dedicate them to every person that has a consciousness of their situation, in regard to their relation to God and man. First, to those that have received their adoption as sons of God; second, to those that are under the bondage of sin.

This is probably one of the most important subjects in the Bible. What are we to understand is signified by life and death? Where can we go to find the meaning of these terms? Can we see it in every-day life? There we only can see what pertains to this life and the terminus of it; but beyond this world of sickness, suffering and death, is there another, and if so, what do we know about it?

The first thing we call your attention to is the condition of the world that we live in, and what brought us to it. About six thousand years ago, we read that the world was void and without form; and after the Spirit of God went forth upon the deep, he said, "Let there be light, and there was light." Then he separated the waters, and he called the dry land earth, and the waters he called seas. And God saw every thing he had done was good. After this he caused the earth to bring forth grass and fruit and herbs, after its kind. And he called them all good. Then he made every living creature in the seas and on the land, and called them all good. After this he said, Let us make man in our image and likeness. So he made man in his own image and likeness. He then made a garden eastward in Eden. In it he caused to grow every tree that was pleasant to the eye and good for food. It must have been a beautiful place, surrounded on either side with every thing that heart could wish, or mind conceive. How the mind's eye reverts to that time, and there beholds the supreme grandeur in which Adam was placed. Just let the mind conceive the most beautiful spot that art could model, and then decorate it with the sweetest flowers, the most precious stones; and ornament it with the most costly trees, and with every thing that is pleasant for the eye to behold; and then, after this grand attempt, you have made a great failure, in comparison with the beauties of that place.

But our object in writing this article was not to extol the garden of Eden, but we wish to impress the reader as to the condition of paradise before sin was brought into the world. Then man was pure and holy. But now what a contrast. Then every thing was good; but now the curse of sin is on the world. In the midst of this beautiful garden, God caused a tree to grow which he called "the tree of life," and one that he called "the tree of the knowledge of good and evil." God told Adam that of every tree in the garden he might eat; "but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil" he must not eat of it; if he did, he would "surely die." The sequel proves that Adam did eat of the tree, and God drove him from the garden, so that he could not eat "of the tree of life"; for if he had eaten of that tree, he would have lived eternally in his sins. Every human being should thank and praise God that he did drive Adam out of the garden before he ate of the tree of life. What a terrible thought it is to think that we might have lived forever in our sins but for the goodness of God. By Adam's disobedience came death. By that one act of his, see what a chain of grief and suffering and death has fallen upon the human race.

There are three kinds of death brought to light in the Scriptures; viz., physical or natural death, spiritual or moral death, and eternal death. All are subject to the first, for every one dies a natural death. And all are subject to "the second death," for by Adam's transgression and sin they are indeed dead in trespasses and sin. Now we see by the foregoing that death, in these two forms, is the effect of disobedience; and the disobedience of one man. How thankful we ought to be that God sent his only begotten Son into the world to die for us; that he came to restore the broken law. Now we are in the same condition that Adam was, with the exception of the curse of the fall. Sin is the cause of all the sickness, sorrow, weeping, wailing, misery, and death.

But is there a world where there is no sickness or death? John says that he saw "a new heaven and a new earth," for the former things had passed away, "and there was no more sea"; "and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain." Now this seems just like the condition that Adam was in before he had sinned.

We wish to call the attention of the reader to a few thoughts in regard to the condition of man after death. What is life? Webster says that life is animated being. He also says that death is the extinction of life,—the extinction of animated being. Let us understand this fully. Death is the absence of life, and life is animated being, an absence of death. Where there is life, there is no death; and where there is death, there is no life. "And these shall go away into everlasting punishment; but the righteous into life eternal."—Matt. 25: 46. We wish to call your attention to this verse, because it is one of the strongest passages, some think, that can be found to prove the duration of the saint and sinner. But what does this passage of Scripture teach? It teaches us that, after we have done with this life, to one class another life is offered, and to only one class. I know that a great many claim that as life is offered to all in Christ (for he says that these shall go into life eternal), we are therefore to understand that the death of the wicked is parallel with the life of the righteous. We are willing to admit that the punishment is just as long as the life of the righteous; but we do not, and can not believe that the wicked are to live as long as the righteous. Where is there one word in the whole Bible that even gives us an intimation that they are promised life? but on the contrary, the Bible says that "the wages of sin is death." The death spoken of here does not apply to any other than everlasting, or eternal death. Now if the passage in Matt. 25: 46—"And these shall go away into everlasting punishment; but the righteous into life eternal," are parallel sentences [everlasting death and eternal life], then the verse in Rom. 6: 23 are also parallel sentences. But some will try and explain this verse to mean that sin is the cause of all the sorrow and suffering, and finally the death of all. But we fail to see the argument. If eternal life is the gift of God, and we do not receive it in this life, then death is the sentence of God, and all who deserve it will receive their sentence at the same tribunal where the righteous get their reward. In Matthew 25: 46, the punishment only of the wicked is brought to light. By reading that verse alone, we can not find out what their punishment is; neither does it give us any information as to the condition of the righteous; the only thing promised in that verse is life eternal, but nothing about what that life consists of, neither about what the people do, but simply they are informed that they are to have an endless life; and the wicked are to have everlasting punishment. Nothing is said about the mode. Not a word about their being tormented during an endless life. But does the Scripture tell us what is the condition of the righteous and the punishment of the wicked? It does, and most emphatically. "Then when lust hath conceived it bringeth forth sin; and sin when it is finished bringeth forth death."—James 1: 15. Is there any need of anything stronger than this? What can be more conclusive? Death is the final penalty of all who reject the gospel of our Savior.

Eternal death puts all of its subjects beyond any possible recovery. They can never come forth again, never live again in any form whatsoever. "He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches; he that overcometh shall not be hurt of the second death."—Rev. 2: 11. "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection; on such the second death hath no power."—Rev. 20: 6. The 14th verse reads, "And death and hell were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death." Is John mistaken in regard to this matter? is he right in saying that the punishment of the wicked is death? or, are those mistaken who tell us that the wicked have eternal life, but their's is a life of pain and torment? When Adam disobeyed God, did he torment him all of the rest of his life? The Bible fails to show it. The penalty of that disobedience was death, and it was executed. Adam did die, for the Bible tells us so; and God is willing to try us once more, and if we will only obey him here, we shall eat of "the tree of life" and live forever; otherwise we shall die that eternal death;—not the death we have heard so many pray the Lord to deliver them from; viz., "the death that never dies." How can the mind conceive of a death that never dies? We might just as well ask God for that life that never lives, as to ask him to deliver us from that "death that never dies." What a queer kind of a life it would be that never, never lives.

The Bible should always be considered as a common-sense book; and being a common-sense book, its language is to men of common sense. When God speaks of life, he means life, just as much as you or any one else; and when he speaks of death, he does not mean life. Now do try and keep this in mind. Let the Bible explain itself; throw all of your prejudice aside, and let us take hold of this work with earnestness and love. Let us not deceive ourselves with this delusive phantom, that it matters not what becomes of the wicked, when, where, and how punished. Principles like these should be opposed by the earnest christian everywhere, and at all times. The truth of the Bible must be vindicated. Our blessed Savior died. Holy men in all ages have been martyred for standing up for the truth. It is expected that men will have their names cast out as evil, when they cut loose from popular doctrines that have been transmitted to them by tradition. It is truly a lamentable fact that there are thousands of persons who belong to evangelical churches, who know more about the creed of their church than they do about the word of God; and instead of reading the Bible, as a rule of life, they look upon it as full of closed and sealed mysteries.

Dear reader, what will you do at the judgment seat of Christ? What will you say there, when arraigned before that awful Judge? O do read his blessed word; ponder over it; meditate upon it; think often of its promises, and if you think it is dry reading, and designed only for ministers to read, go to God in prayer and ask him to give you a new and a clean heart, so that you may love to read his precious word; love to read it and understand it. Read its invitations. See who it calls. Read its promises, and see who are to receive the promises. See what they are promised. See if some are not promised an estate for an endless life. Read it thoughtfully, understandingly, and prayerfully; and see if the penalty of sin is eternal death, or eternal life in torment.

Where, in all the history of the past, can you point out to me one instance where God has ever tormented a human being for one week? When they were helpless and destitute of godly fear, did that just and merciful being resort to any such means as this to show his divine power, or to lead them to acknowledge him as God? Is this the plan of salvation? Must we keep before the sinner's mind eternal torment, as one of God's means for converting a lost soul? Is this the way a kind father would do to gain the love of his children? I trow not. The scheme of salvation is love. It is love from the beginning to the ending. For God so loved the world, that he sent his only begotten Son to die, that they through him might claim an inheritance in that bright world which he had prepared from the foundation of the world. Was it not love that caused him to leave heaven, his holy habitation, leave the glory that he had with the Father? Was it not love, when he was persecuted, that caused him to say, Pray for them that despitefully use and persecute you, and say all manner of evil against you falsely for my sake? Was it not love, when dying on the accursed tree, that made him cry, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do"? Yes, this was love,—

"Love divine all love excelling."

And the same love that he exhibited when on earth is shown to you, dear sinner, and it will be love that will put an end to sin and suffering.

(To be concluded.)

THE LATTER-DAY IDOL WORSHIP.

There are some premonitory symptoms which may lead us to form a conjecture what that worship may be. Do we not hear much in the present day about "hero-worship," about the might of intellect and self-reliance, and unscrupulous energy and originality of character, and of a mind which soars above the petty weaknesses of humanity, which disdains creeds and revelations, and looks upon all religions as but forms of superstition unworthy of credence in this enlightened age? Is not the prevailing cry, We have done with those things which once amused our childhood, as the beads and trinkets amused the savage? We cast away our systems, our dogmas, our popes; no more terror in excommunications or interdicts, no more belief in infallibility. Martyrs' shrines are desecrated, martyrs' relics derided. The age of childhood is past. What we look for now is a man who will right the balance, and inaugurate a new era of worldly splendor and prosperity, a man such as Carlyle and the writers of his school have already portrayed and almost deified, one who, with the craft of an Augustus, the persuasive powers of a Mirabeau, the unscrupulous selfishness of a Robespierre, will combine that might of intellect, that reckless disregard of principle, that energy in action, and grandeur of conception, which pre-eminently distinguished the founder of the Napoleon dynasty.

Whether the future Antichrist shall be a "branch from his root," and arise from that dynasty or not, it is impossible to read the history of Napoleon,—to mark the leading features of his character, his unbounded ambition, the vast magnitude of his designs, his extraordinary influence,—without feeling a conviction, more deep and solemn as the time draws nigh and coming events cast their shadows before, that here, if ever we beheld a striking type and prefigurement of one who shall hereafter aim also at universal domination, and cast down thrones, and exalt himself even to the seat of the Most High, if ever any human being was influenced and impelled by the direct agency of Satan, it was he who made use of his power and vast resources only for the gratification of his insatiable ambition and the destruction of millions of his fellow-men. And as he was, so will there appear one whom the nations already long for and desire, whom they are prepared to deify and obey. He will come, trusting in his own strength and wisdom, in his power to enthrall the nations, trusting also in the God of armies, in vast material resources, and a might which none can gainsay or resist. He will come with words of flattery and guile, speaking peace where there is no peace, and holding out visions of fancied security and universal happiness. And him, that man who comes in his own name, the nations will receive, for thus is it written; and who shall gainsay God's own words?—(From the Quarterly Journal, by the Rev. H. Bonar, D. D.)

O, JESUS LOVES.

O, Jesus loves! dear Jesus loves
A worthless worm like me!
This thought my grateful bosom moves,
I fall on bended knee;—
In joyful and adoring praise
I pour out all my soul,
To Him whose love hath crowned my days,
Hath made my body whole.

And oh, with peace he fills my soul,
That like the river flows;
Its placid tide o'er my being rolls,
With praise my bosom glows.
O, Jesus loves! dear Jesus loves
A worthless worm like me!
My Savior all my sin forgiven,
He sets the captive free.

ARE THE DEAD TO BE RAISED LITERALLY?

That the dead saints are to literally live again is a truth clearly set forth in the Scriptures, despite modern efforts to spiritualize the doctrine of the resurrection. Isaiah could affirm with confidence, "Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise; awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust: for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead." (ch. 26: 19.) Here is a resurrection promised which takes hold of "dead men," even the "dead body," and not of an undying entity that is to be resurrected from the body at its death, as one class of theologians now teach. This resurrection takes hold of the very matter that has been deposited in the earth; for "the earth shall cast out the dead." In this resurrection the dead saints are to "awake" and "arise" and "live." As the dews of spring put new life into the dead herbage, so the dew of Jehovah's power, after the winter of death has ended, and the resurrection spring-time has come, shall come in contact with the lifeless forms of God's children, and infuse new life into them, and the "dead body" of every saint will both "arise" and "live."

In sweet contemplation of this grand event, "our conversation is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ; who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body." (Phil. 3: 20, 21.) Thus we discover that when "the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first," not only will the dead saints be made alive, but by virtue of a special change, the once "vile body" will be fashioned like unto Christ's glorious body, of whom it is affirmed, "Christ, being raised from the dead dieth no more; death hath no more dominion over him." (Rom. 6: 9.) So when the saints are raised and "changed," death will have no more dominion over them; and well might Jesus affirm, "They that shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world, and the resurrection from the dead, ... neither can they die any more, for they are equal to the angels, and are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection." (Luke 20: 36.)

Those who share in this resurrection once could die, as the saying, "Neither can they die any more," clearly proves; but this could not be said of a deathless entity, that had escaped from the body at death. In view of a literal resurrection Paul could say, "If the spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken [make alive] your mortal bodies by his spirit that dwelleth in you" (Rom. 8: 11;) and immediately after this statement he adds: "Ourselves also, which have the first-fruits of the Spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit: the redemption of our body." (v. 23.) Here reference is made to "mortal bodies;" and after asserting that Jesus was raised up "from the dead" by the spirit, we are told that the same Spirit shall also make alive our mortal bodies." As "that which thou sowest is not quickened except it die," the quickening here referred to relates to something that had died, as well as to "mortal bodies;" that is, reference is made to "mortal bodies" that had died; as that which is not dead cannot be quickened, or made alive; and that which is already alive cannot be made alive; so this making alive of dead "mortal bodies" cannot be spiritualized away.

In connection with this thought comes "the redemption of our body;" and certainly death does not redeem the body;" but drags it into a firmer bondage, and will hold it till a literal resurrection shall liberate it; and without a literal resurrection "the redemption of the body" cannot be realized, except in the act of translation at the coming of Christ.

The advocates of a spiritual resurrection inform us that the material man passes through a total change once in seven years, and assert that the man who is seventy years old has had ten different bodies, and then ask, Which one of the ten is to be resurrected? If this seven-year change theory is unqualifiedly correct, the human body is never over seven years of age; consequently the man who is seventy years old has had ten different bodies, and then ask, Which one of the ten is to be resurrected? If this seven-year change theory is unqualifiedly correct, the human body is never over seven years of age; consequently the man who is seventy years old should have been a gray-headed man ten times, as the tenth body is not a day older than the first one in the series. Then why is not the first body as infirm as the tenth? Why should not the first body as really wear gray hairs as the tenth? Why is not the human face covered with wrinkles at the age of seven, seeing the body is never any older? Certainly, if this theory is correct, the first body, being as old as the tenth, should be mature, gray-headed, wrinkle-faced, and infirm; for it certainly cannot be claimed that the soul produces these results; causing one body, at the age of seven years, to bloom with health and vigor, and another body of the same age to be infirm and gray!! If this theory is a reliable argument against a literal resurrection, why is it that the person who is once afflicted with the small-pox, or measles, can never take the same disease again? Why may not a man have the small-pox every seven years, if he has a body entirely new so often? It cannot be said that the small-pox is a malady that afflicts an immortal soul within the material man, as well as the man of dust, and that the continued residence of this same soul in several successive bodies is the reason why only one of these seven-year bodies can be afflicted with this disease. Hence, if this theory is really a valid argument against a literal resurrection, no good reason can be given why the small-pox may not be ten times experienced in the history of man who lives to be seventy years old. And yet all know this is not a possible thing.

This theory, carried out, would endlessly perpetuate human life, except when disease or accident might cut it short; for if the first seven-year body could wind up its history in health and vigor, unless prevented by some disease or accident, so might the tenth, the twentieth, the fiftieth, the hundreth, and so on endlessly. But facts deny the possibility of this, even if all accidents and diseases could be warded off.

If this is a valid argument against a literal resurrection, it can be used with equal force in favor of several absurdities. For instance, a man and woman are married, and thus the woman "is bound by the law to her husband so long as he liveth" (Rom. 7: 2; but at the end of seven years the wife can claim that she is not the woman that entered into the marriage contract with that man, there not being a particle of matter in her system which helped make her body seven years before, when the marriage took place. Thus, if this theory is good for anything against a literal resurrection, it liberates people from their marriage covenants once in seven years, and charges every one with adultery who will not then marry anew, or dissolve their family relation. Should the objector say, they have the same souls that they had at their marriage, I ask, Are deathless souls married to each other "so long as they live?" If so, it would not only carry the marriage covenant into the "spirit world," but it would also involve the ridiculous idea that the man who had married several wives here would have several spirit-wives there; and the man who had married a widow here would have to contest his claim there with her former husband! Besides, what if the spirit-wife should be saved, and the spirit-husband should be damned? Would the marriage contract stand?

Who believes that people are released from the marriage covenant every seven years? It is so if this argument disproves a literal resurrection, unless it should be claimed that the soul is married to the soul; and then who is willing to accept the inevitable but revolting conclusion that the marriage covenant extends into the much-talked-of "spirit world," with its plurality of spirit-wives, and the scene of strife in deciding which spirit-man shall claim the spirit-widow who had been married several times? This is the legitimate result of this theory which is used to disprove the possibility of a literal resurrection.

Again. The murderer, who for seven years has eluded the grasp of the pursuing officer, is finally captured, tried, and taken to the gibbet to be hung till he is "dead." But adopting this theology, he insists that he is not the man who committed the murder, claiming that there is not a particle of matter in his system that helped make up the body of the murderer.

Now if this theory really obliterates the doctrine of a literal resurrection, that man is entitled to his release. But will it be said that he has the same soul that dwelt in the murderer? Well, can you inflict the penalty upon a soul which you say is immortal—hang it till it is "dead, dead, dead?" If you could do this impossibility, would you be justified in killing an innocent body with it? If you could not, would it be right to murder an innocent body, when by so doing you could not expect to kill the guilty soul? Will men use an argument to disprove a real resurrection which will just as clearly sanction such monstrous absurdities?

Yet this theory has just enough truth about it to deceive many. It has been scientifically determined that in the human system there are a variety of "life-cells," which are the receivers of nourishment in one of its stages, and are capable of contraction or expansion; and thus the human system is replenished; and as there is a gradual passing off of substances received into the life-cells, the system is at times diminished; thus a man is at one time heavier, and at another time lighter; and this passing off of matter thus received into the system has been unjustly construed into the claim that the man entire undergoes a change.

In addition to the claim that a literal resurrection is impossible, we are told there is no need of raising the material man if the spirit-man continues to live after the body man dies. That "if" is well employed; for although we believe that man has a spirit, we are not warranted in believing that it is a personality, either in the body, or out of it, as we shall show elsewhere. But we inquire if the so called spirit-man has no necessary connection with the body-man, and can live, think, and act without it, why did God make a body-man to put the spirit-man into? If the spirit-man does not need the body-man after death, did it need it before death? If the body-man is only a prison-house for the spirit-man to live in, why was it first imprisoned there? If the body-man has always been a detriment, a clog, a shackle to the spirit-man, was it not a mistake upon the part of Deity when he made a body-man, seeing the spirit-man would have been so much better off without it? If the body-man forever passes into oblivion at death, and has only been a hindrance to the spirit-man during its existence, why was it ever made?

In the light of this theory, seeing no need of a resurrection of the material body, the conclusion has been that only the soul is to participate in the resurrection glory; that there is no resurrection of the dead, but merely a resurrection from the dead; a mere resurrection, or rising up of the internal living man, from the external dead man, at the hour of death, forgetting that Inspiration has affirmed that "the earth shall cast out the dead," and that "dead men shall live." (Is. 26: 19.)

Those who deny a resurrection of the body render themselves obnoxious to the charge which the Savior thundered in the ears of the Sadducees, who also denied a resurrection; "Ye do greatly err, not knowing the Scriptures nor the power of God." God's power to raise the dead should not be limited or questioned. When he speaks let us believe, even if it clashes with "vain philosophy." Said Job: "Though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God." (ch. 19: 26.) He here makes a thrust at modern scepticism, which claims that the body cannot be reanimated after having become food for worms. Job forestalls the skeptic, and admits that worms might eat up his body, and then affirms that notwithstanding this he should, in his flesh, see God, "at the latter day," when his Redeemer should come.

The nature of the future resurrection is clearly foreshadowed by the resurrection of Christ, who was raised as the "first-fruits" of the great resurrection harvest of holy ones, or in other words, as the sample or specimen. (1 Cor. 15: 20, 23.) The harvest must be like the "first-fruits," or specimen. Therefore, if Christ's resurrection consisted merely in the rising of the soul from the body at the hour of death, then may our resurrection be of the same character. After Christ's resurrection he affirms, "I am he that liveth and was dead." (Rev. 1: 18.) That part of Christ which shared in the resurrection had once been "dead." Thus that part of the saint which is "dead" must rise, as the harvest must resemble the "first-fruits." "It is sown a natural body, it is raised a spiritual body"—not a spirit. "There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body: and so it is written, The first man Adam was made a living soul [a natural body:] the last Adam was made [by the resurrection] a quickening spirit [or spiritual body.] Howbeit that was not first which was spiritual, but that which is natural; and afterward that which is spiritual. The first man is of the earth, earthy [the natural body;] the second man is the Lord from heaven [the spiritual body] . . . And as we have borne the image of the earthy [body,] we shall also bear the image of the heavenly." (1 Cor. 15: 44–49.) Thus the apostle argues that our mortal body is the "natural body," and the resurrection body is to be the spiritual body; and the resurrected body of Christ is pointed to as a sample of the "spiritual body," with the assurance that the natural body is "first," and the spiritual body "afterward;" hence the statement "we shall also bear the image of the heavenly," or have our bodies "fashioned like Christ's glorious body." Paul never represents the "natural body" and the "spiritual body" as existing cotemporaneously, but the "natural" is "first," and the "spiritual" is "afterward;" Christ, "the first-fruits," being mentioned as having already received the spiritual body.

We are reminded that Paul in speaking of the resurrection illustrates it by the practice of sowing grain, and then we are told that there is a "germ" in the grain, that does not die. It is true that Paul uses the custom of sowing grain to illustrate our present naked or unclothed condition, in contrast with our clothed condition at the resurrection, when we shall be "clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life;" and this he does by using the "bare," or unclothed grain, to represent us in our mortal state; its own species in the harvest, ripe and clothed, to represent our clothed state at the resurrection harvest. But Paul says not a word about a "germ;" and we should not make more of his illustration than he used it for. However, if theologians will crowd upon us the question of the germ, which Paul never hinted at, we inquire, Does the farmer separate the germ from the grain when he sows it? or does he sow the germ with the grain? Does he carry the germ up chamber, and leave the grain to rot in the ground? or is the germ thus separated for a time, and afterward connected with the grain to make it sprout? Then why insist that a spirit-germ, as a personality, is disconnected from the body? Let germ and body go together, or be silent about the "germ." But Paul settles the whole question by telling us, "This mortal must put on immortality." (v. 53.) "This blots out the theory of a spiritual resurrection for the saints—the "mortal" part must rise.

ARE YOU READY?

We greatly fear there are thousands who profess to love the Lord that do not "love his appearing." They love this world, and hear with sadness the tidings of his speedy coming. They sleep on while heaven and earth give signs of the "coming and kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ." We implore our brethren to arouse themselves and prepare to meet the Bridegroom.

There is no time to be lost! Begin the work of preparation now, lest he come and find your lamps gone or going out. O, beware, lest coming suddenly he find you sleeping. We would not have you subjects of a sensational religion, but under the influence of the precious truths and the glorious hope of the gospel, we would exhort you "to be steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord!" He will soon come, and his reward is with him, to give to every man as his work shall be. Are you ready for your sentence? Can you meet the Judge with joy? Or will you stand speechless, not having on a wedding garment? O, be wise while it is called the day of salvation and the accepted time. Work while it is day, for the night cometh when no man can work.

Ten thousand voices bid you go forward! The voices of the dead and of the living, the voices of heaven and of earth, the voice of the church and of God, all, all bid you awake, arouse, and prepare to meet your Lord!—Biblical Monthly.

For the World's Crisis.

THE VOYAGE OF LIFE.

Man's journey through this life may be justly compared to a voyage across the ocean. The vessel about to leave the port is careful to lay in a sufficient supply of provision, water, etc., as it frequently makes long voyages, and has no opportunity of obtaining any until it reaches its destination; but the Christian in his voyage cannot lay in store only for his present wants. He may find depots all along the road, at which he can furnish himself with the "bread of life" and the waters of salvation. He should not be like the sailing vessel, which cannot make its voyage unless it has a fair wind; but like the noble Steamer, which has its motive power within itself, and plows its way across the briny deep, independent of wind or tide. It is a fit emblem of the Christian. The Steamer has all the elements of power in itself; but there must be an application of them to the vessel, or it will lie becalmed. So with the Christian; he has the elements of progress in the divine life, but he must keep the fire of God's love burning in his heart, and must drink at salvation's fountain, or he will, like the Steamer without the application of steam, make no progress.

We know there are some places on the ocean shores where the sailing vessel cannot get out to sea, only at high tide; and when the tide begins to set in, what a preparation there is on board, hoisting the sails, casting off the line, hauling up the anchor, etc.; and we know there are some Christians and churches who seem to be dependent on the tidal wave of salvation, to get them out of their lukewarmness and backslidings.

Judging from reports from different parts of the country, it appears that one of these waves of revival influence is now sweeping over the country; but it appears that the converts are largely from the highways and hedges. I heard a lecture, or address, from Matthew Hale Smith, on Sunday evening, upon lay preaching in London, where he has been for some time past; and it is wonderful what has been done, or what God has wrought among the lower classes in that great city. He stated that there was a church of five hundred, composed of those who had once been thieves, gamblers, pickpockets, etc. There are three thousand lay preachers in that city, and the places of worship where they attend are crowded, while many of the large and splendid churches are almost empty.

Truly we are living in the age when this parable is being fulfilled: "Go ye out into the highways and hedges, and compel them to come in, that my house may be filled."

Boston. D. N. SMITH.

LOOKING FOR CHRIST.

The value of one's hope depends on its practical effect on the daily life. What is the effect of the Advent near? It certainly cannot be deleterious. The apostle assures us that he who has the hope of being made like Christ when he shall come, purifieth himself even as he is pure. 1 John 3: 2, 3. Vain is the faith of him on whom it has not this influence. A realizing sense of the sublime expectation that on any day, or on any hour the parting skies may reveal the glorious coming of the Son of God, who will reward every man according to the thoughts and intents of his heart, cannot but have a practical effect on the life of the believer. To realize that the words we are now speaking, the thoughts we are now thinking, the actions we are now performing, may the next moment meet us at the judgment, is a solemn consideration. Believing and loving the appearing of Christ, will beget a determination to be in continual readiness for the event. It destroys the indifference, the carnal security which generally comes over those who do not believe, nor love the coming of the Savior.

Believing in the coming of Christ at any moment, reins christians up to the performance of duty. They feel more that the eye of the Majesty of heaven takes cognizance of all they say or do, and that they may have no moments for repentance. Death always looks at a distance to those in health and in the heyday of youth. They feel the blood thrilling in their veins, with indication of life. They put off the evil day, and enjoy present scenes—waiting for a more convenient season to attend their soul's salvation. But when Christ's coming is viewed as an event that may at any moment transpire, no present sense of security can defer his coming. The healthy beatings of our pulse, and all the outward indications of health, are no evidence that the next moment may not usher us into the presence of our descending Judge. Those who have this hope within them, will take heed to the injunction to watch, because they do not know the hour or the day of the Lord's coming. They will so live that whether the Master cometh at mid-night, at cock-crowing, or in the morning, they will be found watching, so that whether they are in the field, the workshop, the bed, or on the house-top, they may be taken, and not left. While such is the result, how can any christian feel otherwise than disposed to cherish the hope of soon seeing the Savior in the clouds of heaven—offering up their prayers continually for the hastening of that glorious day."—Advent Herald.

THE EMPEROR NAPOLEON.

Frequent rumors have been in circulation during the last two years, to the effect that Napoleon was about used up; and therefore the idea that he is yet to perform an important part in the closing drama of this world's history, could not be true. It has since been stated that such reports have been circulated for the purpose of quieting the fears of other governments in Europe, till Napoleon got all ready for action. The latter is, no doubt, the truth of the case. If other powers could be made to believe that the French Emperor would not live long, and was about to resign in favor of his son, then, of course, it could not be expected that he would undertake any great military enterprises in such a condition. But notwithstanding all such rumors, it is well known that he has been preparing military forces with more earnestness than ever before, and that he appears now about ready for action. He is said to have at his command the largest army in Europe, and an immense fleet, well manned.

The following from the Buffalo Commercial Advertiser, sent us by Bro. C. Colegrove, is an item of interest on this subject:

"The Emperor Napoleon is said to be at times in a state of great political exaltation. When Prince Napoleon paid him a visit the other day, after his return from Berlin, his majesty was reading the journals. Taking up La Liberté, which alluded to his 'senility,' he is reported to have said, 'See, how your friends speak of me. You can assure them they are mistaken. They think me aged, used up; they are wrong. I shall soon show what I can do yet. They will not be kept waiting long.'"

"LIBERTY, EQUALITY, FRATERNITY."

The words at the head of this article are said to be "the revolutionary words" for the coming struggle. These are the words given by the demons, and adopted by their followers. They are full of meaning, and are becoming popular. These "watch words" are echoing throughout Europe, as well as America. We think they will be inscribed on the banner that shall wave at the head of the next great political movement. They now seem to float on every breeze. There is magic in them—something eminently calculated to arouse the mass of the people, who have been so long trodden under the heel of oppression, religious and political. He who touches this chord meets a response from the hearts of the common people. Napoleon III. is the man who professedly embodies, or represents, these principles. He personifies them, and promises to see them carried into effect. His work is momentous, if he shall accomplish what seems to be his part in the last great drama of this world's history.

The revolutionists do not stop to explain to all what they mean by "Liberty, Equality, Fraternity"; because if they did, some would get their eyes open to see what a trap Satan has laid to bring them to eternal ruin. The "LIBERTY" they would establish is expressed in the following language:—"Each man and woman, if you please, has a perfect right, under all circumstances, in all conditions, and in whatever locations, to do as he or she pleases." The foregoing is said to come from the spirits of Daniel Webster, John Quincy Adams, Robert Rantoul, Aristotle, Martin Luther, Socrates, and Roger Williams, who are denominated the "Association of Governmentizers."

What do they mean by "EQUALITY"? Using their language, it is expressed as follows:—"A new confederation, wherein distinction of clime, of color and of sex, will be no bar to equality." Of course this sentiment must be popular with the great body of the people; and they will delight to honor the man who will be instrumental in causing it to be established. We say again, we think Napoleon is the one to do it. Diabolus has chosen his man to lead the human race in their last great apostasy.

A spirit says:—"The design is . . . to crush, destroy, and break in pieces all the existing forms of government on the face of the whole earth, . . . and in place of them build up one common form of government in all the earth, having one common head."

That head is said to be Napoleon III. What kind of government is proposed by the spirits? They say, "In this form of government, which will be a Theocratic Democracy, every man will be his own ruler, and his natural demands his HIGHEST LAW." Such is the liberty proposed. No restraint upon any one.

What do they mean by "FRATERNITY?" Who are included in the brotherhood? Instead of adopting the standard set up by Jesus:—"Whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in heaven, the same is MY brother and sister, and mother" (Matt. 12: 50;) they say every one, who will adopt the doctrine of the immortality of the soul belongs to the Fraternity, whether Catholic or Protestant, Mohammadan, Jew or Pagan. It is called the "New Catholic Church," embracing all mankind. It is, in short, the Devil's church, and his brotherhood. We prefer the "old paths" in which the martyrs trod, rather than be reckoned among such a "Fraternity" as now proposed by the demons.

This is the time for men to decide which road they will take. Shall we come out from the world and consecrate all to the Lord and be ready to meet him at his coming; or, shall we go with the popular throng to perdition? Let the reader decide at once to give up all to Jesus, to be used for his glory now and for ever. Half-hearted religion will not stand the test in these times. It soon gives way to the great pressure from the enemy; and after it begins to yield, it is soon conquered. Let us all be brave in the cause of the great King.

"HEAVEN-BORN RELIGION."

The supporters of Spiritualism call it the "heaven-born religion." They also say it is "the grandest, the purest, the holiest, ever given to man." A distinguished Spiritualist writes us, "Spiritualism opposes portions of the Bible and christianity as the sun opposes the moon—by bringing a superior light." We propose to look at some of these Spiritual sunbeams, and see how they compare with the glorious light of the gospel of Jesus. Who are those that praise Spiritualism as a heaven-born religion? Are they the meek and humble followers of Jesus, and the lovers of God and his word? Nay, verily. But they are those who deny that Christ is our Savior, and that he was begotten of the Holy Spirit, according to the Scriptures; who reject the Bible as a rule of faith and practice; who are open and avowed infidels to the whole system of christianity; men and women, many of whom are known to be licentious characters, living in promiscuous adultery, and utterly repudiating the laws of God and man; and declaring they have a right to do as they please.

The following are samples of the supporters and originators of what they call the "Heaven-born Religion." Says a spirit:—"The Father, Son and Holy Ghost, means simply the past, present and future." "The soul knows that it has come through all past eternity, that it exists in the present, and that it will exist in the future."—Banner of Light, Feb. 29th, 1868.

In a communication published in the "News from the Spirit World," for April, 1868, the writer says, "Jesus had unfortunately an unbalanced mind, . . . destitute of the force which Justice gives, and blind to the superior element of wisdom." These spirits are all at war with the Bible and its doctrines, and doing all in their power to destroy the christian religion, and lead the followers of Jesus into the way to perdition.

The time has come when every true christian should stand up boldly against Spiritualism, as he would against the man who would seduce his daughter from the paths of virtue. It is no time to be mealy-mouthed about this matter.

IS THE LORD PLEASED?

We clip the following from the news items of the day:—

"The church choirs in Rochester, N. Y., are completely demoralized by a sharp competition between the churches for the best singers, to whom extravagant salaries are paid. In a good many churches, now-a-days, more attention is paid to the singing than to preaching the gospel, and one feels as if sitting in a concert room instead of the house of God."

Can it be that such singing is pleasing to the Lord? It looks more like an effort to please man than it does to praise the Most High. It is alarming to see the wide departure from the simplicity of true christian worship. Such meetings are poor places to kindle up devotional feelings, and can not be expected to lead poor sinners to Jesus. The Spirit of the Lord never leads into "sharp competition" those who sing to the glory of the Lord. His Spirit gives meekness, and long-suffering, causing men to give honor to another instead of seeking to heap it upon themselves. What a wide difference between nominal and true christianity. It seems strange that men should be so deceived as to think that a spirit of strife for the mastery, like that named in the Rochester church choirs, deserves the name of christianity. It is the spirit of the world, and the religion of Jesus is utterly opposed to every thing of the kind.

MAN WORSHIP.

The ancient heathen were noted for hero-worship. They deified the spirits of heroes; or, more truly, the demons, whom they supposed to be the spirits of heroes, because the demons taught them so. Now, the world is deifying man. This is emphatically an age of man-worship. Man is put in the place of God, "showing himself that he is God." We have no doubt that the spirit of man-worship will increase more and more till Jesus comes to set up his kingdom.

The following from the May number of the "Prophetic Times" expresses our own views on the subject:—

"As we read the word of God, or observe this world-drama, we find that the whole drift and effort of this age is to exalt man rather than God. The idol of the nineteenth century is not Christ, but humanity. It worships Jesus, only as it discovers him to be the highest type of that humanity, which is something more sacred than himself. The golden age, of which it dreams, is not an age in which the renovating power of Jesus is felt through all the frame-work of human society, and over the face of nature; in which he is confessed and crowned Lord, to the glory of God the Father: but one in which the human race, schooled by experience, and improved by progress, shall emancipate itself from the evils that environ and afflict it, and come to the full possession of the earth, as its inheritance. Then it can proudly exult in its own success. Man will crown himself lord in this dominion.

The naturalistic and atheistic philosophy of the age, which goes hand in hand with its progress, since the days when Voltaire and Paine sowed the seeds of the French revolution, will not rest until man is crowned as God in the temple of nature. The highest representative man will attract and receive the homage of the nations as God."

SORER PUNISHMENT.

ELDER GRANT:—Dear Bro.,—In some of your works on the destiny of the wicked, you claim that God, through an act of mercy, destroys the sinner. A christian minister, a very able man, who has now in possession several of your works, is contending against this view of the subject. His main proof texts are found in Hebrews 10: 28, 29, where Paul speaks of death without mercy, and in the 29th verse he says, "Of how much sorer punishment, suppose ye, shall he be thought worthy, who hath trodden under foot the Son of God?" Now his argument is this: that as all those who despised Moses' law died without mercy; and as those who repudiate the teachings of Christ deserve a "sorer punishment"; so God, in an act of mercy, will never destroy the sinner. And he also labors to show that the expression "sorer punishment" goes to show that death is not the punishment of the wicked. Now, Bro. Grant, if it is not asking too much, will you give us an article through the Crisis on this subject? I am quite an old man, crippled with the rheumatism, which gives me an opportunity for reading. I formerly belonged to the Methodist church. I am becoming deeply interested in the Crisis, on account of the glorious Bible truths which it so strongly advocates.

JAMES DUGONE.

When speaking of the days of Moses, Paul says: "He that despised Moses' law died without mercy under two or three witnesses." This was temporal death; simply losing the present life. But those who tread "under foot the Son of God," are to die "the second death," which is eternal; hence, a much sorer punishment." The punishment is death in both cases; but one is temporal, and the other eternal.

The final destruction of the sinner we believe to be the result of both justice and mercy. Justice decides that the sinner is "unworthy of everlasting life," and mercy says "destroy" him, and put him out of misery.

It is true there was no mercy in the law of Moses; because there is no mercy in any righteous law. If one was convicted of murder by the law, the law that condemned him to death for his deed, did not offer pardon, or mercy at the same time; even though he had most heartily repented. He must die without the offer of mercy. Christ has become a "mercy seat" for those who will confess and forsake their sins, and through him may escape from "the wages of sin which is death." When the unrepentant sinner appears in the judgment, there is no more mercy for him in the sense of pardon; yet, he may be destroyed by an act of justice combined on the same principle as a miserable, hideous monster of an animal might be destroyed. His misery is ended, and justice is executed.

"ADVENTISM."

We have just received a full supply of this valuable work. Price in cloth 75 cents, postage 12 cents. Flexible covers 60 cents, postage 12 cents. Paper covers 50 cents, postage 6 cents. In paper covers by the dozen, by express, $4.75.

THE MILLENNIUM, is the title of a new pamphlet, by Sr. M. D. Wellcome. This is an excellent work to put into the hands of those who believe in a millennium before the second personal coming of Christ. For sale at the Crisis office. Price 15 cents, including postage.

THE GERMAN TRACTS.—We hope our readers will take special pains to obtain and scatter these tracts among their German friends. Send to Bro. Louis Reimer, 809 Coates Street, Philadelphia, Pa., or to the Crisis Office.

CORRECTIONS.—In the stirring "Address" from Bro. Couch to those "residing in the State of Massachusetts," who are "looking for the blessed hope," we read the following: "They were called to witness a change of temporal government, and the establishment of Christ's glorious and eternal kingdom." It should read as follows: "They were called to witness a change of temporal governments; but you to see the end of all temporal governments, and the establishment of Christ's glorious and eternal kingdom."

In our notice of the dedication of the East Rochester Chapel, the State should be N. H., not N. Y.

The article on the first page of this paper, headed "Are the Dead to be raised Literally?" should be credited to Wm. Sheldon.

"THE SWORD THAT CUTS."—Bro. D. F. Newton, author of "Home Thrusts," "Shining Light," etc., etc., has just issued another live book, well adapted to the times in which we are living, entitled "The Sword that Cuts;" "The Fire that Burns." We never get any thing dry from Bro. Newton's pen. His own heart is on fire with love for Jesus, and out of the abundance of his heart his mouth and pen speak words that burn. For sale by the author, 303 West 20th Street, New York. Price $1.50.

ANNIVERSARY OF SPIRITUALISM.

Under the heading of "General Religious Intelligence" the Advance of April 16th, 1868, says:—"The Spiritualists throughout the country have been celebrating their twentieth anniversary by exercises, characteristically silly and profane, in most cases. But why they call it the twentieth anniversary is not clearly apparent. If any thing is of the highest antiquity it is the essence of modern Spiritualism, with a clear claim to be dated back to the garden of Eden."

Has not "modern" theology, which teaches that man is immortal, as "clear a claim to be dated back to the garden of Eden" for its origin? Surely that which is immortal cannot die; and if that man and woman whom God placed in the garden of Eden over eighteen hundred years ago are still living, then "that old serpent, called the Devil and Satan, which deceiveth the whole world," told the truth when he said unto the woman, "Ye shall not surely die."

DECLINE OF MORALS.

No room is left for doubt that the masses of society are rapidly degenerating. "Worse and worse" is the progress to be witnessed on all sides. Step by step the masses are departing from Christ and christianity and plunging into all kinds of sensual gratification. Practically, self-denial has become almost an obsolete word. There is a general rush among worldly people for scenes of excitement, where the comical, the ridiculous, the sensational, and the licentious predominate; and among nominal christendom a thirst for the sentimental, ideal, and grand displays of counterfeit christianity. There are but few, comparatively, among professors of religion, who seek their pleasure in doing the will of the Lord. They have lost the enjoyment of religion, but keep up the form; yet are "lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God."

We are glad to learn that some are beginning to get their eyes open to the Sodom-like state of things at the present day. The following is from Zion's Herald, the leading Methodist paper in New England:—

PUBLIC MORALS.—Judging by the character of the performances at our city theatres and by the vast crowds of elegantly dressed males and females that swarm out of their doors every night in the week and on the afternoons of Wednesdays and Saturdays, we fear that the age of Charles II. is eclipsed in licentiousness by ours. In the worst comedies of Congreve and that ilk, there are at least sprightly repartee and undoubted wit, there is a well-defined plot and considerable genius in the delineation of character, so that even the grossness and licentiousness of these productions are made somewhat elegant and courtly, and such as the brilliant debauchees of the Restoration enjoyed as a literary treat. But the vile abominations of to-day are as destitute of literary merit, even of the lowest order, as the actresses are of garments. They are all license and nothing else. They pander to the beastliest propensities of the human animal; and all that may be advanced about the poetry of motion and so forth, is the veriest twaddle.

As proof of the pernicious effect these things are having on the community, witness the multiplicity of obscene periodicals and pictures vended at every corner and displayed in print store windows. It is the demand that calls forth the supply. If there was not a morbid pruriency successfully cultivated among us, we should not see such a supply of these disgusting productions. To suppose that the standard of morality is not being correspondingly lowered as a necessary consequence would be to suppose touching pitch without defilement. It is gratifying, however, to all who are interested in the cause of virtue and religion, that strenuous efforts are being made to have the laws enforced which suppress these publications.

SPURGEON'S MODE OF PREACHING.

We think our readers will be interested in the following report from the Boston Journal, of Matthew Hale Smith's account of Mr. Spurgeon's preaching in London:

The Tremont Temple was filled to overflowing last evening, May 3d, to listen to Rev. Matthew Hale Smith on the above interesting topic. After the introductory devotional exercises, Mr. Smith commenced his address, introducing his subject by referring to the great change which had been wrought in England during the past ten years on the subject of religion. This change, he maintained, was mainly due to the work of Rev. Charles Spurgeon, whose wonderful popularity as a preacher had not been sought by himself, for he was a modest and unpresuming man, but it was the result of his earnest and untiring efforts in the cause of his Lord and Master. He had risen from comparative obscurity, and while preparing for college his attention was turned to the subject of Christianity. He did not pursue his intended collegiate course, but at once gathered a few children together in the capacity of a Sabbath School. In a short time adults began to attend his meetings, and soon a Bible class for adults was formed, and when he was only nineteen years of age he was a regularly ordained Baptist minister, preaching the Gospel not in any stated place or to any regular congregation, but wherever he could find people willing to listen to him. His fame soon spread, and he received a call to the pastorate of a church in London, which he at first refused by reason of his innate modesty, and the position was only accepted after repeated and urgent solicitation. He found the church in a low state of prosperity, its numbers were small and its vitality not apparent; but soon the seats began to be filled by an attentive congregation, and in a few months the city of London became intensely interested in this youth of small stature and unassuming manners. But he was maligned, ridiculed and caricatured for giving expression to sentiments not in harmony with the preconceived religious ideas of the professedly Christian population. He pursued his own course, independent and straightforward, believing most sincerely in the importance of the salvation of souls, and by his sincerity and perseverance he has now the largest congregation to be found in any evangelical church in the world, composed of all elements in society, from the nobility to the peasant, and to all he proclaims alike the richness of Christ's salvation. His church will comfortably seat five thousand people, and every Sabbath, wet or dry, it is crammed and packed to its utmost capacity.

The church building was purchased by money raised by his own individual efforts. He appointed his own deacons, laid out their work, and they did not lay out his. He looked after the pew rents, managed his own financial matters and superintended the disbursement of all moneys. Each pew holder in the church has tickets of admission to the church on the Sabbath, and if not there fifteen minutes previous to the hour for worship, he loses his seat. So great was the desire of people to hear him that an iron fence seventeen feet in height had been erected to keep the people out until the hour for worship.

His manner of preaching was peculiar. He usually spoke fifteen minutes without notes and then paused for a few minutes to rest and allow his congregation to rest, after which he resumed his topic for fifteen minutes, and another rest was made, and so on for an hour. There are three thousand eight hundred members in his church, three hundred of whom are regularly employed as lay preachers in different portions of London; and through his efforts a college has been established in his society to educate young men for the ministry, and it now contains ninety-three students, who at the end of six months, are employed as preachers, to test their capacities, and, if not competent, they are rejected. One woman in his society commenced a Bible class of four persons, which now contains over seven hundred regular pupils, and there is also a large class for men, and one hundred and twenty-five prayer meetings are frequently held in one week in connection with this large church.

The elements of Spurgeon's success were defined to be his wonderful voice, his executive ability, his devotional spirit, his unitiring perseverance, his trust in God and his remarkable power in prayer. One of the peculiar features of the working of his church was that its members went out among the lowly and wretched, the poor and vicious, and not only gave Christian counsel, but also contributed to their bodily necessities, thus creating a bond of love and friendship between them.

SPRINGFIELD CAMP-GROUND.

For the information of all interested in the new camp-ground, we would say, the buildings are up and nearly covered, and they look excellent. We have two good wells of water, obtained by digging ten and a half feet, with four feet of good pure water in each well. The grove begins to dress in green, and will be well shaded in a week or two. All admire the location and preparation. Some think that there are not Adventists enough in the world to fill the boarding house. One man said it looked like a depot. It has become a great curiosity. I saw the Mayor of the city, who said we should be protected. All of our lumber, shingles, wood, etc., have not been stolen, nor any of it, as was supposed. The inhabitants are well disposed.

We have nothing to fear from outside influences, and the internal influences seem to be quieting down, and we hope and expect that radicalism will yield to good sound sense and christian forbearance and union in the great truths of the Lord's soon coming. We shall need the money very soon, as we have the whole debt to pay this month, and the treasury is empty. The Building Committee feel uneasy just now, but we keep at work, hoping the friends will consider our situation, and forward their subscriptions to Bro. Geo. T. Adams. If some one has any money to lend until we can get it in, it would lift a burden from us just now, and keep our credit good with outsiders whom we owe.

ST. LOUIS MISSION.

BRO. GRANT:—The goodness of God has spared my life to witness the triumph of his truth in a great degree, in what used to be called the far distant west. We have just had our second meeting of the Advent Christian Conference. It commenced Saturday morning, April 19th, and closed the Sunday evening following. It was characterized throughout with the utmost harmony and christian kindness. We had four churches fully represented. Each were allowed four delegates, which together with the preachers and teachers of our schools, made us twenty-seven or eight delegates, all of whom were present except two or three. The churches were also well represented by the attendance of their members generally. Then there were a great many from the other churches, so that the house was packed on Saturday evening; and on Sunday evening many were compelled to remain outside.

Many times I did wish that our eastern friends could only look in upon us, and witness the kind, courteous, and respectful manner with which the members addressed each other. Almost without an exception each member would walk out so as to address the Chair instead of the other members. Any one making a motion would rise in his seat; and any one seconding a motion would do the same. There were some questions upon which a large share of the members would speak. And during all the meetings, there was not a single instance where christian love and kindness did not reign throughout. Bro. Himes came on Saturday afternoon, and preached for us in the evening. It is a feast for our people to meet with Bro. Himes, believing him to be a true and honest-hearted friend, seeking to do them good.

Sunday was the happiest day of my life in St. Louis. I felt like weeping for joy. I could not help thinking of the time two years and a half ago, when Bro. Himes and myself came here, having but two places to lay our heads. Also of the time I came back, after visiting Mass., eighteen months ago, and of the little room in the cellar all alone, where I boarded myself all winter, living on the cheapest food so as to save expense. I could not help thinking of the many hours I have wept alone in that little room; how many hours on my knees I have pleaded with God there; and of the many times God has comforted me. O how sacred is that little room to me. And I often think, too, of the many hardships and trials of that winter, which the pen can never tell. But, notwithstanding all, those hours have been worth millions of worlds to me. What an experience! Without it, my labors would have been in vain. There was but a little company of us there. Each one labored, toiled, prayed and plead with God, and begged of sinners to come and love our dear Redeemer. Some have come, and they keep coming; but oh, how few compared with the vast numbers in this great city. It numbers over two hundred thousand, not including Carondelet on the South; it is twelve miles long, and from three to four wide. One of our churches is at the extreme south end, on the Illinois side of the river; Lowell church is at the north end; Compton-Hill church, near Compton Hill, in the west part; and ours is in the east, and in the heart of the city, three squares from the Mississippi river. Members of the several churches have a good time visiting the different meetings, as it costs but five cents to go from one church or locality to another, in the horse cars.

What a great contrast since our first coming here. Now we have members scattered all through the city. Our churches embrace over two hundred members. Compton Hill has eighty-four. Bro. Decatur is loved by all of his church and congregation; so is Bro. Macon, of the Lowell church. Our church, at Cahokia, is supplied with preaching by all of our preachers in turn.

We are having a good time in dressing up our Sunday School children, and others, so that they can come to meeting and school. I wish our friends, who have so kindly sent us so many good things needed for the comfort of the poor freedmen, could only be here to see how thankfully they are received, and how much they are needed to make them comfortable. If time was to last but a few years—perhaps two or three at longest, this mission could take care of itself, so far as our money aid is concerned. We very much need a good preacher, who could visit and preach on a circuit, in this locality, and explain the prophecies and doctrines of the Bible. Such an one, who was filled with the Holy Ghost, whose feet were shod with peace, whose aim was the glory of God, whose business was to give meat in due season, and was not a monomaniac on some particular points, could do a great deal of good. It would not take but a very little injudicious teaching to tear us all to pieces. It is not with our people as with those who can read the Bible for themselves. The moment our colored brethren and sisters lose confidence in their preacher, they lose a great deal of their faith in the truth he may preach. Not so with those who can read for themselves. I have learned by experience what I did not know before living here. It is simply this: it takes time, experience, patience, a great deal of hope, and a life with and among the freedmen, to gain their confidence so as to do them permanent good.

I have nothing to do concerning the opinions others may have in view of my present conclusions. I acted honestly, holding somewhat different views, without experience. My business now is to act honestly with my experience. I do want to be saved in the kingdom when Jesus comes, which I believe with all my heart will be the coming autumn. I think I believe it just as strongly as those who say they know it. But I don't know it. I am happy to know the evidence is very clear that he may come. And, in fact, I can not see one single reason why we should not believe with all our soul, might, mind and strength, that he will come this year. Praise God forever.

"Fly swifter round, ye wheels of time,
And bring the welcome day."

RECEIPTS.

I have received since my last, in letters, the following donations: Bro. B. R. Fellows, Castle Rock, Minn., $10.00; Sister Barkley and husband, $1.00; M. Grinnell, $1.00; H. Grinnell, 50c.; Ellen Grey, 25 cts.; Mr. Albright, 50c.; Mr. Smith (Indian Ag't), 50c.; Mrs. Ellen Davis, 50c.; Grosbeck, 50c.; Jose White, 50c.; Little Jemmie Davis, 10c.; W. S. Rumsey, 50c.,—all from Isabella City, Isabella Co., Mich.

Can some of our dear brethren and sisters send us some good coats and pants to fit men from five and a half to six feet tall, and weighing from a hundred and fifty to two hundred lbs.? Some of our preachers are very poor. Their clothes are very poor also. Dear brethren and sisters, pray for us. We are striving to meet you in the kingdom. Amen.

ROCHESTER.

BRO. GRANT:—What is the Lord going to do in Rochester? A teacher of music and his wife identified themselves with us yesterday, from the Second Baptist. He says: "Three weeks ago I came into your hall for curiosity, and to-day I am one of you." A Methodist preacher says, "I came full of prejudice against you; I listened; I came again and again; I am here yet; I go no where else." An influential man of the Free Methodist said in our meeting yesterday, "I came to your meeting bitter with prejudice—vexed that I could find nothing against your position. I came again, and so I have continued to come, till I have lost my immortal soul, and am now seeking immortality through Christ." An aged man said, "I have been a Methodist, till within two years, for over forty years. They had become so popular, and proud, and worldly, that I found no comfort with them any longer. I have turned into your hall to-night, and here I find what I found among the Methodists when I first commenced to serve God,—the spirit and power of religion."

And so it goes continually. One other aged man, who had an impediment in his speech, started from the farther part of the hall, right in the midst of the service, came up to the desk and said, "I want to join your meeting." A German, who with his wife has just come into the faith, says, "My German minister tries to make me not think my Bible means so as it says. I tell him twenty ministers can not make me believe so that the meaning is not in the word." This was some of the savory food that we had furnished for our feast yesterday morning.

At noon we again repaired to the river, and there, amid the rippling waters made sparkling by the bright shining of the sun, we buried five or six more of those happy ones, who only can realize that joy when first they taste the inspiring promise. Solemnity and conviction attend these baptismal scenes. "Bury me in the sunshine," were among the last words of Bishop Hughes. So we felt it was good to baptize in the sunshine. In the evening we came around the table. We gave the right hand of fellowship to those that were baptized, and many others; and so had a communion of saints. The attendance was large, and the scene impressive and solemn. O how blessed to be in His service. I love it more and more. And so I sing,

"My Jesus, I love thee, I know thou art mine,
For thee all the 'pleasures of earth' I resign;
My gracious Redeemer, my Savior art thou,
If ever I loved thee, my Jesus, 'tis now."

For the World's Crisis.

WESTERN NEW YORK.

BRO. GRANT:—Having, in the providence of the Lord, spent a few weeks in Western N. Y., for the encouragement of those of like precious faith, I make this brief statement of the condition of the cause, where it has been my privilege to meet with the brethren. The conference at Hemlock Lake was a feast. It was held in a dance hall, as there was no room in the churches; but the spirit of love and union manifested in the meetings convinced the world, as well as some of the professed church, that the disciples of Jesus were in their midst, and left an impression on the mind of the community for good. How blessed to have peace and union; and though we can not see eye to eye on every point, we can love one another and convince all men that we are the disciples of Christ. How good and how pleasant for brethren to dwell together in unity.

At Conesus I found a few praying families in the midst of great spiritual death; not even a prayer-meeting is held in the place. A large Methodist meeting-house stands unoccupied, and silent as the grave-yard near by it. Met a few evenings in the school-house, and tried to strengthen the things that remain. After a few days' labor in Springwater, the brethren concluded to organize, and were encouraged to have some new ones join them also. Some who had not been baptized improved this opportunity to obey the Lord. May the Lord send some one to feed this flock. 1 Pet. 5.

At Dansville I found the church prospering, and while they have spoken often to one another, some who have listened have been led to search the word and get new light, in which they now rejoice; and we were all made to rejoice together while we examined the testimony that tells us Jesus and his kingdom are very near. May peace continue with this people, and they continue to grow in grace.

In Rochester the trumpet still has a certain sound; and while Jesus is preached, the church is encouraged with the cry, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?"

In Brockport a few meet together for prayer and exhortation, still looking for deliverance and the speedy coming of Jesus. Spent one evening here. "Fear not, little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." Bro. W. H. Spencer is diligently engaged doing what he can to send out the "Glad Tidings" of the coming kingdom, and, with all others who try to do anything for Jesus, is meeting with some trials and temptations. Brethren, pray for him. All can do this; and you who can, send him seventy cents with your prayers, and you will receive the "Glad Tidings" for one year, if time lasts that long. The design of this work is to scatter light in new fields, and Bro. S. desires it to be a help in introducing our Advent publications to the public.

In Murray the church have kept up their prayer-meetings, and although they have had but little preaching the past season, they continue to contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints. We tarried with them a few evenings, and over the first day of the week, and while we gathered around the table, expressed our determination to meet again, when Jesus comes, in the upper chamber. It was good to be there; but it will be better to meet at the marriage supper.

In company with Bro. Page, we went to a school-house, a few miles from Knowlesville, where we met for a few evenings with a full house. A considerable portion of the district make no profession of religion, and entertain the views of Universalism and Spiritualism. The courtesy and respect with which they listened to the sure word of prophecy, we trust may be the means of their enlightenment on the "blessed hope." The weapons which are formed against a theological hell, and a backslidden church, can make no impression against the prophetic word. It is invulnerable.

In Lockport I found some of the little flock, and they meet regularly for worship on Sunday and also Thursday evening in the Quaker meeting-house, which they have hired. Though disappointed in not seeing the Lord last year, they are waiting patiently for his return. Our faith is not on the time, but the events themselves; when the particular points of time to which we have looked for our reward have passed by, we still look for it, and wait and watch and pray, knowing that it is near, even at the door. Sunday evening the house, which is small, was filled full of attentive listeners. If all in this city that believe the Advent doctrine would take a decided stand, much good might be accomplished.

I now return to the western field, stopping on my way at Lewiston. The field in western N. Y. is in great need of laborers. I have had to refuse many earnest calls for help, as previous engagements in Michigan demand my attention. Let us all pray for the Lord of the harvest to send forth laborers. Your brother,

EDWIN T. HIMES.

A TRIBUTE OF PRAISE.

For the last two years, my companion has been gradually declining in health, until the first of last February, when her health failed entirely. She was obliged to abandon all care, and labor, and give herself to rest. For nearly three months she kept her room, and most of the time her couch. Her case baffled the kind and constant efforts of a most skillful physician, and she sank lower and lower until April 20th, when, abandoning all medicine and every human remedy, God heard "the prayer of faith," and became her physician, mighty to save, and put beneath her his everlasting arms. The next day she walked up street, and entered her former physician's office, walking up a long, steep flight of stairs. The next day but one afterwards, she walked half a mile to meeting in the evening, and back. The next day still she walked a long mile, told the story of God's redeeming mercy to several families, who had visited her in sickness, and then returned on foot. Since then she has traveled in private conveyance more than one hundred miles from N. H. to Conn. (she was sick in Keene, N. H.), and is now well.

I feel that this acknowledgment is due to the praise of God, whom we serve, and in whom we trust, who heard our cry in the time of trouble, and delivered us from our distresses; and due also to the many friends who have felt much solicitude in reference to my wife's illness, to each of whom we can not write, although we would gladly do so; and I trust that it may serve to encourage the faith of the Lord's "little ones" to hope in God, who will never, never leave nor forsake.

Correspondence.

From Bro. J. T. Dixon.

Bro. Grant:—I write by request, to say that the efforts at Armory Hall were not fruitless. The brethren at Lotteryville and Westerly have combined and hired a convenient hall in Westerly village, and seated it comfortably. It will hold some two hundred and fifty souls. They have hired it for one year, and paid the first quarter in advance, assisted by the liberality of the lovers of truth outside that vicinity. They have organized, and have prayer-meetings Thursday and Saturday evenings, and services three times on Sunday. They intend to have preaching Sundays A. M. and evening, and social meetings in the P. M. I was with them yesterday, and felt that it was good to be there. The Lord blessed with some freedom in speaking. In the evening the hall was nearly full. The attendance is increasing, and the congregation is generally attentive, candid, and intelligent, and many of them are becoming very much interested in the doctrine we hold so dear. I am happy to say that the little flock are in good working order, and united as the heart of one man. Your practical sermons did all much good, and they seem determined to practice them.

Good preaching brethren, who have the suffering cause of truth at heart, who can build up instead of tear down, are requested to make a note of the place and time of meeting, and when traveling through on the Shore Line, between Boston and New York, stop there when convenient, and speak to them a cheering word. They will find warm, christian hearts, and ready co-workers in the good work of saving perishing men. Will Bro. Hastings remember them? He has had one battle there in former days. Westerly is a large, thriving village in Rhode Island, on the Providence and Stonington R. R. The depot is called the Westerly Depot. J. T. Dixon.

From Bro. B. P. Manning.

Dear beloved brethren in Christ, I seat myself to drop a few lines to you all, to let you know how I am getting along in this wicked world. Well, I am in trouble from the crown of the head to the sole of the foot. The Lord is good to me. Notwithstanding all of my trials, my trust is in the living God. O glory be to the Lord forever. I do know that he loves me, and I love him, and will try to do his will, and serve him till he comes the second time to take his dear saints home into the everlasting kingdom of God. Do, my dear brethren and sisters, pray for poor Brother B. P. Manning, that the Lord will give him strength to do his will till he comes in the clouds of heaven. I attended our quarterly conference in Manchester, and it was the best one that I ever enjoyed in my life. God was with the people in mighty power. The preaching brethren were filled with the Holy Ghost. The preaching on Saturday and Sunday was such as I never felt before. Bro. Couch preached on Saturday, at 2 P. M., from Isa. 2: 21, showing that we are down almost to the last tick of God's great clock. I can say that the Spirit of God filled the hall.

Sunday, A. M., Bro. A. Simpson preached from Matt. 24: 15, and brought us down to the same point that Bro. Couch did the day before. Sunday P. M., Bro. Daniel Leavett preached from Daniel 12: 1, and he brought us down to the same time in the history of this world. Bro. Leavett baptized five happy souls, and it was a blessed season at the water side. God blessed the ordinance with power. After the evening discourse, we attended to the Lord's Supper. Then we sang a hymn and went out.

Thus closed our N. H. State quarterly conference, which I think was the best that we ever had in this State. Thy Bro. in Christ,

B. P. Manning.

From Bro. H. J. Carson.

Bro. Grant:—About the first of March last, our town was visited by Bro. R. W. Wilson, who was engaged in distributing tracts of the Second Advents. Elder P. A. Smith soon followed him, and delivered a series of sermons, proclaiming and explaining the doctrine of that denomination. It being the first time that the Second Advent doctrine had been presented to this community, it created considerable interest. For a short time the sermons were listened to without much opposition. But when Bro. S. proved that the Bible did not sustain many points now held and practised by the churches, opposition was manifested, and Second Adventists were denounced as holding and preaching a dangerous doctrine; one that would sap the foundation of the christian religion. However, although much was said, and some feeling displayed, a church of seventeen members was organized, before Brn. S. & W. left, which was in the last of March. Had they been so situated as to have remained longer, many more would probably have been added. We are needing a minister. Our little flock gathers for prayers occasionally. The Baptists have requested their minister, the Rev. Mr. Keep, to deliver a series of sermons on the second coming of Christ. His doctrine is but little different from our faith, as far as I have heard. I understand, however, that he intends to prove the immortality of the soul by the Bible. Those whose minds were not biased, by belonging to the churches, say boldly that the Advent doctrine in the one sustained by the Bible, so far as they have investigated; and several are engaged in investigating for themselves.

The Crisis reaches me regularly, and is eagerly read by several of my friends. It is anxiously expected by me. I am yours,

H. I. Carson.

Lake City, Fla., April 28th, 1868.

From Bro. M. E. Green.

Bro. Grant:—In consequence of some publications in the Crisis, the impression has gone out that the brethren worshiping in Cooper Institute make the "non-resurrection of the wicked and no-devil doctrine" cardinal doctrines, and that we have not much else preached there. I wish to correct that impression. We have never had a sermon preached on the non-resurrection of the wicked in our place, nor on the "no-devil doctrine." There are good brethren, who have been through the entire Advent movement, who believe in these doctrines, that meet with us; and I, for one, love them as much as those that think as I do on these points.

I would state again that we have never had a discourse preached on these doctrines in our church; and we never ask a brother what he is going to preach, or suggest a subject for him, unless he requests it. It is painful to be obliged to notice these things, but it is a duty we owe to the church. I do not charge any with doing these things willfully, for they are good, dear brethren, and loved by those that remain at Cooper Institute. They are dear to us as brethren, for I know that they love the Lord and his appearing. James says, "Grudge not one against another, brethren, lest ye be condemned; behold the Judge standeth before the door." Let us show to the world that we are brethren, because we "love one another." M. E. Green.

New York, Apr. 15, 236 Sullivan St.

From Bro. H. Pratt.

Bro. Grant:—We take great pleasure in reporting the increasing interest in Rochester. Our hearts are gladdened with the voice of new converts and penitents at every meeting. The Lord is working mightily among and with us. Seven more were buried with him by baptism yesterday, amid great solemnity among the thousands that gazed around. Amazing grace! wonderful goodness! Sovereign love! is the voice of our hearts, as they come in from the regions round about, and submit to be saved by him. H. Pratt.

P. S. One man, about fifty-five years of age, spoke of God's wonderful dealings in bringing him to our hall, and in pardoning his sins. Another from England says "the spirit of your meeting breaks my heart." And so they come, get the olive and pass on with the joyful sound ringing in their ears, "Behold he cometh," and their broken hearts responding, "Even so, come, Lord Jesus," "come quickly." Amen, and amen. Pray for us.

Rochester, April 27th, 1868.

Bro. E. F. Cook, Centerville, N. Y., writes: "Your beloved paper, the Crisis, has been my guide for the last three years. I thank God for the truths of the Bible which it has presented. Had it not been for the great truths which it has held forth, I would still have held to error. But thanks be to God for his truth, which shall stand forever. Dear brethren, I write to let you know that I am striving for that blessed hope of the glorious resurrection; for 'on such the second death hath no power.'"

Bro. N. McCulloch, Rochester, N. Y., writes, April 26th, 1868:—"To-day has been a blessed day in the Lord. Seven more were buried with Christ in baptism, and raised again to walk in newness of life, making in all that have put on Christ in so doing, one hundred and six, since the first tent-meeting was held in this city, last July. O praise the Lord for what he is doing here. Pray for us that our faith fail not."

Bro. P. S. W. Deyo writes from Strawberry Point, Iowa, May 3d, 1868:—"I have just returned from a two months tour, during which time two hundred and thirteen have been baptized."

Obituaries.

Dudley.—Died at Knowlesville, Orleans Co., N. Y., Bro. George W. Dudley, aged twenty-seven years.

Brother Dudley was adopted into the household of faith two years ago this present summer. He was converted to the faith as it is in Jesus under the labors of Brn. C. B. Turner and Henry Pratt, and since that time has been a firm believer in the soon coming of our Savior, showing to the world, by his daily walk and conversation, that he had been to Jesus and learned of him.

Last July, he attended the tent-meeting at Albion, N. Y., standing firm at his post of duty, like a true soldier, ever ready to testify for Jesus and his cause; and when the tent was struck, and moved to Fort Edward, N. Y., he left with Brothers Turner and Wendell to work for the cause he loved so well. He attended Bro. Turner through his sickness, and followed him to the grave; and when the last sad rite had been performed, and the grave hid from his sight one he loved so well, and had watched over so anxiously, his strength could hold out no longer; and he began gradually to fail. He stayed at Fort Edward and Sandy Hill, being cared for and attended by his brethren and sisters in Christ; who carefully watched over and rendered him all the assistance, both temporal and spiritual, that kind christian friends could bestow, until about three weeks ago, when he came back to Knowlesville among the friends with whom he was first associated in the faith. He was attended by a physician, in whom he placed the utmost confidence, and one willing to do all that human aid could accomplish in restoring to health one he loved as a brother, and respected as a christian; but all in vain; no human aid could raise him. His disease had got too strong a hold, and our much loved and esteemed brother yielded to the power of the enemy, fully in the faith that that power in a little while would be broken, and he would live again in a land where sickness, pain and death can never come.

May those of his friends and acquaintances, who watched over him in his last moments, take fresh courage, and fight on the good fight of faith, that when the crown that is laid up shall be given him, they too may receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away. May his brothers, sister and relatives, whom he so much desired should receive a knowledge of the truth he loved so well, be adopted into the household of faith, ready to meet Jesus at his coming, and greet their brother in the kingdom, all robed in immortal beauty. May the Lord especially bless his dear sister, who came to attend him in his last moments. May she mourn not as those who have no hope; but may her hope and trust be in Jesus and the resurrection, for a home with her dear brother in the kingdom. May his poor widowed mother realize that her child shall come again from the land of the enemy; for he who is stronger than the strong man armed will unlock the prison-house of death, and her George will live again, and with patriarchs, prophets, apostles, and all the saints of God, who are now sleeping in the dust, will shout, "Oh grave, where is thy victory?" Yes, mother, George will live again, no more to die. Soon, soon Jesus is coming to gather his waiting ones home.

Dutcher. Died at Mamaroneck, Westchester Co., N. Y., Feb. 17th, Bro. Abel Dutcher.

Last autumn, while laboring in New York State, I visited Mamaroneck, and held several meetings. The reception which Bro. Dutcher gave me was a cordial one. Before leaving that vicinity I had the pleasure of baptizing his companion, who is still journeying toward the better land. Sr. Dutcher writes me—"God in his mercy has seen fit to give rest to the weary one. He had been unable to leave the house since the last of November, suffering terribly, but at last he is resting, and we can say of him, 'he is not dead, but sleepeth.' We sorrow not as those that have no hope, for he had the full assurance that he should be among those who shall inherit the kingdom at last." Sister D. is left in poor circumstances, with two small children. Remember her, brethren and sisters.

C. H. Sweet.

Gilman. Died of scrofulous consumption, in Milton, Me., Feb. 18th, 1868, Alfred A. Gilman, aged thirty-four years and eight months.

He was a great sufferer in his last sickness, which he bore with great patience. May the grace of God sustain the afflicted friends, and bring them to enjoy rest in that land where sorrow and death are unknown. E. M. Haggett.

Varney. Died in Alton, N. H., April 5th, 1868, Deborah, wife of Joshua A. Varney, in the fifty-fourth year of her age.

She was a firm believer in the near advent of the Savior to set up his everlasting kingdom on the earth; and was ever ready to assist the poor to the extent of her means. It ever seemed to be her delight to wait upon the sick, and do all she could to make them comfortable, and was faithful to exhort others to live like christians. She fell asleep in Jesus, believing that her rest in the grave would be short. She has left a husband and three children to mourn their loss. A discourse was preached by Elder J. G. Smith, from Ps. 17: 15.

J. A. Varney.

Noble. Died in Westfield, Mass., May 1st, 1868, of liver complaint, Sister Elizabeth Noble, mother of Sister Joel Thomas, of Springfield, aged sixty years.

Sister Noble, after a protracted sickness, fell asleep in Jesus. During her last sickness, she turned the eye of faith to Christ, the Life-Giver, and obtained an assurance of her acceptance with the Lord. Her sufferings, which were great at times, are now over. Her flesh rests in hope. A glorious resurrection to immortality awaits her. The funeral services were conducted by the writer.

C. H. Leverton.

Lawton. Fell asleep in Jesus, May 6th, in Philadelphia, James H. Lawton, aged twenty-one years.

The young man, as we were informed, accepted of the free pardon which Jesus purchased for him, a short time before he died, and died happy in the Lord. He leaves a mother and sister to mourn his loss. May this affliction be sanctified to the good of all his friends, and they be ready to meet him in the morning of the resurrection. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer, from Rev. 21: 4. A. Damon.

Staples. Died in Carthage, Me., April 10th, 1868, John Staples, aged eighty-five years.

He was a praying man, of very quiet, pleasant disposition, and much respected by all who knew him. A large and attentive congregation listened to a discourse by the writer, from 1 Cor. 15: 35.

E. M. Haggett.

Newell. Died in Springfield, Mass., April 17th, 1868, Carrie Unesa Newell, only daughter of Bro. and Sr. Charles and Louisa E. Newell, aged ten years.

Funeral attended and words of comfort spoken by the writer. R. E. Ladd.

Champlain. Died in Epsom, N. H., Feb. 27th, Willey A. Lincoln, son of Moses and Anna Champlain, aged one year and five months.

"It is well with the child."

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Vienna, May 9. Telegrams were received yesterday which state that the persecution of the Jews in Jassy, Baken and other places in Moldavia had been stopped by the authorities. Those who were compelled to flee from their homes have been allowed to return. Assassins and desecrators of the graves of Jews, who have perpetrated their outrages almost with impunity for a long time, will hereafter be rigorously punished.

London, May 9. Henry, Lord Brougham, the eminent reformer, and ex-Chancellor of England, died to-day at Cannes, in the 90th year of his age.

DOMESTIC.

London, May 6, 1868. France has suddenly broken off all diplomatic relations with the government of Tunis. The reason alleged is the repeated perpetration of outrages on French citizens resident in that country.

Honolulu, April 8, via San Francisco, May 6.—The greatest volcanic eruption on record has occurred on this Island. Fifteen hundred shocks of earthquake were felt in ten days, causing fearful tidal waves. A whole village was destroyed, and one hundred lives were lost.

☞ Paris is quite agitated at the enormous losses well known men have recently met at the card table. One lost $200,000 in one night, and another $160,000 in the same period of time. The former is now utterly insolvent.

☞ The largest blocks of stone in the pyramids of Egypt would not weigh more than two and a half tons each, while the great mass are much lighter.

☞ The Viceroy of Egypt is reported to be seriously ill. He is fifty-two years old, and his heir apparent is a boy of six.

☞ The crime of child-murder is on the increase to such a shocking extent in Liverpool that the attention of the government has been directed to the subject, and the Home Secretary has authorized the borough coroner to offer rewards for the detection of the guilty persons.

☞ Accounts from the South and southeast of France complain of the long continued drouth in that part of France. No rain to speak of has fallen during the last two months.

☞ In the Insane Hospital of Indiana there are forty-seven women crazed by the brutal conduct of drunken husbands.

Tent Meetings.

To the brethren and sisters scattered throughout Massachusetts and New Hampshire, Greeting: Whereas the time for preaching the gospel is short, and what is done for the salvation of sinners must be done quickly, I address these lines to you. Brn. Kingsbury of Chelsea, and Ford of Concord, and others, have provided a suitable tent for the business, and placed it in the field—a free tent—and given me charge of the same. Now I want all who desire tent meetings in their vicinity the coming season, to write me at once. Bro. S. W. Thurber and other efficient preachers will assist in the work. Our first meeting will be held in Charlestown, Mass., commencing Wednesday evening, June 3d, and hold over Sunday. We shall expect the brethren and sisters to co-operate with us in the work. Let prayer go up to God, that his blessing may attend. Per order,

D. M. Leavitt.

Tent Meeting in Western New York.

At a point very near the abutment or conjunction of the three counties of Erie, Cattaraugus and Wyoming, we propose to have a tent meeting about the first of June. By referring to the map, brethren will see that in this vicinity are the towns and villages of Sardinia, Yorkshire and Arcade, not to mention Holland, Freedom, Java, Franklinville, Springville, etc. One thing is certain, this is a new field, and I believe a promising one. I have no recollection or knowledge of any special meeting of Adventists in a region traversed by a diameter of sixty miles, and enclosed within a circumference of nearly two hundred.

Brethren, it is my heart's prayer to God that he will glorify himself in our meeting. And I do earnestly and heartily invite all who can consistently leave home for a season, to aid us with their prayers and efforts and presence. There are but few Adventists here, and in the name of God let us set up a banner. Will you come? Probably we cannot depend altogether, nor to any very large extent, on accommodations with the people, though I hope on inquiry to find a liberal spirit in this regard. Those however who can bring some appurtenances with them, may do well to do so.

Dear Bro. Shimeall, of N. Y., wrote me thus: "Again, yes! 1868! a great year. On the Sabbath eve following the New Year, I preached on 'The year of our Lord 1868, the most portentous year in the history of the world since the fall of man.'" From the description you give of the great world as it now is, who can doubt this; pregnant as it is with those events preparatory to the stupendous incoming crisis?

Such is the testimony of a learned and good man, and not of one only, but many. O that we may be filled with the Spirit. Brethren and sisters, once more, save a time and place in your calculations and arrangements for this meeting. Precise time and locality will soon be given. The tent is that with which Bro. Wendell goes, who has signified his willingness to come and aid us in this great work. C. Colegrove.

Sardinia, N. Y.

P. S. Brethren may ask,—How can we get there? Answer. A Rail Road is building directly from Buffalo to this place; but is now finished only eight miles, leaving a distance of fifteen miles by other conveyance. Train leaves Buffalo at 3.45 P. M. Further notice hereafter. C. C.

Tent Meeting in Missouri.

The Lord willing, there will be a tent and campmeeting in Missouri, commencing Tuesday, May 26th, and continuing over the following Sabbath. The location selected for the meeting is in a beautiful grove, some five miles west of the city Court House, perhaps six miles from the river. It will be near the Shelionham Station, which is a depot on the Pacific R. R. The cars leave on Seventh Street, not far from the Court House. We expect Bro. Clark with his tent from Amboy, Ill.

This looks like a great undertaking for us out here, isolated from all our Advent christian friends East, North and South, and we almost shudder at the sight of it; but then the same unchanging God, who has carried us so safely through great undertakings before, will do so now if we trust in him. But a short time ago St. Louis was in a slave State, and a home and rendezvous for the most wicked and unprincipled slave traders of our country. It is a very wicked city now. Sunday is a holiday. The people generally are opposed to us, and the truths we preach; very much more so than to any others, because we love the colored people. Our action may be premature, but the ball has been set in motion, and we cannot recede.

Will our brethren and sisters pray earnestly for us that God will sustain us? We have no means as yet for finances. We see by the paper that Bro. Grant is coming out this way about that time. If he could come here then, his advent will be hailed with joy. Are there not some churches East who could club together and raise money enough to send us a good, judicious and spiritual brother to labor with us through the meeting, and onward a few weeks? We shall raise what money we can here. The Lord will provide.

In behalf of the Conference Board,

H. K. Flagg.

P. S. We do not invite any to come and help us who cannot come well recommended by the Second Advent Mission Board. H. K. F.

Tent and Campmeeting.

There is to be a tent and campmeeting, to commence June 8th, 1868, and continue one week, to be held in the timber between the branches of the Maquoketa, nine miles from Maquoketa City, eight miles from Canton, twenty miles south-east of Cascade, twenty-four miles from Bellevue (on the Mississippi river), in Jackson Co., Iowa. Eld. Miles Grant is to be there to preach the word. We cordially invite all who are interested in saving souls from death, preachers and lay members, to come and help us. This is a new field. We need help. All bring tents and provision that can. Leave your hobbies behind. Come in the Spirit of Christ. Provision will be made for horse-keeping and board for those that cannot board themselves. We expect Bro. D. S. Clark, from Illinois, to be there with the large tent for our meeting-house.

In behalf of the Committee,

Moses Chandler.

Conference.

A conference of brethren believing in the personal coming of Jesus Christ nigh at hand, in Mecosta, Isabella and adjoining counties, will convene at Millbrook, Mich., on Thursday evening before the first Sunday in June, to hold over Sunday. The object of this conference will be to unite the means of the scattered brethren, and employ an evangelist to proclaim the coming of Christ and kindred doctrines in this northern field. We hope to see a general attendance of preachers and people. We expect some preachers from other parts of the State. Millbrook is situated on the county line, between Mecosta and Isabella counties, and forty-five miles north of Ionia station, on the Detroit and Milwaukie Railroad. Provisions for the entertainment of all will be made.

John Bower,
Peter S. Decker,
Levi W. King,
Richard S. Decker, } Committee.

Quarterly Conferences.

The State Conference voted to hold not less than a dozen conferences and protracted meetings in the State the coming season. The design is to make more effort to get the truth into new places, and stir up an interest as far as possible to enlighten and save all that can be bought to the Savior, and the love of his appearing. Let all that desire a meeting of the State Conference, or a protracted meeting in their place, make it known immediately, and we will arrange accordingly. L. Boutell.

Tent and Campmeetings in Wisconsin.

A tent meeting will begin at Fairfield, Sauk Co., Wis., May 30th. Elder Miles Grant will help us. At the same place a campmeeting will begin June 1st.

A tent meeting will begin at Fenimore, Grant Co., Wis June 12th. Eld. N. A. Hitchcock will assist us. Wm. Sheldon.

Grove Meeting.

If the Lord will, we will attend a meeting on the camp-ground at Alton Bay, N. H., Sunday, June 7th, 1868.

C. Goodrich.
D. Churchill.
J. G. Smith.

Quar. Conf. at Addison, Vt.,

On 29th, 30th, and 31st of May, beginning with prayer meeting on Thursday evening, (28th) at 7 o'clock. Services at the chapel on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, at 10.30 A. M., 1.30 P. M., and 7.30. The friends of Hinesburgh, Bristol, Brookville, Vergennes, and other places, are cordially invited to come and aid in making this one of the old-fashioned times of refreshing.

G. W. Stetson, Sup.

Quarterly Conference.

The third quarterly session of the Advent Christian State Conference of New Hampshire will be held in Sutton, N. H., commencing on Thursday, at five o'clock P. M., May 28th, and hold over the following Lord's day.

A. W. Sibley, Secretary.

N. Y. State Mission Tent.

A meeting will be held, if the Lord will, in the N. Y. S. Mission Tent, at Sardinia, Erie Co., N. Y., commencing June 4th, and continuing as long as it shall seem to be the will of the Lord.

J. Wendell.

Conference.

There will be a quarterly conference in Bridgewater, Vt., Saturday and Sunday, May 23d and 24th, services beginning with prayer, Friday, 7 P. M. Business and conference Saturday, 10 A. M., preaching 2 P. M., and Sunday 10.30 A. M. and 2 P. M. Lord's supper after morning service.

G. W. Stetson.

Notice.

We are requested by Bro. I. C. Humes, of Providence, R. I., to say that there is a bundle of bedding at the Providence and Worcester Depot, Providence, R. I., which was left there last fall from the campmeetings. One bed tick, two sheets, two pillow cases, one or two comfortables, two shawls, and a razor. By writing to Bro. Humes, the owner can have them sent at once.

Tent Meeting.

I want all that desire a tent meeting during the season in their locality to write me at once, so I can make my arrangements not to travel over the ground more than once, as I had to do last season. Write at once. My address is Edenboro, Erie Co., Pa. J. Wendell.

The Maine Tract Fund.

Wm. H. Mitchell,
R. R. York,
S. K. Partridge, } Society Officers.

It was resolved at the last annual conference that our ministers in the State raise, by subscription or otherwise, ten dollars each for the Maine Tract Fund for 1868. We hope the brethren and sisters will take hold of this matter with the ministry and do their part. All remittances and orders for tracts will be sent to the Agent,

J. A. Libby, West Poland, Maine.

MEETINGS.

Sunday School 10 o'clock every Sunday.
Love Feast 2 o'clock every Sunday.
Preaching 7 o'clock Sunday evenings.
Meetings every evening during the week.

To the Preaching Brethren.

Preaching brethren are requested to make no appointments for Guilford until they find out whether they conflict with others.

S. Robinson, Cor. Sec.

Bro. Leonard S. Rand is chosen corresponding secretary of the church in Dover, N. H. Brethren wishing to go there to preach, will please correspond with him.

Preaching brethren intending to visit Lewiston, Me., before sending their appointments, will please consult the committee through Albert Burgess, [illegible] H. Wolcott, Corresponding Secretary.

Rufus W. Pierce.

NEEDED.

Christian, you are needed in this day of anxious thought,
When the words and acts of freemen for gain are sold and bought;
When the blush which modest virtue "lang syne" was wont to wear,
Is displaced by brazen vices, and the "cheek" they always bear;
When the evils of this life call so loudly for relief,
And the growth of wily wickedness is far beyond belief;
When the eyes of "Father's children" are watching for the night
Of the Just One, who is coming with the power to end this night;
Which tries and grieves the faithful, and makes their journey hard,
To the land of blessed promise, to the home of rich reward.
You are needed in the home, where the life of pain begins,
Where the child first learns to love its goodness or its sins;
There to season with your "salt" all the movings to and fro,
And implant the holy seed which to life may chance to grow.
You are needed in the field, where impartial rains descend;
You are needed in the mart where gain and greediness contend.
You are needed in the shop with the "hammer of the Word,"
Striking blows that tend to honor, tend to magnify your Lord.
You are needed in the street, hasting on with eager feet,
Seeking out the wayward sinner, where the ways of danger meet;
Asking, urging him to come to the fountain filled with blood,
And through confidence in Jesus, become reconciled to God.
You are needed on the land, you are needed on the sea,
Preaching Jesus crucified, telling all "salvation's free";
Gathering in the lonely outcast, catching up the fallen one,
Speaking words of living hope to each mortal 'neath the sun.
You are needed for your counsel, for your prayers, for your power,
You are needed everywhere, you are needed every hour.
Then arise from indolence and gird you for the strife,
Which is pregnant with the weal of seekers after life.
Clothe you with the righteousness of Christ, your living head,
Forgetting all the filthiness which lingers with the dead,
And worthless clothing of the flesh, which sin has made corrupt.
For the beauty of the robe which Jesus says, "accept."
Wage war with Satan's hosts, despoil the cunning snare
Which evil has arranged for the careless everywhere;
So shall men be reclaimed from the ways of death and hell,
So shall praise to our Redeemer, who has loved us all so well,
Be the fruits of christian living, be the great reward at last,
When the chance to do for men what we may is ever past.

For the World's Crisis.

THE YEAR OF JUBILEE.

"And thou shalt number seven sabbaths of years unto thee, seven times seven years; and the space of the seven sabbaths of years shall be unto thee forty and nine years. Then shalt thou cause the trumpet of the jubilee to sound, on the tenth day of the seventh month, in the day of atonement shall ye make the trumpet sound throughout all your land. And ye shall hallow the fiftieth year, and proclaim liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof; it shall be a jubilee unto you; and ye shall return every man unto his possession, and ye shall return every man unto his family. A jubilee shall that fiftieth year be unto you; ye shall not sow, neither reap that which groweth of itself in it, nor gather the grapes in it of thy vine undressed." —Lev. 25: 8–11.

This year is so plainly stated, that I cannot see how there can be but one mind concerning it. "Seven times seven years shall be unto thee forty and nine years." These years were all to pass before the fiftieth year would commence. The last year of the forty-nine could be no part of the fiftieth year. The jubilee year could not begin until the forty-nine had ended. Mr. Smith states in his late large Bible Dictionary, "Was the jubilee every forty-ninth or fiftieth year? If the plain words of Lev. 25: 10 are to be followed, this question need not be asked." "The statement that the jubilee was the fiftieth year after the succession of seven weeks of years, and that it was distinguished from, not identical with, the seventh sabbatic year, is as plain as language can make it. The simple view, and the only one which accords with the sacred text, is, that the year which followed the seventh sabbatical year was the jubilee which was intercalated between two series of sabbatic years, so that the next year was the first of a new half century, and the seventh year after that was the first sabbatic year of the other series."

This is a plain statement of fact. As the seventh day cannot be the sixth day, nor any part of it, so the fiftieth year cannot be any part of the forty-ninth. The whole thing is as plainly stated in the text, as is the statement that forty-nine years and one more make fifty years.

Josephus says, "He (Moses) ordained that they should do the same after seven times seven years, which in all are forty-nine years; and that fiftieth year is called by the Hebrews the jubilee."

In an ancient work by Dr. John Jahn, translated from the Latin by Thomas C. Upham, which treats on Jewish Antiquities, I find the following under the head of "The Jubilee": "The jubilee followed seven sabbatic years, i. e., was on the fiftieth year. To this statement the Jews generally, their Rabbins and the Caraites agree, and say further, that the argument of those who maintain that it was on the forty-ninth year, for the reason that the omission to till the ground for two years in succession, viz., the forty-ninth and fiftieth, would produce a famine, is not to be attended to. It is not to be attended to, simply because these years of rest, being known long before, and the people would of course lay up provision for them."

It is true that the sacred year given to the Jews commenced in the spring, and of course would end at the same time. Where forty-nine years would end, the fiftieth would begin. This fiftieth year was the jubilee year. The trumpet of the jubilee was to sound on the tenth day of the seventh month of the fiftieth year, and not in the forty-ninth year. Surely the jubilee would not be announced until they came to it, and they could not come to it until the forty-nine had ended. Therefore the last year of the forty-nine could not be any part of the jubilee year. To say that the fiftieth year was the forty-ninth, or any part of it, would be like saying that the seventh day is the sixth, which is an absurdity. From the plain reading of the text, there can be but one mind on the question, which year of fifty years is the jubilee. Or, in other words, what year would come next after forty-nine years had passed?

Nor was the fiftieth year the first year of the next seven years. For the land was to rest during the year of jubilee. Dr. Smith says in the work referred to, "The soil was kept under the same condition of rest as had existed during the preceding sabbatic year. There was to be neither ploughing, sowing, nor reaping; but the chance produce was to be left for the use of all comers." This is clearly expressed in Lev. 25: 10–13.

Now as the Jews were to sow their land six years, preceding the seventh year, and as they were not to sow their land on the fiftieth year, this fiftieth year could not be one of the six years in which they were to till their land. Therefore, the fiftieth could not be one of the next fifty years. They were to begin the cycle with a year in which they sowed their land, and as they did not sow their land in the fiftieth year, this year could not be the first year of the next cycle of years embraced in the jubilee period. They went out free, and every man to his possessions, in the fiftieth year. The next year following was the first year of the next fifty. Therefore, fifty years must precede the commencement of the next jubilee cycle. The fiftieth year could not be the first of another series of years.

As they could not till their land on the fiftieth year, and as they must till the land six years before they came to the sabbatical year, it is manifestly absurd to say that the fiftieth year was the first year of the next seven years. For, if the fiftieth year was the first year of the next seven years, then the land would be untilled two years in the seven, the first and the seventh. This would be a violation of the law, which required them to sow their land six years before they came to the year of rest.

SPIRITUAL ADULTERY.

Spiritual adultery has become so fashionable in these days that a majority of the people want nothing said about it. The devil seems to have completely accomplished what he has labored long and persistently to do. He has got the church and the world so mixed up that you can hardly tell them apart. We would say nothing if the world had united with the church by becoming elevated to the high position she originally held. But when the church forsakes Christ—her living head—and joins hands with the devil, we must cry aloud and spare not. It is every christian's duty to raise his voice against the evil.

God has not changed. His commands do not accommodate themselves to the desires of unsanctified human nature. They are unequivocal. Therefore, when we see professed christians depart from primitive purity—compromise their religion with the deceiver, and settle down in the broad way to ruin—we must sound the warning. It is every christian's duty to do the same; and the reasons are many.

1. This practice is contrary to the word of God. "Ye adulterers and adulteresses, know ye not that the friendship of the world is enmity with God? Whosoever, therefore, will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God."—James 4: 4. This is too plain to be overlooked. Whosoever seeks the happiness and pleasures of the world instead of the joys which God gives his children, is his enemy. "Ye cannot serve God and mammon." "Be ye not unequally yoked with unbelievers; for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness, and what communion hath light with darkness? And what concord hath Christ with Belial; or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel? And what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? For ye are the temple of the living God; as God hath said, I will dwell in them, and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people."—2 Cor. 6: 14–16.

2. This practice is contrary to the teachings of men eminent for their piety. Hear the testimony of John Wesley on this subject. He says:

"Whatever it costs, flee spiritual adultery! Have no friendship with the world. However tempted thereto by profit or pleasure, contract no intimacy with worldly-minded men. And if thou hast contracted with any such already, break it off without delay. Yes, if thy ungodly friend be dear to thee as a right eye, or useful as a right hand, yet confer not with flesh and blood, but pluck out the right eye, cut off the right hand, and cast them from thee! It is not an indifferent thing. Thy life is at stake—eternal life or eternal death! And is it not better to go into eternal life, having one eye or one hand, than having both, to be cast into hell fire? When thou knewest no better, the times of of ignorance God winked at. But now their eyes are opened, now the light is come, walk in the light! Touch not pitch, lest thou be defiled. At all events 'keep thyself pure.' But whatever others do, whether they will hear or whether they will forbear, hear this: However importuned or tempted thereto, have no friendship with the world. Look around and see the melancholy effect it has produced. How many have fallen by this very thing! They would take no warning; they would converse, and that intimately with earthly-minded men, till they measured back their steps to earth again. O come out from among them! from all unholy men, however harmless they may appear, 'and be ye separate;' at least so far as to have no intimacy with them. As your fellowship is with the Father, and his Son Jesus Christ, so let it be with those and those only, who at least seek the Lord Jesus in sincerity."

Payson was a holy man and an eminently useful minister of Christ. In early life he renounced the world. He says, "After long doubting the propriety, and even the lawfulness of mixing at all in society, where duty does not call, and after suffering a number of times for induging myself in it, I am at length taught to renounce it entirely; and it is not a needless scrupulosity. It does appear a duty to shun all communication with the world, when there is no well-grounded reason to hope to do good. There are to be sure, many very plausible reasons, but I doubt whether they will bear the test of Scripture."

To one who urged him to go into society and to frequent public amusements, he wrote: "Can a man take coals of fire in his bosom, and his clothes not be burned? If he can, he may mix freely with the world, and not be contaminated. But I am not the one who can do it. . . . When I go into company, if it is pleasant and agreeable, it has a tendency only to fix my thoughts on earth, from which it is my duty and my desire to turn them,—to give me a distaste for serious duties, especially prayer and meditation, and to render me desirous of the applause and approbation of those with whom I associate. I cannot avoid feeling some desire for its friendship; and this friendship the apostle assures us, and my own experience feelingly convinces me, is enmity with God."

"I have at length obtained satisfaction respecting doubts about society; not however till I was brought to give it up. After I had done so, it appeared so plain and proper, that I wondered how a doubt could ever have arisen on this subject. Two or three plain rules I find of wonderful service in deciding all difficult cases. One is, to do nothing of which I doubt, in any degree, the lawfulness; the second, to consider every thing as unlawful which indisposes me for prayer, and interrupts communion with God; the third is, never to go into any company, business or situation, in which I cannot conscientiously ask and expect the divine presence. By the help of these short rules, I settle all my doubts in a trice, and find that many things I have hitherto indulged in are, if not utterly unlawful, at least inexpedient, and I can renounce them without many sighs."—Glad Tidings.

TRUST IN GOD.

All other refuges will sooner or later fail. Everything on earth is liable to perish; and even if it were not so, man himself decays, his strength fails, and at last he lies down in the dust, to "be the food of worms." "None can keep alive his own soul." Then why not seek for safety in the only way in which it can be found—that is in GOD? He only can deliver us from sin and all its evil consequences.

"Other refuge have I none,
Hangs my helpless soul on thee;
* * * * * * *
All my trust on thee is stayed,
All my help from thee I bring;
Cover my defenceless head
With the shadow of thy wing."

"My soul trusteth in thee: yea, in the shadow of thy wings will I make my refuge." Psalm 57: 1.

Who has a right to trust in God? Surely not the man that persists in rebellion. But all who repent and turn from the error of their ways, may here find a place of refuge, and they can find it nowhere else. Trusting in God is having faith. Believe all he has said in his word. Believe and obey, and then your house is built upon the eternal Rock.

All are required to act. It is our duty to work. Although works do not make us christians, but being christians will make us work. We must work out what God works in. The reward is vastly greater than the work. For all our good works can never merit eternal life; yet this is what we expect to receive, if we "trust in the Lord and do good."

Reader, can you, do you trust in God? Have you any doubts in regard to the foundation of your hopes? All expectations, not founded on him, will be cut off and perish. Even if you obtain present temporal good, both you and your treasures must perish, unless you have a good hope in God, through Christ. If you are still going on in sin, let me entreat you to repent without delay. Come to the fountain, and wash and be clean. You can never atone for the past. But you must break off your sins by righteousness, and your iniquities by turning unto God. He is merciful and gracious, and ready to forgive. To some reader, this may be the last invitation, the last offer of mercy. O, seek the Lord while he may be found, and call upon him while he is near. Ask him to help you from this time forth to live soberly, righteously and godly. Give him your heart and hand, and resolve to live in his service, and thus choose that good part which shall never be taken from you. Delay not, but hasten to make your calling and election sure. Then you can live in peace, and rest in hope, for your trust will be in the Rock of ages, even the Lord who liveth and abideth forever.

"What could your Redeemer do
More than he hath done for you?
To procure your peace with God,
Could he more than shed his blood?
After all his flow of love,
All his drawings from above;
Why will ye your Lord deny?
Why will ye forever die?"
"Jesus ready stands to save you,
Full of pity, love and power;
He is able, he is willing, doubt no more."

Webster, Mass. F. H. CHAMBERLAIN.

LETTER FROM SR. R. M. ROWELL.

BRO. GRANT:—Every week, sunshine or storm, that blessed messenger, the Crisis, finds its way to my home, to cheer our hearts with its welcome face and gladsome news. It has become quite a family institution, which I feel that I can hardly dispense with.

In compliance with the request of friends, that I would write on my return from a recent trip to the Minnesota river, I embrace this my first opportunity to make out a short sketch for the Crisis. While my own heart is so often cheered by words of comfort and encouragement from different members of the Advent family, in various sections of the country, as they come to us stereotyped in your excellent paper, I thought that perhaps a few lines concerning the cause of God in this western country might be interesting to some of your readers in the East. Dear old New England, land of my fathers, and home of my youth, how I would love to stand once more upon its fir-crowned, granite hills, or wander along its sandy shores, and listen to the deep, base anthem of its cycling waves, as they roll on, on, in successive undulations, to break or beat on strands thousands of miles away. But dearer, far dearer than the longed-for view of the blue hills of my native land, would be the inestimable privilege of being present at some of your large gatherings, and listen to the words of truth, as they fall from the lips of some of your champions of the cause, and hear the brethren and sisters bring in their tithes into the store-house, while the Spirit of Christ ran and was glorified. But we are not to do our own pleasure in this world of toil and pain; we are all members of one body, hence all have our distinct work to do in the great vineyard, and the one great and absorbing wish of our heart should be to do our work faithfully, whatever and however assigned us; that when the Master of assemblies comes, we may be accounted worthy of a part in the great inheritance.

In compliance with a call from the church in Ottawa, to visit that place and discourse to them on the things of God; and having secured the services of our ministerial brethren to fill my place in this city, I took the cars Friday, Feb. 21st, at 11.30 o'clock A. M., for Waseca, where I arrived about 6 P. M. After passing about an hour at the Trowbridge House, where we took our supper, I got aboard the night stage for St. Peters, with one female passenger beside myself. We journeyed on through the cold, dark night, over a most miserable road, until I arrived at St. Peters, at about five o'clock the next morning, cold and tired. The fires were low, therefore I went to bed, but not to sleep for a number of hours. I finally dropped away to the land of slumbers for a short time, from which I was aroused to learn that Bro. Patten was waiting below, to convey me to Ottawa, where we arrived in time for dinner. Here I had the pleasure of meeting Eld. Lombard's wife, with whom I had been previously acquainted, and who, with her little ones, had been stopping here while her husband had been hard at work in the region round about, preaching the gospel. Found the brethren and sisters of Ottawa a faithful, working band. I spoke to the people that evening, and also spoke twice on the following day. After having given nine discourses in this place, with good results, I went to Cleveland, about ten miles from there, Monday, March 2nd, and preached there that night, and the following night, to full houses, with deep interest.

Wednesday evening, I preached at Scotch Lake, three miles from there. The house was so crowded with people, and the atmosphere was so suffocating, not only from the many breaths, but because the room was so very warm, and no proper way of ventilation, that I spoke with much difficulty. Bro. Scott has been laboring very earnestly in this section of country, and there has been the past winter quite a revival here under his efforts. Silently and faithfully at work in the vineyard, eternity only will reveal the efficient work that man has done in this western field. I think among the sons of men it is rare to find so humble and good a man. This people have warm hearts, and an earnest desire for the truth. I would gladly have remained with them longer, but engagements prevented. I here had the pleasure of meeting again Bro. and Sr. Meeker, who I found walking in the truth.

Mar. 5th returned to Ottawa, where I spoke to the people that evening for a short time; after which they were addressed by Eld. Fassett, who arrived that day from Minneapolis, in order to be here at the conference. Friday evening, Eld. Fassett gave an able discourse on the blessed hope. Saturday the conference convened. Elder Scott addressed us in the day, and Elder Miller (a son of father Miller) in the evening. This conference was a very interesting one. Brothers and sisters came in from abroad, and uniting their testimonies with those resident in the place, we had a heavenly sitting together in Christ Jesus. The friends here had fitted up a hall for the occasion, which was well occupied on Lord's day. Eld. Fassett gave the morning and evening discourses, while it fell to my lot to give the intervening one. Between the preaching exercises on Sunday, Eld. Lombard immersed four in the Minnesota river. Sunday evening we had an interesting season around the table of the Lord, and while the friends sang that always precious hymn to me—the intense, earnest prayer of my heart was, yes, "nearer my God to thee," even though it be accomplished through crosses heavy, and trials grievous; then with my waking thoughts bright with thy praise, out of my stony griefs, yes, out of these stony griefs, down deep in my heart, these annoyances and trials incident to a female Advent preacher, ever jarring upon a sensitive nature, and hidden from the cold, cruel world by a passing remark or a smile, out of them all—all, Bethel I'll raise to the God that bought me, and say, "Hitherto the Lord hath helped me."

"Nearer my God to thee,"

Monday, March 9th, I bade adieu to the friends in Ottawa, who had been so kind to me, especially Bro. and Sister Patten, whose house had been my home, and who, with dear Sr. Lombard, had proved themselves friends indeed, ministering to me in my necessities, and caring for me in my feeble health. God bless and reward them as I never can. In company with Bro. Small and wife, I journeyed on to Le Roy. After traveling about fifteen miles, I took supper at their house. This family came from the State of Maine. Father and mother, now in years, are living with their son. The old gentleman had been an Advent preacher in that State, but is now quite infirm. He will never more wander over the hills of Maine, and along the banks of the Kennebeck, to lead poor sinners to Christ; but I trust their happier lot will be to range the fair hills of Eden, and sing on the glorified shore. I traveled on three miles, and preached in Le Roy that night.

Tuesday, Mar. 10th, I rose early, and started for the Winnebago Agency, for I felt uneasy about making a connection with the friends there, who would be at the station early, expecting me on the stage. We rode on in the early dawn over the snow that lay spread out cold and stiff around us; through the noble trees of the Big Timber, which stretched their bare arms black and cheerless above our heads, while the entire scene was one of dreariness and gloom. As we journeyed on, I pondered over in my heart the cause of God in Ottawa, and the case of those for whom I earnestly labored and prayed, and who seemed so near the kingdom, and yet could not be induced to give up all for Christ. How like nothing to my heart seemed all our best efforts. "Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord of hosts"; and I felt to say with the poet, "But little have I done, but what has been done wrong; revivals have been short, and apostasies long. After all my groans and tears, I'm deeply in the rear; and have nothing to plead but pardoning love alone." As I thus mused, the sun showed his pleasant face above the horizon, and lit up the whole scene with his cheerful smile. The snow, before so cold and cheerless, grew radiant under his magic touch, and sparkled and shone as if bespangled with gems, which were all strewed over shrub and lesser trees, glistening bright and beautiful in the morning light. I thought of our cold and dark hearts, ere a Savior's love had penetrated their secret recesses, and how bright and beautiful they become under the warming, cheering influence of the Sun of righteousness. How his divine love permeates and warms our whole being, elevating all our aspirations, cleansing all the impure fountains of our life, and transforming us from being sons and daughters of men, to become sons of God and heirs to the everlasting kingdom, soon to be set up. Crossed the Le Seur river at Trivoli, and arrived at the Winnebago Agency, seven miles from Le Roy, cold and hungry. This was the first fire I had seen for the morning. I ordered breakfast, and sat down to warm.

I was glad to meet with Dr. Bentley and wife, who soon took me to their home in Medo. I felt very tired and worn, but thought I could realize something of the truth of the words, as "iron sharpeneth iron, so a man sharpeneth the countenance of his friend." Quite a number of the friends with whom I had worshiped many times in Utica, and who had since located in this place, were present at the meeting. Their presence gladdened my heart, and as they sang out in full, clear tones, "I'm going home to die no more," it seemed to impart new life to my worn frame, and I hoped, by patient continuance in well doing, to eventually enter the land where death shall have no dominion.

Eld. Lombard has been laboring faithfully in this region. He has organized a church of ten members, and others are ready to come in. The people regard him highly for his earnest, arduous labor and christian life. I preached in that vicinity seven times, and gave the closing discourse at the Goodwin school-house, Mar. 15th, to a crowded house, with deep interest.

March 17th, I took cars at Waseca for Winona, where I arrived that afternoon, having been absent twenty-five days, and given twenty-two discourses. Found my husband at the station waiting for me, and in a few minutes we were seated in our own home, in the presence of our family. What a blessed arrangement is this divine one of sitting the sons and daughters of men in families. How precious and endearing the ties that bind together the home circle. What in all the world could make up for its comforting, cheering, and elevating influences? What entire joy fills the whole being of the traveler, as he enters his own home; and how like music on the ear, and balm to the weary, worn heart, fall the words of welcome of those bound to us by the ties of nature, that we know well up from the full heart. Home is our happy resting-place, the one oasis in this dark, wicked world of turmoil and vexation. The cold, dark, wicked world is all outside, and here our weary, way-worn spirits rest, and are refreshed in the presence of those we love.

Mar. 22nd, I preached to the Advent church in this city, morning and evening. There was good attendance and interest. I am now, in compliance with the voted request of the church in Winona, preaching here half the time; the other half of my time is devoted in that way which I deem will best advance the cause of Christ in the region around about. Our prospects as a church, in this city, have not seemed so good for some time as at the present. Our meetings are increasing in interest and numbers. We trust the Lord is with us. Pray for us, that, as a church, we may be faithful, earnest and diligent, and be built up in spirituality and truth. Yours, patiently waiting for the glory that shall be revealed,

RUTH M. ROWELL.

A FATHER'S TRIBUTE.

An English laborer, whose child was suddenly killed by a falling beam, wrote the following lines suggested by the melancholy event. They are touchingly beautiful:—

Sweet, laughing child! the cottage door
Stands free and open now,
But O! its sunshine gilds no more
The gladness of thy brow;
Thy merry step hath passed away,
Thy laughing sport is hushed for aye.

Thy mother by the fireside sits,
And listens for thy call;
And slowly, slowly as she knits,
Her quiet tears down fall:
Her little hindering thing is gone,
And undisturbed she may work on!

"I'LL NA TRUST YE."

Two centuries ago it was thought an insult in the Highlands of Scotland to ask a note from a debtor. It was considered the same thing as saying, "I doubt your honor." If parties had business matters to transact, they stepped into the air, fixing their eyes upon the heavens, and each repeated his obligation, with no mortal witness. A mark was then carved on some rock or tree near by, as a remembrance of the compact. Such a thing as a breach of contract was rarely met with, so highly did the people regard their honor.

When the march of improvement brought the new mode of doing business, they were often pained by these innovations. An anecdote is handed down of a farmer who had been to the Lowlands and learned worldly wisdom. On returning to his native parish he had need of a sum of money, and made bold to ask a loan of a gentleman of means, named Stewart. This was cheerfully granted, and Mr. S. counted out the gold. This done, the farmer wrote a receipt, and offered it to the gentleman.

"What is this, man?" cried Mr. Stewart, eying the slip of paper.

"It is a receipt, sir, binding me to give ye back yer gold at the right time," replied Sandy.

"Binding ye? Well, my man, if ye canna trust yerself, I'm sure I'll na trust ye! Ye canna ha' my gold!" And gathering it up, he put it back in his desk and turned his key on it.

"But, sir, I might die," replied the canny Scotchman, bringing up an argument in favor of his new wisdom, "and my sons might refuse it ye. But this bit of paper would compel them."

"Compel them to sustain a dead father's honor?" cried the Scot. "They'll need compelling to do right, if this is the road ye're leading them! I'll neither trust ye nor them. Ye can gang elsewhere for money! But ye'll find nane in the parish that'll put more faith in a bit of paper than in a neighbor's word o' honor and his fear of God!"—The Christian.

A FAITHFUL WITNESS.—John Jay, when ambassador to France was once in a company of infidels at Paris. They talked on recklessly, venting their spite at the Bible. Jay was silent. It troubled them. He did not pronounce their shibboleth. They could not go on while that grave, just, true man sat there a silent spectator, a sort of solemn judge, rivetting at their gaze. No wonder his bearing forced them to speak, and when they asked, as if to relieve themselves of their confusion and provoke his acquiescence, "Do you believe in Jesus Christ?" his silence had prepared the way for his confusing and confounding answer: "I do, and I thank God that I do." He was silent at the right time, and when he spoke said the right thing.

MARRIED LIFE.—Do not run much from home; one's own hearth is of more worth than gold. Many a marriage begins like a rosy morning, and then falls like a snow-wreath. And why? Because the married pair neglect to be as well pleasing to each other after marriage as before. Endeavor always to please one another. Consider what the word "wife" expresses. The married woman is the husband's domestic faith. His honor and his home are under her keeping; his well being in her hand. Think of this.

Watering Horses in Harness.—Always loosen the check-rein before giving water to a horse. If watering with a pail, hold it no higher than is necessary to relieve the neck from pressure upon the collar. It is not natural for a horse to drink with his head up, any more, than it is for a man to get down to drink.

How to judge of a Calf.—The heifer calf of any breed, that at four or five weeks old, shows a heavy shoulder, thick, bull-neck, square, unfeminine muzzle, fore legs wide apart, and girth considerably larger around the chest than the loins, will never make a profitable milker.

HAVE WE THE LOVE OF JESUS?

Brothers and sisters in the Lord, if we have the love of Jesus, we cannot help loving each other. "If ye love me, keep my commandments," are Jesus' words, and his commandments are not grievous, but joyous, if we love him. "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world." If we love the world, the love of the Father is not in us. Before we knew the Lord, we walked after the course of this world, seeking worldly pleasures, fashion and frivolity; but O! what a change when the grace of God renews the heart. We begin to see how foolish and wicked we have been. The things we loved we now hate. And may the Lord help us to love nothing but what he loves. Love thinketh no evil.

While we walked in darkness, our attire must be attractive, fashionable, pleasing to the adulterous eye; but as soon as we follow Jesus, the world will hate us. If there is nothing about us the world loves, then we may know we are not of the world. The world will love its own. Let our adorning be not of plaiting the hair, or of wearing of apparel; but "of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price." May the Lord help us so to be until he comes. We must be without spot and blameless before him. Your Sister looking for Jesus,

THE UNREASONABLE CHILD.

When I was last in the railroad-cars, I saw there a child about two years old, who was not contented to sit quietly by its mother, enjoying the dainties she gave it. The little creature was determined to run along by herself to the door; nothing else would amuse her. It was not long since she learned to walk alone. The train was moving with great speed; and now her mother held her firmly by the arm, and would not let her go. Oh, how angry and rebellious the little one was! She struggled; she set up the shrillest of cries; she pulled with all her baby might toward the walk that looked so smooth and and pretty for her feet. That was what she wanted to do,—run along alone; and she thought her mamma was an unreasonable tyrant, as far as a baby mind could think so. No, she did not want to look from the window; she didn't want the seed-cake; she wouldnt look at pictures. There was that enticing walk before her; and no sort of reason, as far as she could comprehend, why she should not run on it as on the nursery-floor at home. But everybody in the car could see that the mother was right and good and kind.

So, no doubt, the messenger angels see, many times, how good and kind our heavenly Father is in what he denies us; and, where they can not see the full reason for the denial, they know that there is the best of reasons in the mind of God. They know that it is to hold us back from harm to ourselves. They see that we would sometimes quite destroy ourselves if we were allowed to have that, after which, in our willfulness, we fret and struggle, loudly complaining; saying, as far we dare to do so, "Lord, I knew thee that thou art a hard master."

How very dark and mysterious seemed the ways of God to the sorrowful women of Jerusalem, who saw their Lord and Master allowed to fall into the hands of wicked men, to be insulted, tortured, and slain! But, by reason of this very event, the great multitude whom no man can number shall rejoice for ever.

Let us say in the sweet words of the poet,—

"O God! I thank thee for each wish
Denied as well as granted;
Since oftimes what I craved, if given,
Had been what least I wanted.

With veiled archangels round the throne,
We cover up our faces,
And wait the shining of that day
That every cloud displaces:

Counting, the while, our losses gain;
Our trials, tender mercies;
And reaping sweetest joy from pain,
And triumph from reverses."

BE CHEERFUL.

"We cannot catch flies with vinegar," says an old Spanish proverb. No more can we win love by frowns, or add many gems to the Savior's crown by sharp words or gloomy looks. "The heart leaps kindly back to kindness," and is a sort of mercury in the human barometer, rising or sinking at the slightest change in the social atmosphere. How easily will even a smile lift the dark clouds of real grief; while the cold look or unkind word falls upon the spirits like a leaden weight.

Oh, I do so love to visit at my uncle Alden's!" said a little girl of seven summers; "they pleasant me so down there!" Then we knew the secret of the success and the happy home of that New England pastor away down among the salt marshes and bleak east winds of the Atlantic coast. He had learned to scatter smiles" with the good seed,"—the bright sunshine which insured the crop.

Said Haydn, the great musician, "Since God has given me a cheerful heart, it will be pardoned me if I serve him with a cheerful spirit."

And an earnest christian writer happily expressed it when he said, "The good soldier of Jesus Christ must possess a lightness and brightness of heart, an unfailing elasticity of spirits, if he is to break his way to the heavenly country through the serried ranks of his spiritual foes."

And the poet has aptly sung—

"'Tis well to walk with a cheerful heart
Wherever our fortunes call,
With a friendly glance and an open hand,
And a gentle word for all:
Since life is a thorny and difficult path,
Where toil is the portion of man,
We all should endeavor, while passing along,
To make it as smooth as we can."

KEEP THE BOYS AT HOME.

"Come, Bennie, take your dinner, and be off to school," said Mrs. Malcolm. "I want to get you out of the way as soon as possible."

"But, mother, why can't I come to dinner?" asked the boy. "I've staid two days this week already."

"Because, child, I shall have so much to do that I can not stop to get dinner. The Ladies' Charitable Society meets here this afternoon; and I can not have you at home turning every thing upside down."

"But I want a better dinner than this," said Bennie, glancing contemptuously at the sweet cake his mother had given him.

"Then go to Berry's saloon and get it," said his mother. "Here is some money. Get what you want."

Bennie went to school, and spent the interval between sessions at Berry's saloon. Several boys of a larger growth were there. One gave him a glass of ale; another offered him a cigar, which he attempted to smoke, thus taking the first step in a bad course. These scenes were repeated several times each week, until Bennie Malcolm could drink, swear, and play cards with the lowest inebriate.

A few years passed, and, one day, Bennie was taken home in a state of beastly intoxication; and that mother, who had been so absorbed in other duties as to forget her obligations to the child God had given her, saw, for the first time, that her child was ruined.

Let parents be careful to know what places their children visit, and what influences are thrown around them, lest, when it is too late, they mourn over their lost and ruined manhood.—Christian Banner.

ANECDOTES OF ELEPHANTS.

Mr. Palmer, in his "Anecdotes of Elephants," relates the following:

"A troop of elephants were accustomed to pass a green-stall on their way to water. The woman who kept the stall took a fancy to one of the elephants, and frequently regaled her favorite with refuse greens and fruits, which produced a corresponding attachment on the part of the elephant towards the woman. One day, the group of elephants unfortunately overturned the poor woman's stall, and in her haste to preserve her goods she forgot her little son, who was in danger of being trampled to death. The favorite elephant perceived the child's danger, and taking him up gently with his trunk, carefully placed him on the roof of a shed close at hand."

An amusing anecdote is given by Captain Williamson of an elephant, named "Pangal," which showed remarkable sagacity. This animal, when on a march, refused to carry on his back a larger load than he thought was right and proper. He would pull down as much of the burden as reduced it to the weight which he conceived it was fair for him to bear. One day the quarter-master of the brigade became enraged at this apparent obstinacy of the animal, and very cruelly threw a tent pin at his head. A few days afterwards, as the elephant was on his way from camp to water he overtook the quarter-master, and, seizing him in his trunk, lifted him into a large tamarind tree, which overhung the road, and left him to cling to the branches, and get down in the best way that he could.

Porus, a king of India, in a battle with Alexander the Great, being severely wounded, fell from the back of his elephant. The Macedonian soldiers, supposing him to be dead, pushed forward in order to despoil him of his rich clothes and accoutrements. The noble and faithful elephant, however, standing over the body of its master, boldly repelled every one who dared to approach; and, while the enemy was at bay, took the bleeding monarch up with his trunk, and gently placed him on his back. The troops of Porus came by this time to his relief, and the king was saved; but the faithful elephant died of the wounds which he received in the heroic defense of his master.

THE CHIMNEY-SWEEP.

A poor chimney-sweeper's boy was employed at the house of a lady of rank, to cleanse the chimney of her chamber. Finding himself on the hearth of the lady's dressing-room, and perceiving no one there, he waited a few moments to take a view of the beautiful things in the apartment. A gold watch, richly set with diamonds, particularly caught his attention, and he could not forbear taking it in his hand. Immediately the wish arose in his mind,—"Ah, if thou hadst such a one!"

After a pause, he said to himself,—"But if I take it, I shall be a thief. And yet," continued he, "no one sees me. No one? Does not God see me, who is present everywhere? Should I then be able to say my prayers to him, after I had committed this theft? Could I die in peace?"

Overcome by these thoughts, a cold shivering seized him.

"No!" said he, laying down the watch; "I had much rather be poor, and keep my good conscience, than rich, and become a rogue."

At these words, he hastened back into the chimney. The Countess, who was in a room adjoining, sent for him the next morning, and thus accosted him,—

"My little friend, why did you not take the watch yesterday?"

The boy fell on his knees, speechless and astonished.

"I heard everything you said," continued her ladyship. "Thank God for enabling you to resist this temptation, and be watchful over yourself for the future. From this moment you shall be in my service. I will both maintain and clothe you; nay, more; I will procure you good instruction, that shall ever guard you from the danger of similar temptations."

The boy burst into tears; he was anxious to express his gratitude, but he could not. The countess strictly kept her promise, and had the pleasure to see him grow up a pious and sensible man.

A GOOD LITTLE GIRL.

One cold winter, when the ground was so covered with snow that the little birds could not find anything to eat, the little daughter of a miserly rich man gathered up all the crumbs she could find, and was going to carry them out and scatter them on the snow. Her father saw her, and asked her what she was going to do. She told him; and he said, "What good will it do? The crumbs will not be enough to feed one in a hundred of the birds."

"I know, it dear father," said she; "but I shall be glad to save even one in a hundred of them, if I cannot save them all."

The father thought a moment. He knew that many persons were suffering in the village, and he had refused to help any because he could not help them all. His conscience struck him; and he told his little daughter to break a loaf of bread into crumbs for the birds, while he went to scatter loaves among the poor villagers.

PREVALENT PRAYER.

I cannot let Thee go without thy blessing!
My heart is heavy with my weight of care,
And unbelief a myriad fears suggesting,
Maketh the burden more than I can bear.
But, as thy servant in the ancient story
Strove with the angel to the break of day,
So will I agonize, my God, before thee,
So mid the darkness will I strive and pray.

My heart is sinful, but I plead the merit
Of Him who on the cross of Calvary died;
My strength is weakness, but my weary spirit
Flies to its refuge,—Christ the crucified.
My foes are strong, but my dear Lord hath risen,
And liveth now to intercede for me;
My faith grows bolder as I claim thy promise,
I can do all things if thou strengthen me.

Yes, while I plead, the gloomy shadows vanish,
The clouds uplift, the day begins to break!
O, weary heart, the joyous morning cometh,
Thy God hath blessed thee for thy Savior's sake!
My quiet chamber hath become a bethel,
The spot whereon I knelt is holy ground;
For, mid the darkness and the spirit's conflict,
"A very present help" my God I've found.

LIFE, NOT DEATH; OR, Is Popular Theology and Universalism True?

BY JAMES E. WELLS, ROCHESTER, N. Y.

"The wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life."—Rom. 6:23.

(Concluded.)

WHO WILL RECEIVE ETERNAL LIFE?

Our blessed Jesus said that he would give his sheep eternal life. Who are his sheep? If we let modern theologists interpret this for us, they will try and make us believe that all are his sheep; but they will divide them into two classes; for if he gives his sheep eternal life, they must adopt the Universalist doctrine, that all are good sheep [or finally will be], or there are good and bad ones; but if they are good or bad, they are sheep; then they will have eternal life. Does this harmonize with the Bible? I answer, no. There is only one class that will ever have eternal life; for he said, "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my word shall not pass away." And he that said this said that his sheep knew his voice, and they followed him. Do all follow him? Do all love to obey him, and confess him as their perfect Savior? If they do not, they are none of his sheep, and they will not receive eternal life, but the opposite, which is death. There is no way to escape death, only by believing on the Lord Jesus Christ.

WHERE ARE THE DEAD?

But I hear some one ask, Where are the dead? where are those dear friends whom we have buried, who have died in hope of eternal life? have they not gone to heaven where Jesus is? are they not enjoying all the happiness that is promised to the faithful ones? are they not singing sweet anthems with the holy angels? Dear reader, what is the song that the righteous will sing when they are safely landed on that golden shore? There is only one song recorded in the oracles of truth that they will sing: "And they sang a new song, saying, Thou art worthy to take the book and to open the seals thereof; for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation; and hast hast made us unto our God kings and priests; and we shall reign on the earth." When will we sing this beautiful song of redemption? Do we not learn from the above, that it will be when we are redeemed, and made kings and priests of God? "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection; on such the second death hath no power; but they shall be priests of God and of Christ." We see by this that we are to be made priests of God after the resurrection. Then we will sing that new song, Worthy is the Lamb, that has redeemed us and brought us out of great tribulation. Now you see, if your friends have gone to heaven they can not sing that song; and as that is the only song that the Bible speaks anything of, they must remain silent until the resurrection morning.

But have our dead friends gone up to heaven or down to hell? Do they go to their reward, or do they receive their punishment before the judgment is set? The Bible does not inform us of but one judgment, and that does not take place until after the resurrection; and as that tribunal will be convened after the resurrection, consequently, men will not receive their sentence before that time. Jesus says (John 5:28, 29), "Marvel not at this; for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation." Why is it that men will not believe the Bible just as it reads, without putting a construction on it to suit their own views, which have been instilled into their minds when young? Christ says, They "shall come forth," not come down from heaven, nor up from hell; but "shall come forth." There is nothing said about an uncompounded, indivisible, intangible, simple essence, that flies away when our bodies are cold in death. No, but they "shall come forth" from their long resting-place,—from the grave, from the enemy's land. Did Christ, on that imposing and solemn occasion, speak so as to be understood, when he cried with a loud voice, "Lazarus, come forth"? Can any one believe that Lazarus, whom the Lord loved so well, went to heaven, and was called back to this world of sin and sorrow, to be again subjected to trials and temptations? Can it be supposed for one moment that something went to heaven, while he (Lazarus) lay in the tomb, and this something, if conscious, was enjoying the glories of heaven with holy angels around the throne of God? It cannot be that we believe anything that is so foreign to the Bible. It cannot be that we believe that any body or any thing goes up to heaven when they die, when Jesus says that no man hath ascended up to heaven. Can we believe this, or will we say that it means something else, or that it cannot be explained? It needs no explanation. It explains itself. It seems singular that such plain language as this is the greatest stumbling-block that modern theologists encounter. Why is it? Simply because it strikes at the base of their human structure. See, it totters. Soon it will fall, and the truth of God will triumph. Then we will see him face to face. Then we will know as we are known. O that that glorious day may be hastened. May we soon see that morning star arise, that will never go down. Peter, when speaking upon this subject, says of David, "Men and brethren, let me freely speak unto you of the patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried. . . . For David is not ascended into the heavens."—Acts 2:29, 34. Did Peter get wrong instruction from his Master on this most important theme of the Bible? Paul says, in speaking upon the resurrection, that "if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins. Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished."—1 Cor. 15:17, 18. But how can they perish if they are in heaven? If they are in heaven now, and are enjoying all of its pleasures, why the need of a resurrection? why put them back in the old cumbersome body, when their immortal soul or spirit can fly hither and thither in God's vast domain? Then it is all nonsense when Paul says, "If Christ be not raised," those who died believing in him (Christ) "are perished." They are not perished, if they are in heaven. And if they are not in heaven, where are they? We have proved that they are in their graves, by showing that Christ raised men from the dead.

Jeremiah, when prophesying of the persecution of Christ by Herod, and the putting to death of all the children in Judea two years old and under, says, "Thus saith the Lord, A voice was heard in Ramah, lamentation and bitter weeping; Rachel weeping for her children, refused to be comforted for her children, because they were not. Thus saith the Lord, Refrain thy voice from weeping, and thine eyes from tears; for thy work shall be rewarded, saith the Lord; and they shall come again from the land of the enemy. And there is hope in thine end, saith the Lord, that thy children shall come again to their own border."

Go where we will, we find all of the inspired writers are agreed about the sleep of the dead. Not one of them says that they are in any other place than the grave. Then let us away with this false doctrine. Let us be honest with ourselves, honest with our neighbor, and honest with our God. After God has given us light on this great subject, do not let us hide it under a bushel; but let us go out into the world and confess that we have been deceived and mistaken all our life, and that now, instead of the Bible being a book of mysteries, it is God's own revelation concerning his dealings with us; and if it is a revelation it is no more a mystery, but it is plain common sense, and every man should take heed to it and receive the promise of eternal life while the lamp holds out to burn; and if you do not receive the promise in this life, you can never secure it; for John says, "The sea gave up the dead which were in it; and death and hell [the grave] delivered up the dead which were in them; and they were judged, every man according to his works."—Rev. 20:13. Here we see that the judgment takes place immediately after the resurrection. Then there will be no chance of mercy being extended, no more intercession by our Savior. When he leaves the mediatorial seat, he becomes our Judge; and after we are judged, and receive our final sentence, there can be no appeal to a higher court. When here, we had the privilege of appealing to that higher court; but if we made no preparation, if we would not believe the witnesses that had been sent, if we thought that there was not enough evidence on file to prove that all could be saved only by faith in God and repentance in this life, then it will be too late to confess our mistake. Jesus says, "How often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not."

Soon, dear unconverted man, the trump of the archangel will sound. Soon Jesus will come as our King. Soon the dead in Christ will hear his voice, "Come forth!" Do you want to see Jesus, cold-hearted christian? Do you want to see Jesus, poor backslider? you who have crucified him afresh in the house of his friends? can you welcome him back to earth? can you say, "Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly"? Dear sinner, can you look on Him that was pierced and say, It is he, it is Jesus, and he will take me to his home, because he died for me and for all? No, no, these can not be your thoughts in view of [illegible]

[illegible] deaths, while the righteous will die but one, and some will not die at all. Paul says (1st Thess. 4:17), "Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them [they that are raised] in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air." Some of the dead have lain thousands of years, and now they are going to meet their Savior, going to meet him whom they have often seen by faith. Some persons tell us that no one that has ever been to heaven has come back to tell us anything about it; but still these same persons, when speaking of the death of a very pious man, will say, "He is better off"; "He has gone to heaven." Now we say, if any have gone there who have died, all have gone there who died in the faith.

The Bible gives an account of the death of several persons, who were brought to life again by the mighty power of God. What is their testimony in regard to where they were when they were dead, and in their graves? what do they say about being in heaven? what can they say if they were ever there? They can say a great deal; for just look at what John said about heaven when he was on the isle of Patmos, and he had never been there only in a vision. Why have they not said something about it? given us one cheering word? told us of one glorious thing that they had seen? I will tell you why. It is because they never went there, or our dear Savior was mistaken when he said, No man hath ascended up to heaven.

Again, in Eccl. 9:10 we read, "For there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave, whither thou goest." Then there can be no wonder why Lazarus, and those other men that were raised from the dead, did not bring us any report from that blessed haven of eternal rest. No, the christian will not receive his reward till the last day. John says (Rev. 22:12), "And behold, I [Jesus] come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be." They will receive their reward after the final judgment, and not till then. The saint and sinner will lie in the grave together until that time; then they will be separated, and separated for ever. Proof. "And before him shall be gathered all nations; and he shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats."—Matt. 25:32. Here in life the saint and sinner mingle together; they are buried together, and together they will be called before the bar of God to answer for their behavior here. There is not a word in Scripture about their being called from any other place than this earth. No other place, besides this earth will be called on to deliver up its dead. Here they are buried; here they will be raised; here they will be judged; and here the saints of God will live that life that knows no ending. This is the theatre of action. We have nothing to do with any other world. God promised this world to Abraham and his seed for an everlasting inheritance; but Abraham never owned a foot of it, neither did any of his children. Will God fail on his part? Most assuredly not. Then Abraham will have this world, or the land that God showed him, for an everlasting possession, and all his seed, who live by faith, will have a claim here; and, blessed be God, he will see that our claim is settled, and that we receive the fulfillment of that promise.

In the foregoing we have shown to you dear reader, the beautiful condition that this world was in when God placed man in it. Here he fell and lost that blessed place, and became a wanderer; but God so loved the world as to send his only begotten Son into it, to restore the law that Adam broke, thus forfeiting his endless life. We have proved that by breaking that law, death passed upon all men; that if Jesus had not died, all men would have died that endless death, when they die here; but as Jesus restored that broken law, now all that believe on him will have that endless life, in the world to come; but those that refuse the proffered mercy of God will be called up to the judgment, and then they will be consigned to that endless death, the same as Adam would have been if there had been no plan of salvation instituted. In view of this,

WHAT ARE ITS ATTRACTIONS?

Are there any attractions in the kingdom of heaven to draw us? Yes, if we would only listen to the word of God, there is enough to entice all. Jesus said he would prepare a place for us, that he would be there; and where he was, we would be also. Then we will have our blessed Savior for our attraction. What a glorious thought. He will be our Elder Brother, and we will be joint-heirs with him. Then there will be no night there; no need of lamp or candle, for God's glory will be the light thereof. There will be no more curse. Sin will never creep in, because the Devil with all of his works will be destroyed. What a happy place that will be where there will be no trials nor temptations to mar our happiness. Is not this enough to attract thee, dear reader? Think of what Jesus has done for you; think of the great love he has shown you; then consider the question thoughtfully and candidly, and I think you will come to the conclusion that the attractions in that bright world are overwhelming. O the exalting thought! there will be no more death in that lovely clime, no more sickness, nor pain. Each, as he comes out of the grave at the first resurrection, will shout Victory, victory, over the grave, and over death. Death will be the last enemy that will be conquered. Yes, his sceptre will then be given up, and the saints of God will enter into that rest which awaits them. Then will commence that happy and peaceful period of which the prophets [illegible]

[illegible] together at Gambia's palmy wave. Children will play about the lion's den, and weave fantastic flowers into his shaggy mane; the flocks and herds, o'er hill and valley spread, exulting, crop the ever budding herb. The desert will blossom as the rose, and the barren earth will clap its glad hands and sing. Justice and mercy will have left their throne, and holiness and love will then among the people walk, and Messiah will reign and keep jubilee a thousand years. Then comes the sound of the trumpet, calling all the dead that died not in the Lord, and the saints, to judgment. Then and there will the guilty be tried, and will hear the sentence, "Depart, for I never knew you; for I was an hungered, and ye gave me no meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me no drink; . . . sick, and in prison, and ye visited me not." Then, poor sinner, you will say, "Lord, when saw we thee an hungered, or athirst, . . . or naked," and did not supply thy wants? When saw we thee in prison, and sick, and visited thee not? And he will say, "Inasmuch as ye did it not unto one of the least of these (those that loved me in that world of sin and sorrow, and kept my commandments), ye did it not to me." But to those that will be acquitted, he will say, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world"; for ye did all that I commanded you. Then we will enter into that endless life. Then beside the rippling Jordan stand, and with mellifluent lips sip its sparkling drops, as it flows tranquilly by the throne of God. No syren song of the tempter will be heard, as we stand on its mossy banks and pluck the fadeless flowers.

O sinner, listen to the sweet voice of mercy. Do not let the angel bear the news to God that he has sealed the last servant, but you have refused. Then, dear sinner, mercy, sweet mercy, will be gone forever. Then there will be no one to plead your cause. O sinner, turn while you can. Soon your time will be ended, and you will be ushered into the presence of the Lord. Can you meet the Judge? When you look upon him, and see his face, instead of seeing that lovely countenance that you would have seen if you only had taken heed to his words, you will behold a frown, and then you will receive the final sentence—"The wages of sin is death." O turn and receive the gift of God, which is eternal life. Which will you have, life or death? You have your choice. Choose ye this day whom ye will serve.

"Sinner, turn; why will ye die?
God, your Maker, asks you why?
God, who did your being give,
Made you with himself to live."

WHY ARE THE DEAD TO BE RAISED?

The doctrine of a future literal resurrection is believed by many who see no need of having the dead live again. They have imbibed the idea that death is a great liberator and glorious benefactor to the saints of God, instead of being an "enemy," as Paul affirms; and that death will open the door of glory for them, and usher them into the rapturous Paradise of God, the home of the angels. And if death really accomplishes all this for the saints, what could a resurrection add to their felicity? If all this can be gained without a resurrection, well may the question be asked, What need of a resurrection? But when we learn that the resurrection is a prerequisite to judgment, and must therefore precede the judgment, and that there is no such thing as entering the kingdom of God previous to the judgment, we can see the need of the resurrection.

When we discover that there must be a resurrection before there can be a judgment, and that there must be a judgment before men can enter the celestial kingdom, the resurrection at once appears needful. And this very truth is taught in the Scriptures: "And death and hades delivered up the dead that were in them: and they were judged every man according to their works." (Rev. 20:13.)

Christ comes with "the keys of hades and death," and the "dead" are then "delivered up" to be "judged." Thus the "dead" remain unjudged till they are "delivered up;" and there is no way for death to deliver up the dead except by having them live again; for death holds them just as long as they remain dead: but the dead ones must come out of death's dark prison before being "judged," and they must be judged before being rewarded; for reward is the result of judgment.

When we consider the fact that death merely shuts the saints up in its dark prison, instead of transporting them to glory, the necessity of a resurrection is made still more apparent. Look at the saints of Bible times, as they have approached the dying hour, and learn whether they regarded death as the door to glory, or to the land of the enemy. When God sent the prophet Isaiah to read a death warrant to Hezekiah, who had "a perfect heart," saying to him, "Thou shalt die and not live" (Is. 38:1,) how did it affect him? Did it fill him with enthusiastic joy? It certainly would have produced this effect, seeing he had a "perfect heart," if he had looked upon death as the door to a realm of felicity. But was this a cheering message to him? No: "Hezekiah wept sore." Would a saint, having a "perfect heart," thus weep if told that the time had come for him to enter the kingdom of glory? Would the opening of a door into glory cause a saint to weep? But this is not all: Hezekiah fervently prays to have death deferred. But was that prayer a petition for the privilege of staying out of glory a little while longer? Who will take this position? And yet, it amounts to that if death is the door to Paradise. But in an answer to his prayer, God "added [illegible]

[illegible] after his recovery, he remarks: "Thou hast in love to my soul delivered it from the pit of corruption." (v. 17.)

If death were really the door into the world of bliss, would it not have been cruel for Jesus to have wrought that miracle on Lazarus, thus calling him out of glory after he had "four days" enjoyed the society of angels, with harp and palm and crown in his possession? Did Christ work a miracle to call a saint out of glory? Who will affirm it? Was it not rather to call him out of the prison of death? (John 11:44.)

Epaphroditus "was sick nigh unto death: but God had mercy on him" (Phil. 2:27) in healing him. Provided death were the door to glory, and a saint were already "nigh" that door, would it not be a strange kind of "mercy" to close the door against him, and keep him out? Is it really an act of "mercy" to prevent saints from entering glory? Who will say it is? Is it not rather an act of mercy to keep the saint from being shut up in death's dark prison?

Was Paul fearful of entering glory, when his life was at stake, and he was "let down in a basket" (Acts 9:25,) thus making his escape, either from the door to death's gloomy prison, or from the door to glory, in a basket—which?

Anciently to preach that "the resurrection is past already" had a tendency to "overthrow the faith of some," which could not be the case if death were the door to glory.—Wm. Sheldon.

"THE LORD HATH CHOSEN THEE TO BE A PECULIAR PEOPLE."

DEUT. 14:2.

In a recent visit to the city of Brotherly Love, having been presented by a dear brother in Christ with The Golden Grain Almanac, on our return home much worn, yet feeling a desire to glorify God in what we had seen, turned to the scripture for the day, in our gift-book, and as it was so expressive of what we had witnessed chose it as the heading of this article.

The wind blew a gale, and the turbid waters lashed the shore, yet out goes the man of God with bared tread, feeling his way with staff in hand to sound the waters ere he led the trembling sheep into the cold waves.

As the hundreds hasted with eager step to catch the first glimpse of the strange requirement, we could but read in their faces the wonder that filled them, that God should require such a sacrifice as this; or that any people should pretend to think that going down into the water such a cold and cheerless day could be pleasing to God!

What "a peculiar people" surely are we! What a peculiar Savior we are following! He was baptised of John in Jordan! and God his Father owned him in the act by sending the Holy Ghost in the form of a dove and lighting upon him, and a voice from heaven, saying, This is my beloved Son, hear ye him. As long as we thus follow in the footsteps of this owned and accepted Son of God, let it look as it may to the gazing multitude, we are safe. His last conversation was "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned."

We bless God to-day that he yet has a people in the world who are not ashamed of the open river! As David said of the sword of Goliath, "Give me this, there is none like it"; so we say of the river to baptize in,—There is nothing like it!

On this occasion it gave the privilege to hundreds to hear on the second coming of Christ. It is true we had to use a wood-shed for a meeting-house, and timbers for seats, but notwithstanding the fierce cold blasts, the enclosed side of the shed was to windward, which made us quite comfortable; and to our great joy, at the close of the sermon, as we were about to repair to the water's edge, a brother arose and announced that the owner of the shed had given his consent that we hold meeting in it next Lord's day. The appointment was then given out, and we trust much good will be done in Camden, N. J.

A DIVINE REQUIREMENT.

"How can ye believe which receive honor one of another, and seek not the honor that cometh from God only?"

We cannot, if we are receiving such honor. But are we required to do what we cannot? Yes, if the conditions of doing are under our own control. If a suitable preparation for duty must precede the performance of that duty, then it is not the duty we need first concern ourselves about, but the preparation for it. Is faith required of us, as disciples or followers of Christ? Then is there a prerequisite to faith, and our first work is to meet the conditions on which alone the exercise of scriptural faith is possible.

Why did not the Jews believe when Jesus gave them such convincing proof of his origin and character? Because, forgetting, or refusing to heed the "writings of Moses," they looked, or rather wished, for a king with earthly courtiers and fame, from whom, in return for their homage, they might receive place and power and praise, "for they loved the praise of men more than the praise of God." Their salvation depended on their belief in Jesus as the Christ, yet the necessary conditions of such belief they would not meet. Their selfishness and pride stood between them and life.

"All scripture is given, etc., and is profitable." Then can we find something practical [illegible]

[illegible] done by those who work in God's order? Or, have we material work to do which requires aid that can be obtained only in answer to the prayer of faith?

We have all these, and nothing less than apostolic purity of life, singleness of purpose and reliance on God's immutable word, can answer the demands of the time in which we live.

The same work lies before us which the church of Christ have had to do in all ages, and certainly we are not better able to do it in man's strength than were the "holy men of old." But, have we their faith? If not, why not? Do we receive honor one of another? Do we desire and ask for piety, and the fruits of good living, that we may be called "good" by men? Do I, do you, my brother or sister in Christ? If so, we must stop it! We must turn away from the service of these idols of self and begin to do God's work in his own way and for his glory.

Do we not lack faith? When we see our need, can we go to God and ask believing we shall receive? Oh, can we, do we? Is there worldly honor in the way? Do we admire the faith and practical results attending the lives of the holy men of the past, and are we excusable if we content ourselves with merely admiring without attaining to their experience, or at least devoting every hour and energy to the effort to attain it? No! The Lord expects us to believe his word, and we must or be "unbelievers."

Then, dear child of God, whoever or wherever you are, do let us now begin to purify ourselves of all filthiness and worldliness, and get rid of every hindrance to belief and then, even in these last days, in our own homes, the "prayer of faith shall save the sick," the work of God will be done and our blessed Master will no longer be dishonored by the practical infidelity of his professed followers. Forsake everything for Christ, and then can we easily believe his word and receive the end of our faith.

O, for the purity of life and heart which are requisite as a preparation to honor God in everything and always! J. FRANCIS.

TO WHOM SHALL WE GO?

When Jesus was performing his miracles and doing many mighty works among the people, the multitude followed him. It was easy to follow Jesus then, but when he told them that they followed him because they saw the miracles which he had done, and "ate of the loaves and were filled;" and when he declared himself to be the "bread of life" to those that believe, they thought it "a hard saying," and were "offended," and from that time "many of his disciples went back, and walked no more with him."

No doubt it grieved the tender heart of Jesus as he saw them leaving him one by one, and he turned to the twelve who had gathered around him and asked, "Will ye also go away?" Note the answer of Peter: "Lord, to whom shall we go? thou hast the words of eternal life." Is not this often the experience of the christian? When the cares of life are pressing hard, when we meet with trials and are discouraged, how often like Peter we have asked, "To whom shall we go?" If we go back to Egypt, bondage awaits us. If we sit down by the wayside the enemy will overtake us. We have started for the goodly land, and we have heard the Lord, "Speak unto the children of Israel that they go forward;" before us is the Red Sea; on either hand are the mountains; behind us is the enemy.

Now the question arises, What shall we do? To whom shall we go? Thank God he has promised we shall not be tempted above that we are able to bear, and he will provide a way for our escape. Hear the word of the Lord: "Fear not; stand still, and see the salvation of the Lord; he shall fight for you, and ye shall hold your peace." How easy it is for us to conquer our enemies, if we would only let the Lord do the fighting, instead of taking the vengeance into our own hands. He has promised to avenge his elect, and all that is required of us is to trust him. It is a hard lesson for some of us to learn to have confidence in God. When all around us is pleasant, and we can serve him without much exertion on our part, it is easy work; but let the storms and afflictions of this life burst upon us; let persecution come; let friends forsake us, as they did the Master, and it is quite another thing; and sometimes we let self get the upper hands, and we undertake to do the work that the Lord has promised to do for us, and we make bad work of it.

But says one, if it had been our enemy I could have borne it. The Master went the same road; he had to bear with a denying Peter, with an unbelieving Thomas; and he was betrayed into the hands of his enemies by the kiss of a professed friend. If he endured all this, we ought to be willing to suffer a little for his sake. We must not be greater than the Master. Remember the conditions are, an hundred fold, with persecution; and in the world to come, eternal life.

May God help us to endure a little longer. When Jesus went away he promised to tarry but a little while, and the signs of the times indicate that we are almost at our journey's end; and as we near the time of our deliverance, we may expect trials will thicken, for the enemy knows his time is short; but, trusting in Israel's God, we are able to go up and possess the goodly land. How sweet will be the rest that remaineth to the weary pilgrim when he gets

THE MIXED MULTITUDE.

Moses, in describing the departure of the children of Israel from Egypt, says: "A mixed multitude went up also with them." The record does not state the nationalities of this multitude, nor their motives for accompanying the Israelites. One author states that they were Arabs, Lybians, and Egyptians. Probably many of them were slaves, and others of the poorer classes, who sought to avail themselves of this opportunity to better their temporal condition. Others may have formed attachments for some of the Hebrews, which led them to cast in their lots with them; and others, still, may have been partially converted to the worship of the true God, and hence were half Egyptian and half Hebrew. They were ready to follow the fortunes of the most favored or victorious nation.

But, whoever they were, it is clear that they were of no real benefit to the Israelites. They were the first to lust after evil things, and to turn back in their hearts to Egypt; the first to find fault with the food God had provided for them in the wilderness. We will quote from Numbers, eleventh chapter: "The mixed multitude that was among them fell a lusting; and the children of Israel also wept again, and said, Who shall give us flesh to eat? We remember the fish we did eat in Egypt freely; the cucumbers, and the melons, and the leeks, and the onions, and the garlic. But now our soul is dried away; there is nothing at all, beside this manna, before our eyes." Thus it seems that the Jews, in a time of trial, united with the mixed multitude in their complaints.

Later in Jewish history, in the time of Nehemiah, by marrying the Ammonites, Moabites, and Ashdodites, in violation of God's law, the displeasure of heaven was brought upon them. Even their language became corrupted. "Their children spake half in the speech of Ashdod, and could not speak in the Jews' language." Few as were their numbers, and much as they needed men to assist in rebuilding the city and temple, which had been lying waste for the space of seventy years, Nehemiah ordered and enforced an entire separation of all the strangers which [illegible] came to pass, when [illegible] way among them. [illegible] law, that they separated they had heard [illegible] all the mixed multitude." Nehemiah [illegible] went on the principle of "first pure, then peaceable," and that numbers do not always add strength to the church of God.

The new dispensation has not been free from the curse of the mixed multitudes. Many followed Jesus for the loaves and fishes; and these were very quick to part company with him when he drew the line clearly between the spiritual and carnal professors. "From that time many went back and walked no more with him."

The Israel of God are still followed by a mixed multitude. Many have joined as seekers of religion, and have stopped short of the work of regeneration; others have only a form, while destitute of, or even denying, the power; others still have once been converted and been living members, but have lost their spirituality, little by little, until, through the cares and pleasures of this life, the deceitfulness of riches, or the lust of other things, they have become unfruitful so far as any spiritual influence is concerned. It was through this multitude that the church of past ages was overwhelmed with corruptions, and heathenish superstitions and practices, before the time of Luther. The unconverted masses that were baptized into the reformed churches of Europe, in infancy and otherwise, once more very nearly banished vital godliness from the earth. Before the revival through Zinzendorf, Wesley, and Whitefield, a truly converted ministry, to say nothing of the laity, was a rare thing. The whole church, ministers and people, seemed given up to the pursuit of pleasure and wealth. So that the greatest opposers of experimental religion were church-members.

If we are not very much mistaken, this process of increasing the "mixed multitude" in the churches is now going on at a rapid rate. The tendencies of the times are toward an easier gate and a wider way to life than those placed before the people by the Savior and his apostles. A thorough spiritual birth, self-denial, and entire sanctification of soul, body, and spirit, to Christ, are less insisted upon; while separation from worldly pleasures and associations are considered out of place among a refined and intelligent people. Even some of our present glorious revivals are to be taken at a discount, because of the numbers of unconverted persons brought into the church by them. The churches of America to-day are more weakened by this unconverted, half-converted, and backslidden multitude than by all other causes. They are the mistletoes which draw their life from the church, but add none to it; the parasites that feed upon the body and destroy its vitality, without returning to it any real strength. There is room in the church, in its normal state, for none but converted men and for such as are earnestly seeking salvation. All others are dead weights, and inventors of evil things to draw the people of God back toward Egypt. If every minister of God would see to it that none but such characters are received or retained in the church, how vastly would her power be increased for good, and how glorious her light would become.—Religious Telescope.

All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank-checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ MONEY ORDERS.

Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given.

Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too.

Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us YOUR NAME AND POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

DISCUSSION IN GREENFIELD.

We are now (May 13th) holding a discussion with Moses Hull, in Greenfield, Mass. The subject for discussion is expressed as follows: RESOLVED, "That the phenomena of Spiritualism proceed from demons." Our discussion began Monday evening, May 11th, and is to continue five evenings. Very intelligent audiences attend and give the best attention. Spiritualism had begun to take strong hold in this place; and many had come to the conclusion that they did really get communications from their deceased friends. Thus far the results of the discussion have been heart-cheering to the lovers of truth, who are rejoicing greatly in what the Lord is doing to hedge up the way of the enemy.

Next week, Monday evening, we are to begin another discussion with Moses Hull, at Stoneham, eight miles from Boston. It is to continue five evenings. Mr. Hull repudiates the God of the Jews, as a false God, and declares that every prophecy of the Bible has failed except two; one of which was what the devil said to Adam and Eve,—"Ye shall not surely die," Gen. 3: 4; and the other, what the familar spirit said to Saul, when representing Samuel, "To-morrow shalt thou and thy sons be with me." 1 Sam. 28: 19. Thus it will be seen that our opponent defends his Master and rejects God and his word. He still praises the Devil and tries hard to impeach the Most High. It is enough to make one's blood run chill to hear his blasphemous language. But such is Spiritualism which the demons offer as a substitute for the religion of Jesus.

From all parts of the world evidence comes to show that this antichristian system is advancing rapidly, and taking in a large number of the prominent men and women who fill the highest positions in society. It is the policy of Satan to secure first the great men, the rich men, so as to make the system popular, and give it power to control and put down all opposers. Let us be brave for the Lord.

"WHAT ARE WE COMING TO?"

Under the above heading we find an interesting article in the Advocate and Guardian. Similar articles are appearing in many of the daily, weekly, monthly, and quarterly journals at the present time. There is a deep impression coming over the public mind that some great and startling event is at hand. The feeling is rapidly spreading; indeed, it may be said to be almost universal. It is like the awful forebodings before the coming of the tempest, the earthquake, or the hurricane. Every week the sensation grows deeper. It cannot be shaken off. The roar of the world's Niagara may be distinctly heard in the distance. The current is rapidly carrying the mass to the terrible plunge into everlasting ruin. While they feel that some wonderful event is at hand, the demons assure them it is only the breaking of the oppressive governments and religious institutions, and the establishment of a new system of government and religion that will as much surpass common Christianity, as that did Judaism. They sing the syren song about "the good time coming," crying "peace and safety." They thus quiet the fears of the people, and rock them to sleep in the cradle of carnal security, in order to keep them quiet till it will be too late to make preparation for the coming of the Bridegroom King.

This is a time when all who wish to be saved, should examine themselves carefully and see that they have "oil in their vessels with their lamps."

The Guardian says:—

"It would almost appear to the careful observer as he sends his thought abroad over our own country, and the nations of Europe and the world, that the times of tribulation spoken of in Scripture as annunciatory of the latter days, had already come. The foundations of industry, order and prosperity seem to be tottering. Governments are corrupted, people rebellious, enterprise paralysed, trade and commerce languishing, and individuals bankrupt. Suffering and distress prevail everywhere to a most unusual degree. Wars and rumors of wars, famines, pestilences and earthquakes in divers places, increasing wickedness, and heart-sickening casualities and crimes startle the community, and large multitudes exclaim, what are we coming to? The answer seems plain.

The world is hastening to its destiny. Prophecy is fulfilling, history completing. The kingdoms of this world are being disorganized that they may become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ. The nations are filling up the cup of their iniquities, which shall turn in their hands into the cup of the Lord's fury. Leaders of false religions are binding upon their followers heavy burdens, and grievous to be borne, which are destined to be thrown back with crushing weight upon their own heads. Communities are laying up for themselves wrath against the day of wrath, and revelation of the righteous judgment of God, and individuals, sinning with a high hand against knowledge and love, are provoking the Almighty to a just retribution. Let the Lord's people be awake, zealous and active for the Master, vigilant and uncompromising against evil, waiting for his appearing, by the brightness of whose coming the man of sin is to be finally destroyed."

To the student of Bible prophecy, how plain is the evidence that we are almost to the end of the present dispensation. We might as well deny the account of the war of the revolution, and say it was only a dream. The evidence is overwhelming and incontrovertible.

Is the reader ready for the great event? Will Jesus say well done? Should any change be made in order to be fit to go to the "marriage supper of the Lamb"? If so, let it be made at once. There is no time for delay. "The whole armor of God" is needed if we expect to stand the trials that await the faithful. Get ready. Keep ready and watching.

THE POPE'S GENERAL COUNCIL.

At the great feast, held in Rome last 29th of June, it appears that a decision was made to have a grand Ecumenical Council, sometime in the latter part of this year, in order to decide what to do in relation to the very difficult situation into which the Papal power is now plunged by the Italian revolution, and other important events in connection with the movements of Napoleon. It has been several centuries since such a council has been called, and this will probably be the last in the history of the Papal power. Great events are at our doors.

Says The Catholic of May 2nd, 1868:—

"The Papal Government is still employed in strengthening the fortifications in and around Rome, while the Garibaldians are gathering recruits in Genoa and other places. . . . .

The preparatory labors for the approaching General Council are being pushed with great energy, and will before long be completed. The enemies of the church, in all countries, already show the fear they have of the influence this Council will certainly exert upon them. They dread, especially, that some of the degrees of the 'Syllabus' will receive the force of laws. . . . .

France is inexhaustible in its efforts to defend the cause of the Holy Father. We give an instance: a society has lately been formed in Toulouse under the name of, 'Continual Prayer for the Holy Father.' The rules of the society distribute the time of offering supplications in behalf of the Vicar of Christ in such a way, that every hour day or night, some are offering up prayers for his welfare and success. The Duke of Cheveruse presented the Pope, as a New Year's gift, with twelve rifled cannon. Pio Nono asked him how he could do something in return. The Duke replied, shortly, and concisely, 'By asking for twelve more, when you want them.'

NAPOLEON'S PURCHASE.

Napoleon is getting a foot-hold in many important points; such as Constantinople, the isthmus of Suez, Jerusalem, and Rome. He is the fortunate winner in nearly all the important political movements in Europe, Asia and Africa. He is still on the rising tide, with a fair prospect of outstripping all competitors. The following cable dispatch shows that he has just made an important purchase:—

"A portion of the Palatine Hill has been purchased by the Emperor of France from the ex-King of Naples. It is a mine of artistic wealth, teaming with statues, altars, ornaments and rich marbles."

His ambition knows no bounds. He was sixty years of age the 20th of last April, and well prepared to do great things. We think the time is at hand when he will make some very important movements. Let every christian be upon his watch-tower, all ready for translation when Jesus comes.

THE THIRD HEAVEN.

I wish you would explain a few things in the Bible, that are too deep for me. First: If there is not (as you say) a soul or spirit in the body, called man; how can you, or how do you explain those passages in 2 Cor. 12: 1–5?

If the wicked are punished with eternal death, and pass away with the old earth, how is it we read of them in Rev. 22: 15, as being without the New Jerusalem?

I do not ask these questions for any thing but information. I take the Crisis, and I think it is nearer right in its exposition of the Bible than any other paper. I am a member of the Baptist church in this place, and I have to work hard sometimes to hold my ground in advocating man's mortality, the eternal death of the wicked, etc.

Truly yours, JAS. J. SULLIVAN.

The passage in 2 Cor. 12, reads as follows:

"It is not expedient for me doubtless to glory. I will come to visions and revelations of the Lord. I knew a man in Christ above fourteen years ago, whether in the body I cannot tell, or whether out of the body I cannot tell; God knoweth; such a one caught up to the third heaven. And I knew such a man, whether in the body, or out of the body, I cannot tell; God knoweth; how that he was caught up into paradise, and heard unspeakable words, which it is not lawful for a man to utter. Of such a one will I glory; yet of myself I will not glory, but in mine infirmities."

As all this took place while Paul was alive, it will prove nothing concerning a man after his death. Again, there is not a word about soul or spirit in the whole account. The expression "caught up into paradise" is more properly rendered, "carried away into paradise." Paradise is to be in the new earth. That will be the "third heaven." We read of "the heavens" which "were of old, and the earth standing out of the water and in the water; whereby the world that then was, being overflowed with water perished." This was the first.

"But the heavens and the earth which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment, and perdition of ungodly men." This is the second.

"Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." This is "the third heaven." 2 Pet. 3: 5, 6, 13.

When Paul says he did not know whether he was in or out of the body, when he saw "the third heaven," we understand him to mean that he did not know whether he was carried there bodily, as was Ezekiel, on a certain occasion (Ezek. 3: 12, 14; 8: 3; 11: 1;) or whether he saw it only mentally, as we see things in dreams. When in a vision the person cannot tell whether he is actually taken to the place and persons seen, or whether he sees them mentally, without being carried away bodily.

In relation to the question relating to the wicked, we would say, we do not understand that the whole earth is made new at the coming of Christ; but only the "sanctuary," or the land promised to Abraham. Then the righteous are raised, "but the rest of the dead lived not again, until the thousand years were finished." "When the thousand years are expired, Satan shall be loosed out of his prison," the wicked dead raised, who will go "up on the breadth of the earth, and" compass "the camp of the saints about, and the beloved city; and fire came down from God out of heaven, and devoured them."—Rev. 20: 5–9. This brings us to Peter's burning day, when the rest of the earth, not included in the sanctuary, which was cleansed at the beginning of the thousand years, will be cleansed; when "the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High; whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom."—Dan. 7: 27.

When it is said, "For without are dogs, and sorcerers," etc., we do not see any necessity for understanding that they will be living outside of the New Jerusalem; but simply that such characters can have no place in the city.

WHY NOT PRAY IN PUBLIC?

Why is it that so few pray in public? Only a small part of most churches are ever heard to pray in the conference and prayer-meetings, or even around the family altar. We think all christians should live so that they can pray in any place where people meet for devotional exercises. Of course, it will be the policy of the deceiver to make as many as possible think they can't pray in public, and thus cripple their usefulness, and prevent their growth in grace. At first the cross seems heavy, but it continually grows lighter, in proportion as it is repeated with a desire to please the Lord.

The great hindrance with many consists in the fact that they are not willing to make what they call a "poor prayer." If they could only pray like Bro. A. or Sr. B., they would be willing their voice should be heard; but as they cannot bear the thought of making such a "poor prayer," as they must make if they make any at all, it is very evident that pride lies at the bottom of such feelings. The following illustrates this point:—

"In conversation with Mr. H. upon this subject, after he had begun to pray in meeting, he said: 'I found, upon a careful examination as to the reason why I could not take any part in religious meetings, that my embarrassment was wholly occasioned by pride. I was apprehensive that if I should attempt to do anything, my performances would fall quite below those of others. I was too proud to be willing to be regarded as not, in point of talent, equal to the other brethren. When I saw this I was ashamed of my pride, and endeavored to humble myself before God on account of it. At length I came to feel willing that it should be said, 'A—— H—— makes the poorest prayer of any man in the church.' After that I could pray comparatively unembarrassed.' Reader, why do you so seldom, if ever, pray with as well as for others?"

GERMAN TRACTS.

Bro. L. Reimer, 809 Coates street, Philadelphia, has the following tracts translated into the German language: "What is Man," "The Second Coming of Christ," "The Hope of the Dead in Christ," and "The Future Door of the Ungodly." He proposes to send them to any place for 50 cts. per doz., $4 per hundred, and free (except postage) to the poor. Let the Germans in the United States be supplied with these tracts as far as possible. Bro. Reimer's love for his fellow countrymen has caused him to make noble sacrifices to get the truth before them. Who will assist him? Do not make him bear the burden alone. The tracts can also be had at the office of the "World's Crisis." If any have German friends or neighbors, now is a good good time to send these tracts.

MASKED BALLS.

As in Sodom, just before its awful destruction, pleasure scenes were at high tide, especially the more sensual ones; so it is now. Never, since America was settled, was there such a rage for amusements, particularly where the animal passions are aroused to the highest pitch, and allowed the freest exercise, as at the present time. In many cases they are carried to an unlimited degree of indulgence, not surpassed in licentious Sodom.

In the Boston Journal of April 3d, the editor says:—

"An unusually large number of masked balls have occurred during the season now closing, which has been uncommonly fruitful of dancing parties of all descriptions. Masked balls appear to have been gradually becoming the rage, and when properly conducted they are as delightful affairs as can be found to those who indulge in Terpsichorean pleasures. The stiffness and restraint often incident to formal full dress balls vanishes with the "motley." Trailing dresses no longer annoy gentlemen, nor their destruction their owners. In short, a select masquerade is satiety for an epicure in dancing matters. Wednesday such an affair occurred in Fraternity Hall, under the title of a leap year masquerade, of the M. M. C.'s, and was a delightful closing of a series of ten sociables which have occurred in the same hall during the past winter. It was got up by ladies of Rutland square and others, and was strictly private, no tickets being sold out of the circle of those who have formed and strengthened friendships by their intercourse during the previous parties. The company assembled at a seasonable hour, and by nine o'clock the dance was in full progress. Joyce's Quadrille Band furnished the music for a finely selected order of dances, which kept the company busy and happy until an early hour next morning. How many discoveries of identity were made it is impossible to say, but certainly many a knowing one found that the wrong track had been travelled when, just before supper, the unmasking occurred."

We are informed that young ladies from respectable families are known to have appeared in a nude state, in a masquerade ball. Are not these the last days?

THE NORWAY MISSION.

It is known to the brethren and sisters all abroad that Bro. Oliver Bendixon, a native of Norway, has recently embraced the faith of the Lord's speedy coming, the sleep of the dead, and destruction of the wicked; and that he feels interested to return to his home in Norway and proclaim the truth to his people in their language. He says he is willing to suffer for the truth, and even die for it if it is necessary. It will require about two hundred and fifty dollars to pay his expenses out, and start the mission after he arrives out. It will then require about twenty-five dollars a month to sustain him in the field. He says, "I would rather stay here among warm and good friends and believers, than to go home and be persecuted and scoffed at; but I feel the time is short. Would to God I was in Norway today, to cry to the people, 'The kingdom of God is at hand.' And I hope I shall be there soon."

The Board wait for the means to send. They believe he is a good man, and ought to go. Some one hundred and seventy-five dollars or more have been given in to him and the Treasurer for this object. Let the friends of missions decide this case. Address Geo. T. Adams, 167 Hanover St., Boston, Mass.

P. S.—We have the best testimonials of the christian character and standing of Bro. Bendixon, from those with whom he labored in New York, before he came into the faith of the Advent. J. V. HIMES.

I would add to this statement and appeal of Bro. Himes an earnest request that our brethren and friends help what they can in this Norway Mission. I believe it is a special opening of the providence of God to give the gospel of the kingdom to that people. God is calling upon us as never before to sound this warning cry to the utmost extent of our ability. I know from several interviews with Bro. Bendixon that his heart is in the work of God to carry the good news of the coming kingdom to his native country. As the door is continually opening wider and wider to spread the light on this most momentous subject, we are called upon to put our hands deeper into our pockets and take that out which belongs to God and put it into the treasury of heaven, which will pay more than compound interest. If the sequel shall prove (as we think) that there are but a few months more in which any work can be done in sounding the alarm of the swift approaching judgment, shall we be ready for the decision of the great Judge, when he calls us to give an account of our stewardship? Brethren and sisters, ponder this matter well in your hearts.

L. T. CUNNINGHAM, Sec. of Board.

OUR MISSIONS.

While appeals are made from time to time for special objects, brethren should understand that our missions are one; and the Board will appropriate the means put into their hands for the support of all the missions under their care. Let brethren give liberally to the support of all these missions, that none may suffer. We now need help for Memphis and St. Louis, Norway, and all that come under our care. Although the European Mission is not under the immediate charge of the A. A. Mission Society, we receive and forward funds to Bro. C. Let the friends remember him liberally. Now is the time to pay pledges, and give in your subscriptions.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS.

W. and E. Sharick (through Bro. Adams), $5.00. Two barrels of clothing from the church and friends in Lowell, Mass. One of these contained a bundle of nice things for old Aunt Tenah, who gave her all for the chapel. Mrs. Caroline Taller, Townsend Station, N. Y., $2.00. L. A. M. H., $1.00. Sr. E. S. Brigham and children, Westboro, Mass., $2.70. Carrie and Ellsworth Hathaway, Carver, Mass., $2.00. Sam'l H. Withington, Springwater, N. Y., $3.00. A box of clothing, etc., from an unknown friend. A barrel of women's and children's clothing (entirely new) from Bro. and Sr. Phetteplace, Waterford, Mass. From friends in Hinsdale, N. H. (through Sr. S. B. Thomas), $5.00. Abby Hodgdon, Portsmouth, N. H., $3.00 (sent by Bro. Adams).

These contributions should have been acknowledged before; and my only excuse is the great press of other duties and labor connected with the mission here. I trust the friends who have thus given to this poor band will excuse this tardy acknowledgment, and any omission which may have occurred. All that has been received has been expended as directed by the donors. If anything has been sent which has not been acknowledged, we ask those who sent it to write and inform us.

There is much destitution here this summer, more than ever before, and the times are growing harder for the poor colored people. They dare not go into the country, for fear of being killed; and many in the country are crowding into the city for protection against the secret clans organizing every where to destroy them. Some of our own church have to be helped by us daily, not being able to get anything to do by which to obtain food. What the end of these things is to be, is really a serious and alarming question. God alone must be the shield and defense of this poor people, or they will perish. If time is to last a little longer, it will doubtless witness a fearful struggle for existence among this poor people.

But many of them are learning righteousness by the things they suffer. The word of God is taking effect among them wherever it is preached. Would that it could be more widely proclaimed here to this waiting people. They are the only class here who will receive it, and be saved by it. They are the only humble and loving ones here. All other classes are despisers of them, and refuse to recognize them as equally the children of God, and heirs alike with them to the inheritance promised to his people. They are persecuted and trodden down by all professing christians here; and some of those most zealous for religion are their bitterest enemies. There is no open door here for our gospel, except to this people; and to them the door is wide open, and they will come to the light if it is offered them.

God is blessing us abundantly, beyond our most ardent expectations. A steady revival has been in progress here for months; and the work of grace is a deep one, the like of which we never before beheld anywhere. We are astonished daily at the power of the Spirit among this people, and at the progress they make in the reception of the light and truth. They certainly have an intuitive perception of these truths which we are proclaiming among them. There is no firmer, stronger, or more settled church in the Advent faith in the land than this; and firmer, stronger and larger it is growing daily. True, it is poor in worldly goods; destitute even of proper food and clothing; but it is rich in faith and love, and when Jesus comes will rise to be with him, and share his riches and glory forever. We have had baptism every Sabbath for several weeks. Last Sabbath seven went forward, and next Sabbath will witness as many more.

Still pray for us, dear brethren and sisters, and thus help us all you can in the great work here. Thanks for all you have sent us for the poor in Christ. God will bless you for the sacrifice. I. I. LESLIE.

THE MEMPHIS MISSION.

To the church scattered abroad:—We are still in the field warring a good warfare. We are in the new chapel, and the Lord is with us. We are having a glorious reformation. God is well pleased with this movement. We have baptism about every Sunday. Last Sunday seven were baptized, all adults. The word of God is running and being glorified. There is a great work being done in this place. They believe that Jesus is soon coming. It would do you good to be here at our meetings. We have from twenty to forty about every night forward for prayers. We have been holding meetings every night for some time, and do not give them up, the interest is so great to hear the word of God. The Lord gives us great liberty in expounding the Scriptures of truth.

I expect to leave soon, the heat is so great. I can not hold meetings in my tent, for the reason the canvass draws the sun, and makes it so hot. I intend to go about fourteen hundred miles with my tent to a new field, where it is cooler. Pray for us.

Bro. Leslie and Sr. Northrup have about two hundred and seventy scholars in the school. All hands are full. We hope to be found at our post when our Lord comes. Do not forget us, far away from home, in a heathen land. Yours looking forward to a better land, D. D. REED.

CORRESPONDING SECRETARIES.

The most of our churches wish preachers to correspond with them before sending appointments. With this arrangement I have no fault to find, but some of our preaching brethren complain that Corresponding Secretaries are not so punctual about replying to their (the preachers') letters as they should be. I heard a good brother remark, a few days since, that he was sometimes kept waiting until it was too late to make arrangements in some other direction, so he had to remain at home idle. Now, dear brethren, this is not right. When you receive a proposal from any of our preachers, inform them just as soon as you possibly can, whether or not you want them to come. C. M. S.

ROCHESTER.

BRO. GRANT:—We have closed another Sabbath in Rochester with deep interest. The cause moves on like a ship borne along by the never-failing trade winds of the ocean. The busy season makes no diminution of numbers or interest. Parthians, Scythians, and Mesopotamians, all tell of the wonderful goodness of God. Brn. Smith and Wilson are now with us to add their testimony to the "amazing grace."

Higher and higher we see rising the pent-up feeling of national revenge, and soon, we are aware, it must burst forth in that last great battle for which we have been so long waiting with breathless anxiety. The impression, world-wide, seems to be, "'Tis coming."

Our tracts are being scattered like the leaves of autumn. Each new convert wants to send some to friends world-wide in their localities. The German heart seems to afford a good soil for this incorruptible seed—the word of God, and when it springs up, though long germinating, the growth is luxuriant. Bro. Hall's tracts are wending their way into all lands. Each day gives wings to some, and soon the second thousand will have found their way to the homes and hearts of many people who otherwise might have groped their way in darkness.

Tracts sent forth to friends from praying hearts, will find their way to other hearts which could never be reached by the preacher. The united efforts of believers in the good cause of missions in Rochester. May they imitate their example.

Brethren, pray for us, that we may have wisdom to work in this most important field, to the acceptance of Him who has called us to his kingdom and glory. Your brother in hope, H. PRATT.

For the World's Crisis.

MISSOURI A. C. CONFERENCE.

Convened pursuant to call, at Compton Hill church. Was continued over Saturday and Sunday, April 18th and 19th. The meeting being in order opened, prayer was offered by Eld. Commodore Decatur. The proceedings of the last meeting were read and approved. Elders present.—H. K. Flagg, Commodore Decatur, Napoleon Macon, and J. V. Himes. Licentiates: Brn. Arthur Wait, Thomas Jackson, Sabra Fierce, and Albert Brown. School teachers: Bro. Isaac Lott, and Sisters Ellen A. Flagg, Eliza Vaughn, and Nancy H. Beadle. Four churches were represented by four delegates each.

On motion of Bro. Flagg, it was unanimously resolved, that the church of which he is pastor shall hereafter be known and designated as the "Pilgrim Church." The other churches represented were the Compton Hill and Lowell churches of this city, and also one in Illinois, at Cahokia, just below the city, which is designated the "Grove Church."

Bro. Commodore Decatur, pastor of the Compton Hill church, submitted an interesting report, showing very gratifying results as having attended his labors, whereby under the blessing of God his membership had been increased since our last quarterly meeting from twenty-five to eighty-four, a large proportion of which has been on profession.

Bro. Macon, pastor of the Lowell chapel, reported that notwithstanding they had labored under great disadvantages, and had passed through severe trials, yet the Lord had been with them, and they had more than maintained their ground. Six had already been added to their church, and there was with all a fair prospect of a movement on the enemies' works soon.

Bro. Albert Brown, who has recently come into the light of the present truth as it is revealed in the word of God, represented the "Grove church," which was organized by Bro. H. K. Flagg, Sunday, March 29th, with ten members, there being a prospect of several accessions in a short time. Arrangements are being made with fair prospect of success for the erection of a place of worship, such an one as will at least answer the "year of Jubilee." Elds. Flagg, Decatur, and Macon, have dispensed the word over them for most part, in which they have been assisted from time to time by Brn. Thomas Jackson and Sabra Fierce.

Bro. Arthur Wait has been called frequently to fill the desk at the Lowell Chapel during the absence of Bro. Macon. He is superintendent of the Sabbath School and Band of Hope connected with that church, which he is conducting with much ability and promise of usefulness. As regards Bro. Flagg's report, I beg leave to refer the reader to letters that have already appeared in the Crisis and Voice from his hand.

The total membership of the four churches represented was two hundred and seven. The school-teachers' reports show an enrollment of a hundred and eighty-two scholars. One interesting feature of the reports worthy of special mention is the fact that since the last conference there have been fifteen accessions to the several churches from the schools, ten of which were from Bro. Isaac Lott's school, which has for more than a year been an efficient auxilliary to Bro. Decatur's church. The Sunday Schools with each church have enrolled a total of two hundred and eighty-four scholars. It is only necessary to say that they are in a prosperous condition.

After the transaction of sundry business matters of local interest, the following resolution was offered by Bro. N. Macon, seconded by Bro. Sabra Fierce, and by the conference unanimously adopted, to wit:

Whereas, the American Advent Missionary Society in the East have sent their agents among us with the word of God, to teach us of the near coming of Christ, and the restitution, we think it our duty to express our thanks to them for their remembrance of us in our ignorant and oppressed circumstances. Therefore,

Resolved, That the thanks of this conference be extended to the Board of the A. A. M. Society, for sending Elds. Himes and Flagg among us as missionaries to instruct in the things appertaining to the kingdom of God. We have now seen and received the truth of the Savior's speedy coming, and would say for your encouragement that we are now giving the same light to all within our reach, and that we are not laboring in vain. The Lord is with us, and the truth is spreading far and wide among our brethren. And we would represent that the continued presence and labors of Bro. Flagg, and the occasional visits of Eld. Himes, are of the greatest help to us.

The intervals between business sessions were almost wholly improved by preaching and exhortation. Would that I were able to give an adequate idea of the zeal and power with which many of them were delivered. Let it suffice to say that could our eastern friends, who take such lively interest in the prosperity of our cause in the west, have been permitted to listen to their stirring addresses, their hearts would have filled with wonder and admiration, and also have broken forth in sentiments of praise to Him who hath said, and brought it to pass, that Ethiopia may not only "stretch forth her hands," but raise its voice to the praise and glory of the ever living God.

On motion, it was voted that a synopsis of the proceedings of this conference be prepared and forwarded to the Voice of the West and Crisis for publication. On motion, conference then adjourned till again in order called.

HIRAM BEADLE, Secretary.

Fletcher, Stafford Springs, Conn., $1.00; from Plainfield, Mass., $10.00; S. M. Densmore, Hartland, Vt., $2.00; a lover of Jesus in R. I., $1.00; F. Clark, South Dansville, N. Y., $1.05; from friends of the cause in Newport, N. H., $4.00; N. Shumway, Danielsonville, $2.00. M. E. DOW.

CHANGE OF TIME.—The time of the tent meeting in Charlestown, Mass., is changed to June 22.

Extracts from Letters.

BRO. C. MURPHY writes:—"I am actively engaged in sounding the cry, 'Behold the Bridegroom cometh.' I am looking for our blessed Lord the present year. I am trying to declare all the counsel of God. I am laboring where these glorious truths have been buried under the rubbish of modern fables. I find some honest hearts ready to receive the truth, after the clouds of obscurity are removed that hung over their minds by reason of false theology. I have just returned from a trip through the highways and hedges, and had a good hearing while presenting the promises made to Abraham; and showing that those promises are yet to be fulfilled, and that Christ is the seed to whom the promise was made. A deep interest is manifested where I have labored, and they want to get all the light on the subject that they can. I have in all cases advised my hearers to send for and read some of the papers published that are devoted to the promulgation of the truths of the coming and kingdom of Jesus."

BRO. G. W. FOSTER, Victoria, Feb. 20th, writes:—"The work of the Lord is prospering. I have baptised over two hundred, and shall baptize more next Lord's day. I wish some of the preachers east would come west. We have but a little time more to work, and it will be said, It is done. The Omega will come to execute judgment upon all. O brethren east, with whom I used to labor, are you doing your whole duty? See to it, and see to it now, for we are on the right track. If we endure a little longer through the perils of the last hours of old time, we shall reach the city of gold. Then we shall possess forever the kingdom under the whole heaven. Amen. Glory to God. We are almost there."

BRO. R. T. CHURCH, Westerly, R. I., April 7th, writes:—"I have the pleasure of informing you that since your visit here there is a decided increase of interest among the brethren. We have hired a hall to hold meetings in, which will at present seat about one hundred and sixty persons, and by adding to our seats, it will accommodate two hundred and fifty. We commenced meetings Sunday, April 5th. Preaching by Elder Augustus Durfee; good attendance and excellent attention. I would say to preaching brethren, who wish to come and preach to us, they can consult with Bro. Edmond Slocum."

NOTICE.

Trusting in God for means, I have just had fifteen hundred more of "Death not Life" printed for free distribution, and bought five hundred of "Pauline Theology" to send out with them, where any may wish both kinds. Ministers and brethren wishing any can send orders for as many as they judge they can deal out to advantage. Of course it is not prudent to give such sized works as much at a venture as we do tracts. Where these works can be had, some will gladly buy them; and what are sold, brethren can remit the pay to me. Any wishing to send pay to me for a few, I will send six for $1.00, and pay postage. As many tent and camp meetings will be held this season, a good opportunity will offer to spread these and other works broadcast.

I have added sixteen pages to my work in the present edition, by putting in my tract on the Bible meaning of forever and everlasting, which I think is more convincing than any of my tracts, as it entirely removes almost the only prop of endless misery,—owned to be so by the learned critic, Prof. Stewart, as I have shown in the tract. My address is Buffalo, N. Y. J. BLAIN.

666.

In the "Quarterly Journal of Prophecy" for January, 1860, there was a letter from the Rev. B. W. Saville, the author of an able work upon the First and Second Advent, containing the following remarkable statement regarding the number 666:—

"The names of the present Emperor of the French, and successor to the throne of Napoleon I., who represented the short-lived seventh head of the beast, are Charles Louis Napoleon Bonaparte, and it may be seen that Louis, i. e., Ludovicus in the Latin tongue, Louis Napoleon in the Greek, and Charles Bonaparte in the Hebrew, severally equal the number 666," the three languages in which our blessed Lord's title as King of the Jews was written over the cross. The name of Napoleon, also, literally means "the lion of the dark pit."

In March, 1865, the writer of these remarks added this postcript—"Three events are now anxiously to be looked for—namely, the attainment of the Rhenish frontier by France; the union of Venetia with Italy, brought about by either diplomacy or war: and the division of Turkey, which will place the Eastern portion of the old Roman earth in its proper prophetical position, and bring about the political restoration of the Jews to Syria, where Napoleon has even now able men, and clever friends, preparing the way for him. The kingdom of Greece will then, probably, be considerably enlarged; its present monarch can only be looked upon as a locum tenens.

"To whatever quarter of the globe we cast our eyes—north, south, east, or west—we see nations heaving with restless agitation. All the crowned heads of Europe look with anxiety to the movements of one man. They tremble to resist him, they fear his master mind; his almost supernatural power; and at the risk of bankruptcy in one case, and revolution in others, they feel obliged to maintain large standing armies, every man's hand upon his sword hilt, expecting they know not what, but feeling in their inmost soul that the destiny of Europe, humanly speaking, is held in the hand of Napoleon.

"Another most wonderful and startling sign of the times is Spiritualism, conceived by some people to be connected with animal magnetism, by a far greater number to be a mere delusion, and by the comparatively few to be a development of Demonism, under the control and permitted direction of Satan. According to this system, those who place themselves in communication with the mediums are enabled to hold intercourse with departed friends, to send them messages, to receive their answers. In the whole of Europe, this awful system is rapidly gaining ground; and in America, where Spiritualism has been carried on for years, its evil effects on body and soul have been sorely and severely felt.

"We now walk by faith, but should there be a movement of the Jews to Jerusalem, and a covenant entered into with them by the great political powers of Europe, we can no longer

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.
Boston, Wednesday, May 20, 1868.

☞ Take Notice!

All subscriptions for the Crisis are payable IN ADVANCE, at the rate of $2.50 a year.

☞ Please Remember!

All remittances to this office, in the form of drafts, bank-checks and postal money-orders, should be made payable to the BUSINESS AGENT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ MONEY ORDERS.

Our correspondents should remember that if they send money orders in a letter which contains the name of the sender, and the name of the person to whom the order is payable, there is NO SAFETY for their money. Any person may draw the amount named in the order, if these names are given.

Neither is it safe to send us your names in advance. Somebody may open the letter, get the names, and then wait till the order comes, and get that too.

Send on the order, not writing a word; make it payable to GEO. T. ADAMS, directing it to MILES GRANT, or World's Crisis. Then, in two or three days, write in the usual way, stating that you have sent the order, and what you wish done with the money obtained on the same, and it will be entirely safe. In the second communication be sure to give us YOUR NAME AND POST OFFICE ADDRESS.

DISCUSSION IN GREENFIELD.

We are now (May 13th) holding a discussion with Moses Hull, in Greenfield, Mass. The subject for discussion is expressed as follows: RESOLVED, "That the phenomena of Spiritualism proceed from demons." Our discussion began Monday evening, May 11th, and is to continue five evenings. Very intelligent audiences attend and give the best attention. Spiritualism had begun to take strong hold in this place; and many had come to the conclusion that they did really get communications from their deceased friends. Thus far the results of the discussion have been heart-cheering to the lovers of truth, who are rejoicing greatly in what the Lord is doing to hedge up the way of the enemy.

Next week, Monday evening, we are to begin another discussion with Moses Hull, at Stoneham, eight miles from Boston. It is to continue five evenings. Mr. Hull repudiates the God of the Jews, as a false God, and declares that every prophecy of the Bible has failed except two; one of which was what the devil said to Adam and Eve,—"Ye shall not surely die," Gen. 3: 4; and the other, what the familar spirit said to Saul, when representing Samuel, "To-morrow shalt thou and thy sons be with me." 1 Sam. 28: 19. Thus it will be seen that our opponent defends his Master and rejects God and his word. He still praises the Devil and tries hard to [illegible] the Most High. It is enough to make one's blood run chill to hear his blasphemous language. But such is Spiritualism which the demons offer as a substitute for the [illegible] of Jesus.

From all parts of the world evidence comes to show that this antichristian system is advancing rapidly, and taking in a [illegible] number of the prominent men and women who fill the highest positions in society. It is the policy of Satan to secure first the great men, the rich men, so as to make the system popular, and give it power to control and put down all opposers. Let us be brave for the Lord.

"WHAT ARE WE COMING TO?"

Under the above heading we find an interesting article in the Advocate and Guardian. Similar articles are appearing in many of the daily, weekly, monthly, and quarterly journals at the present time. There is a deep impression coming over the public mind that some great and startling event is at hand. The feeling is rapidly spreading; indeed, it may be said to be almost universal. It is like the awful forebodings before the coming of the tempest, the earthquake, or the hurricane. Every week the sensation grows deeper. It cannot be shaken off. The roar of the world's Niagara may be distinctly heard in the distance. The current is rapidly carrying the mass to the terrible plunge into everlasting ruin. While they feel that some wonderful event is at hand, the demons assure them it is only the breaking of the oppressive governments and religious institutions, and the establishment of a new system of government and religion that will as much surpass common Christianity, as that did Judaism. They sing the syren song about "the good time coming," crying "peace and safety." They thus quiet the fears of the people, and rock them to sleep in the cradle of carnal security, in order to keep them quiet till it will be too late to make preparation for the coming of the Bridegroom King.

This is a time when all who wish to be saved, should examine themselves carefully and see that they have "oil in their vessels with their lamps."

The Guardian says:—

"It would almost appear to the careful observer as he sends his thought abroad over our own country, and the nations of Europe and the world, that the times of tribulation spoken of in Scripture as annunciatory of the latter days, had already come. The foundations of industry, order and prosperity seem to be tottering. Governments are corrupted, people rebellious, enterprise paralyzed, trade and commerce languishing, and individuals bankrupt. Suffering and distress prevail everywhere to a most unusual degree. Wars and rumors of wars, famines, pestilences and earthquakes in divers places, [illegible] heart-sickening casualties and crimes startle the community, and large multitudes exclaim, 'What are we coming to?' The answer seems plain.

"The world is hastening to its destiny. Prophecy is fulfilling, history completing. [illegible] [illegible] ness of whose coming the man of sin is to be finally destroyed."

To the student of Bible prophecy, how plain is the evidence that we are almost to the end of the present dispensation. We might as well deny the account of the war of the revolution, and say it was only a dream. The evidence is overwhelming and incontrovertible.

Is the reader ready for the great event? Will Jesus say well done? Should any change be made in order to be fit to go to the "marriage supper of the Lamb"? If so, let it be made at once. There is no time for delay. "The whole armor of God" is needed if we expect to stand the trials that await the faithful. Get ready. Keep ready and watching.

THE POPE'S GENERAL COUNCIL.

At the great feast, held in Rome last 29th of June, it appears that a decision was made to have a grand Ecumenical Council, sometime in the latter part of this year, in order to decide what to do in relation to the very difficult situation into which the Papal power is now plunged by the Italian revolution, and other important events in connection with the movements of Napoleon. It has been several centuries since such a council has been called, and this will probably be the last in the history of the Papal power. Great events are at our doors.

Says The Catholic of May 2nd, 1868:—

"The Papal Government is still employed in strengthening the fortifications in and around Rome, while the Garibaldians are gathering recruits in Genoa and other places. . . . .

The preparatory labors for the approaching General Council are being pushed with great energy, and will before long be completed. The enemies of the church, in all countries, already show the fear they have of the influence this Council will certainly exert upon them. They dread, especially, that some of the degrees of the 'Syllabus' will receive the force of laws. . . . .

France is inexhaustible in its efforts to defend the cause of the Holy Father. We give an instance: a society has lately been formed in Toulouse under the name of, 'Continual Prayer for the Holy Father.' The rules of the society distribute the time of offering supplications in behalf of the Vicar of Christ in such a way, that every hour day or night, some are offering up prayers for his welfare and success. The Duke of Cheverause presented the Pope, as a New Year's gift, with twelve rifled cannon. Pio Nono asked him how he could do something in return. The Duke replied, shortly, and concisely, 'By asking for twelve more, when you want them.'

NAPOLEON'S PURCHASE.

Napoleon is getting a foot-hold in many important points; such as Constantinople, the isthmus of Suez, Jerusalem, and Rome. He is the fortunate winner in nearly all the important political movements in Europe, Asia and Africa. He is still on the rising tide, with a fair prospect of outstripping all competitors. The following cable dispatch shows that he has just made an important purchase:—

"A portion of the Palatine Hill has been purchased by the Emperor of France from the ex-King of Naples. It is a mine of artistic wealth, teaming with statues, altars, ornaments and rich marbles."

His ambition knows no bounds. He was sixty years of age the 20th of last April, and well prepared to do great things. We think the time is at hand when he will make some very important movements. Let every christian be upon his watch-tower, all ready for translation when Jesus comes.

THE THIRD HEAVEN.

I wish you would explain a few things in the Bible, that are too deep for me. First: If there is not (as you say) a soul or spirit in the body, called man; how can you, or how do you explain those passages in 2 Cor. 12: 1–5?

If the wicked are punished with eternal death, and pass away with the old earth, how is it we read of them in Rev. 22: 15, as being without the New Jerusalem?

I do not ask these questions for any thing but information. I take the Crisis, and I think it is nearer right in its exposition of the Bible than any other paper. I am a member of the Baptist church in this place, and I have to work hard sometimes to hold my ground in advocating man's mortality, the eternal death of the wicked, etc.

Truly yours, JAS. J. SULLIVAN.

The passage in 2 Cor. 12, reads as follows: "It is not expedient for me doubtless to glory. I will come to visions and revelations of the Lord. I knew a man in Christ above fourteen years ago, whether in the body I cannot tell, or whether out of the body I cannot tell; God knoweth; such a one caught up to the third heaven. And I knew such a man, whether in the body, or out of the body, I cannot tell; God knoweth; how that he was caught up into paradise, and heard unspeakable words, which it is not lawful for a man to utter. Of such a one will I glory; yet of myself I will not glory, but in mine infirmities."

As all this took place while Paul was alive, it will prove nothing concerning a man after his death. Again, there is not a word about soul or spirit in the whole account. The expression "caught up into paradise" is more properly rendered, "carried away into paradise." Paradise is to be in the new earth. That will be the "third heaven." We read of "the heavens" which "were of old, and the earth standing out of the water and in the water; whereby the world that then was, being overflowed with water perished." This was the first.

"But the heavens and the earth which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment, and perdition of ungodly men." This is the second.

"Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." [illegible] taken to the place and persons seen, or whether he sees them mentally, without being carried away bodily.

In relation to the question relative to the wicked, we would say, we do not understand that the whole earth is made new at the coming of Christ; but only the "sanctuary," or the land promised to Abraham. Then the righteous are raised, "but the rest of the dead lived not again, until the thousand years were finished." "When the thousand years are expired, Satan shall be loosed out of his prison," the wicked dead raised, who will go "up on the breadth of the earth, and" compass "the camp of the saints about, and the beloved city; and fire came down from God out of heaven, and devoured them." Rev. 20: 5–9. This brings us to Peter's burning day, when the rest of the earth, not included in the sanctuary, which was cleansed at the beginning of the thousand years, will be cleansed; when "the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High; whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom."—Dan. 7: 27.

When it is said, "For without are dogs, and sorcerers," etc., we do not see any necessity for understanding that they will be living outside of the New Jerusalem; but simply that such characters can have no place in the city.

WHY NOT PRAY IN PUBLIC?

Why is it that so few pray in public? Only a small part of most churches are ever heard to pray in the conference and prayer-meetings, or even around the family altar. We think all christians should live so that they can pray in any place where people meet for devotional exercises. Of course, it will be the policy of the deceiver to make as many as possible think they can't pray in public, and thus cripple their usefulness, and prevent their growth in grace. At first the cross seems heavy, but it continually grows lighter, in proportion as it is repeated with a desire to please the Lord.

The great hindrance with many consists in the fact that they are not willing to make what they call a "poor prayer." If they could only pray like Bro. A. or Sr. B., they would be willing their voice should be heard; but as they cannot bear the thought of making such a "poor prayer," as they must make if they make any at all, it is very evident that pride lies at the bottom of such feelings. The following illustrates this point:—

"In conversation with Mr. H. upon this subject, after he had begun to pray in meeting, he said: 'I found, upon a careful examination as to the reason why I could not take any part in religious meetings, that my embarrassment was wholly occasioned by pride. I was apprehensive that if I should attempt to do anything, my performances would fall quite below those of others. I was too proud to be willing to be regarded as not, in point of talent, equal to the other brethren. When I saw this I was ashamed of my pride, and endeavored to humble myself before God on account of it. At length I came to feel willing that it should be said, 'A—— H—— makes the poorest prayer of any man in the church.' After that I could pray comparatively unembarrassed.' Reader, why do you so seldom, if ever, pray with as well as for others?"

GERMAN TRACTS.

Bro. L. Reimer, 809 Coates street, Philadelphia, has the following tracts translated into the German language: "What is Man," "The Second Coming of Christ," "The Hope of the Dead in Christ," and "The Future Door of the Ungodly." He proposes to send them to any place for 50 cts. per doz., $4 per hundred, and free (except postage) to the poor. Let the Germans in the United States be supplied with these tracts as far as possible. Bro. Reimer's love for his fellow countrymen has caused him to make noble sacrifices to get the truth before them. Who will assist him? Do not make him bear the burden alone. The tracts can also be had at the office of the "World's Crisis." If any have German friends or neighbors, now is a good good time to send these tracts.

MASKED BALLS.

As in Sodom, just before its awful destruction, pleasure scenes were at high tide, especially the more sensual ones; so it is now. Never, since America was settled, was there such a rage for amusements, particularly where the animal passions are aroused to the highest pitch, and allowed the freest exercise, as at the present time. In many cases they are carried to an unlimited degree of indulgence, not surpassed in licentious Sodom.

In the Boston Journal of April 3d, the editor says:—

"An unusually large number of masked balls have occurred during the season now closing, which has been uncommonly fruitful of dancing parties of all descriptions. Masked balls appear to have been gradually becoming the rage, [illegible]

THE NORWAY MISSION.

It is known to the brethren and sisters all abroad that Bro. Oliver Bendixon, a native of Norway, has recently embraced the faith of the Lord's speedy coming, the sleep of the dead, and destruction of the wicked; and that he feels interested to return to his home in Norway and proclaim the truth to his people in their language. He says he is willing to suffer for the truth, and even die for it if it is necessary. It will require about two hundred and fifty dollars to pay his expenses out, and start the mission after he arrives out. It will then require about twenty-five dollars a month to sustain him in the field. He says, "I would rather stay here among warm and good friends and believers, than to go home and be persecuted and scoffed at; but I feel the time is short. Would to God I was in Norway today, to cry to the people, 'The kingdom of God is at hand.' And I hope I shall be there soon."

The Board wait for the means to send. They believe he is a good man, and ought to go. Some one hundred and seventy-five dollars or more have been given in to him and the Treasurer for this object. Let the friends of missions decide this case. Address Geo. T. Adams, 167 Hanover St., Boston, Mass.

P. S.—We have the best testimonials of the christian character and standing of Bro. Bendixon, from those with whom he labored in New York, before he came into the faith of the Advent. J. V. HIMES.

[illegible] would add to this statement and appeal of Bro. Himes an earnest request that our brethren and friends help what they can in this Norway Mission. I believe it is a special opening in the providence of God to give the gospel of the kingdom to that people. God is calling upon us as never before to sound this warning cry to the utmost extent of our ability. I know from several interviews with Bro. Bendixon that his heart is in the work of God to carry the good news of the coming kingdom to his native country. As the door is continually opening wider and wider to spread the light on this most momentous subject, we are called upon to put our hands deeper into our pockets and take that out which belongs to God and put it into the treasury of heaven, which will pay more than compound interest. If the sequel shall prove (as we think) that there are but a few months more in which any work can be done in sounding the alarm of the swift approaching judgment, shall we be ready for the decision of the great Judge, when he calls us to give an account of our stewardship? Brethren and sisters, ponder this matter well in your hearts.

L. T. CUNNINGHAM, Sec. of Board.

OUR MISSIONS.

While appeals are made from time to time for special objects, brethren should understand that our missions are one; and the Board will appropriate the means put into their hands for the support of all the missions under their care. Let brethren give liberally to the support of all these missions, that none may suffer. We now need help for Memphis and St. Louis, Norway, and all that come under our care. Although the European Mission is not under the immediate charge of the A. A. Mission Society, we receive and forward funds to Bro. C. Let the friends remember him liberally. Now is the time to pay pledges, and give in your subscriptions.

THE MEMPHIS MISSION.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS.

W. and E. Sharick (through Bro. Adams), $5.00. Two barrels of clothing from the church and friends in Lowell, Mass. [illegible]

[illegible] will accept this tardy acknowledgment, and any omission which may have occurred. All that has been received has been expended as directed by the donors. If anything has been sent which has not been acknowledged, we ask those who sent it to write and inform us.

There is much destitution here this summer, more than ever before, and the times are growing harder for the poor colored people. They dare not go into the country, for fear of being killed; and many in the country are crowding into the city for protection against the secret clans organizing every where to destroy them. Some of our own church have to be helped by us daily, not being able to get anything to do by which to obtain food. What the end of these things is to be, is really a serious and alarming question. God alone must be the shield and defense of this poor people, or they will perish. If time is to last a little longer, it will doubtless witness a fearful struggle for existence among this poor people.

But many of them are learning righteousness by the things they suffer. The word of God is taking effect among them wherever it is preached. Would that it could be more widely proclaimed here to this waiting people. They are the only class here who will receive it, and be saved by it. They are the only humble and loving ones here. All other classes are despisers of them, and refuse to recognize them as equally the children of God, and heirs alike with them to the inheritance promised to his people. They are persecuted and trodden down by all professing christians here; and some of those most zealous for religion are their bitterest enemies. There is no open door here for our gospel, except to this people; and to them the door is wide open, and they will come to the light if it is offered them.

God is blessing us abundantly, beyond our most ardent expectations. A steady revival has been in progress here for months; and the work of grace is a deep one, the like of which we never before beheld anywhere. We are astonished daily at the power of the Spirit among this people, and at the progress they make in the reception of the light and truth. They certainly have an intuitive perception of these truths which we are proclaiming among them. There is no firmer, stronger, or more settled church in the Advent faith in the land than this; and firmer, stronger and larger it is growing daily. True, it is poor in worldly goods; destitute even of proper food and clothing; but it is rich in faith and love, and when Jesus comes will rise to be with him, and share his riches and glory forever. We have had baptism every Sabbath for several weeks. Last Sabbath seven went forward, and next Sabbath will witness as many more.

Still pray for us, dear brethren and sisters, and thus help us all you can in the great work here. Thanks for all you have sent us for the poor in Christ. God will bless you for the sacrifice. I. I. LESLIE.

THE MEMPHIS MISSION.

To the church scattered abroad:—We are still in the field warring a good warfare. We are in the new chapel, and the Lord is with us. We are having a glorious reformation. God is well pleased with this movement. We have baptism about every Sunday. Last Sunday seven were baptized, all adults. The word of God is running and being glorified. There is a great work being done in this place. They believe that Jesus is soon coming. It would do you good to be here at our meetings. We have from twenty to forty about every night forward for prayers. We have been holding meetings every night for some time, and do not give them up, the interest is so great to hear the word of God. The Lord gives us great liberty in expounding the Scriptures of truth.

I expect to leave soon, the heat is so great. I can not hold meetings in my tent, for the reason the canvass draws the sun, and makes it so hot. I intend to go about fourteen hundred miles with my tent to a new field, where it is cooler. Pray for us.

Bro. Leslie and Sr. Northrup have about two hundred and seventy scholars in the school. All hands are full. We hope to be found at our post when our Lord comes. Do not forget us, far away from home, in a heathen land. Yours looking forward to a better land, D. D. REED.

CORRESPONDING SECRETARIES.

The most of our churches wish preachers to correspond with them before sending appointments. With this arrangement I have no fault to find, but some of our preaching brethren complain that Corresponding Secretaries are not so punctual about replying to their (the preachers') letters as they should be. I heard a good brother remark, a few days since, that he was sometimes kept waiting until it was too late to make arrangements in some other direction, so he had to remain at home idle. Now, dear brethren, this is not right. When you receive a proposal from any of our preachers, inform them just as soon as you possibly can, whether or not you want them to come. C. H. S.

ROCHESTER.

BRO. GRANT:—We have closed another Sabbath in Rochester with deep interest. The cause moves on like a ship borne along by the [illegible]

[illegible] uniting efforts of believers in the great cause of success in Rochester. May others imitate their example.

Brethren, pray for us, that we may have wisdom to work in this most important field, to the acceptance of Him who has called us to his kingdom and glory. Your brother in hope, H. PRATT.

MISSOURI A. C. CONFERENCE.

Convened pursuant to call, at Compton Hill church. Was continued over Saturday and Sunday, April 18th and 19th. The meeting being in order opened, prayer was offered by Eld. Commodore Decatur. The proceedings of the last meeting were read and approved. Elders present.—H. K. Flagg, Commodore Decatur, Napoleon Macon, and J. V. Himes. Licentiates: Brn. Arthur Wait, Thomas Jackson, Sabra Fierce, and Albert Brown. School teachers: Bro. Isaac Lott, and Sisters Ellen A. Flagg, Eliza Vaughn, and Nancy H. Beadle. Four churches were represented by four delegates each.

On motion of Bro. Flagg, it was unanimously resolved, that the church of which he is pastor shall hereafter be known and designated as the "Pilgrim Church." The other churches represented were the Compton Hill and Lowell churches of this city, and also one in Illinois, at Cahokia, just below the city, which is designated the "Grove Church."

Bro. Commodore Decatur, pastor of the Compton Hill church, submitted an interesting report, showing very gratifying results as having attended his labors, whereby under the blessing of God his membership had been increased since our last quarterly meeting from twenty-five to eighty-four, a large proportion of which has been on profession.

Bro. Macon, pastor of the Lowell chapel, reported that notwithstanding they had labored under great disadvantages, and had passed through severe trials, yet the Lord had been with them, and they had more than maintained their ground. Six had already been added to their church, and there was with all a fair prospect of a movement on the enemies' works soon.

Bro. Albert Brown, who has recently come into the light of the present truth as it is revealed in the word of God, represented the "Grove church," which was organized by Bro. H. K. Flagg, Sunday, March 29th, with ten members, there being a prospect of several accessions in a short time. Arrangements are being made with fair prospect of success for the erection of a place of worship, such an one as will at least answer the "year of Jubilee." Elds. Flagg, Decatur, and Macon, have dispensed the word over them for most part, in which they have been assisted from time to time by Brn. Thomas Jackson and Sabra Fierce.

Bro. Arthur Wait has been called frequently to fill the desk at the Lowell Chapel during the absence of Bro. Macon. He is superintendent of the Sabbath School and Band of Hope connected with that church, which he is conducting with much ability and promise of usefulness. As regards Bro. Flagg's report, I beg leave to refer the reader to letters that have already appeared in the Crisis and Voice from his hand.

The total membership of the four churches represented was two hundred and seven. The school-teachers' reports show an enrollment of a hundred and eighty-two scholars. One interesting feature of the reports worthy of special mention is the fact that since the last conference there have been fifteen accessions to the several churches from the schools, ten of which were from Bro. Isaac Lott's school, which has for more than a year been an efficient auxiliary to Bro. Decatur's church. The Sunday Schools with each church have enrolled a total of two hundred and eighty-four scholars. It is only necessary to say that they are in a prosperous condition.

After the transaction of sundry business matters of local interest, the following resolution was offered by Bro. N. Macon, seconded by Bro. Sabra Fierce, and by the conference unanimously adopted, to wit:

Whereas, the American Advent Missionary Society in the East have sent their agents among us with the word of God, to teach us of the near coming of Christ, and the restitution, we think it our duty to express our thanks to them for their remembrance of us in our ignorant and oppressed circumstances. Therefore,

Resolved, That the thanks of this conference be extended to the Board of the A. A. M. Society, for sending Elds. Himes and Flagg among us as missionaries to instruct in the things appertaining to the kingdom of God. We have now seen and received the truth of the Savior's speedy coming, and would say for your encouragement that we are now giving the same light to all within our reach, and that we are not laboring in vain. The Lord is with us, and the truth is spreading far and wide among our brethren. And we would represent that the continued presence and labors of Bro. Flagg, and the occasional visits of Eld. Himes, are of the greatest help to us.

The intervals between business sessions were almost wholly improved by preaching and exhortation. Would that I were able to give an adequate idea of the zeal and power with which many of them were delivered. Let it suffice to say that could our eastern friends, who take such lively interest in the prosperity of our cause in the west, have been permitted to listen to their stirring addresses, [illegible]

Extracts from Letters.

BRO. C. MURPHY writes:—"I am actively engaged in sounding the cry, 'Behold the Bridegroom cometh.' I am looking for our blessed Lord the present year. I am trying to declare all the counsel of God. I am laboring where these glorious truths have been buried under the rubbish of modern fables. I find some honest hearts ready to receive the truth, after the clouds of obscurity are removed that hung over their minds by reason of false theology. I have just returned from a trip through the highways and hedges, and had a good hearing while presenting the promises made to Abraham; and showing that those promises are yet to be fulfilled, and that Christ is the seed to whom the promise was made. A deep interest is manifested where I have labored, and they want to get all the light on the subject that they can. I have in all cases advised my hearers to send for and read some of the papers published that are devoted to the promulgation of the truths of the coming and kingdom of Jesus."

BRO. G. W. FOSTER, Victoria, Feb. 20th, writes:—"The work of the Lord is prospering. I have baptized over two hundred, and shall baptize more next Lord's day. I wish some of the preachers east would come west. We have but a little time more to work, and it will be said, It is done. The Omega will come to execute judgment upon all. O brethren east, with whom I used to labor, are you doing your whole duty? See to it, and see to it now, for we are on the right track. If we endure a little longer through the perils of the last hours of old time, we shall reach the city of gold. Then we shall possess forever the kingdom under the whole heaven. Amen. Glory to God. We are almost there."

BRO. R. T. CHURCH, Westerly, R. I., April 7th, writes:—"I have the pleasure of informing you that since your visit here there is a decided increase of interest among the brethren. We have hired a hall to hold meetings in, which will at present seat about one hundred and sixty persons, and by adding to our seats, it will accommodate two hundred and fifty. We commenced meetings Sunday, April 5th. Preaching by Elder Augustus Durfee; good attendance and excellent attention. I would say to preaching brethren, who wish to come and preach to us, they can consult with Bro. Edmond Slocum."

NOTICE.

Trusting in God for means, I have just had fifteen hundred more of "Death not Life" printed for free distribution, and bought five hundred of "Pauline Theology" to send out with them, where any may wish both kinds. Ministers and brethren wishing any can send orders for as many as they judge they can deal out to advantage. Of course it is not prudent to give such sized works as much at a venture as we do tracts. Where these works can be had, some will gladly buy them; and what are sold, brethren can remit the pay to me. Any wishing to send pay to me for a few, I will send six for $1.00, and pay postage. As many tent and camp meetings will be held this season, a good opportunity will offer to spread these and other works broadcast.

I have added sixteen pages to my work in the present edition, by putting in my tract on the Bible meaning of forever and everlasting, which I think is more convincing than any of my tracts, as it entirely removes almost the only prop of endless misery,—owned to be so by the learned critic, Prof. Stewart, as I have shown in the tract. My address is Buffalo, N. Y. J. BLAIN.

In the "Quarterly Journal of Prophecy" for January, 1860, there was a letter from the Rev. B. W. Saville, the author of an able work upon the First and Second Advent, containing the following remarkable statement regarding the number 666:—

"The names of the present Emperor of the French, and successor to the throne of Napoleon I., who represented the short-lived seventh head of the beast, are Charles Louis Napoleon Bonaparte, and it may be seen that Louis, i. e., Ludovicus in the Latin tongue, Louis Napoleon in the Greek, and Charles Bonaparte in the Hebrew, severally equal the number 666," the three languages in which our blessed Lord's title as King of the Jews was written over the cross. The name of Napoleon, also, literally means "the lion of the dark pit."

In March, 1865, the writer of these remarks added this postscript—"Three events are now anxiously to be looked for—namely, the attainment of the Rhenish frontier by France; the union of Venetia with Italy, brought about by either diplomacy or war: and the division of Turkey, which will place the Eastern portion of the old Roman earth in its proper prophetical position, and bring about the political restoration of the Jews to Syria, where Napoleon has even now able men, and clever friends, preparing the way for him. The kingdom of Greece will then, probably, be considerably enlarged; its present monarch can only be looked upon as a locum tenens.

"To whatever quarter of the globe we cast our eyes—north, south, east, or west—we see nations heaving with restless agitation. [illegible] hesitate or mistake our standing as to the remainder of the time of this dispensation. Daniel's last week of seven years will then have commenced, in the middle of which the power of Antichrist will be fully developed, Satan cast down to the earth, and the great tribulation begin."

Obituaries.

MANN. Peacefully fell asleep in Jesus, in Smithfield, R. I., April 15th, 1868, Sr. Phebe S. Mann, wife of Bro. Frances Man, aged forty-seven years, ten months and twenty days.

Her disease was pneumonia. For thirty years she has followed Jesus, years of toil, infirmities and affliction, and of peace. For seven years she and her husband, who is left so deeply to feel her loss, have been identified with those looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ. She was beloved by all who knew her; lovely in character beyond the common lot of women; a pillar in the temple of God, a peacemaker in the church, as living witnesses will testify; a counsellor of the wayward, a helper of sinners to Christ, a comforter of the afflicted, firm in the performance of duty, earnest in the prayer and conference meeting, and kind and faithful as a christian wife. Her last hours were those of peace. When stricken with disease, she realized death near and spoke of it freely. She said, "My work is done; I am ready to go; I shall not sleep long; I have but one earthly object to live for; that is Frank, but God will take care of him." Although suffering the severest pain, and her body nearly covered with blisters, she was never impatient or murmured. She had her reason to the last, and about fifteen minutes after taking leave of husband and friends, she fell asleep in Jesus as peacefully as a babe falls asleep on its mother's breast. By the side of her three last children in the old graveyard she sleeps, in hope of a resurrection to immortality. She requested the writer to attend her funeral, who was assisted by Bro. J. S. Eldridge. She selected the text for her funeral: "As for me I will behold thy face in righteousness; I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness."—Ps. 17: 15.

M. R. PHETTEPLACE.

BURROUGHS. Mr. Samuel M. Burroughs departed this life at St. Ansgar's, Iowa, March 10th, 1868, in the sixty-fifth year of his age.

Mr. Burroughs was born in Kent, Conn., May 29th, 1802, from which place he removed to Iowa in 1855. His disease was facial cancer, of which he was a patient but dreadful sufferer much of the time during the last two years.

He leaves with his widow and family a large circle of friends to lament his death. But, we rejoice to add, they do not mourn as they that are without hope. In 1832 he became practically interested in a religious life and joined the Methodist Church. Ten years later, and his religious faith became more fully developed and intensified by the interest which he now took in the study of Holy Scripture, and especially the prophetical portions relating to what he regarded as the near coming of the Lord. The views he embraced touching this subject were substantially those which are so largely held and preached by the clergy of the Church of England—a view which sees in the present moral and political revolutions a token of the approaching end—the immediate approximation of the first resurrection, and the introduction of a better dispensation for a sin-strickened world. In these pre-millennialist's views he found a source of increasing enjoyment to the day of his death.—"Looking for that blessed hope." Titus 2: 13.

As a man and neighbor, he was much esteemed for his practical good sense, kindly feeling, and integrity of life. He was enthusiastic in his admiration of the West, and excelled as an agriculturist and raiser of stock,—receiving the premium for his horses, cows and oxen.

His funeral was attended by Rev. T. W. Thurston, of the Methodist Church, who preached on the occasion from Matt. 24: 44.

"Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

I. MORGAN.

WILSON. Died in Gerry, Chautauqua Co., N. Y., May 13th, 1868, Elder Jonathan Wilson ("The old pilgrim Bibleite"), aged ninety-one years, one month, and one day.

Father Wilson has been a minister of the gospel, for about sixty years. He was formerly a Baptist minister, but for the last eighteen or twenty years of his life he has been a firm and true believer of the doctrine of the second coming of Christ, and of future life only through him. He has resided with his son, W. R. Wilson, for the last sixteen years, who, together with his wife, did all that could be done for his comfort and temporal well being, especially for over two years past, during which time he was insane, and needed much care. A discourse was delivered by the writer, from Rev. 14: 13, by his own request and selection some four years ago.

Truly a good man has gone down in a good old age, leaving the savor of a christian example behind him. May he rest in peace till Jesus, the life-giver, comes. He leaves a large circle of children and grandchildren to mourn his loss.

A GREAT SPIRITUALIST CASE.

[Correspondence of Tribune.]

One of the most celebrated of the persons called spiritualists is now before the Vice-Chancellor's Court, as defendant in an extraordinary case. A bill has been filed against Mr. Douglas Home by a widow lady of 75, named Lyon, to compel the restitution of no less a sum than £60,000, extorted from her by Mr. Home by the exercise of his spiritual influence. Mr. Home does not deny that he had the money, but asserts, of course, that it was given to him by Mrs. Lyon of her own free will, or rather in accordance with the injunctions of the spirit of her dead husband, communicating its wishes to Mrs. Lyon through the involuntary medium of Mr. Home. Bank of England stock to the amount of £24,000 was transferred by Mrs. Lyon to Mr. Home within a few days of their first acquaintance, to which was added not long after a further sum of £6,000 in stock, and a mortgage for £30,000. There appears to be some reason to suppose that Mr. Home intended to escape with his plunder, since a writ of ne exeat was obtained against him. He was locked up in Whitecross Prison, and finally was obliged to lodge in court the stock and mortgage securities for the whole amount of which Mrs. Lyon had been deprived. The hearing before Vice-Chancellor Gifford has lasted during the whole of this week, and has been chiefly taken up with the cross-examination of Mrs. Lyon. The counsel of Mr. Home has done his best to show that this old lady of seventy-five was perfectly sane, clear-headed, competent to manage her property, amounting it is said, to £150,000, and neither out of her mind nor subject to undue influence in giving £30,000 to the spiritual medium who persuaded her that such a gift was the wish of her husband. The evidence is extremely curious, but I have no space to go into it, and the case is unfinished. Mr. Home himself must take his turn on the stand next week, and is meantime an object of hootings by the crowd that gather daily in and around the Court. It is even said there has been an attempt to assassinate him—possibly by some victim less fortunate than Mrs. Lyon. I need not express an opinion on Mr. Home's conduct in this case, but if we should divide Spiritualists broadly into impostors and dupes, it may be feared Mr. Home could not be reckoned among the latter.—April 25th.

Cable Dispatches.

LONDON, May 13. The Queen to-day, in the presence of a vast multitude of spectators, laid, with imposing ceremonies, the corner stone of Thomas Hospital, which is to be built on the Thames, immediately opposite the Houses of Parliament. Her Majesty was attended by their royal highnesses, the Prince and Princess of Wales, and other members of the royal family, and by the members of the Ministry and the chief officers of State.

The corporation of the city of London have presented an address to the Queen, declaring their profound sympathy with Her Majesty because of the injuries received by Prince Alfred at the hands of an assassin, and expressing their detestation of the attempted crime.

May 12. In the House of Commons, this evening, the reply of the Queen to the petition of the House of Commons, based on Mr. Gladstone's third resolution, was announced. The Queen says, that relying on the wisdom of the House, she desires that her interest in the temporalities of the Irish Church will not in any way hinder Parliamentary legislation on the subject.

Mr. Gladstone will to-morrow, bring in a bill to suspend, for the present, making additional appointments in the Irish Church.

May 14. In the House of Commons to-night, the bill moved by Mr. Gladstone to suspend making appointments in the Irish Church passed to its final reading. The bill is to remain in effect until the 1st of August, 1869.

LONDON, May 15. An ecclesiastical deputation waited upon the Queen, at Windsor Castle, yesterday, and presented to Her Majesty an address from the Hierarchy of the Irish Church, giving their views in regard to the great changes contemplated in the establishment. The Queen replied in vague terms, not committing herself to the policy of either the Church or Liberal party, on the question.

In the House of Commons, this evening, John Bright presented a petition from Nova Scotia, praying that Parliament would repeal the act by which that province was united to the Dominion of Canada. The petitioners denounce the Canadian Union act as an evil uncalled for and unjust, the result of a surprise sprung on the people and of fraud practiced on Parliament.

PARIS, May 16. In the Corps Legislatif the debate on commerce, which commenced early in the week with a speech from M. Thiers in favor of protection, was continued in yesterday's session by M. De Forcade La Roquette, Minister of Commerce, who made a reply to the argument of M. Thiers. He deprecated the opening of a commercial question and the creation of a crisis in trade, when the peace and industrial prosperity were sure and undisturbed. He declared that France would not adopt a retrograde policy either on the question of commerce or any other public question.

Gen. Failly, commanding the encampment of Chalons, in address to his troops, says war being possible the labors of the camp must be serious and unremitting.

An ultimatum has been dispatched by the French Government to the Bey of Tunis.

DOMESTIC.

Chicago, May 14. The resolutions adopted at the Methodist Lay Convention this afternoon declare that the present generation of Methodists have the same right to change the plans of the church for their improvement and to adapt it to altered circumstances that Wesley and the fathers had to create it, and that, as the educational, publishing, missionary and other charitable agencies depend largely upon the laity for support, and as the laity are already charged with responsibility concerning them, we regard it as eminently reasonable and desirable that they should be associated with the ministry in the inception, establishment and modification of the various institutions of the church.

THE DEATH OF THE SPANISH PRIME MINISTER.—It appears that the Spanish Prime Minister, Marshal Narvaez, lost his life through an act of imprudence. He was recovering from a severe attack of influenza, and still had a distressing cough, when he went to a fete given by one of the grandees. The heat of the room was suffocating, and the Marshal took an ice which made him so ill that he had immediately to return home. An inflammation of the chest set in and carried him off with extraordinary rapidity.

SUEZ.—The opening of the railway and the overland travel between Europe and the East has already built up a town of 15,000 inhabitants at the upper end of the Red Sea. All around is desert, but the water of the Nile has been brought there and the great transformation has commenced. You see a large railway station, three or four hotels, offices of the Peninsula and Oriental Company, one hotel owned by them, where you can sit down to substantial beef and pudding just as if you were in a London hotel. The town is Egyptian, narrow streets, houses built from dried brick and stone from the cliffs along the Red Sea, bayous like those of Cairo, a swarthy crowd of Arabs, Negroes, Nubians, Hindoos, Italians, Spanish, Germans, Frenchmen, Englishmen, Russians, Turks. The English have the upper hand here, but everywhere else in Egypt French influence predominates. The British Government have recently erected large hospital buildings here for invalids returning from India, who may need nursing at this half-way house.

Taking an Arab boatman, who wears no garment but a blue cotton shirt, we cast off from the pier in front of the hotel, and with a brisk breeze blowing from the desert, go out over the waters of the Red Sea to look at the excavators on the grand canal. We can see a line of them in the north, a dozen or more, some at work, others getting ready. It is only when we reach them that we can comprehend their size. Think of a machine tall as a church-steeple, with great iron wheels fifteen or twenty feet in diameter, an endless chain of buckets as big as hogsheads, an iron spout reaching out at a right angle two hundred twenty feet from the machine. All this afloat on iron barges, with a powerful engine, keeping the excavating machinery in motion, and moving the barge from right to left and left to right, eating its way like a great monster, through the sand!

Standing upon the bank of the canal, and witnessing the machinery, and remembering that every piece of iron, every wheel, great or small, every bolt and pin and nut has been brought from France, and put up here—looking at what has already been accomplished, we can but admire the perseverance and energy of M. Lesseps, and the contractors, Messrs. Borell & Lavalley. Considering what has been done, there are good reasons for believing that if M. Lesseps can obtain money enough, the canal will be carried to completion, and that vessels, whether sailing or steaming, will pass from the Atlantic to the Indian oceans, by this route. English prejudice against it is as strong to-day as it ever has been. "It won't succeed. Let me tell you it never will be completed," said an Englishman, not an hour ago, "and if it is it won't pay."

But they are questions of the future. Time will determine them.—Cor. Journal.

THE TORNADO AT SHANGHAI, ILL.—The Tornado at Shanghai, near Galesburg, Ill., last Sunday, was a sudden and terrible affair, the particulars of which are thus given in the Chicago Republican:—

The first that was observed by the people who were watching the clouds was what looked to them to be a circular cloud or volume of wind and rain about two and a half miles due west of the village of Shanghai, which seemed to rise and sink in the air. It came on, gathering new strength, straight east, leveling to the ground fences, gates, and everything that came in its way, to Mr. John Calder's farm, where several window lights were knocked out and a large cherry tree, eight inches through at the butt, was twisted round and torn up by the roots. A remarkable incident at Calder's farm was that a tub full of water standing in the yard, which was not moved in its position, had every drop of water in it carried up in the air. In Calder's grove, near his house, many large trees were twisted round and torn up by the roots, and a person on standing in the village can distinctly see the track of the whirlwind by the opening through the grove. There were fifteen dwelling houses totally destroyed. Many of them were picked up by the whirlwind, lifted into the air, and carried quite a distance, and then, seemingly with demoniacal fury dashed to the ground and shivered into a million of fragments. Besides those dwellings that were destroyed, seven were blown off their foundations.

It will seem incredible that two good sized, well built churches, the only ones in the place, both new—one completed a year ago and the other less than six months ago—were both scattered in fragments over the prairie for nearly half a mile. Services commenced in the Second Advent church, a new building, completed last fall, at 4 o'clock P. M. As the people were wending their way from their farms and cottages to church, the sun was brightly shining, although clouds were seen in the heavens. The pastor of the church, the Rev. G. W. Hurd, ascended the pulpit and commenced his discourse, which was not interrupted until it was nearly through when the evidences of the coming storm began to be apparent. First it was perfectly still and then a noise was heard in the distance as of the roaring of a mighty cataract. The windows began to shake, and some one called out from his seat, "Mr. Hurd, a bad storm is coming up." The minister answered, "Never mind the storm; there is a day coming when there will be a storm compared with which this will be nothing. I will be through soon." Just then the hail and wind commenced breaking in the window lights, and in almost an instant the windows of the church, sash and all, were torn out. The only two persons who succeeded in getting out were George Wern and Harrison Wixen, who were instantly killed. The building reeled like a drunken man, but none could get out. Wives clung to their husbands, children to their parents, brothers and sisters to each other, and despair was depicted on every countenance. Suddenly, the crash came, and with a deafening sound, mingled with the shrieks of the pent-up people, timbers, scantling and all, came down with a sudden crash upon the devoted heads of the congregation, men, women and children. Some had skulls broken, others arms, others received internal injuries from which they can never recover. There are several who did not receive a scratch, but nearly all were more or less injured. The killed were George Wern, Harrison Wixen, Alonzo Page, and Mrs. Joseph Wood. Twenty-five persons were seriously wounded.

MILITARY EXPENDITURES IN EUROPE.—The French papers are endeavoring to show that the military expenditures of France is not more profuse than that of other nations of Europe. To prove this they compare the revenue of each country with the sum expended on the army, and figure out that France expends a little more than a fifth of her income on her military establishment; England, more than a fifth; Prussia, more than a fourth; Russia, nearly a third; Italy, more than a fourth; Belgium, about a fifth; Bavaria, nearly a fifth; Austria, nearly a sixth; Spain, nearly a seventh. The expenditure of Russia, it will be seen, is the highest of all; that of Spain is the lowest; and Prussia and Italy respectively spend more than either France or England for the support of their armies. The two last named powers are about equal.

☞ It is said that Russia has sent an army of 40,000 cavalry and 300,000 infantry and artillery to the frontier of the Danubian principalities, where they are to be kept ready for a new invasion of Turkey. The Sublime Porte, on the other hand, has ordered a corps of observation of 35,000 men to Shumla, where there was so much hard fighting during the war of 1854–5.

☞ It is said that Gen. Dix is out of favor with Napoleon III., and that the Emperor does not speak to him unless he is compelled by some official necessity. The reason for this disagreement is believed to be the report that a great many Frenchmen had applied at Gen. Dix's office to be naturalized as American citizens.

☞ There is a rumor afloat in Paris that the Sultan was so well pleased with his late visit to the western capitals that he is going to repeat it this summer, and will probably extend his trip to the United States, in the history of which he is said to take great interest. He likes to make sea voyages, and the distance will not deter him.

It is said to be in contemplation by the English War Department to call in and utilize all the guns taken in the Crimean war, at present scattered about the metropolitan parks and other parts of the country. These guns have for a long time been considered obnoxious to Russians visiting the country.

Tent Meetings.

To the brethren and sisters scattered throughout Massachusetts and New Hampshire, Greeting: Whereas the time for preaching the gospel is short, and what is done for the salvation of sinners must be done quickly, I address these lines to you. Brn. Kingsbury of Chelsea, and Ford of Concord, and others, have provided a suitable tent for the business, and placed it in the field—a free tent—and given me charge of the same. Now I want all who desire tent meetings in their vicinity the coming season, to write me at once. Bro. S. W. Thurber and other efficient preachers will assist in the work. Our first meeting will be held in Charlestown, Mass., commencing Wednesday evening, June 3d, and hold over Sunday. We shall expect the brethren and sisters to co-operate with us in the work. Let prayer go up to God, that his blessing may attend. Per order,

D. M. LEAVITT.

Quar. Conf. at Addison, Vt.,

On 29th, 30th, and 31st of May, beginning with prayer meeting on Thursday evening, (28th) at 7 o'clock. Services at the chapel on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, at 10.30 A. M., 1.30 P. M., and 7.30. The friends of Hinesburgh, Bristol, Brookville, Vergennes, and other places, are cordially invited to come and aid in making this one of the old-fashioned times of refreshing.

G. W. STETSON, Sup.

If brethren and sisters coming by rail to this conference will write to Gordon Sprigg or to Danial Smith, what day and what hour of the day they will be at Vergennes depot, they will arrange to meet them, and convey them from and back to the depot.

GARDNER B. WHITFORD.

Quarterly Conference.

The third quarterly session of the Advent Christian State Conference of New Hampshire will be held in Sutton, N. H., commencing on Thursday, at five o'clock P. M., May 28th, and hold over the following Lord's day.

A. W. SIBLEY, Secretary.

New Hampshire Quarterly Conference.

The fourth quarterly session of the Advent Christian Conference of this State, will be held in Whitefield, N. H., commencing June 12th, at 10½ o'clock A. M., and hold over the following Sunday. We hope to see a large gathering of the friends of the coming One at this meeting. Bro. Couch and others of the Lord's servants will be present to preach the word.

A. W. SIBLEY, Secretary.

Maine Western Quar. Conference.

The next session of this conference will be held with the church in Biddeford, commencing in their chapel, Wednesday evening, June 17th, and continuing over Lord's day. Brethren and sisters are invited to attend, and unite in the worship of the Lord and the work of saving souls. Call on Bro. J. C. Libby, who will direct you to places of entertainment.

I. C. WELLCOME.

Conference.

The Maine Eastern Quarterly Conference will be held in the "Free House" at Lincolnville Centre, Maine, commencing Thursday, June 18th, 1868, at 7 P. M. Call upon E. Calderwood, Moses Young, D. Fletcher, and E. Blood.

Per order of Conf. Clerk, F. A. BAKER.

Notice.

Quarterly meeting at Star of Hope Mission, New York city, June 6th. Love-feast at 7 o'clock in the morning. Communion in evening. All are invited.

Also quarterly meeting at Hackensack, Sunday, June 14th. Love-feast in the morning at 8 o'clock; preaching at 10½ o'clock. Baptism at 3. Communion in the evening. From county to county free to be baptized.

ANNA H. SMITH.

Tent Meeting in Missouri.

The Lord willing, there will be a tent and campmeeting in Missouri, commencing on Thursday, May 28th, and continuing over the following Sabbath. The location selected for the meeting is in a beautiful grove, some five miles west of the city Court House, perhaps six miles from the river. It will be near the [illegible] Station, which is a depot on the Pacific R. R. The cars leave on Seventh Street, not far from the Court House. We expect Bro. Clark with his tent from Amboy, Ill.

This looks like a great undertaking for us out here, isolated from all our Advent christian friends East, North and South, and we almost shudder at the sight of it; but then the same unchanging God, who has carried us so safely through great undertakings before, will do so now if we trust in him. But a short time ago St. Louis was in a slave State, and a home and rendezvous for the most wicked and unprincipled slave traders of our country. It is a very wicked city now. Sunday is a holiday. The people generally are opposed to us, and the truths we preach; very much more so than to any others, because we love the colored people. Our action may be premature, but the ball has been set in motion, and we cannot recede. Will our brethren and sisters pray earnestly for us that God will sustain us? We have no means as yet for finances. We see by the paper that Bro. Grant is coming out this way about that time. If he could come here then, his advent will be hailed with joy. Are there not some churches East who could club together and raise money enough to send us a good, judicious and spiritual brother to labor with us through the meeting, and onward a few weeks? We shall raise what money we can here. The Lord will provide.

In behalf of the Conference Board,

H. K. FLAGG.

☞ We cannot have the tent at the time we expected, so we shall put off the time of this meeting two or three weeks. H. K. F.

Tent Meeting in Sardinia, N. Y.

At a point very near the abutment or conjunction of the three counties of Erie, Cattaraugus and Wyoming, we propose to have a tent meeting commencing June 4th. By referring to the map, brethren will see that in this vicinity are the towns and villages of Sardinia, Yorkshire and Arcade, not to mention Holland, Freedom, Java, Franklinville, Springville, etc. One thing is certain, this is a new field, and I believe a promising one. I have no recollection or knowledge of any special meeting of Adventists in a region traversed by a diameter of sixty miles, and enclosed within a circumference of nearly two hundred.

There will be conveyance from Buffalo by stage, leaving at 9 A. M., or by railroad at 3.45 P. M. to Aurora, and thence by stage or omnibus to the meeting. We will furnish free accommodations as far as we can, but not extensively. Charges, however, for board and lodging will be quite reasonable. We certainly hope Bro. Grant will be with us on his return from the west. Adventists of New York! it is a great day in God's counsels concerning the earth, and the return and kingdom and glory of Christ. Come and help us, labor with us, rejoice with us. Help in this new field.

C. COLEGROVE.

Tent and Campmeeting.

There is to be a tent and campmeeting, to commence June 8th, 1868, and continue one week, to be held in the timber between the branches of the Maquoketa, nine miles from Maquoketa City, eight miles from Canton, twenty miles south-east of Cascade, twenty-four miles from Bellevue (on the Mississippi river), in Jackson Co., Iowa. Eld. Miles Grant is to be there to preach the word. We cordially invite all who are interested in saving souls from death, preachers and lay members, to come and help us. This is a new field. We need help. All bring tents and provision that can. Leave your hobbies behind. Come in the Spirit of Christ. Provision will be made for horse-keeping and board for those that cannot board themselves. We expect Bro. D. S. Clark, from Illinois, to be there with the large tent for our meeting-house.

In behalf of the Committee,

MOSES CHANDLER.

Minnesota Annual Conference.

The sixth annual session of the Advent Christian Conference of Minnesota will commence on Thursday evening, June 25th, 1868, in Burr Oak, six miles east of Elliota. The members of the conference are all especially requested to be present, or report themselves by letter. The churches within the bounds of the conference are respectfully requested to send delegates.

N. B. All persons wishing to connect themselves with the conference, will please remember that according to the constitution adopted last year, such candidates must be previously recommended by the quarterly conference, or church to which they may belong.

THOMAS R. ALLEN.

Conference.

A conference of brethren believing in the personal coming of Jesus Christ nigh at hand, in Mecosta, Isabella and adjoining counties, will convene at Millbrook, Mich., on Thursday evening before the first Sunday in June, to hold over Sunday. The object of this conference will be to unite the means of the scattered brethren, and employ an evangelist to proclaim the coming of Christ and kindred doctrines in this northern field. We hope to see a general attendance of preachers and people. We expect some preachers from other parts of the State. Millbrook is situated on the county line, between Mecosta and Isabella counties, and forty-five miles north of Ionia station, on the Detroit and Milwaukie Railroad. Provisions for the entertainment of all will be made.

JOHN BOWER,
PETER S. DECKER,
LEVI W. KING,
RICHARD S. DECKER, } Committee.

Minnesota Annual Conference.

This conference will be held at Castle Rock, commencing June 19th, and continue over two Sabbaths. The Minnesota State Tent will be pitched upon the farm and near the residence of Bro. B. R. Fellows, in which to hold our meetings. Brethren and sisters coming to the conference by R. R. will stop at Castle Rock station, where teams will be in waiting to convey them to the tent.

Brethren and sisters of Minnesota, let there be a general gathering to this conference. Come in love, unity, and faith to further our blessed cause. Our cause is rising in this State. New and important fields of labor are before us, inviting us to renewed zeal and work in the Master's vineyard. The time is short, also, in which to spread the knowledge of the coming and kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ.

GEO. W. MILLER, Pres.
O. R. FASSETT, Sec.

Tent and Campmeetings in Wisconsin.

A tent meeting will begin at Fairfield, Sauk Co., Wis., May 30th. Elder Miles Grant will help us. At the same place a campmeeting will begin June 1st.

A tent meeting will begin at Fenimore, Grant Co., Wis. June 12th. Eld. N. A. Hitchcock will assist us.

WM. SHELDON.

Grove Meeting.

If the Lord will, we will attend a meeting on the camp-ground at Alton Bay, N. H., Sunday, June 7th, 1868.

C. GOODRICH.
D. CHURCHILL.
J. G. SMITH.

Conference.

There will be a quarterly conference in Bridgewater, Vt., Saturday and Sunday, May 23d and 24th, services beginning with prayer, Friday, 7 P. M. Business and conference Saturday, 10 A. M., preaching 2 P. M., and Sunday 10.30 A. M. and 2 P. M. Lord's supper after morning service.

G. W. STETSON.

Conference.

The New York State Conference is expected to be held in Rochester about the middle of June. Particulars hereafter.

[illegible]

Trust God to give thee seed;
[illegible]
Make his thy constant care;
God's love shall make each grain to grow
[illegible]

Then take thy very best,
If nothing else thou have;
If better field may not be had,
Cast it upon the wave.
But sow, on all sides sow!
And pray, at all times pray;
[illegible]
[illegible]

But see to sow God's seed;
Sow nothing of thine own;
To this attend with trembling heed,
And still in faith sow on.
Soon then shall laughing come
With sheaves a priceless load,
And in heaven's endless harvest home
Shall taste the joys of God.

THE FRUIT OF THE SPIRIT.

"The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance; against such there is no law."—GAL. 5: 22.

THE LAW.

"God is love."—In the creation of man, God had but one end in view, which was the happiness of man. When man was placed in the garden of Eden, every thing was there that could produce happiness, and had he kept from sin he might have dwelt there eternally and been forever happy. But he disobeyed his Creator, and by that disobedience brought upon himself condemnation and poverty and toil and disease and death. And when he had broken the law of God and incurred the penalty, death, God's love was so strong, his compassion so deep, his mercy so great, a Savior there was promised who would suffer the penalty for the sake of man, and another chance of life was offered him.

The Lord knew if he should remain on the earth forever and continue in sin, he would be unhappy throughout eternity, for sin produces but unhappiness, so in his love he shut him away from the tree of life lest he should eat and live forever. But the same Savior who there was offered to die in Adam's stead, was to purchase the right of restoring life to fallen man, and since then all man's hope of life has rested in the resurrection from the dead. He was the second time placed on probation. A law was given him which if he obeyed he would be again restored to Paradise to go no more out forever.

Laws are necessary for the safety and peace of any community, and God has made laws which if all obeyed there would be very little sorrow or trouble, for these laws forbid nothing but that which brings wretchedness. There is no law against love and joy and peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance; against such there is no law, but against that which breeds sorrow and wretchedness and sickness and misery, there is a law which has for its penalty death. Does stealing, lying, drunkenness, adultery, murder, idolatry, covetousness, produce real happiness? Does hatred, variance, envy, emulation, backbiting, scolding, fault-finding, increase the peace or joy of any one? No. And we read, "They which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God." If all were saved just as they are, there would be no more happiness in the world to come than there is in this world.

Christ died to save us from our sins, not in our sins. If one sinner should enter the kingdom he would destroy the peace of all there, therefore God has decided that such shall not enter. Our moral characters will not be changed at the appearing of Jesus. Then he that is unjust will be unjust still, and he that is filthy will be filthy still, and he that is righteous will be righteous still, and he that is holy will be holy still, and there is no promise that any but the holy will be saved.

There will be no quarrelling in the new earth, no hateful dispositions, no tattling, mischief-making, backbiting, no scolding, fault finding, complaining, no unkind words, no sarcastic remarks, no cutting speeches, no self-conceit, no bragging, or self-righteousness. There are no such things among Christ's little ones now. There will be none there who will not speak to each other because of injury, none there who will not associate with those murderers, thieves, drunkards, beggars and adulteresses, who have been cleansed by the blood of Jesus; none there who because they cannot have the first seat will not have any; none there who will mention one's good qualities when he is present, and his bad qualities when he is absent; there are none such among Christ's followers now. "The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance." "If any man have not the Spirit of Christ he is none of his."

"God is love." He offers eternal life to every one; there are no exceptions. He convicts every one of sin, righteousness, and judgment to come. There is no one but has at some time in his life felt the Holy Spirit calling on him to turn from sin and seek salvation. He will save all who will come unto him, no matter who they are, or how wicked they have been; his love invites, his love welcomes, his love forgives.

There is no sin, however horrible it may be in the eyes of man, which, if the sinner repents of it, God's love will not cover, Christ's blood will not blot out. There is one sin that can never be forgiven—sin against the Holy Spirit, because when the Spirit is grieved away, there is nothing to cause repentance, and without repentance there can be no forgiveness; but when a person is sorry for sin, and wishes to sin no more, there is hope for him. And when an individual will not turn from sin, but slights the offer of eternal life, neglects the word of God, and tramples his law under foot, after giving him every opportunity to repent, God in his almighty, unchangeable love, places him where he was before creation. He will not suffer him to exist after the righteous receive their reward, and thus by showing him what he has lost make him miserable, but will destroy him, let him be as though he had not been.

The Lord has offered every inducement to persuade men to do right. He has promised to them who by patient continuance in well doing seek for glory, honor, and immortality, eternal life, and life in a home where there will be nothing ever to mar the peace of any of the inhabitants. What more could any one desire? Though he requires every one to be holy, he requires no more than he will help them be. He has provided a Savior and a complete Savior. One who will save from past sin, from present sin, and from death, when he shall come the second time without a sin offering unto salvation. God is love. Salvation is free, a gift from God, perfect. Everybody can have it who will, every one.

God's law was perfect. There was nothing wanting and nothing superfluous. Christ sums it up in these words: "Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them." If all followed this rule, how happy we should all be. But the commandment ordained unto life is found to be unto death, for who can keep it? The carnal mind is enmity against God.

But the gospel reaches deeper than the law. The law was applied to the fruit, but the gospel is applied to the root of the tree. The law was to cleanse the streams of all impurity, but the gospel cleanses the fountain. The law required obedience to the letter, but the Holy Spirit brings forth obedience in the heart.

Christ gave a new commandment: "Thou shalt love the Lord with all thy heart, and thy neighbor as thyself;" and whoever obeys this commandment, will keep the other ten. There is no bondage in keeping the law when it is written on the heart. When a person whose heart has not been changed tries to keep the law perfectly, he generally finds it hard work. It is like trying to keep weeds out of a garden by cutting off the tops. As long as the roots are on the ground the weeds will keep coming. The only way to prevent their coming is to take up the roots.

In this is shown the love of God. He requires perfect obedience, because perfect obedience is for our good; and as man is by nature prone to evil as the sparks fly upward, and cannot keep the law in his own strength, God has given the Holy Spirit, which will write the law on his heart; and as a pure fountain sends forth pure water, so the heart renewed by the Holy Spirit will bring forth fruit to the honor and glory of God.

Salvation is all of grace. How many have toiled and struggled to keep from sin and merit salvation by their works of righteousness, and, after years of warfare with self and Satan, have found out their weakness, their utter helplessness, the evil of their hearts, and the merit of Jesus' blood. There were in the Galatian church some of this class, and Paul in writing to them says, "How received ye the Spirit, by the works of the law or by the hearing of faith?"

We cannot do a single thing to save ourselves. All we can do is to ask. And if we ask sincerely, realizing that we can do nothing ourselves, and willing the Lord should do with us as he will, only make us just what he would have us be, he will hear and give us the Holy Spirit to guide us into all truth, and keep us until He who is our life shall appear to finish our salvation.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS TO ELD. J. BLAIN.

BRO. GRANT:—Judging from my own feelings, I conclude brethren wish to hear, through our papers, what is being done in all parts as to the great truths we are trying to spread; so I will occasionally let them enjoy the reading of some of the many letters I receive touching our views. My opinion is, that brethren are moved to action more by learning what is being effected, than by long exhortations, which are often written for our papers. Exhortations should be brief, while instruction and general information will be read through if more lengthy. As I am also asking brethren to aid me in giving out works larger than our tracts, it is proper to let them know I am not idle, and in what way I am working to spread truth. I wish also to acknowledge the goodness of my Master in giving me encouragement and joy in my labors.

I send some extracts from letters lately received, believing that brethren will be willing, and perhaps glad, to see their views and feelings given in our papers for the comfort of others.

A Brother in a new, or destitute part of Indiana, writes:—"Two weeks ago, a friend called my attention to the subject of the destruction of the wicked, and handed me your work, 'Death not Life,' requesting me to read it, and give him my opinion of it. I have read it carefully, and re-read portions of it. . . I wish you to send me a copy, bound in muslin, if you have one so bound, and some other matter bearing on this subject. I would be glad if you would enclose a catalogue, or list, of books and papers now advocating this doctrine. I want help to thoroughly investigate the doctrine, and if, as is probable, I adopt it, I want to be able, in my sphere, to defend it. I am a member of the Baptist church, superintendent of the Sabbath school, and teach a Bible class of young ladies; and if I teach any other doctrine, I expect to be accursed somewhat." Vevay, Indiana.

A Baptist minister in Centreville, Appanoose Co., Ia., writes:—

"I have had your publications through local agents for a number of years, and believe your 'Death not Life' the best on this subject I am acquainted with. For a number of years, I have been in the same faith. I am also looking and longing for the appearing of the Lord Jesus unto complete salvation. I read the 'Voice of the West' and 'Prophetic Times,' and have watched to see your progress, and that of Eld. Colegrove. I know what his trials mean. My object in writing is to ask you to send me a package of 'Death not Life' for distribution. I am in a new field, where the subject had never been presented till I preached and talked it. We are now in a crisis on this matter, and I wish your work to distribute. So far as I can hear, there is not one in the country. Please send a copy to Eld. B. Clement, Long Branch, Nebraska. I enclose $1.00."

SAMUEL DAVISON.

Eld. W. H. Barnes, of Hamburg, Ia., writes: "Dear Bro. Blain, what is the title of your work on the destiny of the lost? I have had one, but it has been examined so much, and by so many, that I cannot find the commencement nor the conclusion. I want the work, so please send me one, and the price, and oblige. I am a firm believer in life everlasting by Christ alone."

Bro. E. A. Poole, of Linklane, Chenango Co., N. Y., a part of the State where but little light has been spread, writes:—

"Your letter and the books came safe. Thank you most cordially. I felt while reading it almost familiarly acquainted with you. . . . Instead of sending $2.00, as I proposed to you for its value in books, I send $5.00, to assist in your work, to be used at your discretion. Should you see fit to send any more, I shall be happy to distribute them for the good of the cause. It is surely 'glad tidings' that evil is to end, and we are soon to have a clean universe." You inquire as to the state of the cause here? There are some twenty to thirty in this place with your views, who hold meetings regularly on the Sabbath. There are some in two or three towns south of us, but beyond this, I know of scarcely any in the country. Eld. Wm. Dignam, late of Seneca Falls, resides in this town, and he is the only minister in the county who holds our views, unless I include myself, who sometimes try to talk (not to say preach) on the subject. Wishing you all success in your work, and willing, and more than willing, to do what I can to help it forward, I remain yours in the holiest of bonds."

Bro. J. P. Chrest, of St. Paul's, Minn., after I had sent him works by request, writes:—"Many thanks for your kind letter, and the books and tracts you sent me. These are the first works on the glorious doctrine of life only by Christ, I have been able to obtain for twelve years, except your work, which has been a treasure to me in my lonely condition. It had been loaned till worn out, so I wrote you for another copy to loan. . . . The copies you sent me shall be judiciously circulated; and I hope they may comfort others as they have me. There are only two in our city, in the circle of my acquaintance, who hold the doctrine of life as taught in the blessed Bible. One was formerly connected with Adventists, but is now with me in a Methodist church here. I hope to hear from you again. Direct to box 1720."

These are a sample of about fifty letters I have received the past year, asking for small numbers of my work. I have sent, from six to twelve to each, besides those sent in large quantities to ministers by express. I have just had fifteen hundred more printed to send out in the same way this year. Will brethren aid me, so that I can send larger packages to such destitute places? Calls increase. I shall be at home till the first of June, and any wishing books or tracts can send their orders.

REPORT OF R. I. AND E. CT. CONF., HELD AT E. Gloucester, R. I., April 1st, 2d, and 3d.

Wednesday, April 1st, 2 P. M. The conference met and enjoyed a refreshing season in social worship. In the evening, an excellent conference meeting, after which we listened to preaching from Bro. B. Roberts.

April 2nd. The Moderator not being present, Bro. J. J. Northup was elected Mod. pro tem, and M. R. Phetteplace Clerk pro tem, in absence of the Clerk. The report of the last conference was read and amended by adding a clause on the election of officers, and accepted.

The following churches were reported:

E. Gloucester, C. B. Keech, Clerk. Four prayer meetings a week. Backsliders have been reclaimed and sinners converted. But little preaching.

River Point, A. C. Greene, Clerk. An increasing interest. We have held a protracted meeting, which has been productive of good in the salvation of sinners and reviving of saints.

N. Scituate, N. Angell, Clerk. In good working order. The church numbers eighty members. Sabbath school of sixty members, with good interest.

Danielsonville, Ct., Bro. Simmons, delegate. Our prospects in the good work are brightening. We are united. Bro. Carpenter is to supply the desk all the time the coming year.

Pascoag. Bro. Young officially reported. A good interest. Cheering omens of prosperity. Some converted. Five waiting to go forward in baptism. Are making an effort to build a chapel.

Lafayette church reported by letter. A revival interest. Some converted. The spirit of divine blessing among them. Abington church reported by letter. Good feeling, and interest in meetings.

The following preaching brethren reported their labors: Elders H. C. Hopkins, B. Roberts, J. S. Eldridge, D. V. Cory, J. S. Collins, J. J. Northup, M. R. Phetteplace, and Sr. Crumb. The reports we listened to were full of interest and encouragement. Sinners have been converted, and a good working band formed in Westerly. They have hired a hall. Sinners have been converted in Chepachet, R. I., Smithfield, Hopkin's Mills and Foster.

Moved, All unordained preaching brethren present are invited to join the conference. Carried. Bro. N. Angell availed himself of the invitation, and became a member of the conference. Adjourned.

April 3d, 9 o'clock A. M. Conference met as adjourned. Rockland church reported by J. B. Smith, Clerk. Thirty-five members. Some very good meetings. Our Pastor, Eld. J. S. Rollins, resigned. Sabbath school of from twenty to thirty members. On motion, the committee on delinquent churches was continued.

Eld. Geo. Champlain appeared before the conference, and the spirit of hearty contrition he manifested awakened our earnest sympathy in his behalf. The following resolution was offered:

Resolved, That the case of Eld. Geo. Champlain be referred to a committee of seven for final disposal, and their decision shall not be subject to the future action of the conference. Carried.

Brn. Carpenter, Durfee, Bellows, Phetteplace, Collins and Angell were appointed.

Moved, That the confession of Eld. Champlain be referred to said committee. Carried.

On motion, adjourned to meet at Westerly, R. I., the first Wednesday in July, 1868. Carried. Four happy souls were baptized Friday, at noon. The social meetings were indeed blessed. Two or three rose for prayers Friday evening.

GOLD.

BRO. GRANT:—I often see in the Crisis articles on dress, particularly the wearing of gold. This evil is increasing, and ought to cause every child of God to sigh and cry. I also notice the writers of these articles generally refer to the sisters. Now I wish to ask one question. Is it any greater sin for a sister to wear gold than for a brother? Is it not sin to wear gold in any form? Has not God forbidden it? Can we be holy and indulge in it? Is it not needless self-indulgence? And is not all needless self-indulgence sin?

The money paid out for gold by professors of religion would support all our missionaries, and some be left to give to the poor. Brethren and sisters, let us be transformed by the renewing of our minds, that we may prove what is that good, and acceptable and perfect will of God. Rom. 12: 2.

Yours in hope, J. K. BELLOWS.

REPORT OF THE CT. A. C. CONF.

Assembled agreeably to call, at Bristol, Ct., Wednesday evening, April 22nd, at 7½ P. M. Preaching by Elder L. F. Moore, from John 18: 36. Assembled again Thursday, at 10½ A. M., for prayer and conference. Prayer and remarks by the following brethren: H. H. Dickinson, Rev. Mr. Graves (a Baptist Bro.), Geo. L. White, E. Owen, I. B. Potter, M. G. Dunham, and others. At 1 o'clock P. M., met for prayer for one hour, and had a blessed season. Glory to God.

2 P. M. Preaching by Sister Durand, from Ps. 43: 3, followed by remarks by brethren and sisters. It was a blessed time. 7 P. M., prayer meeting, followed by preaching by Bro. C. F. Dixon, from 1 Cor. 4: 17. Friday, at 9 A. M., assembled for business. President being absent, the meeting was called to order by the Vice President, B. Hitchcock. Opening prayer by H. H. Dickinson. The Secretary, B. St. John, was absent. L. F. Moore appointed pro tem. Reading of proceedings of previous conference dispensed with. Committee on Credentials appointed: Brn. I. B. Potter and W. A. Durand.

Reports of delegates being called for, Bro. E. M. Ripley reported Pleasant Valley, Ct. There had been some irregularity in preaching, but have now made arrangements for preaching regularly; also have relieved the world of the responsibility of paying for preaching, and put it where it belongs. Thank God. In a good healthy condition. Bro. H. H. Dickinson reported Hartford. Principles sound. Excellent feeling in church. No division; good supply of gospel charity, and expenses all met by the body. Bro. Sidney Hall, of Hartford, corroborated Bro. Dickinson, and added: not quite so much interest in social meetings as has been; but still earnest prayer to Father for higher life and better preparation of heart. Bro. M. G. Dunham reported New Haven waking up, and some expecting to come into the fold. A feeling for deeper work. Some are looking to this year as the Jubilee year, but manifest an excellent spirit, and no desire to make a test question of it. Are looking for a proper site to put up a chapel. There is a laboring spirit in the church.

The matter of raising money was here mentioned, and Bro. H. H. Dickinson suggested the idea of placing a box at the door of the several churches, for the purpose of receiving such contributions as strangers saw fit to give, instead of "passing the hat," and to use such contributions for the benefit of the flock. Bro. B. Hitchcock reported Prospect. Good prospect. Think a little labor bestowed there would result gloriously. Church in good working order. Bro. G. L. White reported Bristol as holding fast their confidence in God. Poor in this world's good, but "rich in faith." Glory to God. Hallelujah.

Bro. Dickinson called for report of preachers. I. B. Potter reported his labors. He had been out in new fields. Had preached in Woodstock and vicinity, which resulted in the conversion of about fifty souls. S. B. Munn reported Waterbury. He began there four years ago, and had seen good results. Had been some division, but now Eld. W. J. Ripley is laboring there, and hopes to see glorious results. Bro. Elliot,—been laboring in Roxbury, New Preston, and Morris. The work goes well. Bro. W. A. Durand reported for self and wife, in old fields. Churches were refreshed. Guilford church waking up, but need of more labor. Killingly,—new field; progressing. Bro. B. Hitchcock reported his labors at Guilford.—Has been distraction, but now healing up. Hartford. Found real good, solid, and substantial brethren and sisters. Square Pond,—all harmony. Scitico,—good laborers, and a general waking up. Bro. B. St. John reported. Moved to Wolcottville to build a church. Cause progressing. Have $2400 for chapel, and $75.00 for preaching, in the treasury. Wrightville,—have had additions and doing well. Bro. L. F. Moore reported North Somers, Square Pond, Warehouse Point, and Scitico, all standing well. Bro. O. D. Woodruff remarked upon the condition of the people. Spoke of Bro. Seth Woodruff, who had cut his foot with an axe, and proposed a collection for him, which was taken in the evening, and the sum of $15.00 obtained.

Friday, 1 P. M. Opening prayer by Bro. B. St. John. Communication from Bridgeport church read, and placed on file. Report of Missionary committee called for. Bro. G. W. Denny, chairman, reported as follows: Had not succeeded in obtaining I. B. Potter as State Missionary. Has $25.00 in treasury. He had some circulars printed to be circulated as subscription papers among the churches, and wanted further instructions. Remarked upon church organization as a means to help support missionary work. After remarks by Brn. H. H. Dickinson and O. D. Woodruff, Bro. M. G. Dunham motioned to instruct the committee to expend the amount in their hands, and what they shall hereafter receive, as they shall deem judicious, for missionary work in this State (Conn.). Bro. Sidney Hall, of Hartford, proposed to furnish this conference with tracts to the amount of $100.00, and wished to know what disposition we would make of them? After a little talk, the proposition was very thankfully received, and the matter placed in the hands of the missionary committee. Adjourned, subject to the call of the Secretary.

Preachers present: Elders E. Owen, I. B. Potter, George L. Teeple, S. B. Munn, L. F. Moore, B. St. John, B. Hitchcock, W. J. Ripley, W. A. Durand. Unordained: Brn. Elliot, C. F. Dixon, H. H. Dickinson, O. D. Woodruff, Sr. W. A. Durand.

Friday, 2½ P. M., an excellent discourse by Bro. Dickinson, from Heb. 2: 14, 15. The Lord did really bless, and the church was edified. Evening, 7½ o'clock, preaching by Eld. L. F. Moore, from Acts 2: 37. Sat. A. M., prayer and conference meeting. A blessed good time. The Spirit of God was with us, and we had a real melting time. Praise God. Sat. P. M., Sr. Durand preached a soul-stirring sermon from Isa. 61: 8. Sat. evening, Eld. I. B. Potter preached from Rom. 8: 32. Sunday A. M., Eld. B. St. John preached from these words: "There shall be no more curse." Afternoon, Eld. I. B. Potter preached from Jer. 8: 22. Love-feast Sunday morning, and sacrament of the Lord's Supper in afternoon. It was really good to be there.

All our meetings were attended with interest; and although there was a little contentious element at first, yet, glory be to the name of our Father, when he sent his Spirit the devil left in a hurry. The Bristol church made ample provision for all that came. Some sisters were with us from New Britain, Southington, and other places, and we trust it will result in good for the church, in building it up. We take this opportunity to return our thanks to the Bristol brethren and sisters for their kindness.

B. ST. JOHN, Sec'y.

P. S.—In our last report there were two mistakes that ought to have been rectified before this; but not understanding the matter at the time, it was overlooked, and we would here correct the mistake. The first was, that Eld. Seth Woodruff preached at New Haven conference, Thursday evening, from Acts 26: 28,—"Almost thou persuadest me to be a christian"; the other was, that Eld. E. Owen preached Friday evening at New Haven conference, from Ezek. 24: 13, and not Eld. H. Munger, as reported. B. ST. J.

NOBODY'S CHILD.

BY PHILO H. CASE.

Alone in the dreary, pitiless street,
With my torn old dress and bare, cold feet,
All day I've wandered to and fro,
Hungry and shivering, and nowhere to go;
The night's coming on in darkness and dread,
And the chill sleet beating upon my bare head;
Oh! why does the wind blow upon me so wild?
Is it because I am nobody's child?

Just over the way there's a flood of light,
And warmth and beauty, and all things bright;
Beautiful children in robes so fair,
Are caroling songs in rapture there.
I wonder if they, in their blissful glee,
Would pity a poor little beggar like me,
Wandering alone in the merciless street,
Naked and shivering, and nothing to eat?

Oh! what shall I do when the night comes down
In its terrible blackness all over the town?
Shall I lay me down 'neath the angry sky,
On the cold, hard pavement alone to die?—
When the beautiful children their prayers have said,
And mammas have tucked them up snugly in bed.
No dear mother ever upon me smiled;
Why is it, I wonder, I'm nobody's child?

No father, no mother, no sister, no one
In all the world loves me; e'en the little dogs run
When I wander too near them; 'tis wondrous to see
How every thing shrinks from a beggar like me!
Perhaps 'tis a dream; but sometimes, when I lie
Gazing far up in the dark blue sky,
Watching for hours some large, bright star,
I fancy the beautiful gates are ajar;

And a host of white-robed, nameless things,
Come fluttering o'er me on gilded wings;
A hand that is strangely soft and fair,
Caresses gently my tangled hair,
And a voice like the carol of some wild bird—
The sweetest voice that ever I heard,
Calls me many a dear pet name,
Till my heart and spirit are all aflame:

And tells me of such unbounded love,
That will come with the city from above;
And then, with such pitiful, sad surprise,
They look at me with their soft blue eyes,
And it seems to me out of the dreary night
I am going to that city of light,
And away from the hunger and storm so wild,
I am sure I shall then be somebody's child.

JOURNAL.

THE DORCAS MISSION.

Dec. 31st (9 A. M.) spent our last five cents this morning for milk. I have not one penny in the world, but the gold and the silver are the Lord's, and he will surely send us help. We have on hand at this hour, cooked beans (enough for dinner), ten quarts of dry beans, eight pounds of pork, and a few dried apples. Our family numbers thirty-four persons. Soon our gas, hall, and postage bills will be sent in, and I pray that the Lord may send us abundant supplies at this time, so that these bills may be paid in good season, that the Lord's cause may be honored in this Home.

(Evening.) Received about $4.50 in the afternoon, at three o'clock. Praise the name of the Lord. Spent a portion of this sum for supper.

Thus, dear brethren and sisters, I have given you extracts from my journal for the year 1867; to prove to you from my humble experience that the Lord does hear and answer prayer. I have always endeavored to make my wants known unto him alone, and he has never disappointed me in my expectations of help. My piety is not extraordinary, as some have supposed. I am not a special favorite of the Lord, as some imagine. I am one of the Lord's most unworthy children, full of imperfections, and but a sinner, and if saved at all, that salvation will be through the unmerited love and favor of God. But I have written to encourage God's children, especially those who are poor, to trust in the Lord with all their hearts, under all circumstances. You may feel unworthy of any blessing at the hands of the Lord, but they will be granted you from a loving Father, through the merits of his dear Son, through the exercise of faith in his precious promises.

It may not be the Lord's will that I should continue in this work much longer, but whether it shall be so or not, I hope by his grace to live nearer to Christ, and to exercise a heartier faith in the promises than I have in the past. To all who have assisted us by their contributions of money, clothing, food, etc., and to all who have prayed for us, I return my heartfelt thanks; and I feel assured that all such will be rewarded by the blessed Savior.

Most of those who have labored with me have had their health much impaired. All have labored most faithfully with voice, hand, and heart. Sisters Reeves and Helginson, with whom I have been associated in this mission work for the last three years, are the hardest working and the most faithful women I ever saw. Their health has been much impaired. They have been "true as steel" to the cause. They have labored night and day, week after week, month after month, and year after year in this section, without any other motive than the good of the poor and the needy, and the salvation of the lost. Sr. Buster also sank beneath her burdens. Sr. Case is failing. These two have been most devoted in their various duties to the fatherless and the orphan. My own health is failing, and day by day I feel that I am wearing away.

But I must close. May grace, mercy, and peace rest upon the reader. And to the sinner I would say, come to Jesus. He is your friend, and has a heart to pity and save you. Turn unto him, and you will be accepted. Time is short. The Lord is at hand. Finally, brethren, pray for us.

Your Bro. in Christ, F. H. BURBANK.

THE PEN.—The pen, in the hand of one who knows how to use it, is one of the most powerful weapons known. As the tongue of the absent, how charming! When virtue guides it, how beautiful! When self-respect gives a new vigor, how pleasing! When honor directs it, how respected! When scurrility wields it, how contemptible! When wit sharpens it, how vital! 'Tis the weapon of the mind.—Ex.

Cure for a Stifle on a Horse.—Take the whites of two eggs, a piece of lard the size of a walnut, beat them well together, apply the ointment and heat it in.

ASHAMED OF ONE'S NAME.—No person should be ashamed of his name. No person should ask for anything without being willing to take the responsibility of the request. The habit of standing up frankly to one's own actions, opinions, or feelings, and taking the proper personal responsibility belonging to everything concerning his own personality, is manly and wholesome. If we were writing letters, like Lord Chesterfield, to a son, we should say, never write any letter that you are unwilling to sign. If there are reasons which make it improper for you to give your name, then you should not write at all. I will not say that there are never cases in which anonymousness is permissible. But they are rare and extreme cases. In general, it is a safe rule of conduct not to do anything to which one is unwilling to put his name. A good name is better than great riches. This habit of acting in all things frankly, openly, courageously, and of taking the consequences of one's thoughts and actions, cannot fail to result, in individuals and in communities, in a high and noble type of manhood. Therefore, never write anonymous letters.—Beecher.

A MISERABLE CONDITION.—He that hath a blind conscience, which sees nothing; a dead conscience, which feels nothing; and a dumb conscience, which says nothing, is in as miserable a condition as a man can be in on this side of hell.

TOBACCO EXPERIENCE.

BRO. GRANT:—I have seen in the Crisis considerable in regard to tobacco. I would like to give in my testimony. I commenced using tobacco at the age of six years, and followed it until about six months ago. About two years ago I started to serve the Lord, and try to get ready for the coming kingdom; but all the while I seemed to be under conviction, and did not enjoy freedom. When I prayed, tobacco would come up before me; but I was unwilling to sacrifice all for Christ, and tried to justify myself by thinking that I was marked with tobacco, therefore it was natural for me to use it, and in such a case it was not a sin; but when I came to search the Scriptures, I found they condemned me; and in order to travel any further in the direction in which I had started, I saw that I must be crucified to the world, and put off the old man and put on the new man. This habit is a lust of the flesh, for the flesh has desires against the Spirit, and the Spirit against flesh. If we sow to the flesh, we shall of the flesh reap corruption; but if we sow to the Spirit, we shall reap life everlasting. Thanks be to God, through the help of the Lord Jesus Christ, I am free in Jesus. How glad I am that we have one that is able to save us from all sins.

Dear brother, you who are a slave yet to tobacco, and are trying to justify yourself in using it, I earnestly beg of you to stop the use of it, and become free in Jesus. You may make all excuses for using it; but except we are overcomers of sin, we have no promise of everlasting life. Now let all who love Jesus, put away "all filthiness of the flesh," and do nothing that will grieve the Holy Spirit, whereby we are sealed unto the day of redemption. With these great promises in God's holy word, can we not bring under our vile body?

WALKING.

BRO. GRANT;—The following sensible observations I copy from Harper's Weekly.

C. H. S.

"Feet were intended for use, and yet immense numbers of sensible people seem to think walking on them a hardship. Those who ride in carriages habitually, have degenerated limbs. The muscles become attenuated in consequence of not being constantly active.

"Rope-dancers, horseback-riders, and indeed all who are using their legs as they were designed to be, have them finely developed. The more they are exercised, the stronger and more symmetrical they become. But another great gain results from walking more than one rides. It brings into harmonious play the whole muscular cordage of the body. A healthy condition of all the internal organs follows, and the secretions are admirably conducted by pedal exercises. It is a pleasant condition of eminent civilization to ride any way, but particularly luxurious to bound off in one's own soft-cushioned carriage; but there is a penalty positively following too much comfort of that kind. Digestion becomes impaired, the legs diminish in size; and the individual who rides when he can, and rarely walks, is soon weary when the attempt is made.

"Longevity is the compensation for free outdoor walking, without much reference to weather, when business or duty requires it. We were created for use, not altogether for ornament."

A DOCTOR'S EXPERIENCE.

"Doctor," we said to an old physician, who has emptied a thousand pill-boxes, "I am told you have a rich anti-tobacco experience,—do give us a specimen." "Ah," said the doctor in a sailor dialect, "a long yarn, sir,—a long yarn." "Very well; give us a bit of it,—do."

"I began the habit," said the doctor, "when a boy, like other silly boys. I used it in the vulgar form, chewing. I cherished the notion that tobacco was a good repellant, a good disinfectant amidst sickness and the impurities incident to dissecting-rooms.

"When ripe for practise, I rode hard, day and night, over the hills and stony routes, and rolled my quid from side to side as a sweet morsel, companionable thing! I expectorated freely,—indeed I acquired notoriety as a spitter, so much so that wags, as my gig came in sight, would cry, 'Stand out the way; the doctor's coming; he'll spit on you!' I became a ghostly, gloomy dyspeptic; and any cattle-show might have put me on exhibition as a specimen of Pharaoh's lean kine to advantage. I had practised twenty years before I came to my senses. Tobacco, as well as strong drink, is a 'mocker.' I was a victim of its hallucination, all unconscious of my chains, and might have remained so, had it not been for the kind agency of a few good old women bent on doing good.

"It was a little on this wise: My health began to fail, and on my routes I would, for example, call on a sick child, and before I had half finished my prescription, perhaps the mother would say, 'Doctor, how you tremble! How pale you are! You are killing yourself with tobacco, I'm afraid!' In a day or two I would call on some other family, and perhaps a saintly woman, sinking in consumption, would follow me with a piercing, pitying eye, and say, 'Doctor, are you not chewing and spitting yourself to death?' These and similar admonitions came thick and fast; in fact, it 'thundered all around,' and whether there was collusion or no collusion among these 'mothers in Zion,' I began to suspect they were half right in their conjectures.

"At length I met a group of these ministering in case of great peril and anguish, and my anxiety being great, I unconsciously consumed an incredible amount of cavendish, as chewers are wont to do when excited. By this enormous excess my nerves received a terrible shock. I fell; I was insensible for a while; altogether so. I called it a tobacco fit; extravagant men might call it a case of delirium tremens, but I have seen many such fits since in my practice,—alas, many resulting in death!

"I was soon, however, upon my feet again, and these zealous ladies began to lecture me in pell-mell style. One said, 'Why, doctor, the Lord helping us, we have snatched you from death! Do, drop tobacco!' Another, 'Your example, doctor, is confirming my husband in bad habits, and ruining my boys.' Another, 'Our young minister has become a smoker by your advice, and already his sermons savor more of smoke than fire. His cigar, his rocking-chair, and the Atlantic Monthly are dearer to him than his flock.' Another, 'Doctor, we set a sight by you; do change your habits, and not cut short your days.' In a word, the assault of these pious matrons became hotter and hotter, and I thought best to retreat.

"On taking my gig, I began to reason in this way: Tobacco is a poison, rank and deadly, and ought to produce the legitimate effects of a poison. It ought to injure me, and if it does not, it will not do its duty. I will drop it. I will be a slave no longer. My Maker, witness my vow! This vow, which many may treat with sarcastic smile and vulgar joke, formed an era in my life. My appetite, which had been as capricious as the wind, at length returned in full power, and I could adopt the language of Doctor Hewitt, a distinguished Doctor of Divinity in Bridgeport: 'I have dropped tobacco, and God has given me to enjoy every good thing!' In a word, I became robust and healthy; and I say deliberately, I would not again come under bondage to this tyrant and deceiver for all California! I am free; I wish every slave to the nuisance was free."

The doctor, I add, soon changed his practice to such of his patients as used the weed. An enormous chewer, I recollect, in the shape of a rough-shod farmer, came into his office and gruffly said, "I am out of sorts doctor, I want some doctor's trade!" The doctor sternly looked at his mouth, which resembled "an open sepulchre," and said, "Neighbor, I shall give you no medicine—not a bit. Your tobacco will counteract all its effect. Drop the nuisance, and drop the chief cause of all your ailments, from head to foot."—Health Reformer.

SWALLOWING GRAPE SEEDS.

Many people, when eating grapes, swallow the seeds. The practice is a harmful one and ought to be discouraged. We have known many cases of piles caused by it. Even the small seeds that abound in some varieties of the raspberry and blackberry are almost as bad as the seeds of grapes. We had just taken up our pen to write something on this subject, when the following letter from Mrs. Dr. Miller was handed to us:

"Three cases of severe suffering with inflammation of bowels have recently come under our care, caused by swallowing grape seeds. Two of these cases came well nigh down to death's door, and it is but fair that our readers should receive warning of the danger attendant upon it.

"Grape seeds, cherry pits, and the like, are insoluble in any and all the juices used in the process of digestion; they must therefore pass from the body in the same state in which they are swallowed. In their passage along the alimentary canal they can not but induce more or less irritation, and if the digestive organs are at all weak they must of necessity cause great disturbance; being hard, almost like little stones, they scrape along over the delicate mucous membrane which lines the stomach and bowels, and frequently lodge in the coils of the intestines, or become imbedded in the delicate lining, and cause ulcerations and tumefactions of the bowels, which may result in death.

A friend just tells me of a young man who, having eaten a quantity of grapes, became ill, suffered intensely, was unable to get relief from any source, and finally died. An examination disclosed a large quantity of cherry pits imbedded in the bowels, together with about half a pint of grape seeds, which had completed the work of death.—Herald of Health.

A QUESTION FOR MOTHERS.—Why do you almost always, when your little ones are hungry and ask for food, give them the piece of pie, cake, ginger-bread or cookie, or some sweetened bread, when their unperverted appetites are just as well, or even better satisfied with good, wholesome, plain bread? Does not the idea occur to you that by your course you are creating a morbid appetite for sweet, that will be hard to overcome by and by,—ruling them with a rod of iron,—but more than this, is laying the foundation for numerous diseases? Oh! I beseech you, let those children live.—Health Reformer.

BREATHING.—There is one rule which should be strictly observed by all in taking exercise by walking—as the very best form in which it can be taken by both the young and the able-bodied of all ages—and that is, never to allow the action of respiration or breathing to be carried on through the mouth. The nasal passages are clearly the medium through which respiration was, by our Creator, designed to be carried on.

CURE FOR THE BITE OF A DOG.—If bitten by a mad dog, get common nitrate of silver (easily procured in any drug store,) put it into the wound and allow it to filter there. This decomposes the saliva and destroys the virus. The late Mr. Youatt, a celebrated veterinary surgeon, was bitten eight times by mad dogs, and instantly applied the above remedy with perfect success.

I AM GLAD.

I am glad that my Savior is living,
That he hath ascended above,
That he is for me interceding,
With earnest, compassionate love.

I am glad through the blessed atonement
Redeemed from all sin I can be,
That the blood of my Savior's efficient
To take all pollution from me.

I am glad there is One who doth see me,
And knoweth me just as I am;
That he, the All-wise One, will judge me,
And not poor, blind, erring man.

I am glad that he knoweth my sorrow,
And every temptation and pain;
That he sees what will be on the morrow,
Nor watches my footsteps in vain.

I am glad that salvation is given
So freely to all who will come;
For the poor, the outcast, the down-trodden,
He hath purchased a heavenly home.

I am glad that the kingdom is coming,
And I know my hope's not in vain;
Then all who in Jesus are sleeping,
He'll bring when he cometh again.

I am glad that no wasting diseases
In that land will ever be known;
Never more will our loved be torn from us,
And we'll weep no more on the tomb.

And oh! when shall appear that bright morning,
The hearts that so oft have been sad,
Will lift their glad voices rejoicing,
And shout, I am glad! O, I am glad!

SATAN'S SNARES, AND THE WAY OF ESCAPE.

Innumerable are the devices of Satan to ensnare and secure his victims. He is an arch enemy, a deceiver and liar from the beginning, and six thousand years has given him great experience. He is styled "the god of this world," "the prince of the power of the air," "the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience." It well becomes the children of men to beware of his devices, and to be unloosed from his bands. He is invisible, yet visible in all his unhallowed works and ways. In these last days of peril, it well becomes us not only to take heed to the sure word of prophecy, but to beware of the depths of Satan and escape his wiles.

And now, dear reader, how shall we otherwise account for this apathy, this want of interest and feeling, of not only those who are out of Christ, but of the great mass of professing christians, to the subject matter of their eternal interests, while on worldly matters they are ever so attentive? The reasons are obvious, and but too plainly demonstrated, when we consider the many proofs of the devices of Satan, who is our adversary, and the enemy of all good. He is represented as "a roaring lion," going about "seeking whom he may devour." His great power and influence from the ever-crying evils of our revolted world, so manifest on every side, and so plainly pointed out in numerous passages of Scripture which are here recorded, should at once convince and alarm you, O fellow sinner, and fruitless, ease-loving professor, to escape from Satan's snare, and earnestly to call upon him who is able and mighty to save. How plain are the proofs of his power and influence, and untiring energy on every hand. All evils that afflict this revolted, sin-ruined world (and which are increasing as we are fast nearing the end), are attributed to him, who has truly been a deceiver and liar from the beginning. Daily presentations demonstrate the past, and ages are but proofs, not only of the hallucinations of those who are blind to Satan's snares, but the complete and entire estrangement of the human race from purity, holiness, and eternal truth.

Dear reader, if this is yet your condition, are you satisfied to remain thus, when Christ declares, "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." "Verily I say unto thee, except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." You will see with what momentous concern it becomes you to open your eyes to these truths, and to see your own condition; and immediately resolve, in the strength of the Lord, to escape from the fatal snares of him who told our first parents, "Ye shall not surely die." Gen. 3: 4. For it is solemnly asserted that "the adversaries of the Lord shall be broken to pieces."—1 Sam. 2: 10. Those who listen and yield to Satan's devices, he will lead away from all good, to the intent that they may be destroyed. Are not all the unregenerate under the strong bands of Satan, as well as false professors? and if they thus continue, must they not be consigned to his place? Far better would it be to adopt this prayer, "Deliver me, O Lord, from mine enemies. I flee unto thee to hide me."—Ps. 143: 9. Reader, if this is not your language or prayer, then are you not blindly suffering yourself to be lured to destruction by your enemy the devil? Are you an exception, and can you escape if you neglect this great salvation? Is there not One who is not only able, but willing to save, who was tempted in all points like as we are, yet without sin? Are there not dangers and perils that beset even the Lord's people? "And the Lord said, Simon, Simon, behold, Satan hath desired to have you, that he may sift you as wheat." "Why sleep ye? rise and pray, lest ye enter into temptation." Luke 22: 31, 46. Furthermore, "And supper being ended, the Devil having now put it into the heart of Judas Iscariot, Simon's son, to betray him." John 13: 2. Of Peter it is thus recorded: "And he denied him, saying, Woman, I know him not." But what do we next learn of Peter? "And Peter went out and wept bitterly." Reader, have you like Peter ever wept bitterly for the long denial of your Savior?

Paul says, "I would not that ye should have fellowship with devils." Alas! how many are now deluded by these "spirits of devils," or the Spiritualism of these last days. "Ye cannot drink the cup of the Lord, and the cup of devils; ye cannot be partakers of the Lord's table, and the table of devils."—1 Cor. 10: 20, 21. You cannot continue in the service of your adversary, and expect to have the communion and fellowship of a holy, just, and righteous God.

Again, "Lest Satan should get an advantage of us; for we are not ignorant of his devices."—2 Cor. 2: 11. "For such are false apostles, deceitful workers, transforming themselves into apostles of Christ. And no marvel; for Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light."—2 Cor. 11: 13, 14. Many false teachers, false prophets, and false apostles have gone out into the world, deceiving, and being deceived; blind leaders of the blind; who are under the strong delusions of Satan, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils, "whose coming is after the working of Satan, with all power and signs and lying wonders; and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness, in them that perish; because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved"; who are "enemies of the cross of Christ"; who reject the revelation of God's word; who pervert, or wrest the Scriptures to "their own destruction"; who are "lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God; having the form of godliness, but denying the power thereof; from such turn away."

Again, says the apostle, "Neither give place to the devil."—Eph. 4: 27. "Put on the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil. For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places."—Eph. 6: 11, 12. By prayer and faith in him who is able and mighty to save, in his strength we may go forward in the discharge of every christian duty, and at last come off victorious over every foe.

If Paul was troubled and tried by the besetments of Satan, shall we not expect to be also? for he says in 1 Thess. 2: 18, "Wherefore we would have come unto you, even I Paul, once and again; but Satan hindered us." "For this cause, when I could no longer forbear, I sent to know your faith, lest by some means the tempter have tempted you, and our labor be in vain."—1 Thess. 3: 5. Reader, beware, lest you may be tempted to let these truths and this message pass unheeded, as all other messages designed for your salvation, and at last find yourself enthralled beyond the reach of help. Beware of error, of false doctrines, which will prove delusions, unless by the grace of God you are led to believe and see the fatal snare, and escape by repentance and faith, to the acknowledging of the truth. "Resist the devil, and he will flee from you." Do not forget this exhortation. And as we have an high priest "who was tempted in all points like as we are, yet without sin; let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need." Heb. 4: 15, 16. Here, poor careless sinner, wanderer or backslider from the fold of God; here thousands have found mercy, and grace to assist, comfort and save them. Here you are invited, even by his grace and Spirit, to come confessing all your wants.

"Let no man say when he is tempted, I am tempted of God; for God cannot be tempted with evil; neither tempteth he any man. But every man is tempted when he is drawn away of his own lust, and enticed. Then when lust hath conceived, it bringeth forth sin; and sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death."—James 1: 13–15. "Submit yourselves therefore to God. Resist the devil, and he will flee from you." These are very plain instructions. Who but willing captives of Satan could refuse to take heed to them? Reader, shall you do this? "Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you."—James 4: 7, 8. In him alone is our help, to whom we are now invited to draw nigh; to whom we can approach through the covenant of grace in Christ Jesus, to confess and forsake all our sins, and ask of him all the good we need. "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation (not the man who is overcome by it), for when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him." Those that truly love him will not only resist all temptations to do evil, but will bear all their trials in a right spirit, and then all chastenings and trials will result in their good.

The inspired apostle Peter has also exhorted us to "be sober, be vigilant (Alas! how many professing christians in these last days of peril are doing quite to the contrary); because your adversary the Devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour; whom resist steadfast in the faith, knowing that the same afflictions are accomplished in your brethren that are in the world."—1 Pet. 5: 8, 9. It has been the lot of many of God's chosen people, in all ages of the world, to endure suffering and severe trials; "but (says Peter) the God of all grace, who hath called us unto his eternal glory by Christ Jesus, after that ye have suffered awhile, make you perfect, stablish, strengthen, settle you."—1 Pet. 5: 10. Rejoice, dear brethren and sisters, and bear your trials with patience; for the day of eternal glory is just dawning, and deliverance is just at hand.
